REPORT OF THE GRAND JURY.

[Copy.]

We respectfully report:

In the morning of October 1, 1910, at about the hour of 1 o'clock, the building of the Times-Mirror Company, at First street and Broadway, in Los Angeles city, Los Angeles county, Cal., was destroyed by explosion and fire.

At least twenty human beings lost their lives in the catastrophe. Forthwith, the charge was made that the building had been destroyed by the enemies of industrial freedom. Shortly thereafter it was, on the other hand, set forth that the explosion and fire were due to the presence of illuminating gas in the building, and to the accidental explosion of such gas.

The instructions of his Honor call upon this grand jury to investigate the cause and circumstances of such disaster; and in compliance with the instructions, we have made such investigation, and do now report to the court our findings.

It appears at once that either the tragedy was a terrible, indeed, a mon-

Magnificent Flight Across the Southern Half of State.

Delivers "The Times" to Great Crowds at San Bernardino.

Misses His Way to Pomona and Disappoints Big Gathering.

FLYING 2000 feet high and with a steadiness which showed him complete master of his aeroplane, Pegasus, Didier Masson, the daring French aviator, flew over the city of Los Angeles, across half of Southern California, and landed in San Bernardino, yesterday morning, delivering copies of The Los Angeles Times to patrons in the Gate City.

Masson made but one descent, landing in a vineyard two miles beyond Cucamonga, near the Santa Fe station of Rochester. He came down because he had lost his way, and to secure fresh supplies of gasoline.

The landing was made fourteen miles beyond Pomona, where Masson was scheduled to stop, and in order to complete his trip to San Bernardino Manager Adossides instructed the aviator to keep on going, instead of returning to the former place.

After four hours' delay, Masson's mechanicians repaired the running gear, which had been broken in the descent in the vineyard, and the aeroplane landed in San Bernardino at 12:40 o'clock, doing the seventy-five miles in 1 hr., 20 minutes, actual flying time, a rate of almost a mile a minute.

The copies of The Times were delivered at the race track and Masson presented President W. W. Brison, Jr., of the San Bernardino Chamber of Commerce with a letter from Secretary Frank Wiggins of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, extending felicitations of the day.

The trip was a wonderful test of the capabilities of an aeroplane, and Masson, gave a marvelous exhibition of airmanship.

The flight proved that aviation can be made a practical thing, and incidentally a world's record was set, as never before had an aeroplane been used to act as carrier for a newspaper, or been made to perform a useful commercial duty. It showed that aeroplanes are not necessarily the dangerous craft many believe them and that under ordinary conditions they may be used with a degree of assurance.

Tens of thousands of spectators witnessed the flight of the Pegasus. As the dawn broke a score of women were on hand, and before Masson got away there was a good-sized crowd present. Through the city groups of watchers waited for and witnessed the flight. Out Eastlake Park way automobiles were gathered ready to follow the aeroplane when it hove in sight.

El Monte turned out in force and all the towns along the way poured out their inhabitants, while ranchers waited patiently.

The early appearance of Masson seemed to surprise everybody, as heretofore it has been the fashion of aviators to perform stunts several hours after the time scheduled for flights. At best they have to await favorable opportunities.

Masson has a way, however, of going out and doing things in scheduled fashion, unless accidents prevent. He started his flight on time and completed his journey as far as Cucamonga to the minute. But there he fell down, yet on the whole, the day's perform-hen the click of the telegraph in- ment announced that Aviator sson had left Los Angeles and had n over that city at 7:03 o'clock in morning, the streets of San Ber- dino presented a sea of upturned s, even at that early hour.

ccording to schedule Masson should e arrived there some time after 9 ock. Further news was anxiously aited until 8:30, when a dispatch received that he had passed Up- at forty-five miles an hour at 8:03 ock. This indicated that he had stopped at Pomona, and as no ad- ce had been received from there the ple of that city immediately ked to the race track in order to it the alighting from his flight.

he crowd awaited patiently until news came that he had been forced light near Rochester, a station on Santa Fe, and had sustained some ries to his machine by landing in neyard. The streets and roads were thronged with people who neglected their midday meal in an endeavor to be there for his landing, and in a short time a crowd of 3500 to 4000 had assembled.

Immediately upon his arrival Masson delivered his package of papers to The Times representative, and in this act accomplished and established the first record of the utilization of an aeroplane for rapid commercial purposes. Immediately afterwards he handed a letter to President Brison from Secretary Frank Wiggins of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Masson arrived some minutes ahead of The Times automobiles, and that of his manager and mechanicians. As soon as they arrived, however, the entire party who had been without food since before their departure from Los Angeles was escorted to the Elks Club for dinner, with the announcement that Masson would give exhibition flights, beginning at 3 o'clock.

With two hours to wait, the crowd was very patient and put in its time inspecting the aeroplane and receiving explanations of its workings from Dr. McGilvra, business agent of Masson. At the appointed hour Masson and his helpers arrived and plans were immediately made for an exhibition. The machine was carefully gone over but had evidently weakened in some way by the long flight.

TOO MUCH STRAIN.

Masson arose gracefully and flew at a height of 100 feet the length of the field then circled and came back at a lower altitude and seemed about to make a landing. The machine was somewhat wobbly and evidently he had great difficulty in maintaining equilibrium. He flew behind the grand stand at a height of about forty feet for a distance of 100 yards, then gradually neared the ground until within twenty feet when the machine tipped to one side and one of the ends of the plane struck the sand, throwing the machine upon its face with the rudder at an angle of forty-five degrees in the air.

The forward portion of the machine, consisting of the front control and stearing gear, was splintered, as well as a few ribs on either side, and one of the guy wires supporting the rudder had snapped. Masson was unhurt as the fall was very short and he immediately stepped out of the machine, smiled and lit a cigarette. Meanwhile the engine continued to run until he shut it off.

The machine will be repaired immediately as Masson has a number of other flights contracted for. The damage is very slight and he has enough extra parts to rebuild a machine twice over. Masson and his men returned to Los Angeles last night.

Masson was unable to determine with exactitude the immediate cause of the freakish conduct of his aeroplane. It was, he thought, due to not being balanced properly, owing to the removal of the papers which he had carried through the valley and which had added considerable weight to the front part of his machine. The plane was doubtless tail-heavy.

In any event it acted queerly and for a moment it was beyond the possibility of control by the aviator. His manipulation and maneuvering to reach the ground and light in a soft, sandy spot were magnificent exhibitions of skill and expert handling. To this reason may be assigned the fact that no greater damage was done to the aeroplane.

Early Flush.

PRETTY GETAWAY JUST AT DAWN.

MASSON STRIKES DUE EAST AS SUN PEEPS OVER.

No Obstacle in Way of Beautiful Flight Over the City With Automobiles Spinning on Ahead to Clear the Way for Aviator—Crowd Present to Cheer Departure.

Just as the sun was peeping over the city in the east, at 7:02:30 o'clock yesterday morning, Didier Masson arose from the field at Fourth and Gramercy in his good aircraft, the Pegasus, with several bundles of copies of the Los Angeles Times firmly strapped to the machine and headed across the city.

The promptness with which every detail of the starting was pulled off gave the trip a genuinely business-like aspect from the beginning. The aviator circled around the field once, rising rapidly until he gained an altitude of about 1500 feet. He attained this height after making a complete circle and as he reached a position almost directly over the Bimini Baths he turned the biplane toward the East and started rapidly in the direction of his destination.

Almost before he had left the field, which is near the end of the Melrose avenue car line, his mechanics jumped into an auto which was waiting, and sped away in the same direction so that they might be on the scene if any accident should happen. Apparently the engine was running perfectly, however, and the clear sky and even air currents foretold a successful trip.

A large number of persons had gathered at the field in spite of the early hour and as this first news carrier of the air grew smaller and smaller and finally disappeared in the distance, they stood almost motionless. They had seen aeroplanes and aviators before, all of them, but the real significance of this first commercial venture with the bird-like machine, which a decade ago was claimed impossible, seemed to overpower them and they stood mute and speechless.

At fifteen minutes before the hour Masson's manager started in the fast Alco, a duplicate of the one which won the Vanderbilt cup race, with the intention of keeping as near as possible to the line of flight, so that he might be present and assist in any landings that might be necessary along the route. The Cadillac, which finished its record-breaking run to Bakersfield only the day before, followed with a party of officials; and a big Locomobile brought up the rear with the mechanicians.

The morning was almost perfect for such a venture. The aviator had some slight apprehension that a slight breeze might increase to such an extent that it would interfere with the flight, but was determined to make the start if possible. Last instructions to Masson were, "Do not start if the wind is too strong." These precautions were unnecessary, however, as the Frenchman had no trouble getting up.

All night before the flight the mechanics had been working on the craft so that it would be in perfect condition and at the time of the starting there seemed to be not a flaw in either the biplane or the plans for the journey.

The aviator appeared on the field early in the morning on his motorcycle, looking as trim as if he were going to attend a yachting party rather than to break a world's record. He carried a sealed barograph and had a watch on his wrist so that he could

PRETTY FLIGHT IS REMARKABLE.

Ranks With Best Ever Done in American Planes.

Lost Route Is Misadventure of the Long Trip.

Encounters High Wind Out of Cajon Pass.

Masson's aerial journey was one of the prettiest ever made here and compares favorably as an aviation feat with anything ever attempted in America, classing with Curtiss's flight down the Hudson and Brookins's trip from Chicago to Springfield. These two aviators flew without encumberances, but Masson carried several hundred copies of The Los Angeles Times, not only adding weight to the machine, but forming head resistance, because of the bulk of the papers.

Masson's trip was successful in every particular except in following the route selected. Masson's mistake lay in failing to familiarize himself with the lay of the land before attempting a long flight. It seemed so easy to him to rise over Los Angeles and fly in a direct line to his destination, but when he got in the air he became dismayed at the many valleys and chains of foothills, while the towns and cities were so numerous that he could not pick out Pomona, nestling in the hills near the center of the great valley.

The aviator kept his course well until he passed El Monte. Then the many groups making up the Puente hills and later the chain of the San Jose hills, confused him and he picked the left-hand depression next to the higher range of mountains. He bore far to the left of the main turnpike and was not visible from the road toward the last, so far was he off his course.

Masson crossed the road five miles this side of Puente, and when the attending autos reached that town he was barely discernible in the northern sky above the mountains. The main valley is divided by a long chain of hills here, and for eighteen or twenty miles nothing was seen of the aeroplane on the south side. The attending autos, believing injury had befallen the aviator, dashed over the fine roads beyond Puente in the hope of locating him. Not until Pomona was reached, was word of the aviator secured.

There the mystery deepened, for the aeroplane, while not then in trouble, had again disappeared, seemingly at a distance where it would take half an hour to reach him. The Alco started in pursuit, but made the mistake of taking the lower road on the assumption that the aeroplane had gone on straight to San Bernardino.

The Cadillac crew reaching Pomona shortly after the Alco, remained in town hoping to pick up news of the aeroplane by telephone and thus be ready to rush to the rescue with a definite idea in mind.

Meanwhile the Locomobile with Buel H. Green and the mechanicians aboard, pulled into Pomona hard on the trail, and hearing that the aeroplane had gone on, started in rapid pursuit, so the men could be on hand to lend aid. They too, took the lower road and passed on to San Bernardino.

Meanwhile Masson tried to locate Pomona. Figuring that some signal would be displayed, he looked for it in vain, but had there been a large beacon of some sort the aviator could not have seen it, as he was too far north to distinguish anything but the largest objects. Even the park with its several thousand guests, was as an ant hill back of the immediate landscape.

Feeling that he should stop somewhere, and being short of gasoline as a fresh supply was to have been taken on at Pomona, Masson looked about for a landing place. He located a fine field, apparently, and came down within 200 feet of the ground and found the land too sandy to alight on with hope of getting away again. So he flew over the adjoining field and saw nothing better to land on than a vineyard with pruned grape stubble. As he could not rise he was forced to come down.

Masson picked the best spot in sight and landed rather hard, the heavy grape stubble puncturing two tires and the pull of the sand damaging the running gear. The motor and the aviator were uninjured, with the planes in good condition.

The aviator and his machine were stranded in a strange land, far from a town and left apparently helpless by the partial breaking down of the running gear. But assistance hove in sight. The country was alive with automobiles. Almost as soon as he landed a score of autos were headed that way. The owner of the first to reach the machine offered his services to the aviator. After getting his bearings, and not knowing where he might expect his mechanics, Masson decided to go to Pomona, where he was expected, and report his adventures, hoping to meet with his manager and the auto crews and explain what had happened and why he had missed Pomona.

The aviator frankly admitted he had lost the way, having mistaken the Cucamonga Valley for the Pomona Valley. He only went over the country once, and as he is a stranger in these parts he was unable to hold a given course from a point in the air where it is hard to distinguish hills from valleys except by the shadows.

After the decision not to return to Pomona, the repair crew got to work and patched the biplane's injuries. When the aeroplane rose at about 12:20 o'clock, it had a hard time getting away off the sands of the vineyard, but finally ascended, circled once, and then headed straight for San Bernardino, fifteen miles away.

Masson claims that as he passed the valley leading to Cajon Pass he encountered a stiff north wind blowing down through the mountains and had great difficulty keeping his equilibrium. He says that the side of his planes nearest the mountains tilted nearly three feet and he was unable to get it down level. He asserts that he would not care to fly through the same stratum of air for any price and that it was more dangerous than crossing the English Channel.

RANCHER ATTACHES MASSON'S PEGASUS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Fifteen thousand people are tramping over my grain field, and I want the officers to hold that flying machine for damages," excitedly telephoned H. Warren, a rancher, to the Sheriff's office late this afternoon.

It was in Warren's field that Masson's aeroplane was wrecked, the aviator escaping without injury by a narrow margin.

Warren sought attachment papers, but before he could be satisfied, Dr. W. V. McGilvra, Masson's business manager, had retained Attorney G. M. Pittman, who brought the two together and a settlement was affected by the payment of $10 to the rancher. The latter had first demanded $150. He claimed his field was seeded to alfalfa.

Public sentiment is with the daring aviator, and people are sympathizing with him in the disaster and regard the Warren

Aviator Delivers Missives to Presidents of Chamber of Commerce at Pomona and San Bernardino—Difficulties Attending Trip Causes Delay at One Point.

Aviator Masson carried with him, in addition to copies of The Times, letters from Frank Wiggins, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce in Los Angeles, to officers of the Merchants' Association at Pomona and the Chamber of Commerce of San Bernardino.

The following is a copy of the message to Harry Russell, president of the Pomona Merchants' Association. The letter was delivered by auto from Cucamonga, as the aviator failed to make the landing at Pomona.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 6, 1911.

Mr. Harry Russell,
Pres. Merchants' Association, Pomona, Cal.

Gentlemen:—The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce takes great pleasure in sending by aeroplane this message of greeting and good will to the Merchants' Association of Pomona, which is the inauguration of the use of the aeroplane for commercial purposes by The Los Angeles Times, and we believe the first instance on record of a message being forwarded by this means of transportation from one commercial organization to another, and this may be the beginning, not only of aerial messages, but eventually the transportation of merchandise and passengers.

Wishing you a prosperous year, I remain,

Yours very truly,
FRANK WIGGINS, Secretary.

The greetings to the San Bernardino Chamber of Commerce were delivered at the end of the trip as planned. The Pomona people had urged the aviator to return to their city and give an exhibition, but he maintained that San Bernardino was his destination and he was determined to arrive there as quickly as possible. The following letter was handed to W. W. Brison, Jr., president of the Chamber of Commerce at that place, at the end of the trip:

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 6, 1911.

Mr. W. W. Brison, Jr.,
Pres. Chamber of Commerce, San Bernardino, Cal.

Dear Sir:—The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce sends greetings to your organization, through the first aeroplane route, established in the United States for commercial purposes by The Los Angeles Times.

We congratulate San Bernardino as being the terminus of this route at the present time and trust in the near future that your city may become the first Inter-California Station of a Trans-Continental Aeroplane Route to the Coast.

Wishing you the compliments of the season and a prosperous year for your organization, I remain

Yours very truly,
FRANK WIGGINS, Secretary.

Makes Your Hair Soft and Glossy.

"Most shampoo mixtures," says Mrs. Mae Martyn, in the Philadelphia Press, "rob the scalp of all oily secretion, leaving it dry and harsh, and the hair grows brittle and is hard to manage. This causes dandruff, falling hair and premature grayness, ageing a woman ten years.

"A reliable shampoo mixture can be made at home by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a teacup of hot water. Pour this on the scalp and rub well, then rinse carefully, and you will find it leaves the hair soft and glossy and puts the scalp in a healthy candition.

"Shampooing with this mixture is a delight and costs but a trifle, but you should be careful to get an original package of canthrox."

One fatality out of $2,500,000 passengers carried by steam vessels of all classes plying to and from Philadelphia was the record made in 1910, according to the report of the board of United States boat inspectors made public Friday at Philadelphia. Only two passengers have lost their lives on steam vessels in that district in the last five years in which 158,300,000 persons were transported.

Can't Be Helped.

POMONA INCIDENT REGRETTED, BUT COURSE IS UNAVOIDABLE.

FIVE thousand persons or more were congregated at Pomona to see Masson land there, but the aviator passed seven to ten miles north and when he was finally sighted his aeroplane was a mere speck above Cucamonga Peak.

Watchers believed he was beyond the first chain of mountains, but the distances were deceiving and in reality the French aviator was traveling up the center of Cucamonga Valley.

He had left his attending automobiles far behind and the crews lost sight of him when he disappeared behind the Puente hills. The autos kept on out the El Monte road hoping to intercept him at Pomona, but when they reached there he had already passed the distant peaks by ten minutes.

The Pomona crowd was greatly disappointed and the Merchants' Association members immediately got busy telephoning throughout the countryside in the effort to locate the aviator.

Word came first from San Bernardino, that Masson had landed near Rialto, but when the report was traced down it left only indefinite rumor to go by.

Pomona's committee became greatly excited, fearing that some injury had befallen Masson, and members kept the wires busy in the effort to locate him.

Then Masson himself came into town in an automobile hunting for his mechanicians, but he learned that they had gone on, and he prepared to wait for word from them or their return.

Meanwhile the committee mustered prominent members and a man with a megaphone, loaded Masson into an auto and, with the band leading, paraded through the principal streets announcing that, as soon as Masson could locate his mechanics and make repairs, he would fly back to Pomona and give an exhibition.

This was Masson's intention when he left Pomona for the landing place of the biplane on the ranch of the Mission Vinyard Company, owned by Post and Klusman. With joyful hearts, a carload of members of the local committee accompanied him and, when the aeroplane was reached, noted with satisfaction that the repairs to the running gear were nearly completed.

Then Manager Adossides informed them that he would not permit his aviator to take the risk of additional flights back to Pomona and that he had contracted to go through to San Bernardino, and he intended to fulfill his obligation.

At this time it was nearly 11 o'clock, and the Pomona committee figured that the aviator could easily fly back to Pomona, make an appearance and then fly to San Bernardino.

Adossides argued that those in charge of the arrangements at Pomona should havehad a big smudge fire burning and to have hoisted a bunch of toy balloons on a string so that the aviator could locate his position. The smudge fire was burning, but the smoke failed to rise in comparatively still air, while there were no balloons to be had. The committee claimed, however, that Masson was so far out of his course that he could not possibly have seen either the fire or the balloons.

Arrangements had been made to supply the aviator with gasoline, hot coffee and luncheon, but things grew cold while the crowds waited and gossiped.

Great Importance.

SIGNIFICANCE OF MASSON'S FLIGHT TO SAN BERNARDINO.

BY H. LAV. TWINING,
President of the Aero Club of California.

MASSON flew from Los Angeles to San Bernardino, all told seventy-five miles, yesterday, in a Curtiss biplane. This sets a milestone in the history of aeronautics in the West. He carried copies of The Times with him, and delivered them to the Times agent at San Bernardino. This is the first attempt to demonstrate the practicability of the aeroplane.

Is the flying machine merely a plaything, a sporting device, or has it possibilities for commerce or war?

It is perhaps a little early to answer this question definitely, but the experiment of yesterday went a long way toward it. Great things have small beginnings, and it may be that a year will see mail carried between our great cities by aeroplanes.

Masson left Los Angeles Saturday morning at 7 o'clock. As shown by the barograph records he flew variously at an altitude of 2000 to 3000 feet. He was to land at Pomona, and after a short stay was to leave for San Bernardino. When a little over half way to Pomona he turned off toward the mountains, losing his way. It was a little hazy close to the ground and he became confused and passed Pomona on the north. In order to locate himself he landed in a vineyard at Rochester some forty-five miles from Los Angeles.

This shows that it is just as necessary for an aviator to know his course as it is for a mariner. Details his way. After rising from the vineyard, he reached San Bernardino in twelve minutes.

The possibilities here demonstrated are far-reaching. A machine like the one in which Hoxsey rose 4000 feet above Mt. Wilson could carry three hundred pounds of mail. In one and a half hours it could land mail from Los Angeles in San Bernardino, Riverside or Redlands. It could stop whenever necessary to take on fuel just as a train has to do. A little familiarity with the country would prevent a wandering from the course, and a compass would be as useful as to a ship.

A year ago Paulhan would scarcely have attempted the San Bernardino flight. Today one of his mechanics actually accomplished it. Another year will see a marked advance in the utility of the flying machine.

The possibilities of its use in war are sure to be developed in the near future. If a hostile fleet were to appear off our coast, a fleet of aeroplanes would be a deadly menace to such a squadron. The aeroplane is comparatively cheap but a battleship is very expensive.

A fleet of 2000 aeroplanes pitted against twenty battleships would have its possibilities. Each aeroplane could carry one armed man besides the aviator. The rapid fire guns of the ships would get many of them, but the others might give an account of themselves that would prove disastrous to the ships.

Experiment is the only way in which to determine the value of any new device. It was predicted that the submarine would be a deadly instrument of warfare, but events have not ful-ance was the best ever pulled off by an aviator.

The flight of Masson aroused the deepest interest, not only in Los Angeles and Southern California in general, but throughout the country, as all the big news agencies carried big stories.

Scientifically, the trip has given renewed confidence in aviation. The recent accidents have caused many to believe that aviation is a dangerous sport. Masson's flight just at this time has done more to restore renewed belief in aviation than anything else.

GREATER POMONA IS CELEBRATED.

CONSOLIDATION BY TROLLEY CAUSES REJOICING.

Failure of Aeroplane to Land at Town Causes Keen Disappointment—Crowds Throng Streets and Aviation Field, But Masson Loses the Way—Other Features.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

POMONA, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Greater Pomona day, for the celebration of which preparations have been going on for weeks was formally ushered in with the blowing of whistles and ringing of bells as soon as word was received that Masson, The Times aviator, had left Los Angeles on his "Pegasus" with copies of the morning issue, and was due to arrive at Newton's local aviation field about 8 o'clock.

People were soon aroused and West Second street thronged with pedestrains, carriages, farm wagons, automobiles, and street-cars crowded to the guards en route for the field.

And how they flocked, in anticipation of seeing Masson the "bird-man" and his big craft come sailing into Pomona with copies of The Times, thus introducing the airship as a factor in business transportation.

By 8 o'clock, thousands had gathered, the crowds increasing as the minutes sped. The field, in the center of which a quarter-mile strip had been leveled and sprinkled for the eventful landing, was edged with dense lines of automobiles and every kind of vehicles. All of the local stores closed as soon as the whistles blew and proprietors and clerks hastened to the field.

Never has there been more general interest over any event of entertainment here. Thus the disappointment was the keener when word was passed among the crowd and the announcement was megaphoned by the field committee that Masson had become confused and had lost his course, going in the northern part of the valley around the Puente hills, and was somewhere north and east of Pomona and could not make the landing. The crowd showed its keen disappointment.

NOSE TO TRAIL.

Meanwhile representatives of The Times who had been trailing Masson in automobiles, together with the Frenchman's mechanicians and President Lav. Twining of the Aero Club, arrived, having lost track of Masson and fearing some accident had happened. Some of the party went on toward San Bernardino in search of the aeroplane and some remained here keeping telephone lines hot between San Bernardino and way stations for news of the lost Masson.

Messrs. Tate, Russell, Heath, Wilson, Balfour, Potter, Hamlin and others of the local committee together with representatives of The Times were all frantically endeavoring to gain some report of the "bird-man," to satisfy the crowds which had come back to the city from aviation field and were restlessly waiting on the streets.

During the commotion, the missing Masson came tearing into the city in a rancher's automobile. He sought the local committee headquarters and told his story which was simple. West of here he lost his course and when he realized he was a derelict by the appearance of the country, his gasoline running low, he came to earth north of Lafacade's winery and getting an automobile at once came here to report. He was bundled into a car, a parade hastily formed and headed by the band, the procession toured the principal business streets.

Masson, Messrs. Russell and Balfour of the local committee, and several others went on to Cucamonga to Masson's machine, which was being repaired by his mechanicians.

Goal for All.

WORK STARTS SOON ON HILL LINE, COMING TO LOS ANGELES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The United Properties Company, the new Oakland merger, will at once begin the construction of a line from Oakland to San Jose, using the right of way of the San Francisco, Oakland and San Jose Railroad for that purpose.

This road will later be extended south through the San Joaquin Valley to Bakersfield, and eventually to Los Angeles. It may be taken as settled that the Hill interests are behind this programme and that the road, when completed to the Southern California metropolis, will form an important link in the Hill-Western Pacific system in California.

As a matter of fact, the Western Pacific is no longer controlled by the Goulds, and there is good and substantial reasons for the assertion that the control of that great property has passed into the hands of Hill and his associates.

THREE ROUTES AVAILABLE.

There are several available routes by which Los Angeles can be reached after leaving Bakersfield. One of these, which is looked upon with considerable favor, crosses the Tehachepi Mountains through the Tejon Pass, touching at Santa Barbara.

Another route from Bakersfield to Los Angeles, via Santa Barbara, is by way of the San Emido Pass, which lies about fifteen miles west of Tejon Pass. The distance between Bakersfield and Santa Barbara by this route is only about ninety miles, and all heavy grades can be eliminated by constructing a short tunnel. Practically every foot of land over which the road will be compelled to pass, should the San Emido route be chosen, is owned by the Kern County Land Company or the government.

W. S. Tevis, one of the principal promoters and stockholders of the United Properties Company, is also president of the Kern County Land Company.

TEJON ROUTE CHEAPER.

The right of way through the holdings of the Kern County Land Company, which covers by far the greater portion of the distance, would have to be purchased. For that reason the Tejon route may be preferred as the cheaper.

There is still a third route through the mountains, following the Old Post road and this is said to be even more desirable in many respects than either of those described.

The surveys that "Borax" Smith had made at great expense from Ely, Nev., to a point on the Tonopah & Tidewater Railroad, near Goldfield, will also be valuable when the Western Pacific extension southwest from Salt Lake to Los Angeles is undertaken.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SANTA ROSA, Jan. 7.—At the trial of Dr. W. P. Burke today, the defense continued the introduction of evidence. Walter Conner, son of a former engineer at the Burke sanatorium, testified that Luetta Smith told him, about a month before her child was born, that she had a husband and was going back to her home in Berkeley.

L. T. Warin, an employee of the sanatorium, contradicted the testimony of Ada Clark, who had said she was not in the sanatorium annex at the time of the explosion in the tent-house of Miss Smith.

T. B. Reese of Yolo testified regarding Luetta Smith's arrival at his home in 1906, but was not allowed to answer a question as to whether her face was badly bruised and swollen.

At noon the case went over until next Tuesday morning.

Efforts of the defense today to put in evidence of Luetta Smith's insanity and bad general reputation, were temporarily blocked. Judge Seawell said he would on Monday hear arguments as to the admissibility of such testimony. Counsel for Burke stated a large part of their case rested upon the witnesses who would show Luetta Smith to be a victim of recurring dementia.

A sensation of today's hearing was the development that the lawyers and witnesses on both sides are receiving abusive and menacing letters. The court warned the jurors to report the receipt of any such by any of their number.

PEACE IN SIGHT.

COMPROMISE ON FIGHT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WILLOWS (Cal.) Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is believed the long litigation between the contending factions on the West Side will end and that hereafter there will be peace and harmony in the Sacramento Valley Irrigation Company, commonly called the Pittsburgh Syndicate.

At a mass meeting in Willows, last evening, Chairman Zumwalt of Colusa appointed a committee of five land owners to take up the matter of a compromise between the land owners and the irrigation company. There were two hundred people present, 100 being land owners in the district.

Judges Finch of Glenn county, Albery of Colusa and Ellison of Tehama counties were called to advise the assemblage. They argued a compromise, the land owners to give rights of way for canals and laterals, and the irrigation company to release the bonds on the lands in the old central irrigation district. Only one land owner voted against this and he changed later to a favorable vote.

SPUDS QUARANTINED.

SENT BACK TO NEVADA.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7.—A quarantine order was issued yesterday by State Agricultural Commissioner Jeffreys against a car load of potatoes shipped to Sacramento from the State of Nevada. Inspection showed them infected with the eel worm, a pest that for the first time in the history of the commission has been discovered in this State. The quarantine order means the compulsory destruction of the potatoes or their reshipment to the consignee.

GETS TERM IN PRISON.

MAN VIOLATES ELECTION LAW.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COLUSA (Cal.) Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bert Rawls, convicted of election frauds at Princeton on the occasion of the "wet" and "dry" election on November 8, was sentenced today to two years in San Quentin. Rawls entered a booth and tried to influence voters at the general election, when there was a hot contest on between the "wet" and "dry" factions at Princeton, twenty miles above here. He tried to make several vote for saloons and went so far as to mark their ballots for them.

SLOPE BRIEFS.

Falling Palm Kills.

SAN MATEO, Jan. 7.—While Henry Mey, a house mover from San Rafael, was attempting to move a huge palm tree from the Demara residence here to the William H. Crocker grounds at Burlingame yesterday, the tree toppled over, crushing him to the ground and killing him instantly. He was aged thirty and unmarried.

Two Perish of Cold.

PRINCE RUPERT (B. C.) Jan. 7.—Ross M. Lightner of Soap Lake, Wash., and M. B. Pendry of Victoria, perished of cold while crossing the glacier at the head of Bear River several days ago, according to information received here yesterday. Charles Gordon, who was with them, was severely frost bitten but managed to reach Stewart, where he is being cared for.

Seeks Eighth Divorce.

PORTLAND (Or.) Jan. 7.—Mrs. Ellen Changrow, a wealthy woman of the Umatilla reservation, is suing Nicholas Changrow, her ninth husband, for divorce. She was divorced from seven husbands on one ground or another, one of her husbands committed suicide and she now desires to be legally separated from the ninth.

McCarthy Appointments.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—Mayor McCarthy announced today the appointment of one member of each of the various municipal commissions to fill vacancies caused by expiring terms. With but two exceptions, the retiring commissioners were reappointed. Hiram G. Vaughn was appointed to the Board of Education to succeed Richard I. Whelan, resigned, and James E. Powers will take the place on the same board made vacant by the expiration of the term of T. H. Bennerman. The new appointees will assume office on Monday.

Mother and Son Give Words of Praise

Mrs. Barbara Burke suffered for years from malaria and chills. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey drove the disease from her system and keeps her healthy and happy. Her son says Duffy's is "one of the family." He would not be without a bottle in the medicine chest.

MRS. BARBARA BURKE and her son, MR. VALLEY BURKE

Mrs. Burke writes: "Fifteen years ago I was a sufferer from malaria fever and chills. On the advice of a friend I took Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and was cured. It proves effective in keeping malaria from my system and is a grand medicine for aged people. I have continued to use it ever since as a tonic." Mrs. Barbara Burke, 730 So. Liberty St., New Orleans, La.

In his letter Mr. Burke says: "It is with pleasure that I say and write and it is a pity that I cannot write these words in gold, 'Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is just one of the family, a good help in need.' Good luck to you." Valley Burke, Adv. Agent, Winter Garden Theatre, New Orleans, La.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

has always been and is now a pure, wholesome, healthful medicinal whiskey, produced without regard to expense in compliance with the requirements of the Foods and Drugs Act, the doctors' "Materia Medica" and the "Pharmacopoeia," the two recognized authorities on drugs and medicines in the United States. Great care is used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus producing a liquid food, tonic and stimulant, requiring no digestion. Its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach. Its gentle and invigorating properties influence for good every important organ in the body. It makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong and vigorous.

CAUTION.—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, be sure you get the genuine. It is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY—never in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1.00 a large bottle. Write Medical Department, The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y., for doctors' advice and an illustrated medical booklet containing testimonials and rules for health, both sent free

DR. C. M. HORN

DENTIST.

"Never Hurts a Bit"

About three years ago I made my first announcement regarding my new discovery of a painless plan of extracting, filling and crowning teeth, using the now familiar slogan,

"I Never Hurt a Bit"

During that time people have come to me for dentistry—nervous people, frightened people and people who looked like they might be going to the "electric chair" instead of to one of my comfortable ones—

And one and all have gone away eager to spread the gospel of painlessness as applied to my dental work.

In the hope these lines may catch the eye of some sufferer who is afraid of the dentist, I will just say it again—

"I Never Hurt a Bit"

I mean what you mean by painlessness.

MARQUIS ELLIS
Well known tenor and instructor in the art of singing.

From one whom you know. Mr. Ellis says of the Melody-grand Piano

Scientific tone reflection has for many years been to me a most interesting study. In fact, it enters more strongly into the art of singing than the superficial student can possibly understand. Some time ago I heard your Melody-grand used in accompanying a noted singer. The perfect broad singing quality of tone at once attracted my attention, and in looking over the piano, the cause was easily seen and understood. You certainly have marked a new mile-stone in piano construction, and I shall use no other when the Melody-grand is available.

Talks On Teet

BY REX DENTAL CO.
(Incorporated.)

A Pyorrhea Victim

If you are afflicted with Pyorrh you will not need to be told that it a bad business.

"Loose Teeth," "Riggs' Disease are other names for it.

Some sort of a busy microbe ge down between the gums and the teet and that about settles it.

Most dentists say: "No cure for it

We take issue with any such co demnation proceedings and say th under most circumstances we can co rect it and in time effect a cure.

But not when the disease has go too far.

By way of proof that we can cu Pyorrhea read the following from lady in Hermon, Cal. Mrs. Jenn Pierce.

A PYORRHEA VICTIM'S PRAISE.

"I write to express my gratification f the dental work you did for me three yea ago (letter written in December, 1907.)

"I consulted good dentists * * * got no permanent cure.

"I had misgivings as to the lasting qua ty of the work.

"It is now three years * * * * have had no pyorrhea whatever since—a do not know the difference between th teeth put in (alveolar teeth) and my own

From the above it would seem th we do cure Pyorrhea.

But that is not strange. Every de tist in town has said we couldn't r place missing teeth without a bridge but we do.

We are used to being told abou things that we can't do. But today yo will find our big offices crowded—an every day they are crowded—so must be that we are making good.

If you are afflicted with Pyorrhe or have any other troubles with you teeth, why not give us the benefit the doubt and come in for a free ex amination?

We will discuss the teeth questio frankly with you, and there will be n obligation on your part to come agai unless satisfied that we know wha we are talking about.

THE TRUTH
Concerning Classified Advertisements.

Indisputable and Incontrovertible Figures Prove the Business-Getting Value of Times "Liners."

On Sunday, January 1st, The Times printed 4648 separate agate "Liners."

On the same date its nearest local competitor printed only 2359 separate agate "Liners."

Yesterday Saturday, January 7th, The Times printed 1294 separate agate "Liners."

On the same day its nearest local competitor printed only 814 separate agate "Liners."

Month after month, year in and year out, The Times, owing to its incomparable superiority as an advertising medium, prints more classified advertisements than all other local papers combined.

CASH INDUCEMENTS TO KEEN OBSERVERS.

On Monday, January 23rd, and on each Monday thereafter, The Times will award the following values to the readers of its classified columns:

FIRST: Five Dollars in Gold will be presented to the person making the nearest correct estimate of the number of "Liner" advertisements printed in The Times during the preceding seven days, in excess of the number published by its nearest local competitor during the same period of time.

Second: Two and a Half Dollars will be presented to the person making the nearest correct estimate of the total number of "Liner" advertisements published in The Times for the preceding seven days.

All estimates should be addressed to the Contest Editor, and must be in the office, 531-33 South Spring street, before 10 p.m. on the Sunday prior to the commencement of the week for which the contest is held.

COURT BARS BOYCOTT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Jan. 7.—The Supreme Court refused today to dissolve the Traders' Livestock Exchange of Kansas City, Kan., on the ground it is a trust. The court holds the exchange must discontinue the practice of boycotting members outside the exchange. The action of the court acts as a stay of the order of Judge True, of the District Court of Wyandotte county, dissolving the exchange, and puts the exchange on its good behavior. The suit was brought by the Attorney-General.

UMMONS SUPPLANTS WARRANT.

ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—The Municipal urt judges of Chicago have demanded a change in the form of arrest for a misdemeanor. At a special meeting yesterday they signed n order that in the future all arrests for minor violations of a city rdinance shall be made by summons nstead of warrant. When this police form is instituted, as it will be as on as the necessary blanks and books are printed, the humiliation of being arrested for some trivial offense will be removed. It means that majority of persons who will be arrested in the city this year will escape the embarrassment of a patrol agon ride. Automobile speeders who e caught, instead of being taken to e station and forced to put up an ppearance bond, will be handed a ummons to appear in court the next ay, and allowed to go their way. More than 70,000 persons were arrested in Chicago last year for misdemeanors," asserted Chief Justice arry Olsen. "If our ruling had been effect in 1910, fully 50,000 of these ould have escaped being taken to e police station when arrested."

STARVES SELF TO DEATH.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CLEVELAND, Jan. 7.—The death om starvation of Mrs. Susannah rumm, 76 years old, at the City Infirmary last night, brought to light e story of an aged woman who for o years past lived in a small, qualid, widowless room, clothed herself in rags and finally starved herself death in order to save every penny that was within her grasp. She as supposed to be penniless but after death came, there was found in cloth bag around her neck $150 in ills, two bank books calling for several hundred dollars and a mortgage n a farm in Berlin, Ohio. Mrs. rumm, who was the widow of Sergeant William C. Drumm, Company E, ty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, been three times married and toured the world several times one of her husbands. Between of the marriages and under her en name of Susannah Gilbert, raveled several seasons with

TRIAL IN OLD CASE.

TED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

D, Jan. 7.—Ruth A. Laugh- E. Kelly and Attorney wn, convicted in 1908 of ill Miss Annie Nolan, w trial by the Appellate Court yesterday. Brown, who is one of the oldest practitioners in the city, paid a fine of $1000 and the two others are now in the Joliet penitentiary. The evidence in the criminal trial showed Miss Nolan had conveyed her property to Miss Laughlin, the consideration being that she would care for Miss Nolan until her death. The jury held that the defendants had conspired to kill Miss Nolan after fraudulently inducing her to sign over her property. The Upper Court said there was not enough evidence to warrant conviction.

GIVE VETERAN AN ENGINE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CLEVELAND, Jan. 7.—The Erie Railroad management has honored one of its oldest engineers, both in years and in point of service, by presenting to Alexander Larkin, of this city on yesterday, his sixty-eighth birthday, the huge engine which he drives daily in hauling the Pittsburgh flyer between Cleveland and Youngstown. Larkin has been in continuous service with the company for forty-nine years. In all these years he has been in but two minor accidents. It is understood that the engine is to be regarded as his personal property as long as he remains with the company, and that it can be used by no other engineer.

SUES LATE PRESIDENT'S SON.

Paris Jeweler Seeks Recompense for $30,000 Worth of Pearls Young Man Pawned.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Claude Casimir-Perier, son of the late President of the republic, is in the courts in a rather vulgar and mercenary dispute with jewelers over a collar of pearls worth $30,000.

The unpleasant fact is that Casimir-Perier bought the collar on credit and immediately borrowed $12,000 on it from another jeweler.

Casimir-Perier admits this, and proceeds to explain: A friend named Levy asked him for a loan. Casimir-Perier had little ready money so, at the suggestion of Levy, he says, he went to Janisch, a jeweler, who let him have the pearl collar. Janisch understood perfectly that the necklace was to be hypothecated for immediate cash, so Casimir-Perier took it to another jeweler and borrowed $12,000 on it, promising to redeem it in a fortnight. This he failed to do.

PEACH OF A MARITAL TANGLE.

Tacoma Man Must Divorce Former Wife, Remarry Present Wife and Then Adopt His Six Grown Children.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Superior Judge Clifford has unraveled the marital tangle of Allen S. Johnson, an aged paint and wall paper merchant, in a manner that will eventually give all concerned a proper legal status. The case presented features never before heard in an American divorce court.

In 1868, at Laramie, the bishop of Wyoming married Johnson to Martha Alice White, aged 15. Twelve years later, it is claimed, Johnson deserted her. He remarried in California. His wife died and he married his present wife. They have six grown children. His first wife married a man named Peach. After his death, she endeavored to get a pension. The pension authorities demanded proof of Johnson's death or of divorce, which led to the location of her first husband. Mrs. Peach recently sued Johnson for a divorce and $150 monthly alimony.

On the stand yesterday, with his down, Johnson could not remember Mrs. Peach. She quickly related incidents of their courtship on the frontier, rides over the Laramie plains seeking antelope and escapes from warring Indians. This restored Johnson's memory and he admitted her identity. Judge Clifford decided as follows:

Johnson must pay Martha Johnson Peach $3000 alimony. She is required to resume the name of Peach. To insure the legal status of the present Mrs. Johnson and their children, Johnson is directed to sue Martha Johnson Peach for divorce. Six months after this is recorded he is advised to again marry the present Mrs. Johnson and both of them are advised to legally adopt their six grown children.

UFFRAGETTES SEE FOR PET PROVISO—

BY DIRECT WIRE TO

ACRAMENTO, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Although the Legislature appears reconciled to the proposal to submit a constitutional amendment authorizing equal suffrage and resolutions have been introduced by Senator ell and Assemblyman Cattell, both of Los Angeles, the organized suffragettes will not take everything for granted. Perhaps it is woman's intuition that leads them to exercise vigilance. At any rate there is not going to be any chance for the members to forget what the Lissner programme on suffrage is.

Mrs. Charles Farwell Edson of Los Angeles reached the city this morning about the time Mrs. Lillian Harris Coffin of San Francisco was leaving for a short visit to her home. Mrs. Edson is organization chairman of the Political Equality League of the South, and Mrs. Coffin is president of the Woman Suffrage Association.

Just after Mrs. Edson registered at the Sacramento Hotel, the name of Miss Minnie Bronson of New York was appended to the page. It seems she came in on the same train with Mrs. Edson and they met, although they are of opposite political faith. Miss Bronson represents the anti-suffragist movement and is connected with the Census Bureau in gathering certain statistics.

PROPOSES TO ANCHOR.

Mrs. Edson says she is here to stay until the constitutional amendment goes through both houses. She will also give attention to the Lewis amendment which gives women the right to vote in elections where property questions are involved.

"This Lewis amendment puts prop-clock Monday afternoon. It is planned to give him a reception in the evening where he may meet the members of the Legislature. His coming is in response to an expression of a majority of the members, including many now supporting him who, however, believe he should be measured at close range before their final choice is made.

MESERVE ALSO GOING.

Almost coincident with this announcement came one from former Assemblyman J. N. O. Rech of Los Angeles, that Edwin A. Meserve, who received within 8000 votes as many as Spalding and Works, is in the race and that he, too, will be here not later than Monday.

An hour later Senator J. B. Sanford, Democratic leader, came into the Sacramento Hotel with the announcement that he would call a caucus of Democrats to be held Monday afternoon, and that he believed John E. Raker of Modoc, Congressman-elect from the Second District, will receive the complimentary vote of the Democrats, which, Senator Sanford says, Theodore A. Bell has declined.

And as if this were not enough to nt Lissner and his spurious candidate for the seat in the Senate, word was brought that Chester H. Rowell, of Fresno, one of Lissner's chief lieutenants, is on his way to Sacramento from the south with a "safety" candidate in his pocket to which the Lissner members may turn when the Works bubble bursts within the next twenty-four hours, as it will, if the wise ones are correct.

The increase of the field against Works is regarded as sure to prevent an election next Tuesday and perhaps force a deadlock that may lead in directions that cannot be charted on the political map now.

WHY SPALDING YIELDED.

Spalding yielded only when he was informed that his presence was requested by men who are considering his candidacy and feel that it is his duty to come in order that they may do their duty by him. This invitation was sent through Grant Conard, Mayor of San Diego, one of the leading Lincoln-Roosevelt politicians and the first of its "insurgent" element to win a victory at the polls.

Former Assemblyman Rech reached here this morning and filed some documents with the Secretary of State, after which he sought a number of members of the Legislature who had importuned Meserve to permit his name to be presented. While Meserve carried only six legislative districts, he received almost as many votes as Works, in popular computation, and stands very high in the estimate of the membership of the Assembly. It seems that those who do not want to vote for either Spalding or Works have turned to him, first, in an effort to ultimately secure his election, or second, to register their protest against Works. In explaining Meserve's situation Rech said:

"For the past week, legislators who had been advised by their respective districts to vote for Edwin A. Meserve for United States Senator, as well as others, who had expressed a disinclination to cast their vote for either Judge Works or Mr. Spalding, have made requests of Mr. Meserve to permit the presentation of his name as a candidate for that office before the sessions of both houses next Tuesday.

CITRUS MEN SATISFIED.

"Requests of a similar character have been made of Mr. Meserve by persons representing the large citrus interests of Southern California, all of whom are well acquainted with his sound views on the tariff question so vital to this State. As I intended to come to Sacramento today for the purpose of transacting business of a private character and being acquainted with these several requests, I offer to convey any message from Mr. Meserve to the legislators in answer to the requests.

"I am authorized to state that Mr. Meserve feels that he is entitled to the same consideration by the legislators with reference to this office, that any candidate, at the primary election, receives next Tuesday. He feels that he should place no obstacle in the way of those members who wish to cast their vote for him for this office."

There have been hints that Lissner was banking on keeping the Democrats out of a caucus until he had lined them up strong enough to make Works their caucus nominee. But he counted without his host for Senator Sanford, when asked tonight if there is any chance of the Democrats supporting Works, said:

"Not any, we are not backing up [illegible]. We want a young progressive active man and we have him in Judge Raker. Perhaps the other Democratic members may favor some one else but there will be a Democrat nominated by us."

Sanford said he did not know what Senator Cartwright would do. He is a Democrat from Fresno and is already obligated to Works. It is prob-

SUFFRAGETTES SEE SOLONS FALL FOR PET PROVISO---IN THEIR MIND.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Although the Legislature appears reconciled to the proposal o submit a constitutional amendment authorizing equal suffrage and resolutions have been introduced by Senator Bell and Assemblyman Cattell, both of Los Angeles, the organized suffragettes will not take everything for granted. PROPOSES TO ANCHOR.

Mrs. Edson says she is here to stay ntil the constitutional amendment es through both houses. She will so give attention to the Lewis mendment hich gives women the ght to vote in elections where proper- questions are involved.

"This Lewis amendment puts property interest above human interest," said Mrs. Edson, "and is not acceptable. The amendments introduced by Senator Bell and Assemblyman Cattell represent our wishes."

Mrs. Edson said she knew nothing of Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz's visit or whom she represented. She said suffrage could not be gained without the amendment sought. The equality league has been advised by Walter J. Trask, W. J. Hunsaker and J. A. Anderson on this question and feels that any statutory effort will be abortive.

Miss Bronson had a long talk with Senator Roseberry of Santa Barbara, this afternoon and later with some other members. She seemed encouraged in the belief that the amendment will not pass.

MEMBER IS NEUTRAL.

After the conference with Roseberry the latter said he was not committed to the amendment.

"If the men of California," said he, "are willing to submit the question to an advisory vote of the women of the State I will gladly abide by the result."

There are also mutterings from other members. But most have expressed themselves as willing to submit the question and let the men decide it, but they also assert that if the suffragettes bother the members too much there is danger of reaction and the failure of the plans. They don't want to be bothered, they say.

Senator Roseberry, an acknowledged leader in the upper house, says it is dangerous to submit such important questions in the belief that they will not carry and he favors fighting it out in the Legislature first.

While the Lissner programme is to submit the constitutional amendment, it is also understood that the campaign tactics of Lissner two years hence will be to fight suffrage.

"In any, we are not backing up [illegible]. We want a young progressive active man and we have him in Judge Raker. Perhaps the other Democratic members may favor some one else but there will be a Democrat nominated by us."

Sanford said he did not know what Senator Cartwright would do. He is a Democrat from Fresno and is al[illegible] to Works. It is probable he will not participate in the Democratic caucus.

Senator Sanford said he had urged Theodore A. Bell to accept the complimentary vote but that Bell had declined and urged the choice of a young progressive man. That is why Sanford turned to Raker, who is known as the "Fighting Judge of Modoc."

Mayor Conard and Senator Wright of San Diego still claim seventy votes for Spalding. Lissner still sticks to his "majority and then some" for Works. In the judgment of those pretty well informed both estimates are high, and it is not believed that either Spalding or Works can count an absolute majority tonight. One of the most experienced men in the State in calculating such things, and one who is thoroughly familiar with the situation by two weeks contact with it, estimates that there will be nineteen Democratic votes for Raker, eleven Republican votes for Meserve, thirty-nine Republican votes for Works (if he holds out,) and fifty-three votes for Spalding. As he estimates the Spalding vote stalwart and knows that at lease ten votes are sure to come to him eventually from the other candidates, he believes Spalding is sure of election, though probably not on the first few ballots.

There are others who figure that Meserve actually holds the key to the situation. Those who are behind him favor a young man and Meserve fills that bill. By sticking to him they may deadlock the Assembly until they accomplish his election.

But they admit that any prolonged struggle is more likely to turn to Spalding, the chosen candidate of the Republican voters, than to any other candidates. Somehow members are consulting their consciences about the advisory vote and in the end it is likely to prove a stronger appeal than the baying of Boss Lissner. It is a contest of official integrity with coarse bossism and the rout of the latter seems in sight tonight.

FEDERAL PATRONAGE.

It is now reported that the Lissner machine is trading the prospective Federal patronage that Works might have in the Senate for support. So far Gov. Johnson has not openly appeared in the effort to drive Works through, but his office is being brought into it so adroitly that the Governor might be a party without ever being known. As to the Assembly committees, which are now in Speaker Hewitt's hands, Lissner is not using them for trades, according to Hewitt's statement before going to his home in Yuba City tonight.

"No man shall see the membership of these committees, Lissner included, until I am ready to announce them Monday," said Hewitt.

As it appears tonight, Hewitt seems to be preventing Lissner from trading in committees by holding up their announcement until the last minute. It is known that Assemblyman Cogswell aspires to head the Ways and Means Committee, and his treatment by Hewitt will perhaps be an index of the work being done, for Cogswell is advised for Meserve, but signed the Works "Hearty Support" statement yesterday for Lissner.

Booth Not a Candidate.

Reports from the North last evening carried the rumor that Willis Booth of this city might enter the race for the U. S. Senatorship and stated that Chester Rowell had interviewed him about it while here. Mr. Booth last evening said emphatically that he was out of it and would not under any circumstances get into the fight. He is determined to let it strictly alone.

It seems that Chester Rowell sounded Booth incidentally and got no satisfaction out of him. Rowell's mission to the city was of another nature. Mr. Booth believes that the direct primary law should be adhered to and that the instruction of a majority of the districts for Spalding should be carried out; but he is taking no part in the campaign, "saying nothing and sawing wood."

FORMER PASTOR HERE.

Dr. Clarence True Wilson, Field Secretary of the International Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who resides in Chicago, is in Los Angeles this week, stopping at the Hotel Chickasaw. Dr. Wilson was well known for eight years in Southern California as a Methodist preacher, and on Sunday night he will preach at his former church in North Pasadena.

SUSPECT ARRESTED.

Joseph Miller, suspected of being the thief who has stolen more than fifty overcoats from downtown restaurants during the last few weeks, was arrested last night on Third street by Detectives Jones and Boyd. He was found to be in possession of rather more overcoats than the average man requires in this balmy climate, but he would not say why he carried such a large stock or where he got the garments.

FIRE AT ANAHEIM.

ANAHEIM, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The large warehouse north of the Santa Fe depot belonging to Ben Dauser, burned about 9 o'clock this evening. It was stored about two-thirds full of hay and grain, which was a total loss. It is believed the fire originated from two railroad pile driver cars, one of which was used as a cooking car. Both cars were also burned.

TO RENEW FAIR FIGHT.

Californians Gather at Washington to Counteract Effect of New Orleans Social Stunts.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The California clans are gathering for the renewal of the battle over the exposition. The first instalment has arrived. Joseph Scott of Los Angeles, and Father McQuaide will leave New Orleans tonight on the "Logical Point Special," and will be with the New Orleans boomers all the way to this city.

Some of San Francisco's most representative men will be here about Monday or Tuesday, and then the fight will again be on.

The New Orleans people have landed some social events. The first, it is said, will be a big reception Monday night, to the newspaper correspondents and their wives. Whether the Sazerac cocktails and the famous "gin fizz" will be part of the entertainment, has not been announced. The New Orleans people continue to express confidence in their luck, but the Californians are more conservative, although determined.

WANTS ENTRIES ANNULLED.

Los Angeles Organization Wires Interior Department Relative to Dummy Land Transactions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Chamber of Mines and Oil of Los Angeles has wired the Interior Department asking that investigation be made of entries effected by the Yard decision and that transfer by dummy entrymen to corporations have been taken in good faith be annulled and the land thrown open to entry. Senator Perkins has received a communication from Charles P. Fox, president of the California Oil Men's Association, of Bakersfield, protesting against the threatened removal of the tariff from manufactured asphalt. He claims that such action would be highly prejudicial to an important California industry.

Chance for Reward.

SCHMIDT, CAPLAN AND BRICE IN FIFTY THOUSAND POSTERS.

FIFTY THOUSAND posters, containing the most minute descriptions of M. A. Schmidt, David Caplan and J. B. Brice, labor union trio, who dynamited the Times Building on the morning of October 1, murdering over a score of employees, have been prepared by the Department of Criminal Investigation of the District Attorney's office. The posters will be mailed to every police chief, sheriff and postmaster in the United States, to aid in the quest for the destroyers of life and property.

The posters are the most complete that have ever been prepared for a similar purpose. Every characteristic, weakness, scar, abnormal feature and peculiarity of physique or gait possessed by the men is told of in detail. Their affiliations, inclinations and places where they are most likely to go, are set out.

Across the top is the announcement in large type that a reward of $25,000 will be paid for the apprehension of Schmidt, Caplan and Brice. Fifteen thousand dollars of this has been offered by the Board of Supervisors. This has been split into three parts, for the purpose of aiding the capture of one or all of the men.

The $10,000 reward offered by the Mayor will be paid in a lump sum to anyone who furnishes information that will lead to the arrest of any or all of the dynamiters. For the purpose of encouraging anyone possessing information concerning the present whereabouts of the dynamiting trio, to produce it, the District Attorney's detectives will see to it that their names are not revealed. Detective Browne believes that many labor union agitators know the whereabouts of Caplan, Brice and Schmidt, and for that reason will arrange for the secret payments of the rewards, on the unearthing of the dynamiters.

The distinguishing feature of Schmidt as related in the poster is the absence of his left eye. He also has a weakness for Fernet highballs.

The three men, according to the circulars, are closely affiliated with union labor. Brice is a printer, sallow complexioned, and about 35 years of age.

Schmidt has been a member of the carpenters' union in Chicago, and is accredited with a weakness for the fair sex. Caplan is described as the usual type of Russian Jew. He has anarchistic tendencies and has worked at every occupation from peddler to insurance agent.

All informers are instructed in the bulletin to send their information to Chief Browne of the Department of Criminal Investigation of the District Attorney's office.

ing of the committee's witnesses, and of many others, upon the subject, we find that there is not a scintilla of evidence upon which to base the findings of such report, and that it was issued, as explained by its author, not as a finding of the facts of the explosion, but as an argument in defense of accusations made.

"GAS THEORY" INVESTIGATED.

We made diligent inquiry to determine whether or not there was illuminating gas in the building on the night of the disaster escaping in sufficient quantities to explode. We called before us fifty-three witnesses who were in the building at or close to the time of the explosion. They came from various parts of the building, and we believe that we covered every room and every place in the building. Out of all these witnesses we found but one witness who said that he smelled any illuminating gas there on the night of the explosion, and he said that he smelled no gas on the floor of the building where the explosion occurred. Many other witnesses were in the same room with this witness at the time he alleges he smelled gas, and they are in accord in saying that they smelled no illuminating gas. It appears that in certain mechanical operations necessary to flux the stereotyping metal there was used in the basement of the Times Building a combination of sulphur, saltpetre and certain sal-ammoniacs, which caused a distressing odor. This odor was noticed by this employee before the explosion, and upon complaint o. the odor by this sole witness who testifies to the smell of gas, the character and nature of the smell was explained to him.

The most diligent inquiry and search failed to bring to our notice any other testimony whatsoever as to the slightest smell of illuminating gas in the Times Building on the night of the explosion, and the witness referred to testified that the gas was not present in sufficient quantities to cause an explosion, or even to cause nausea in him. It therefore appears to us that there is no foundation whatever for the belief, or for the statement, that there was any escaping gas in the building. It further appears from the testimony, both of experts and of those present, that it was impossible for even a small quantity of gas to have permeated the building without its presence being detected.

It is certain that the explosion occurred in "Ink alley." It is further certain that an open passageway of the dimensions of "Ink alley"—about ten feet wide and eighteen feet high—with both ends open, with doors leading into it at various places, sufficient gas to cause the great destruction which we find to have occurred, could not have accumulated. It is further certain that in a building occupied by scores of people, with employees passing through halls, and from one room to another, and in and about the passageways through the entire building, there could not have been sufficient gas to cause such awful destruction, without many people being aware of its presence. We called before us members of the committee above mentioned, and their attorneys, and requested them to produce any evidence which they were aware of concerning the presence of escaping gas in the building, and they furnished us none, other than above stated. On the contrary, they stated before us that they had informed us of all evidence in their possession, or within their knowledge.

REPORT OF THE MAYOR'S COMMITTEE.

Having received information that the Mayor of Los Angeles had appointed a committee to investigate the cause of the destruction of the Times Building, which committee included some experts on explosives, we called before us a majority of the committee, namely, six of the seven members, and fully examined them as to their investigations, which commenced about mid-day of October 1. The report of such committee was placed before us, but this grand jury for itself examined into the facts and evidence upon which such report was founded. It coincides with our findings and appears to state succinctly the facts in the premises. A portion of that report we incorporate as a correct statement of the proof upon the proposition. It is in the following words:

"It clearly became evident in our explorations that the cause of the disaster was due to some highly-explosive force, having a definite, limited position. As the debris was removed, this became more and more evident, until finally the locality of the primary explosion has been satisfactorily and definitely located by evidences that are complete and convincing. From these evidences we concluded that the explosive used was one of high power, such as nitro-glycerine, or a product of nitro-glycerine, and was located at the time of its explosion in the decked passageway or alley running easterly from Broadway, on a level with the street, and over the basement used by the Times-Mirror Company as a pressroom. The position of this explosive was at a point about thirty to thirty-five feet from the Broadway street line, and close to the northerly wall of said passageway or alley above described."

EXPLOSIVE DISCOVERED AND PURCHASERS IDENTIFIED.

It further appears in evidence before us that on the day of the explosion and some nine hours later, there was found at the house of F. J. Zeehandelaar, secretary of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, on Garland avenue, in the city of Los Angeles, by a servant girl and by the daughter of Mr. Zeehandelaar, an infernal machine consisting of fifteen sticks of 80-per cent. nitro-gelatine—an explosive of great power—attached by wire to an electric dry cell and an alarm clock. This bomb was against the side of the house and in a position where, had it exploded, it would have destroyed the building and doubtless caused the death of the occupants. This nitro-gelatine had stamped upon it the name of the maker and the date of its manufacture.

It further appears that some two hours later than the discovery of the explosive at the Zeehandelaar house, a suit case containing a quantity of some high explosive was found, by a gardener, hidden in the shrubbery against the wall of the house of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, the president and general manager of the Times-Mirror Company, which corporation owned the Times Building.

The explosive found at the house of Mr. Zeehandelaar has been produced before this grand jury, and is now in the possession of the District Attorney of this county. Unfortunately, in the attempt by a police officer to open the suit case found at the Otis home, an explosion occurred and both suitcase and its contents were entirely destroyed.

Evidence before us proves that this nitro-gelatine found at the Zeehandelaar house was delivered, on the 23rd of September, 1910, at Giant, in Contra Costa county, California, after negotiations for its manufacture and purchase in San Francisco, to three men who came for it in a launch. Five hundred pounds, contained in ten boxes, were taken by these three men from the Giant Powder Works. Four hundred and fifty pounds, or nine boxes of this shipment of nitro-gelatine, have been found in San Francisco, and are now in the possession of the District Attorney of this county. The evidence before us clearly and satisfactorily shows that the remainder of the five hundred pounds—the fifty pounds—was used to destroy the Times Building and in the attempts to destroy the Zeehandelaar and Otis houses.

It would be unwise and illegal for this grand jury to set forth in a public report evidence which has been received as to the identity of the men who secured the explosive. It would further be unwise and illegal to set forth the evidence which has been received proving the guilt of the murderers of a score of innocent men. Such a course, while satisfying the public curiosity, would but aid and comfort criminals. The bringing of indictments is the proper method to express our convictions in these matters.

It is sufficient to say that this jury is satisfied from the testimony that the explosive used at the Times Building and found at the Zeehandelaar house, and which exploded at the house of Gen. Otis, was a part of this nitro-gelatine purchased at Giant on the 23rd of September, 1910, and that the identity of some at least of the destroyers of the Times Building is known by the proper authorities as well as by us, and that in God's good time the murderers will be brought to punishment.

While we are satisfied from the testimony that the perpetrators of this terrible catastrophe have been members of labor unions and officials and organizers therein, and moreover, intimately associated and connected with certain leaders and high officials of labor unions, we have had no testimony that any labor organization, as such, participated in, advised or abetted the commission of these crimes, or, in fact, had previous knowledge thereof.

CONCLUSIONS.

By a unanimous vote the grand jury made the following findings:

First—That the Los Angeles Times primary explosion was not occasioned by gas.

Second—That the Los Angeles Times primary explosion was occasioned by a high-power local explosive.

Third—That the explosion occured in "Ink Alley," about thirty-five feet from the Broadway entrance.

Fourth—That the explosive was placed in the building by human agency, with criminal intent.

Fifth—That the primary explosion, followed by fire, was the direct cause of death of twenty or more human beings.

[The names of the grand jurors have heretofore been published in the columns of this and other Los Angeles newspapers—the last time in The Times on the 6th inst. When the offer of the grand jury to make a report was first tendered to the court it was not accepted; but the body is still in session. The members of the jury are all well established citizens, whose standing is known of all men. The report leaves nothing remaining of the weak, puerile and dishonest gas-explosion theory, and establishes the commission of a monstrous and unexampled crime when the Times Building was destroyed by dynamite and fire. The final results of the inquisition and the conclusions of the grand jury are no surprise to any honest and intelligent man. Ed. Times.]

ROBBED OF JEWELS.

Jewels valued at more than $200 were stolen Friday night from Mrs. George Gillam by a burglar who broke through a side window of her home, No. 1820 Miramar street, according to a report made to the police yesterday. The missing articles consist of a solid gold watch, two gold bracelets, two lockets and a cluster ring set with diamonds and pearls.

SURE TO BREAK A SEVERE COLD.

Will Overcome All Distress from a Bad Cold or the Grippe in Just a Few Hours.

Folks in Los Angeles Who Really Want to Get Rid of a Severe Cold or the Grippe Can Expect No Curative Results from Quinine, Says This Well-Known Cincinnati Authority.

The most severe cold can be broken, and all grippe misery ended after taking a dose of Pape's Cold Compound every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

You will distinctly feel all the disagreeable symptoms leaving after the very first dose.

The most miserable neuralgia pains, headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, running of the nose, sore throat, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness, rheumatism pains and other distress vanishes.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

BUYING HOTEL VIRGINIA?

Persistent Report Current That Eastern Man Is About to Take Over Beautiful Long Beach Property.

A persistent report was current in hotel circles last night that negotiations are nearing completion for the purchase of the Hotel Virginia at Long Beach from the Seaside Investment Company.

The name of the prospective purchaser is given as Robert Grant, formerly of Chicago, who has been in Los Angeles two weeks with the avowed intention of securing a hotel in Southern California.

Grant was for several years connected with the Hotel Hollenden, Cleveland, and the Palmer House, Chicago. He has also been connected with other great hotels of the East, and is understood to represent a backing of several millions.

Grant has been a guest at the Alexandria the past few days, and those close to him state that he has practically closed a deal for the beautiful Virginia. Col. Charles R. Drake, president of the Seaside Investment Company, which owns the Virginia, stated yesterday that there is no deal pending. Grant who has been accompanied by Mrs. Grant, left the Alexandria for the Virginia last night, and will remain there indefinitely. He refuses to discuss the matter

AUTO THIEVES ACTIVE.

Two automobiles were reported as stolen to the police early last night. One belonged to William Kraemer of No. 1021 West Seventh street, who had left it at the front of his house. This car, a Kline machine, born the license number 38,308. The other missing auto, the property of B. G. Evans, of No. 1612 Paloma avenue, is a Maxwell which had been left at the corner of Wilshire boulevard and Park View place.

Antone Jiranick, a fireman, was seriously injured at New York Friday while trying to capture a black kitten at the urgent request of many tenement dwellers, whose rest had been disturbed by the animal's mournful yowls. In climbing after it Jiranick fell to the cement walk. His skull was fractured and he received internal injuries.

STRENGTH COMES

Not From What You Eat, But From What You Digest.

A Tablet Digests a Meal. Trial Package Free.

Most people eat most foods without discrimination—it matters little what. Few stop to think what that food does for them. This is the first turn on the road to dyspepsia. Reckless disregard of the proper choice of foods, rapid eating and improper mastication, are the unquestioned causes of all stomach disorders from the slight ache to the malignant cancer.

There is nothing more revolting than a dyspeptic stomach—a very vat for putrefaction, sending forth its poison throughout the entire system, depressing the brain, befouling the breath, souring the taste, deadening the muscles, incapacitating the liver and kidneys for their work, debilitating the heart, choking the lungs and clogging the bowels.

All of these disagreeable and dangerous conditions are due to the improper digestion of food and the consequent assimilation of poison. What else can be expected? If the food lies in the stomach, if the system is constipated, fermentation is the natural outcome. It shows itself in sour, watery risings, belchings, heartburn and painful breathing.

There is only one way to relieve this condition. If the stomach refuses to digest your food put something into it that will. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are nothing but digestives. They are not a medicine. They work when the stomach will not.

Each tablet contains enough pepsin, diastase, golden seal and other digestive elements to reduce 3000 grains of ordinary food to the proper consistency for assimilation into the blood.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are absolutely pure. There is nothing harmful in them as shown in their endorsement by 40,000 physicians in the United States and Canada.

Ask your family physician his opinion of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and if he is honest toward you he will state positively that they will cure your stomach trouble whatever it may be, unless you have waited too long and have allowed your disorder to develop into cancer.

Act today and begin to end your suffering. A free trial package will be sent to your address upon request. The 50-cent size packages are for sale at your druggist's. F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Stop Taking Drugs!

Nature's Remedy Cures While You Sleep

If you are drugging we want you to stop it now. Drugs can't cure you. Instead of building up, drugs tear down, because they contain poison instead of nourishment. When you are ailing you need something that gives strength, new vitality to the body. Drugs lower the vitality and cause an ailment to become chronic.

The only way to cure anything is to help nature. Drugs don't do that. Nature will cure when she has the power—electricity.

Electricity is nature's medicine. It cures by giving strength, new life to the body. It removes the cause of disease by supplying to the body the force it lacks, enabling every organ to perform its work properly, and when every organ is in a healthy condition there can be no pain or disease.

Feed electricity to your nerves. They will absorb and carry it to every organ and tissue, giving health and strength to every ailing part.

Electra-Vita is an electric body battery, applied while you sleep. It infuses a stream of electric life into the body all night long. It does not shock or blister. The only sensation is a mild, soothing glow.

Electra-Vita makes its own power and is always charged, ready for use. All you have to do is adjust it correctly and turn on the current to the proper degree of strength.

People who suffer from chronic ailments, stomach and kidney troubles, weakness of any kind, dyspepsia, rheumatism, pains and aches, lumbago and similar complaints can get back their health and strength through the use of Electra-Vita. It costs less than a course of drugging.

What Others Say

"Your Electra-Vita has cured of a very bad stomach trouble. wife used the appliance and cured of rheumatism and fem weakness. I must say that present good health of myself wife is due to the use of Elect Vita.

"J. P. SILVA, Hayward, Cal."

"I am well pleased with work of Electra-Vita in my I suffered from varicocele rupture, and must say that I perfectly satisfied with the res of the treatment.

"WM. OSTERHOLD,
"985 Folsom St., San Francisco."

"One week's application of Electra-Vita did more for me than the drugs I took in 15 years. used the appliance for stomach trouble and general debility, have derived the greatest amount of benefit from it.

R. T. BEALE,
"Anaheim, Cal."

Drugs Don't Cure

"In their zeal to do good, physicians have done much harm; they have hurried to the grave many who would have recovered if left to nature. All our drug medicines are poisonous, and as a consequence every dose diminishes the patient's vitality."

DR. ALONZO CLARK,
Professor in the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons.

"Of all the errors of our blundering world, the most far-reaching has been the blind faith in the curative power of drugs. Drugs do not cure, cannot cure. They can at best merely relieve, and that usually at great cost and injury to the body."

W. R. C. LATSON, M.D.

"I believe that the best doctor is the one who knows the worthlessness of most medicines." Dr. Wm. Osler, in an address to physicians.

"The word health now means a normal supply of electricity in the body, and the word disease means an insufficiency of that power."—Prof. Edgar L. Larkin.

FORMER BOXER SENDS A HINT.

THREATENS AN EXPPOSURE IF MONEY IS NOT FORTHCOMING.

Waits in Lobby of Local Hotel for Cash and Is Arrested by Deputy Sheriff — Intended Victim Has Charge of Moulders Where Fighter Was Employed.

Charged with attempting to extort money from James D. Davis by sending him a threatening letter, J. C. Tremberth, known to Pacific Coast fight fans as "Jack Clifford," was yesterday arrested at the Natick House and locked up in the County Jail. He will be arraigned Monday morning in Justice Summerfield's court.

According to attaches of the Sheriff's office, Tremberth wrote a letter to Davis demanding the payment of $20 under threat of exposure and arrest. Davis immediately reported the attempted blackmail to Deputy District Attorney Hammon, who issued a complaint against Tremberth on a felony charge.

Tremberth formerly worked for Davis at the Baker Iron Works, Davis was superintendent of moulders, while Tremberth was a foreman. The latter states he loaned considerable money to Davis. He further alleges that Davis refused to repay him all the money loaned and as a result he wrote the letter to force the matter.

Deputy District Attorney Hammon asserts that Davis never had any financial dealings with Tremberth, and that the letter was written for the sole purpose of extorting money.

Tremberth, prior to coming to Los Angeles about a year ago, resided in San Francisco. For several years he has been an aspirant for pugilistic honors, and at one time was touted as the best 133-pound boxer on the Coast.

As "Jack Clifford" he appeared on many occasions at Eddie Graney's old arena at Eighth and Market streets, San Francisco. He also fought in Marysville, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and Butte.

The letter received by Davis was dated at the Natick House and signed "Jack Clifford." It stated among other things:

"I want you to give me $20 or I will resort to methods that I don't care to do. Send $20 to me at the Natick House no later than 4 p. m. tomorrow afternoon. You can draw out the money if you haven't got it. I will go to Salt Lake immediately if I get the money. Stay away and come through or I will show you something. If you do right, I will drop the affair for all time.

A deputy from the Sheriff's office went to the Natick where Tremberth was waiting for Davis and placed him under arrest.

Makes Rough Skins Soft and Pink

"Specialists say when powder or cosmetics are used for any great period the skin's surface becomes dry and scaly and often a pimply condition follows," says Mrs. Mae Martyn, in the New York Examiner.

"The reason is plain. Powder tends to clog the pores, and when these organs of elimination are hampered, trouble follows.

"Many women now use a liquid, which spreads evenly and smoothly and gives more satisfactory results than any powder or cosmetic.

"A splendid and inexpensive lotion can be made at home by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in ½ pint of hot water, than adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine.

"This recipe is very popular in exclusive social circles, and its use soon produces that pink and white glow of health."

Novel Method to Get Her Money Has Dire Results for Man Who Beats a Hasty Retreat—Suit Case Robber Pursued, Drops His Booty.

There is a sneak thief somewhere in Los Angeles with a very sore head, the result of an encounter with Mrs. M. E. Face, at the Covington Apartment house, yesterday morning.

With a long pole, to the end of which had been attached a piece of wire, the thief was trying to "fish" her pocketbook from the table and lift it out of the window. Mrs. Face chanced to appear and seeing the fisherman's head an inch or two above the window sill, quietly stepped over, wrested the pole from his hands and struck him with it.

With a yell that startled the neighbors, he ran down the street, burying his head between his arms as if he expected Mrs. Face was following close behind, to thump him again.

Mrs. Hathburn, living at No. 814 1-2 East Ninth street saw two men leaving her home Friday night loaded down with suit cases and clothing. She gave chase and the men dropped their burden and fled.

Henry T. Milley, living in the Central Hotel in Commercial street, reported that his room had been entered Friday night and a suit case, an overcoat, a Masonic apron and stock certificates, stolen.

J. S. Vanderwater, No. 1133 West First street, reported that his room had been entered and two three-quarter karat diamonds stolen. P. J. Smith, having a room in the same house, said that $5.45 in silver and a collection of old coins were taken from his room by the same thief.

Charles S. Ford, living in the Roslyn Hotel, took a stranger home with him Friday night and found upon rising Saturday morning that his guest had stolen his watch and a diamond ring.

Mike Gurcio of No. 1151 Angeleno street, told the police that he had been held up in Boylston street near Temple about 6:45 o'clock Friday night. He escaped by running, the highwaymen firing two shots at him.

YALE

DENTISTS
444 So Broadway, 3rd floor

One of the larget, oldest and most reliable dental concerns on this Coast. When you have your work done here you may rest assured that it will be first-class and modern in every way. As this office is thoroughly equipped with methods and instruments necessary to obtain the best results.

We refer you to the Citizens National Bank, which has been here for years and is one of the strongest banks in California, and to Parmelee-Dohrmann Co., who have been in business in Los Angeles and San Francisco for more than twenty-five years.

NOTICE

Do not be misled or robbed by dishonest statements made by dental concerns.

--Beware of Dentists who State--

That they "put in teeth without plates when you have only two of your own teeth remaining." It cannot be done. You waste your money, OR those who advertise "methods" that do away with bridgework or ordinary bridgework, as they call it. It is really bridgework, and is often put in on teeth than cannot carry such a large bridge, causing loss of teeth and bridge, too. You might as well build a house without a foundation and expect it to stand as to attach large bridge cases on two old broken down teeth.

After all, these statements are only subterfuges to get your money. Have your work done by a concern that is reliable and one that can refer you to the oldest business establishments in California—banks and men who are known and who have had work done by us. Keep away from the so-called "wonderful new methods."

Don't be misled and regret. Better go to your family dentist, if not to our offices, or some good, honest dentist whom you know. Everything we say we guarantee and stand by.

We want your business and want to keep it for years to come. We want to be plain with you, keep your confidence and always have you and yours as patients.

But now, it's all over.

No need to suffer any more.

One Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet puts end to it all and saves the valuable al energy, which is wasted by indi- tion, for other and more important rk.

The proper understanding and use this great assistance to nature is a nderful step forward in the history the development of the world.

It simply adds many thousand units energy to the life force of each in- vidual.

It creates time, and strength to make d use of time.

You lose many hours, perhaps days a month, when your best faculties dulled with suffering from indiges- n, causing such symptoms as sick, vous, bilious headache, neuralgia head or stomach, rheumatism, colic, stipation, wind, erutations, vomit- dizziness and other blood poison-

All this useless suffering and loss of e can be done away with, relieved prevented, by the proper use of art's Dyspepsia Tablets.

These grand little Tablets are a entific medicine, which act on all internal digestive organs, and cure ir weaknesses.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the ult of the labors of all the greatest inkers and discoverers in the realm physiology, therapeutics and cura- e medicine.

They represent the best that these at minds have been able to evolve, ter careful study of all the symp- ms, causes, and possible methods of eatment of the alimentary and di- stive tract.

This treatment has finally narrowed own to a very simple proposition, the reful use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tab- ts.

After all, when you come right down it, all the evils and troubles of in- gestion are caused by just one thing, d that is undigested food.

And when you can get rid of this un- igested food you get rid of the cause, nd therefore, of course, bring about cure.

Between you and me, this is all there to the whole great secret of the benefit that can be obtained from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

They get right down to the ultimate cause of indigestion and cure it.

They do this as no other medicine, drug, or pharmaceutical preparation, has ever yet been able to do, by virtue of the perfection of modern discoveries as taken advantage of in the combination of ingredients of which they are composed, forming the grandest digestive compound known to science, which not alone actually digests the food that it touches, but revitalizes the nerves and tissues of all the digestive organs and glands, thus restoring them to a condition in which they can do the work that is required of them.

All this is gospel truth.

Test it by trying Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for your own trouble, and note how quickly it will disappear.

Do it today. For sale by all druggists at 50 cents per box.

CHEER UP

The broad gauged man of today does not get blue just because things don't always come his way unless there is something the matter with him. If he "falls down" on one proposition he immediately starts to look up another. He always looks forward and keeps on hustling. A man with his health and faculties has plenty of opportunities, and the man who gives up or even feels like it has either a small nature or some physical weakness.

Dyspepsia certainly puts the best of men out of condition for work of any kind. You cannot blame the dyspeptic for getting blue. The very nature of his disease is most depressing and calculated to deprive him of ambition, energy and hope. There is hope for him, however, certain and sure.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are recognized throughout the length and breadth of the land as the one cure that's safe and sure. Their unbounded popularity, resulting from the thousands and thousands of cures they have effected, proves beyond the shadow of a doubt their greatness as a cure. Wherein lies their greatness? In the very fact that they are Nature's own simple remedy. They do the exact work in exactly the same way that the digestive fluids of the stomach do, because they are composed of exactly the same elements and possess the same properties. They relieve the weak and worn out stomach of its burden of digestion and permit it without let or hindrance to rest and grow sound and well. The stomach will get well quick enough in its own natural way if it is let alone. That is what Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do. They not only let alone themselves but make the food taken into the stomach do the same.

You can satisfy yourself of the truth of this statement by putting the food you would eat into a glass jar with sufficient water and one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. The process of digestion will be taken up and carried out just as the gastric juice and other digestive fluids would do it. Their action is natural and they cause no disturbance in the digestive organs. In fact, you forget you have a stomach when they begin to do their work, so mild and natural is the operation. All druggists sell them for 50 cents per box.

Great Minds Wrecked

Some of the greatest minds the world has ever known, were wrecked, on the rocks of indigestion.

Napoleon lost the battle of Waterloo, and later died, as a result of cancer of the stomach, brought on by Indigestion.

Carlyle, one of the greatest of this age's thinkers or writers, lived a wretched, misanthropic existence, which cramped and fettered his genius, because of his fearful sufferings from Chronic Dyspepsia.

These are but two examples, out of many equally eminent.

You, yourself, cannot tell how much the best efforts of your brain and body may be hampered by imperfect digestion.

No handicap in life's great race could be heavier than that imposed by Indigestion.

But it can be easily recovered by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Just consider a moment. How could my pen write these words if clogged with solid ink? How could the machine set this type, if one of its cogs were loose? How could the press print this sheet, if one of its whirring wheels was stuck?

The watchwords of the age are these: "Be Fit!"

For only the "fit' survive, in the intense struggle for success.

But how is it possible to be "fit" with a sick stomach? Or, rather, a sick digestion; which in time leads to the most fearful diseases, like cancer or catarrh, which always cause great suffering and ultimately mean failure or death.

If, for one hour, one minute even, you allow your progress to be clogged, the working of any portion of your internal machinery to be stopped or delayed by indigestion, you are playing a losing game. Some one may take advantage of you to edge ahead.

Keep up. Take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

You cannot go wrong by using this wonderful medicine, since it is strictly a product of the most advanced progress in medical science.

It is a specific remedy, which not merely relieves, by dissolving and rendering harmless the poisonous products of Indigestion, and by actually digesting the food that you eat; but, in a manner peculiar to the specific combination of ingredients of which it is composed, it seeks out and revitalizes the weakened, sick, digestive glands and organs, which are flagging in their functions, and thereby permanently cures the real seat of the trouble; after which, the food you eat, gradually but surely builds you up to health.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will enrich your brain with ideas, your body with muscle, your constitution with vitality—through the food you eat, and digest. All druggists sell them for 50 cents per box.

High Living

Prosperity is with us; people are making money and spending it, much of it in feasting—"wining and dining."

Welsh rarebits, lobster and other rich foods will never trouble your digestion if you give your stomach a little help with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

All the pleasures of eating and none of the risks to health are the happy conditions of "high life" that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets assure.

Would you attain a happy, healthy old age?

Then be kind to your stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

Greatly help overworked stomachs and correct all trouble due to indigestion.

A Law Unto Himself

Every Man Must Be That, to Retain His Health and Digestion.

There are thousands of people in this world who eat no meat from one year's end to another, and certain savage tribes in Africa and Polynesia are almost exclusively meat eaters; but while there are thousands of these, there are millions who live upon a mixed diet of meat, vegetables and grains and if numbers is a criterion it would seem that a mixed diet is the best for the human family.

The fact that you will find many vegetarians who appear healthy and vigorous and meat eaters equally so, and any number of robust specimens who eat both meat and vegetables and anything else that comes their way all goes to show that the old saw is the true one, that every man must be a law to himself as to what he shall eat and drink.

Every nerve, muscle, sinew, every drop of blood, is extracted from the food we eat and digest.

In these days of hustle and worry, and artificial habits of life, scarcely one person in a thousand can lay claim to a perfect digestion; dyspepsia is a national affliction, and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets a national blessing.

Most cases of poor digestion are caused by failure of the stomach to secret sufficient gastric juice.

Cathartic pills and laxative medicines have no effect whatever in digesting food and to call such remedies a cure for dyspepsia is far fetched and absurd.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets not only digest all wholesome food, but tend to increase the flow of gastric juices and by giving the weak stomach a much needed rest bring about a healthy condition of the digestive organs and a normal appetite.

Nervous, thin-blooded, run-down people should bear in mind that drugs and stimulants cannot furnish good blood, strong muscles and steady nerves; these come only from wholesome food, thoroughly digested; a fifty cent box of Stuart's Tablets taken after meals for a few weeks will do you more real good than drugs, stimulants and dieting combined.

From Mr. L. E. Watts, Tampico, Ill.: "I have used Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and they are just what I want and what I have been trying in vain to get for years. Every person afflicted with poor digestion ought to give them a trial."

I want to say for the benefit of some poor dyspeptic that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will give comfort and a cure every time. Five dollars a box would not stop my purchasing them should I ever suffer again as I did for a week before using them.

"The one 50-cent box I bought at my druggist's did the work and my digestion is all right again.

Many of my neighbors have also tried these tablets and found them to be just as represented and Mr. Ellms also wants me to use his name in endorsing Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets."

(Signed)
A. ELLMS and
CHAS. F. BUZZELL,
Asst. Postmaster,
South Sudbury, Mass.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is probably the safest, most popular and successful digestive on the market and sold by druggists everywhere in the United States, Canada and Great Britain.

THE FEAR OF BEING DECEIVED OR HUMBUGGED

Carried Too Far---Prevents Many People Trying A Good Medicine.

Stomach troubles are so common and in most cases so obstinate to cure, that people are apt to look with suspicion on any remedy claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspepsia and indigestion. Many such people pride themselves on their acuteness in never being humbugged, especially in medicines.

This fear of being humbugged can be carried too far, so far, in fact, that many people suffer for years with weak digestion rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims made for a remedy so reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Now Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important respect from ordinary patent medicines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine; no secret is made of the ingredients, but analysis shows them to contain the natural digestive ferments. They are not cathartic, neither do they act powerfully on any particular organ, but they cure indigestion on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour, and cause the mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles, because they act only on the bowels, whereas the whole trouble is in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after meals, digest the food. That is all there is to it. Food not digested, or half digested, is poison, as it creates gas, acidity, headaches, palpitation of the heart, loss of flesh and appetite, and many other troubles, which are often called by some other name.

You Will Be All Smiles Again.

Forget Your Stomach and You'll Have a Santa Claus Face.

If there is one thing more than all others that will give a man a forlorn and friendless appearance and make him morbid and "cranky" and disagreeable, that thing is dyspepsia. It makes one forget his friends and become morose and irritable. He is so wrapped up in his own misery that he is inconsiderate of everyone else. Relieved of this terrible and depressing ailment, he again becomes a good fellow and a man among men.

Suart's Dyspepsia Tablets are beyond question the most effective and popular remedy ever offered to the sufferers of this terrible disease. The thousands and thousands of cures they have brought about and the enormous increase of their sales fully attest the truth of this statement.

They are, above all, a natural remedy. They possess exactly the same properties that the gastric juices and other digestive fluids of the stomach possess and they actually do the digestive work of the stomach and enable that organ to rest and recuperate and become sound and well. They act in a mild, natural manner and cause no disturbance in the digestive organs. They prevent any fermentation of the food, which causes sour stomach. In fact, under their influence the subject forgets that he has a stomach and his resulting cheerfulness presents a great contrast to his former dejection.

Millions of boxes of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold annually and they are but in the dawn of their popularity. Every mail brings letters of thanksgiving from grateful ones who have been cured of this terrible disease. The following is one of hundreds received each week:

Rev. J. R. Hoag, of Wymore, Neb., writes: "For six years I have been troubled with dyspepsia. Last fall I became very much alarmed at some symptoms of heart trouble and came to believe there was a sympathetic relation between the two diseases, or rather, that the stomach trouble was the cause of the heart disturbances. I hit upon Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for a remedy and invested a dollar and a half for three boxes, which lasted me three months, and I can eat any kind of food I want and have a good, vigorous appetite. Although I am 77 years old, I now feel perfectly well and without being requested by anyone I make this statement as a compliment to the virtues of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by every druggist in the United States, Canada and Great Britain.

"Old Mother Hubbard Went to the Cupboard."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Send Everybody There---Not For the Dog, Either.

You can't take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and fail to have an appetite. When your stomach is unable to digest the food they step in and do that work. That's their business and they don't neglect it. They can do no harm because they are a natural remedy. They aid Nature by giving the stomach a complete rest from its digestive work and permitting Nature to repair the tissues of the stomach and make it sound and well. This Nature always does.

A St. Louis physician says: "I prescribe and recommend Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on all occasions. I do it because they cure dyspepsia better than anything else I know of and they are absolutely harmless. Their essential ingredients are the same as the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they produce no evil effects. I have had better success with them than anything I am able to prescribe and I feel that I am doing my duty to the public to say so."

The above is no exception. The best physicians are prescribing they all over the land.

NEEDLESS ALARM

Here's a poor man coughing away his lungs—at least so his relatives think.

It's cough, cough; hack, hack, hack; all day and sometimes all night.

"Must be consumption," think the alarmed ones.

And of course, there is always a possibility that they may be right.

But in most cases, they're wrong; because Dyspepsia is so much more common than consumption and dyspepsia causes chronic Cough, just like Consumption.

The dyspeptic cough, it is well to remember, can be quickly cured by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

No need to be alarmed about it, unless you make up your mind to neglect it.

Then, indeed, you must look out for danger; for the Dyspeptic Cough often grows into a Consumptive Cough if neglected, by the constant lung irritation which it causes.

So the best way is to waste no time, but begin at once the use of these famous little tablets, the timely use of which has saved many a sick person from ending in a consumptive's grave.

Remember, however, if you please, that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will positively NOT cure Consumption, but prevent it.

Of course, they can always be depended on to cure all the other symptoms of indigestion.

They are a universal cure, for one universal disease.

They cure nothing else; but what they do, they do thoroughly and well.

Stuart's Dyspspsia Tablets are the result of the most thorough investigation into the inside causes and the cure of Indigestion, that has ever been attempted.

They have solved a problem, the answer to which a hundred thousand physicians in America are today groping for in vain.

They cure the most severe, long-continued, chronic, complicated cases of Indigestion that can be found. They are far ahead of the most modern medical practice, because the most successful physicians of the day, in the cure of diseases of the digestive organs, are using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets as a basis for their success.

They stoop to Stuart's to conquer.

And Stuart's lift them up, out of the rut.

If, therefore, you are a victim of this dread disease, which counts its victims by the million, brace up and take new heart, for you cannot fail to cure your trouble, if you will only put your faith in this great remedy, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

They are positively, frankly, truly, a sure and permanent relief. For sale by all druggists at 50 cents per box.

A HOUSE DIVIDED AGAINST ITSELF

When the Stomach Declares War Against the Rest of the Body There Is Always Plenty of Trouble.

A Safe and Certain Cure in Reach of All.

There is very little comfort or happiness on this earth for the individual whose stomach is at war with all the other organs of the body. The human body is called the habitation of the soul, but both body and soul suffer greatly when the stomach refuses to act in harmony with the rest of the system and dyspepsia is established. The functions of all the body and the brain itself are so intimately dependent on those of the stomach that when that organ, for any reason, ceases to perform its duties the trouble becomes general and great mental and bodily suffering always results. Under such conditions there is only one thing to do and only one way to do it. The stomach must be pacified and pacified in the right way.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the only safe, reliable, certain remedy for all stomach troubles. The reason is, they are the only perfectly natural remedy. They perform the digestive work of the stomach just as the stomach did when it was able to do it in exactly the same way. Their principal component elements are identical with those of the gastric juice and other digestive fluids of the stomach. They do the work of the stomach in a natural way without causing any disturbance, and thus permit that organ to rest and recuperate and grow strong and well. That is what they do and that's the way they do it. Anybody can understand it and anybody suffering from dyspepsia or any stomach trouble can always get safe and certain and natural relief from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box. Buy a box and then go and eat a good square meal and then take a tablet and note the result. You will forget all about it if your are not careful, for there will be no pain nor disturbance and the food will be digested just as it used to be when your stomach was well and strong. Furthermore, your stomach will soon be well and strong again if you keep on taking them, just as thousands upon thousands of other stomachs are from the sole and exclusive use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

A REED SHAKEN WITH THE WIND

Without Will Power, Courage, Ambition, Energy or Hope, the Dyspeptic Is Willing to Give Up the Struggle.

The confirmed dyspeptic has as little interest in life as any human being. He is unfitted for its duties and is indifferent to its charms. He is unable to enjoy the business and social relations that constitute the life of the average man. All his hopes are absorbed by the one hope to get well and again be able to enjoy the good things of life. Until this is realized, he is sick at heart and feels himself to be of little use.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the sufferer's tree of life. They will cure him and bring him health and happiness just as sure and certain as he takes them. They are sure because they are natural and no other cure but a natural one is sure. They act on the food and digest it just as well as a stomach would. They contain exactly the same chemical properties as the digestive fluids of the stomach.

A well-known Buffalo physician says: "I prescribe Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on all occasions as a relief for weakened and run down stomachs. I find they contain all the ingredients necessary for the proper digestion of the food and will do more to give the stomach the needed rest than any medicine I could prescribe. They have never failed to give immediate relief in all my cases, and I do not hesitate to recommend them to all sufferers from dyspepsia."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggist at 50 cents a box.

RICH MEN ARE NOT ALL HAPPY

Croesus, King of Lydia, Had Troubles of His Own, and There Are Others.

Croesus, the John D. Rockefeller of the kingdom of Lydia, was very well to do in worldly goods and chattels. "As rich as Croesus" is a saying about 2500 years old. He had his troubles, however, and some of them were full-grown. He was taken captive once by Cyrus and only saved himself from being burned alive by quoting a saying of Solon, the Sage. He finally had to flee his kingdom for parts unknown.

Many of the rich man's troubles today come from high living and could be avoided. They are brought on by eating all kinds of rich, heavy foods at irregular times, lack of proper exercise, undue mental strain, unnatural stimulants, etc., and are commonly known as indigestion, dyspepsia, and weak stomach. They are serious troubles all right, but not only can they be avoided but can also be cured, and that without loss of time or proper food and nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the certain relief of dyspeptics, rich and poor alike. There is no such thing as stopping their onward progress now. A great nation has placed its stamp of approval upon their noble work. The thousands upon thousands of cures they have effected and the happiness resulting therefrom have made their name a household word throughout the land.

The story of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be told in a word. They actually do the work that the weak and wasted stomach is unable to do and allow it to recuperate and regain its strength. They contain all the essential properties that the gastric juice and other digestive fluids do, and they digest the food just as a sound and well stomach would. They relieve the stomach just as one rested and refreshed workman relieves the one on duty that is tired and worn, and Nature does her own work of restoration. It is a simple, natural process that a child can understand. You can eat all you want without fear of results.

WRONG IDEA

Don't get the wrong idea into your head that starvation is good for Dyspepsia.

It's not.

Those who have not studied the subject very deeply, or with trained scientific minds, might THINK so.

But facts prove otherwise.

All specialists in stomach and digestive disorders know that it is best for dyspepsia to be WELL FED.

Why, dyspepsia is really a starvation disease!

Your food doesn't feed you.

By starvation, you may give your bowels and kidneys less to do, but that does not cure your digestive trouble—simply makes you weaker and sicker; less likely to be permanently cured than ever.

No; the only right way to permanently cure yourself of any form of dyspepsia or indigestive trouble, is to eat heartily of all the food that you find best agrees with you, and help your digestion to work with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

This is a safe, certain, scientific, reliable method of treatment, which will never fail to cure the most obstinate cases if persevered in.

Stuart's Dypspepsia Tablets have a gentle, tonic, refreshing effect on the secretory glands of the entire digestive tract.

They gently force the flow of fresh digestive juices.

They contain, themselves, many of the chemical constituents of these juices, thus when dissolved they help to dissolve the food around them, in stomach or bowels.

They therefore quickly relieve all the symptoms of indigestion, and coax the glands to take a proper pleasure in doing their proper work.

They coax you back to health.

No other medical treatment of any sort nor any fad system of "Culture" or "Cure" will give you the solid, permanent, curative results that will Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Sold by all druggists everywhere. Price, 50 cents per box.

FOR YOU

Here are some facts for Dyspeptics.

Are you one?

Probably; because most people are, though they ignore it.

First, please bear in mind that Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, is MORE than AILMENT.

It is a DISEASE.

It is a disease, with ramifications into the uttermost, innermost part, of your body.

It does not always begin in your stomach.

No, indeed. It may begin in your mouth.

Your saliva may be of the wrong chemical formula to begin the work of digestion, and so the whole process may go wrong from the very beginning.

Or, everything may be all right but your liver.

Or, maybe it seems to be your heart.

Or, you may have a deep-chested lung cough.

Ten times out of eleven, those symptoms point to the plain, every-day common or garden variety of indigestion.

This may seem hard to believe, but if so, it is only because for many years, even after the discovery of the circulation of the blood by Harvey, doctors remained in the densest ignorance concerning the workings of the processes of digestion.

So, of course, of IN-digestion, they knew less.

And of a cure, today, they have no knowledge at all—any of the 140,000 that are "practicing" in the United States.

EXCEPT—about 40,000, who use and recommend Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Here we have a medicine which attacks the trouble with all of the most modern engines of medical warfare, which are, indeed, needed to conquer such a malignant, pestiferous, all-pervading disease.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets drive IN-digestion OUT.

They contain ingredients which act curatively, not merely upon the stomach, but upon every vessel, organ or gland, throughout the entire body, which is in any way concerned in the great and important work of digesting your food.

In this way, they thoroughly purge your entire system of any possible disease-taint, and thereby restore you to a condition of perfect and natural health.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are unique in the entire history of medicine.

They are a specific remedy for just one disease and this disease they positively and never-failingly CURE.

Try them. Sold by all druggists everywhere. Price, 50 cents per box.

MAKE PEACE WITH YOUR STOMAC

You Are Certain to I if You Attempt the Use of Force and Violence.

BEACH TOWN WANTS A NEW CITY TREASURER.

Councilman Hollwedel Is Said to Be the Man Who Has Best Chance. Squire Brown, in That Event, Will Be Chosen to Fill Vacancy in the Council.

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 7.—The death of the commission form of government being assured through the disinclination of its friends to present the petition for an election to the City Council, the next move on the political checkerboard will be the election of a City Treasurer and Tax Collector. It is expected this duty will be performed Monday night by the Council, as urged by Mayor Dudley. The city has been served by a Treasurer pro tem ever since Ralph Bane skipped out with the funds. It is understood tonight that Councilman Hollwedel of the Sixth ward has been selected as the man to fill the position. This will create a vacancy in the Council, and rumor has it that Justice of the Peace Brown, who recently moved into the northern end of the city from the south, is slated for the seat to be made vacant by the retirement of Hollwedel.

PLAN BRISK CAMPAIGN.

Committees representing the City Council, Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce and Improvement Association of Irwin Heights met tonight with the members of the Board of Education for the purpose of discussing the High School situation and initiating a campaign of education in the interest of the proposed bond issue. The call has been issued and the election date named and the object of this committee is to assist in showing the property owners why their votes should be in favor of the bonds. The verdict of the committee, whose chairman is Roy Jones, representing the Board of Trade, is that a Polytechnic High School is needed. The bond issue as requested for this purpose is $200,060, to be used in the purchase of a site and the erection of adequate buildings and their equipment. The site chosen, between Fourth and Sixth streets and Michigan and Fremont avenues, meets with the approbation of the several members of the committee, the members of which feel encouraged over the fact that not the slightest opposition to that location has yet appeared. The election is to be held January 24 and the election officers who have been named are to serve without pay. On the same date the common school district will vote on a $30,000 bond issue. The money secured through the sale of this budget of bonds will be used in the purchase of additional grounds for the elementary and grammar grade schools.

MORMONS COMING.

Exalted Ruler John Morton of the local lodge of Elks is naming his committees to take charge of the entertainment of the Salt Lake Elks, who are coming early in February for a month's tour of Southern California. There will be 1000 of them and this each will have the pleasure of entertaining them during the first day of their visit.

BURGLAR GETS SMALL REWARD.

WORKS ALL NIGHT FOR A PALTRY SUM.

City Council of Seaside Town Holds a Session and Various Matters of Public Interest Were Disposed of, Among Them Being a Provision for Cleaning Streets.

LONG BEACH, Jan. 7.—Some time between midnight and daylight this morning an industrious burglar entered two business houses on American avenue and two on Pine avenue, effecting an entrance by means of rear doors and windows. He was evidently after money only, as nothing else is missing, but the financial returns were hardly worth his effort and risk, as he secured only $5.16 from a meat market on American avenue. Two cash registers were broken open, but there was nothing left in either. The jobs all bear the marks of one man, and the police think it an outsider who has just dropped in. Two suspects were arrested this morning, but there being nothing to connect them with the robberies, they were given "floaters" out of town.

BUSY COUNCIL SESSION.

At last night's Council meeting city maps about which there was so much dispute some weeks ago regarding the Engineer's right to get them out were ordered for several departments, the water companies were ordered to furnish a statement of the year's business; awnings were ordered to have space of seven and one-half feet from the sidewalk; restrictions were placed upon the distribution of sample patent medicines; the public works given authority to advertise for the year's supply of road oil; the south side of the depot pavilion ordered enclosed in glass; Pike tenants ordered to clean up the unsightly rears of their premises; bonds of West Beach improvements ordered sold February 15 to private parties, and annual reports of several departments were received and filed.

BANKS UNDER BARREL.

O. B. Sjoberg, arrested on a peace disturbance charge, after leading a constable a weary chase in order to secure $500 bond, finally went to his home and, reaching under a slop barrel, produced the amount in cash. Sjoberg is reputed wealthy, but he does not believe in banks.

SCENIC ATTRACTION.

H. C. Arnold, who is preparing to build a scenic railway on the beach, was this morning given permission by the Council Inspection Committee to bridge over the alley between his leasehold on the beach and on the bluff facing Ocean avenue. This bridge will be about twelve feet above the street level and will be occupied by concessions facing ocean avenue. Arnold says the enterprise will cost when completed $80,000.

WANTS IDEAL MAN.

Dr. A. A. Wilson, S. E. Lefurgey and W. L. Rishmond, guests at Hotel Virginia, yesterday won Tackle Club buttons while fishing off Catalina by each catching a giant albicore. Each of the anglers used 9-9 tackle. They also picked up a bottle containing the picture of a pretty girl and the announcement that she was looking for an ideal man. An address was given but this each of the trio is keeping a dark secret while they look belligerently at each other.

BRIEF NEWS.

The contract for building the new clubhouse of El Rodeo at Los Cerritos was let last night to a local contractor. The prise is about $3500 and the contractor will have the building ready for occupancy March 1.

The Modern Brotherhood of America last night installed as officers: W. M. Brown, president; Lula Maginty, vice-president; Grace Pugh, secretary; George Hoodenpyl, treasurer; chaplain, Mary Brashear.

At a meeting of the officers of the Kansas Association today committees were appointed for carrying out the details of the Kansas Society annual picnic to be held here January 28. Rev. Charles Wentworth of Santa Monica will be the principal speaker at the basket picnic which is to be held at the sun parlor.

Adjutant A. E. Davis and wife, who for three years have been at the head of the local Salvation Army corps, have received farewell orders and leave next week for their new station. Their successors are not yet known.

The stockholders of the Inner Harbor Gas Company, absorbed by the Consolidated, will meet January 23 to vote on the formal dissolution of the company and the authorization of the directors as trustees to distribute the assets of the company.

"Coronado" has 365 perfect days.

OCEAN PARK.

OCEAN PARK, Jan. 7.—Recently a number of children have been made ill by reason of having swallowed quantities of patent pills and medicines which have been sown broadcast in sample packages along the strand. While none of the cases of illness have proven fatal or even serious, the practice of the advertising peddlers is being severely criticized, and a move is being made to request the City Trustees to adopt an ordinance making it a misdemeanor to distribute samples in such a way that it may be possible for them to fall into the hands of children.

SETTLES YOUR OUT-OF-ORDER STOMACH AND ENDS ALL INDIGESTION FIVE MINUTES LATER.

Heartburn, Stomach Gas, Dyspepsia and Headache Will Vanish Before You Realize It—Thousands of Readers of The Times Will Find a Permanent Cure for Stomach Trouble at a Very Nominal Cost.

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia or out-of-order Stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a re-enforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak stomach should take a little Diapepsin occasionally and there will be no more Indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, sour risings, Gas on Stomach, or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Sick Stomach, and, besides what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved in five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

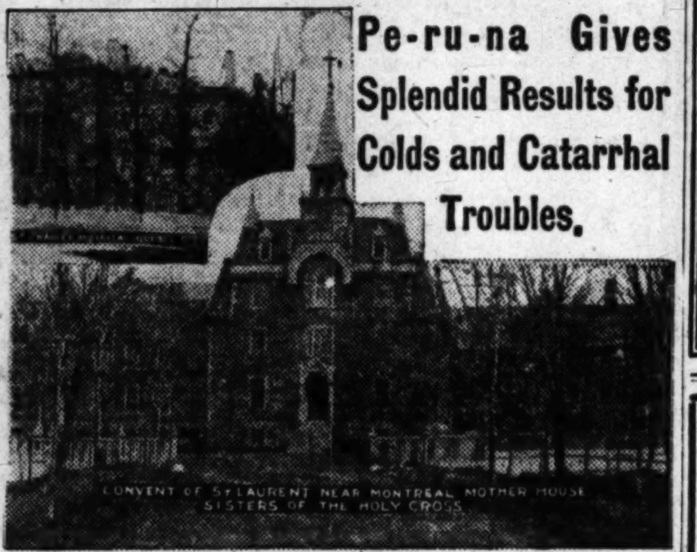
Pe-ru-na Gives Splendid Results for Colds and Catarrhal Troubles.



CONVENT OF ST LAURENT NEAR MONTREAL MOTHER HOUSE
SISTERS OF THE HOLY CROSS

ST. CHARLES Hospital, Quebec City. One of our sisters who commenced to take Peruna, has improved and will continue to take it. Some others are trying it also. Sr. Ste. Marie, Superior.

CONVENT of St. Laurent, near Montreal, Mother House Sisters of the Holy Cross.

After using Peruna for two or three months several members of the community have experienced such good effects that they can recommend its use to others. Sisters of Holy Cross.

HAVING used Peruna for the past few months, for our sick and poor, we are happy to say that it has given us great satisfaction. The Sisters of the Good Shepherd, Montreal.

After a continued use of the remedy, his institution has found no reason to change its good opinion of the remedy and expresses its satisfaction in the following terms:

WE found Peruna a relief in several cases.

We can say it is a good tonic and we are very thankful. Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

One of the many hospitals which have found Peruna of value in treating old and obstinate cases of catarrh is the Hospital of St. John, who write as follows:

WE are happy to tell you that your Peruna has given us satisfaction. Three patients have tried it, one 68 years old. Renoui Dupuis, afflicted with catarrh, is much relieved, more than he has been for a number of years.

A YOUNG girl, fifteen years old, had an obstinate cough, which half a bottle of Peruna caused to disappear.

As to myself, two bottles have convinced me that Peruna is magnificent as a tonic.

Before the treatment I could not walk for a quarter of an hour without experiencing much fatigue. Now I can walk a mile easily.

Through these three cases we desire to make known to the public the efficiency of your remedy.

Hospital St. John, of St. Johns, Province of Quebec.

A later letter received from the same institution reads as follows:

THREE weeks ago I wrote to tell you how satisfactory we found Peruna. We recommend it highly for colds, coughs, catarrh and neuralgia.

I have used it myself as a tonic with the best results, taken as directed, half a teaspoonful every half hour.

PERUNA not only promptly relieves coughs and colds in their first stages, but is equally prompt and efficient for catarrhal diseases in the chronic stage. It is only reasonable to suppose that less medicine will be necessary to relieve a slight attack than after it has been allowed to become chronic.

Catarrh of the respiratory organs is a common ailment in Canada. Therefore, when Peruna was discovered by Canadian people to be a reliable remedy for these catarrhal diseases, it at once became a popular medicine.

Imperial County Supervisors Adopt Resolutions Embodying a Number of Requests to Legislature.

EL CENTRO (Cal.) Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The new Board of Supervisors of Imperial county just organized has adopted resolutions asking the Senator and Assemblyman from this district to work for an appropriation from State funds for Agricultural District number forty-five, under which auspices the Imperial County Fair is conducted, to secure an appropriation for the establishment of an agricultural experimental farm in Imperial Valley and to secure an appropriation from $18,000,000 State highway bonds for the construction of a highway to connect Imperial Valley and San Diego county.

BOARD OF TRADE SEIZES STORE FOR CREDITORS.

Rotund German of Fifty Years Deserts Family for a "Rag and a Bone and a Hank of Hair," Fondly Thinking Her "His Lady Fair."

REDLANDS, Jan. 7.—Hugo Platz, a German baker, fat, florid, fifty and the father of six children, three of whom are married, has an affinity, and thereby hangs the tale of strained relations with his family, and final bankruptcy of his business here, following closely on his disappearence for New York, where the fair siren is said to be living since her arrival from Germany, this "affinity business" having had its inception in the staid old Fatherland.

Platz and his family came here a little over a year ago and started the Superior bakery. All went well for a time, the bakery having a good trade. In the summer Platz left for a trip to his old home in Germany, but it later developed that he was visiting with a former German sweetheart in New York. Then came the strained relations with his family, extravagances of all sorts, a week ago his disappearanse and yesterday the bakery went into the hands of the Wholesalers' Board of Trade of Los Angeles. It has developed that Platz is indebted to many local firms and to many firms in Los Angeles. The Los Angeles wholesalers are in communication with Platz in New York, but it is not likely that he will settle, for the simple reason that he can't. His family left here for Los Angeles a few days ago.

GUARD RIGHTS ZEALOUSLY.

CITY DADS STOP STREET RAILWAY WORK FOR TIME.

Want to Know the Exact Legal Status Before Rails Are Laid. Masson Passes Over Town and the Trail of Blue Smoke from Exhaust Was Seen.

UPLAND, Jan. 7.—The work of double-tracking the Euclid avenue car line, from the Santa Fe tracks north to Tenth street, through this city, which was begun several days ago by the Ontario and San Antonio Heights Railway, has been suspended, pending a decision of the rights of the railway people on what is claimed to be property belonging to the city of Upland. Heretofore, many times, when the railway people have been asked for certain improvements on their part, the reply has been that their franchise only extended to cover ground to the end of their ties. The city dads of Upland, when they saw the late move of the railway people, immediately got in touch with City Attorney Swing, to ascertain the real rights of the railway folks. There is no disposition, apparently, to hamper the railway people, but rather a move to find just what their franchise does cover and, if they have not an adequate right, to compel them to secure it, through advertising, according to ordinances by the city made and adopted.

RENTAL RATES.

Prices for rental of houses in Upland are soaring, because of the great increase in demand, especially for furnished apartments. Owing partly to the coming here of the new shoe factory and iron foundry, a goodly number of new families of the skilled employees are seeking to find homes here, and the demand being much in advance of the supply, has sent prices hurtling upward. There is a splendid opportunity for some individual, or company, to invest here, especially in furnished cottages, bungalows or apartments for rental. The demand is always in advance of the supply.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The annual meeting of the Upland Chamber of Commerce is scheduled for Monday evening, January 9, at which time will occur the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The hearing of William Fuller, charged with forgery, was held before Justice Crane here on Friday, and Fuller was held to answer to the Superior Court, his bail being fixed at $3000; this not being furnished, Fuller was remanded to the County Jail. There is a persistent rumor that Fuller will not put up a fight, but will rather throw himself upon the mercy of the court.

J. M. Brennan, president of the Shoe Factory Company, is expected to arrive here with his family from Wilmington next week and will begin installing machinery at the new building about Jan-

ELECTRICITY FOR ENTIRE VALLEY.

PROMOTER OUTLINES AN AMBITIOUS LIGHTING SCHEME.

New Plant to Cost a Quarter of a Million Dollars and Will Have Capacity to Supply Section for a Long Time—Los Angeles Man Builds Block.

EL CENTRO, Jan. 7.—W. F. Holt today announced his plans for the erection of a new steam plant at El Centro for generating electricity for the entire Imperial Valley. The old steam auxiliary plant has been found inadequate for the frequent demands made on it when the plant at Holtville has to be shut down. The new plant will be of 120-horse-power capacity and will represent an outlay of approximately $250,000.

NEW BUSINESS BLOCK.

T. J. Douglass of Los Angeles has begun the erection of a one-story business building on the south side of Main street, adjoining the Courthouse on the east. The building will be of hollow tile, with plate glass frontage of fifty feet, and will be eighty feet in depth. It will be divided into two stores. A Los Angeles business firm will occupy the building.

EVERGREEN CEMETERY.

El Centro, up to this time, has been so busy building a new town that it has never taken time to locate a cemetery. All interments have been made in the Imperial Cemetery, which land is now in litigation. Next week El Centro's new cemetery, Evergreen, will be opened. The Evergreen Cemetery Association has purchased twenty acres on the Crawford Ranch, one mile east of the Dogwood Canal, and a quarter of a mile from the Holton Inter-Urban Railroad, and has a force of men and teams working on the land, leveling it. The place will be set to trees at once.

HEDGES REDIVIVUS.

Hedges mine, in the southeastern part of Imperial county, located about six miles from the station of Ogilby on the main line of the Southern Pacific, is again becoming a lively mining camp, after having been almost deserted for years. Twenty-one years ago the property maintained a large camp; but it dwindled down until the mines were shut down nine years ago. Now a new and modern machine has been installed and fifty-stamps are falling. Two hundred men are now on the pay roll. A postoffice, to be known as "Tumco," has been established. The name is formed from parts of the words, "The United Mines Company," owners of the property.

NEW PEACE OFFICERS

Clyde A. Bradford, former City Marshal of El Centro, had been apointed constable and Deputy Sheriff for the Hedges mine district. Mark Walter has been appointed justice of the peace.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Henry H. Poston, aged 69 years, died suddenly of heart trouble at the Poston ranch, west of El Centro, yesterday morning. He was the father of Elmer Poston of this city. The body will be sent to Kansas for interment.

ANOTHER ROCK CRUSHER.

Corona Capitalists to Utilize the Valuable Rhyolite Deposits—Woman Badly Burned by Gasoline.

CORONA, Jan. 7.—A realty deal just closed here by E. J. Genereux is the initial step toward another large rock crushing plant for Corona. Twenty-three and eight tenths acres owned by Santa Fe Tax Commissioner A. P. Maginnis of Los Angeles and formerly known as the Mitchell quarries and two acres adjoining owned by J. T. Payton, comprise the land which bears deposits of poryphritic rhyolite.

W. E. Herris, E. P. Perry and T. H. Sentell of Santa Barbara are the purchasers, who will later form a close corporation. The price given for the deal is $15,000. A plant is to be installed with a capacity of handling 1500 tons of crushed rock daily. Work of developing the deposits is to be commenced at once.

SANTA FE SPUR.

An engineer and surveyors are here surveying for the spur which the Santa Fe is to build to the Chase Nursery Company's Orange Heights holdings comprising about 800 acres. This acreage is set to oranges and lemons the owners having their own houses for curing, handling and pascking the fruit. Ten head of mules were shipped in today to grade for the spur.

YOUNG MAN DIES.

Jay O. McConnell, the 22-year-old son of C. B. McConnell, president of the Corona National Bank, died at midnight, death resulting from tuberculosis. The young man came here with his parents from Tacoma, Wash., a year ago. Besides his parents, he leaves a younger brother. Dr. W. K. Beans will conduct the services from the home at 2 p.m. Saturday.

BRIEF NEWS.

RACHEL REBECA, the 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Lewis, died Wednesday.

The funeral of August J. Steinke, who died Wednesday, was held from the home on Kellogg avenue yesterday. He was 44 years of age.

An explosion of gasoline while cleaning a garment this morning burned Mrs. Frank Boling's arms, and for a few moments threatened her home. Mrs. Boling was doing the cleaning outdoors, when the gasoline exploded, burning the garment. The flames were near the house but were beaten out by neighbors. The cause of the explosion is a mystery.

The Avery tractor which is to replace mules as power on the J. B. Coplin ranch has been tried with success in cultivating, plowing and hauling, already having proven a saver of time and expense, the latter amounting to $5 to $10 daily. Distillate is used in the engine in place of gasoline.

George Sullivan of Los Angeles is acting as assistant to F. A. Hallow, manager of Queen Colony Fruit Exchange.

During December there were shipped from Corona 185 cars against 140 for the same period last year. Last month there were shipped 103 cars of oranges and lemons, fifty-four of sewer pipes, paving blocks and brick and thirty-four of hay.

ESCONDIDO.

ESCONDIDO, Jan. 7.—Men representing eight of the leading Pasadena Company of Los Angeles, yesterday, for the purpose of observing the growth of the trees in the various tracts in the twenty-one months that they have been planted. The Pasadena firms were represented as follows: The Hogan Company by H. G. Hegarty and A. T. Hamilton McCoy, Jr.; J. C. Brainard Company by F. G. Haynes; F. C. Platt Company by C. E. Misner; J. P. Chaffin & Son; H. H. Godber & Company by H. H. Godber; W. G. Benedict & Son by F. S. Conger; Citizens' Investment Company by S. L. Porter; J. R. Bragdon Company by Robert F. Knight. They were accompanied by L. M. and C. H. Pratt of the Pratt Company, and Donald Yomkin also with the Pratt Company.

REALTY TRANSFER.

J. W. Nickel has closed a deal for the purchase of the Michael Hovely place, twenty acres, for a consideration of $5000. L. B. Todd has bought the J. D. Woosley tract. Dr. D. G. Sniff has bought a house on Delaware street, recently built by George P. Thompson. C. Carmichael has bought two lots on Grand avenue, near Juniper street. For a consideration of about $2000 Dr. E. G. Logan has bought the Estes lot on Grand avenue, below Lime street.

DECLARE DIVIDENDS.

The Escondido National Bank has declared a semi-annual dividend of five per cent. on its capitalization of $50,000, and has added $2500 to its surplus fund. The Escondido Savings Bank has declared a dividend of five per cent. and has added $1250 to its COLTON.

COLTON, Jan. 7.—The Colton Aerie of Eagles installed officers in Masonic Hall last evening as follows: J. W. Bruce, president; A. R. Sayles, vice-president; A. W. Haines, secretary; J. H. Brewster, treasurer; J. B.

POPULAR CONCERTS.

Because of the large crowd in attendance each week at the free band concerts at Hollenbeck Park, the Park Commissioners have decided to build a new boathouse and bandstand for the better accommodation of the public. The plans for these buildings have been completed and it is thought that the buildings will be finished early this spring.

The regular concert by Moore's Fidelia Band this afternoon, will give selections from Kiesler, Donzietti, Suppe, Nes Vadba, Leon Cavallo, Moszkowski and Tschaikowski.

In order that the sick may become better acquainted with DRS. SHORES & SHORES' skill and modern office equipm reliability for the speedy cure of Catarrh and all curable Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases, and to give them understanding of the NATURE and CAUSE of their ailments, and IF and HOW you can be cured, DRS. SHORES JUST ONE MORE WEEK extend their great free offer to all of

A Thorough Medical Examination Fr

Don't fail to take advantage of this great opportunity. DRS. SHORES & SHORES are CHRONIC DISEASE EXPER have experience of the SEVENTEENTH YEAR quality. They have treated over 100,000. They are regular graduates, licensed by the California Medical Board to practice Medicine and Surgery. THEY ARE ABSOLUTELY RELIABLE fees for treatment are always low and uniform, and within the easy reach of all. Don't doubt, don't be skeptica despair, but take advantage of the great free offer. DRS. SHORES may be able to show you HOW you can b COME TODAY. COME ANY DAY THIS WEEK.

BEWARE OF FRAUDS AND FAKIRS

If you are sick and tired of Frauds and Fakers; if you will think over the fact that sick people don't doctor because they like to, but because they have to, and that you are not bound to consult your family doctor simply because he is a friend—if you will use common sense in such serious matters and consult doctors who have proven their honesty, skill and experience—you will save time, money and suffering. Consult DRS. SHORES now—no matter what your trouble is or who has failed—there is still chance if you act promptly.

Catarrh in the Head and Throat

This form of catarrh is most common—resulting from neglected colds—quickly cured with little cost by DRS. SHORES' famous treatment.

"Is your nose stopped up?"
"Does your nose discharge?"
"Is your nose sore and tender?"
"Is there pain in the front of the head?"
"Do you hawk to clear the throat?"
"Is your throat dry in the morning?"
"Do you sleep with your mouth open?"

You can be easily cured now—don't let it run into complications.

Of the Ears

Catarrh extends from the throat along the eustachian tubes into the ears, causing partial or complete deafness. Quickly cured with little cost by DRS. SHORES' famous treatment.

"Do your ears discharge?"
"Is the wax drying in your ears?"
"Do you hear better some days than others?"
"Is your hearing worse when you have a cold?"

Don't neglect this until your hearing is irreparably destroyed.

Drs. Shores Success

DRS. SHORES have built their enormous practice upon honesty and a square deal. No case is ever accepted under promise of a cure unless DRS. SHORES are SURE a cure can be made. However, thousands of cases pronounced incurable by others are entirely curable under proper treatment, and you should not consider YOUR case hopeless until DRS. SHORES have passed on it. Their advice is always FREE.

The Bronchial Tubes

When catarrh of the head or throat is neglected or wrongfully treated, it extends down the windpipe into the bronchial tubes, and after a while attacks the lungs. Quickly cured with little cost by DRS. SHORES' famous treatment.

"Have you a cough?"
"Do you take cold easily?"
"Have you a pain in the side?"
"Do you raise frothy materials?"
"Do you spit up little cheesy lumps?"
"Do you feel you are growing weaker?"

Don't risk neglecting these warnings—stop the disease before it reaches the lungs.

Of the Stomach

Catarrh of the stomach is usually caused by swallowing poisonous mucous, which drops down from the head and throat at night. Quickly cured at little cost by DRS. SHORES' famous treatment.

"Is there nausea?"
"Do you belch up gas?"
"Are you constipated?"
"Is your tongue coated?"
"Do you bloat after eating?"
"Is there constant bad taste in the mouth?"

Now is the time to be permanently cured. DRS. SHORES are curing hundreds every year.

Women

Weak, tired out, sickly women—suffering from the ills peculiar to the sex—find DRS. SHORES' treatment prompt and wonderful in results. Consultation FREE.

DOCTOR NELLIE BEIGHLE OF SAN Francisco, one of the greatest living Psychics who has won world-wide fame, through her God-given power as a healer, is spending a few days nerve rest at the Maryland Hotel, Pasadena. The little doctor, as she is called by her legions of friends, has grateful patients all over the United States, Canada and Europe, and the writer who has known her for the past twenty-four years, can conscientiously state that Doctor Nellie Beighle has performed more miraculous cures during her practice in San Francisco than any man or woman who can boast of being the possessor of a sheepskin. Her book of knowledge should be in every household, because some people can be cured of distressing malady by simply perusing its interesting pages. The little doctor is now located in magnificent offices in Studio Building, Key Route Station, BERKELEY, CAL.

START THE NEW YEAR RIGHT
BY CONSULTING
THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC.
PROF. BYRON STANLEY,
247—SOUTH HILL ST.—247.
Low Fee for This Week—Low Fee.

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO PSYCHIC THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.

Before you go into anything of importance —or undertake anything serious—in business, love or marriage, or before you make any change—you should consult this master mind of phychics.

IN FACT, ARE YOU HAPPY,

KNOWING NOT WHICH WAY TO TURN,

THEN CONSULT

BYRON STANLEY

The Acknowledged Leader of Them All. Don't struggle with a burden you can divide. A troubled mind begets a morbid conscience. Sympathy, consolation and timely advice heal the worst of wounds. Be advised and relieved of anxiety.

If you want the truth, with reliable advice, you will consult BYRON STANLEY on past, present and future. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case.

NO NEED TO TELL HIM!

There is no need to tell Stanley your story. There will be no "quizzing" or asking questions. His talents enable him to instinctively know your wants and troubles. Without any attempt at mystification, but with unerring sight into the inner nature of things, he reveals that which you most wish to know. His advice on all matters, business, lawsuits, marriage, health is invaluable. He is exact and correct—no guesswork. He gives names, dates, facts and figures and shows clearly and distinctly the road to success in business, as well as in domestic and family affairs.

Byron Stanley's name is a household word in thousands of homes in California. He has restored happiness (where there seemed no hope) to thousands, and has brought success, contentment and happiness to thousands more. He is here offering you the benefit of his priceless powers and knowledge gained during twenty of the best years of his life. Could you possibly ask more?

To whom is may concern: We take great pleasure in recommending our brother, PROF. STANLEY, as a life reader of good standing, having to our knowledge been fully developed in all the various phases of mental mediumship. We cordially recommend him to any individual or society that may need his advices.

MUNDO
The Man of Mystery.
Special Reading.
50c.
506—South Hill st.—506
Hotel Willoughby, over Park Bank.
OPPOSITE CENTRAL PARK.

Strange and startling are the revelations that flow from the cultivated lips of this wonderful psychic. Every word a pearl of wisdom. Born and bred in India, the land of the mystic this wizard of psychicism stands aloft and alone, far in advance of the ordinary clairvoyants you meet.

Would you lift the curtains to the mysteries of the veiled beyond? If so, consult this great psychic.

DIRECT FROM INDIA.

Does everything go all wrong? If so, there is a cause. Do you wish to continue on the downward trail, or do you desire to change and claim what God intended you to have? If you would rise to your natural sphere and enjoy life as others do, see

THIS MAN.

He will tell you the cause of your woe and how to overcome it.

The peer of all psychics. The only graduate of the Ordoo College of Occultism to ever leave his native land. A herald of the mysteries of the prophets of olden times.

This great psychic has spent all the years of his active life in the study and pursuit of this, his naturally-endowed science, and stands alone at the head of a vast army of seers and prophets, many of whom he has taught and prepared for the pursuit of this grand calling. See him today. He may change the course of your whole existence. Many a sad heart has been gladdened, many a weary life made bright by the advice and magnetism of this wonderful man. He is unlike any you ever saw; does positively all that others claim to do and demonstrates the power of mind over matter free to every patron; the only man in America possessing this power. Seeing is believing. Try him, then try others and see if they can do the same. A capable man has confidence in his ability and will not require you to deposit your money before his work is done. Mundo has read for many of America's leading citizens and a few titled foreigners, but he has more respect for his patrons and more consideration for their feelings than to publish their names broadcast for the sake of advertisement. Nor does he claim to have read for dozens of prominent people that common sense will tell you he never saw. If you need advice and want a reading from a real life reader, who does not spend half his time slandering his competitors, see Mundo, the Great Life Reader, who really tells what you desire to know or no charge. A foolish weakling will only pay for a reading that gives no benefit. Stop and think, then see Mundo, the Indian seer, who stands behind what he says with a spot cash guarantee. If you wish, he will tell your name free and show you how it is done. Special readings, 50 cents.

506—SOUTH HILL ST.—506
HOURS, 10 TO 12, 2 TO 4, DAILY, AND 7 TO 8 TUESDAY AND SATURDAY NIGHTS.

This is the man the San Francisco papers said so much about for predicting the great quake and fire.

This man of mystery has rightfully gained the title, "The Wizard and Seer," the name so often applied to him, and we recommend him to you for dead trance readings and deep, thorough, consistent, concise and complete life reader before the public today.

ARE YOU A

PHYSICIAN?

If so, do you know the value of Psychotherapy?

ARE YOU A

MINISTER OF THE GOSPEL?

If so, can you minister to the sick, as did the Great Physician?

IF AN

Osteopath, Naturopath, Divine Healer, or any other kind of healer, do you know what is lacking in your method of cure that spells failure in almost all mental diseases?

If a layman, do you know the value of a knowledge of the laws of suggestion, more particularly Hypnotic Suggestion?

If you wish to master the most modern methods of Hypnotism, as well as the oldest, and qualify yourself to handle successfully all chronic and nervous diseases, I will guarantee to make of you a most successful operator.

I am willing to take a limited number of patients who have received no relief from any of the present methods of cure and guarantee to benefit you.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
NOTED ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.
305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.

A resident of Los Angeles 27 years. PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs, your talents; your environments; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc.; also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE, in fact, the HOROSCOPE GIVES ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. No important changes or ventures of ANY kind should be made except at such a time when the planets in YOUR horoscope are favorable. PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Mary Mannering, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Annie Besant, Frederick Warde, Louis James, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, Baron Rothschild, H. E. Huntington, Countess de Swirsky, De Wolf Hopper, Barney Oldfield, etc. These are a few of the more NOTED PUBLIC PERSONS—and for this reason only are they here mentioned—ALL positively read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are strictly CONFIDENTIAL.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING gives also an ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S SKILLED WORK, with his trained judgment, must in no wise be classed with that of other readers.

Therefore, do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics, etc.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and experience can produce; therefore HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

Daily and evening, Sunday, 10 to 2.
STUDIO PARLORS, 305½ S. SPRING ST.

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON, the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigation along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings, Sundays, 9 to 5.)

PERSONAL — FUNCTIONAL NERVOUS and mental derangements are not medical conditions, and their treatment with drugs, surgery or physical application of any kind is absurd and reprehensible. WEST COAST SEED HOUSE, 111-113-115 Winston st.

FOR SALE — WANTED — POULTRYMEN visiting the show to call at 225 W. 2d st. to examine the Mandy Lee Incubators and Brooders.

Mr. Lee has made many improvements on this machine, since opening the Los Angeles factory, and these are not talking points merely but are steps still farther in advance of anything ever before put on the market for hatching strong chicks.

We are not afraid to show these machines in the most complete manner, and solicit the most rigid investigation.

We are now turning out a carload of these machines every three days.

GEO. H. LEE CO.,
225 W. 2nd St.

FOR SALE—BABY CHICKS, MONDAY, 2000 of the following kinds, 12 and 15 cents each: Barred Rocks, Rhode Island Reds, Buff Orpingtons, 200 fine White Wyandottes, Brown Leghorns, Black Minorcas, Brown and White Leghorns. Right now is the time to get the finest baby chicks we ever had. Buy early chicks, they are the ones that pay.

Special prices Monday on chicks and Fireless brooders. Investigate. Visitors always welcome to see our chicks and poultry yards. THE PIONEER HATCHERY CO., 108, 110, 112, 114, 116, 118 East 8th. Main 5461. F1635.

FOR SALE—EVERYBODY KNOWS THAT the "Success" incubators have already been good hatchers, everybody knows that we sell them for many dollars less than other companies ask. We have no agents, sell direct to you at factory prices. If you buy an incubator through an agent, you pay 25 per cent. of the price to him as his profit. We sell direct to you at wholesale prices. Investigation is all I ask. My free 48-page catalogue is now ready for distribution, ask for one. We make four sizes of incubators, 60-egg $9, 120-egg $14, 360-egg $25, 612-egg $40, and we pay the freight. Every incubator is hot water style, the best and most expensive to make; every hatchery most in Southern California use the Success incubators. Investigate. McCLANAHAN CO., 108-118 East 8th. DEADLY "STAFF OF LIFE."

Six Deaths Occur in Texas Village as Result of Eating Bread Which Is Mysteriously Poisoned.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex. Jan. 7.—Six deaths have occurred and many residents of the village of Telfener, in Victoria county, are ill as a result of eating bread containing poison.

Several days ago the village grocer poured several sacks of flour into a sugar barrel, and one of his first customers was Joe Brown, a negro. After the morning meal, the entire Brown family became ill, two of the children dying the same night. Since then four other deaths have occurred in the town. The flour, which a Victoria chemist analyzed, is declared to contain arsenic.

How the poison got into the flour has not been determined.

GAYNOR LONG IN THE DARK.

Conviction of Gallagher Gives New York Mayor First News That Edwards Was Wounded in Struggle.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—From the trial and conviction of James Gallagher, Mayor Gaynor learned for the first time that Commissioner Edwards of the street cleaning department, was wounded in the struggle that probably saved the Mayor's life. The fact came out with the news that Commissioner Edwards received a letter today in which the Mayor expresses his gratitude.

The Mayor has steadily refused to read any account of his attempted assassination or to talk of it.

GIRL KILLED FOR HER GEMS.

Strangled and Head Crushed by Butt of Revolver.

Diamonds and Money Taken from Her Stocking.

Was Seen in Company of a Man Who Has Fled.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Myrtle, daughter of Mrs. Julia Parker of No. 1638 "Palma" street, Los Angeles, was robbed and murdered in a public house at Needles last night, or early this morning. Her remains were found late this afternoon.

Her skull had been crushed evidently by the butt of a gun, while marks on her throat indicate she had been strangled. Diamonds and money aggregating $20,000 missing.

Friday night Miss Parker reached Needles from Winslow, with a male companion, whose identity is unknown. Between 11 o'clock and midnight, a young woman occupying an adjoining room, heard a struggle and attempted to investigate. She was refused entrance to the Parker girl's room by the stranger.

This afternoon their room was entered and the body of the young woman was found lying across the bed. A stocking had been removed from her right limb, evidently by force, as the flesh was scratched as by finger nails. It is believed the diamonds and money were taken from this stocking.

Sheriff Ralphs and Deputy Sheriff Hewins, left tonight on the Santa Fe Overland to investigate the affair. The officers of Winslow are also working on the case. It is believed her companion, who is missing, is known in Los Angeles.

LADY MC GOES SPEEDY MILE.

DR. DODGE'S SEIGFRIED IS OUTDISTANCED.

Don Reginaldo, Ramsey's Brown Gelding, Wins Two Twenty-five Trot, Crisis Failing to Land Better Than Second Place in Any Heat. Dolly Zombro and Hal Mc Matched.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PASADENA, Jan. 7.—The second matinee of the Pasadena Driving Club at Tournament Park, this afternoon brought out a good crowd and a large number of very good horses. In fact, some of the best horses in Southern California were entered. The track was exceptionally fast and several of the heats were made in record time.

The best time of the matinee was made in the fourth race, scheduled for the 2:15 pace, when the beautiful little black mare, Lady Mc, belonging to J. W. McClain, made a mile in 2:13¾. In the second heat she made the mile in 2:16½. She was matched against Seigfried, Dr. William Dodge's fast pacing stallion, but she distanced him in both heats. Seigfried was in bad form and secured second place.

The third race, the 2:25 pace, was between Dolly Zombro, belonging to W. W. Whitney, of Pasadena, and Hal Mc, J. W. McClain's bay gelding. Both heats were closely contested and at no time were the racers more than twenty feet apart, closing each time neck and neck, with Hal Mc in the lead. The second heat was made in 2:23, two seconds under the schedule.

CRISIS FALLS DOWN.

One of the surprises of the afternoon was when Crisis, W. W. Morgan's brown stallion, failed to win. It took three heats to win and Crisis got second in two heats. In the second heat he broke badly and came in fourth place. Don Reginaldo, the brown gelding belonging to F. A. Ramsey, came under the wire in the first place in both the second and third heats. In the first heat Julia Clay, a dainty little sorrel mare belonging to Nesmith & Sons of Los Angeles, had the pole and retained her position during the entire heat, landing first place. Nesmith also had Happy Clay, a black gelding, entered, in the same race.

One of the exciting races of the afternoon was the sixth, scheduled as the special hobble pace, between L. J. Christopher's black gelding, L. J. C. and William A. Glascock's chestnut gelding, Atlantic Fleet. Both horses are two-year-olds and evenly matched. The entire mile in both heats was made neck and neck with L. J. C. in the lead. It was a very pretty race and the last heat which was made in 2:25, received a loud round of applause.

The crowd was not as large as the club members had expected but it was too soon after the big events of Tournament Day and the people did not come out. However, all those present were well entertained and all remained until the last race was completed. There were no long delays and everything went off with a businesslike regulation from start to finish. The results:

THEFT IN HOTEL.

Nearly $1000 was the value of the loot carried off in money and jewelry by a sneak thief who went prowling through the second floor of the Hayward Hotel at about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The victim is Mrs. J. De Vega, wife of a wealthy Mexican whose hacienda is near Ensenada. Mrs. De Vega was on the second floor of the Hayward, in the ladies' parlor, when she had occasion to use the telephone. Laying her handbag on a sofa in the parlor, she stepped into the telephone booth. The conversation was over in about four minutes, but when Mrs. De Vega left the booth, she was unable, even with the assistance of the entire hotel staff, to find the reticule she had deposited on a sofa less than twelve feet from where she was talking through the telephone. The missing handbag contained Mrs. De Vega's watch, a timepiece with a solid gold case set in diamonds and her initials, "J. M. V." engraved on the case, valued at $300; a neck-chain with a slide set in diamonds, rubies and pearls, valued at $75; a brooch set with seven diamonds and seven pearls, worth $300; $110 in cash, and two return tickets to San Diego.

PRESENTATION CEREMONIES.

On Tuesday afternoon at 2:30, ceremonies of presentation will be held at the University of Southern California, to celebrate the gift to that institution of a handsome bas-relief portrait of the Rev. Oliver Spencer Frambes, pioneer of higher education in Southern California. The portrait is the work of the sculptor, Alexander S. Calder, and is presented to the university by Mrs. J. O. Koepfli. A full programme, in charge of Dr. G. F. Bovard, president of the university, has been prepared for the celebration.

A world's record was achieved by the circulating department of the New York public library in the year 1910. Seven and a half million books were distributed to 1,500,000 borrowers in the public library branches in the three boroughs. The gain for the year was 500,000. No other American city can approach this record, nor is it likely to be duplicated anywhere in Europe.

ITALIAN GOVERNMENT PLANS END TO CAMORRIST REIGN OF TERROR.

Thirty-two Members of Notorious Organization Brought in Irons to Viterbo to Undergo Trial for Murder After Imprisonment of Three Years—Riotous Scenes Mark Arrival of Prisoners.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VITERBO (Italy) Jan. 7.—Detachments of police and carbineers, both heavily armed, surrounded the station here today in anticipation of the arrival of thirty-two members of the Camorra, who are to stand trial for the murder of James Cuocolo, a leading member of the band, who had incurred the vengeance of the Camorrists for alleged acts of treachery.

Cucolo's body was found on the seashore near Naples in June, 1906, and the mutilated body of his wife was discovered shortly afterward in a house nearby.

Extraordinary precautions have been taken by the authorities to guard the prisoners and to prevent any attempt at release. They have been in close confinement for more than three years. Police detachments were stationed at various points, and when the train arrived from Naples, there was a scene of riot and disorder among the friends and relatives of the prisoners who had gathered at the station.

It was known that nothing would be left undone to effect a rescue and orders had been issued to put down any such attempt by whatever means necessary. The prisoners descended from the car in groups of five, chained together. They comprised all varieties of the social scale from dandy to lazzarona.

NOTORIOUS HEAD.

Chief among them was Enrico Alfano, better known as Ericone, head of the Camorra, who was arrested in New York, April, 1907, by Detective Petrosino. He appeared thinner and

The mob, temporarily held in check by a show of authority, broke into cries, shrieks and execrations at sight of the prisoners and attempted to break through the lines to get near them, but the carbineers pushed them back with their guns. Intense excitement reigned and the surging mass of people threatened an attack upon the police.

The prisoners shook their manacled fists and raised their voices almost as loudly as their friends and relatives. The wife, of Mandriere, known also as De Marinis, the most notorious Camorrist after Ericone, struck at the carbineers.

The men were marched to prison surrounded by heavy guards, and the crowds dispersed. Capulo, the marshal of the carbiners, who has distinguished himself in exposing the Camorra, is director of the police arrangements.

TO STAMP OUT ORDER.

The trial will begin shortly and Viterbo, which is fifty-two miles from Rome, was selected in order that all concerned in the prosecution would be removed from the direct influence of the association which has a terror for all law-abiding Italians.

It is believed that evidence will be brought out that will shed light on the murder of Detective Petrosino at Palermo in March, 1909, where he was sent by the New York police department to secure information on Italian criminals. Scores of murders are charged against the Camorrists now in the hands of the police, although the coming trial will have to do only with the assassination of Cuocolo and his wife.

This is the beginning of a far-sweeping movement which the Italian government contemplates against the Camorra association which, according to the Minister of Justice and oth

ANOTHER NEW YORK BANK FAILS; ROBIN INDIRECTLY RESPONSIBLE.

Carnegie Trust Company Closes Its Doors After Brief and Varied Career—Former Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw Once Its President — Little Surprise in Wall Street Over Disaster.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—A third bank, across which the shadow of Joseph G. Robin, the indicted promoter, had fallen, closed its doors today, and tonight the State Superintendent of Banks is in possession of the Carnegie Trust Company, an institution with wide operation and western affiliations.

An application for the appointment of a committee to take charge of the person and estate of Robin was denied his sister, Dr. Louise Robinvitch, today, by Justice Goff in the State Supreme Court.

United States bankruptcy moneys, State and city funds are all tied up, bonded in varying degrees of sufficiency.

The company was named the official depository of Federal receivers and trustees of bankruptcy appointed by the United States District Court, on application of Leslie M. Shaw, who, for a period, was its president, after his resignation from the United States Treasury Department.

The future of the depositors and stockholders will not be known until the State Superintendent makes public the report of his findings.

PRESIDENT OPTIMISTIC.

President Joseph T. Howell, who was induced to resign the presidency of the Fourth National Bank of Nashville, Tenn., to take charge of the Carnegie Trust Company, three months ago, was optimistic.

"There is no reasonable doubt," he said, "that depositors will be paid in full."

The closing of the Carnegie Company today was no surprise in financial circles and caused little disturbance on the stock exchange. A brief fall in the market was quickly met by supporting orders and at the close the tone was firm. On the street the uncertain status of the company had been a matter of common knowledge.

In its brief career—it was organized in 1907—it had already passed through one serious period of depression and had known four Presidents. The first was Charles C. Dickinson, whose family still is at litigation with insurance companies over his death. He was interested in experiments looking to the transmutation of metals and his brother, Stanton C. Dickinson, advanced the theory that he was killed by inhaling poisonous gases in a laboratory test. On this theory the family sought to collect $70,000 accident insurance. An autopsy performed by experts for the company showed, however, that death was the immediate result of pneumonia and Bright's disease.

ROBIN'S CONNECTION.

Mr. Dickinson resigned and got Leslie M. Shaw to succeed him. Mr. Shaw proved a very successful business getter, but he did not agree with Mr. Dickinson, who still retained a large share in directing the policy of the bank, and resigned.

Mr. Dickinson became president again, but did not succeed in gaining the confidence of influential banking interests.

Dickinson and Robin had been friends. Robin was on the first directorate, but resigned. When the Northern Bank was closed and Superintendent Hotchkiss of the State Department of Insurance made public his investigation into its affairs a draft drawn by Robin on the Carnegie Trust, with which he had no account, cropped up.

From that time, there began a steady but continuous withdrawal of funds by depositors who had lost confidence. It could scarcely be called a run, but in its culmination today it proved quite as effective.

With the incoming of the new city administration, the Northern Bank of New York and the Carnegie Trust Company both became city depositories Comptroller Prendergast became doubtful of the Carnegie and insisted that the directors put up their personal bond.

FINANCIAL STATUS.

The financial status of the Carnegie Trust Company, according to its last statement, November 10, is:

Loans, $4,962,500; stocks and bonds investment, $2,304,609; due from trust companies, banks and bankers, $1,517,300; cash available, $1,058,000; aggregate deposits, $8,895,700.

The company has a capital of $1,500,000, and surplus and undivided profits of $737,500.

The officers of the company are: President, J.T. Howell, vice-presidents, Robert L. Smith and James R. Curran; secretary, Robert E. Morehead; assistant treasurer, W. L. Sampson; assistant secretary, A. E. Chandler.

The directors are: David A. Bates, W. J. Cummings, A. B. Chandler, J. J. Condon, George W. Court, George D. Crabbs, W. A. Keener, S. H. Kress, L. L. Lewis, E. F. O'Neill, J. B. Reichmann, Charles A. Schwab, G. C. Smith, J. B. Stanchfield and J. T. Howell.

At Rest.

HOME FRIENDS PAY LAST HONORS TO BODY OF STEPHEN B. ELKINS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ELKINS (W. Va.) Jan. 7.—Under a brilliant winter sky, the body of Senator Stephen B. Elkins was buried today on the crest of a hill overlooking the town that bears his name.

The simple service at the cemetery was preceded by services at the Davis Memorial Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Dr. Barron, pastor, officiated, and Dr. Wallace Radcliffe of the Presbyterian church in Washington, at which Senator Elkins was wont to worship, delivered the eulogy.

The church was crowded and many who could not get in remained outside to accompany the cortege to the cemetery.

A special train from Charleston, the State capital, brought Gov. Glasscock, his Cabinet, the justices of the Supreme Court, and a score or more of State officials.

The town was crowded with mourners, who had thronged hither from every direction. Many who could not come by rail drove over the mountain roads to pay a last tribute.

All business was suspended, flags fluttered at half mast and windows were close curtained.

Mrs. Elkins did not come. Overcome by the shock, she was in such condition that her physician forbade her leaving Washington.

When the coffin was removed from the special funeral train which had brought it from Washington it was placed on a flat, open wagon, heavily draped in black and drawn by two powerful horses. The march to the church was then begun.

Immediately behind the catafalque were members of the Senate Committee led by Senators Scott and Bailey. Behind them followed the House delegates. All were afoot. After the church services, the journey to the grave was made in carriages.

Immediately after the funeral, the delegations from Washington returned to the capital.

PERFECT GIRLS IMPERFECT YET.

FOLLOWERS OF CHICAGO CULT WERE LED ASTRAY.

Evelyn Arthur See, Prophet of "Absolute Life," Goes to Jail, Charged With Gross Immorality With Pretty Disciples—Latter Say Consciences Clear.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Evelyn Arthur See, self-declared apostle of a new life in which all beings will be perfect, appeared in the Municipal Court today to answer to charges of disorderly conduct following police investigation of his apartments, and his "absolute life" colony.

Although he confessed his guilt when arrested with Mona Rees and Mildred Bridges, two pretty young followers, and the mother of one of the girls involved, he pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Municipal Judge Scully, and his case was continued.

He confessed also he was "guilty in the eyes of the world," of improper conduct with one of the older women who had been mentioned in the case, but declared that he had committed no sin. Mona Rees and Mildred Bridges, the so-called "perfect" girls of the See cult, admitted the truth of the charges on which they had been arrested, but, like the "prophet," declared their consciences were clear.

PENITENTIARY YAWNS.

Mona Rees, who was released with the other girl on bonds furnished by Mrs. Stephen Bridges, mother of Mildred, visited See in his cell at the East Chicago avenue station just before he was taken to the County Jail. She then obtained the keys to the school and to the See flat from Captain Danner, and declared she would re-open the institution and "carry on the divine work" while See was locked up.

Captain Danner held a conference with State's Attorney Wayman to consider plans to take the case to the grand jury after the municipal court hearing, and declared the "prophet" would be prosecuted to the utmost.

"I'm going to put him in the penitentiary, if I can," said Capt. Danner, "and I think I can. He certainly deserves it."

Broken and dispirited after his night in a cell, the cult leader admitted his guilt of serious charges that had been the opposite of what he did when formally arraigned.

JAIL BREAKS SPIRIT.

The night in a cell at the Sheffield avenue station broke the spirit of the "Absolute Life" mystic. Several times during the night the guards heard him sobbing and murmuring to himself as he knelt in his cell. When he was put in the patrol wagon, with several vagrants, "plain drunks," and disorderly women and taken to the East Chicago avenue station for trial, his bravado was utterly gone.

When See was arraigned before Judge Scully, the Rees and Bridges women took their stand on each side of him. Both had tears in their eyes, and started sobbing. See confronted them by speaking to them in a low tone.

Mona Rees, the elder of the two girls, was destined, according to the plan of See, to be the mother of the first "nearly perfect" child, she herself being almost perfect, according to the cult's teachings.

HAS GOD'S COUNSEL.

The other girl, Mildren Bridges, was striving to attain that state of purity, she declared, that would place her on a plane with the Rees girl.

Mrs. Felicia Rees, mother of Mona also was interested in the colony and spent much of her time teaching its principles. She told the police she approved of her daughter living with See, as all were "perfect" and hence sinless.

See, in court, refused services of an attorney, saying he had the counsel of God, and would purify the court room. The hearing was postponed until January 12, and See refused bail.

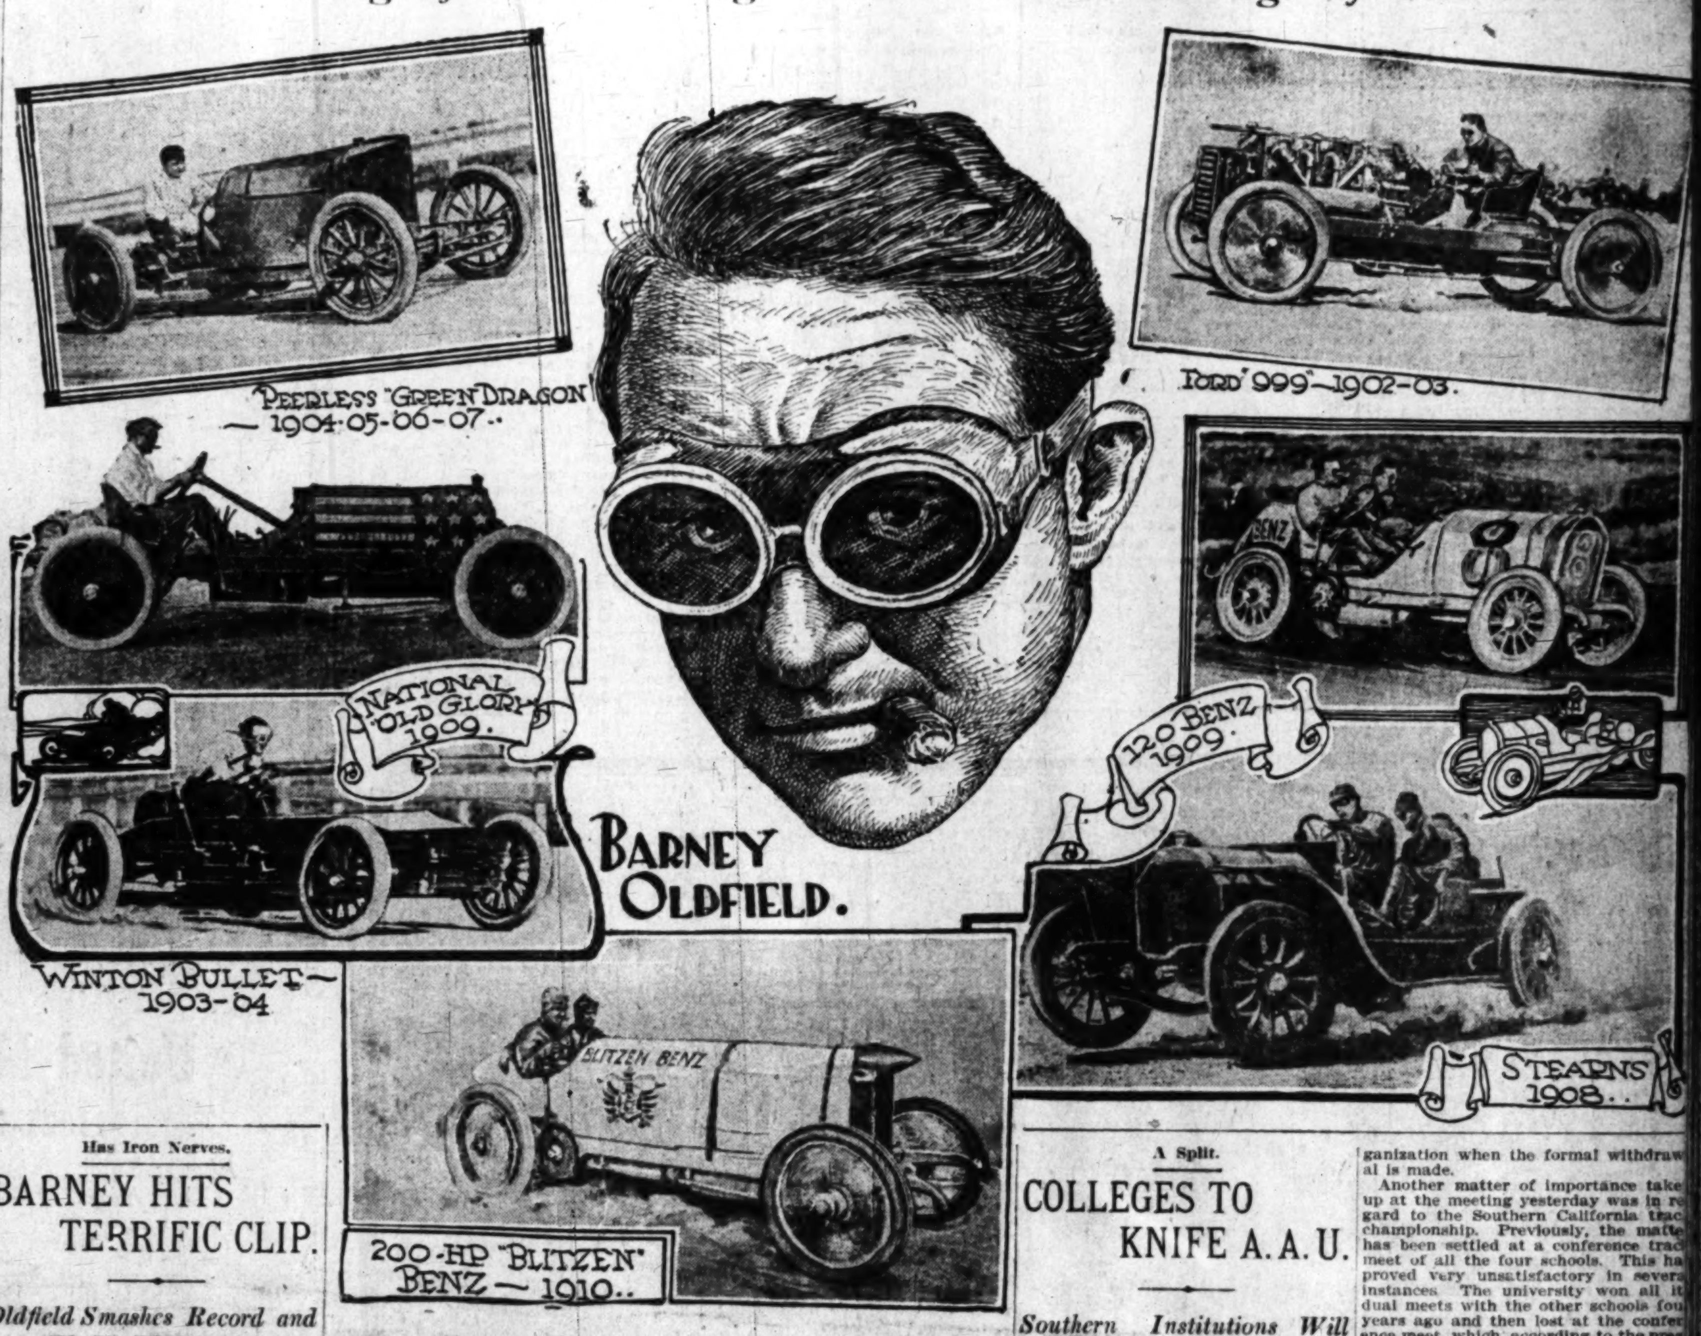
The World King of the Steering Wheel and the Wings of His Victories.



Barney Oldfield and Motor Cars Which Made Him Famous.
Wonderful career of monarch of motor racers told in the list of seven of the well-known cars with which he shattered world records.

Has Iron Nerves.

BARNEY HITS TERRIFIC CLIP.

Oldfield Smashes Record and Thrills Thousands.

World Mark May Be Broken Today at Ascot.

Champion Makes Drive of Career and Wins.

Barney Oldfield in the "Blitzen" Benz, smashed the Pacific Coast circular dirt track record yesterday at Ascot Park, when he drove the mile in 51 1-5s. His former mark of 51 2-5s was just beaten. Five men caught the time officially and two expert timers also caught the mark unofficially. The crowd at Ascot went wild as the daring track champion raced to the finish in the most thrilling drive ever witnessed on the Ascot Park course.

Two attempts were made by Oldfield before he succeeded in breaking his own time. On the first trial Barney went the second quarter of his remarkable run in 12 3-5s. Then a tire flattened from a puncture. The strain was too great for any tire to stand. This put an end to the time trial.

The crowd was ready for thrills. It was the most appreciative throng ever gathered at the dirt course. Oldfield was cheered to the echo, but even the iron nerve of the champion racer had been given a thrill when the tire almost wrecked his car. For a second Oldfield clung to the steering post and it was a question whether the Benz would roll over the nervy driver or keep the course. Barney won and came to the finish with a flat outer casing.

When the announcement was made that Oldfield would try again for the record the crowd went wild with delight. As the 200-horse-power Benz was towed over the course to start the motor, thousands waited expectantly. It was the most daring dash ever tried and Mrs. Oldfield, who occupied a car with Mrs. James J. Jeffries, Mrs. Jack Kipper and Mrs. Hector McKenzie, had to watch her husband risk his life on the most dangerous drive ever made.

Jack Kipper and others tried to persuade Barney to give up the attempt for the day. Oldfield was told that the track is in the worst condition ever, that there is no chance of fixing a bump at the lower end, but he insisted on trying to satisfy the crowd. The people were with him and he wanted to give them something to talk about.

WORLD MARK.

Coming into the stretch for the start, Oldfield waved his hand and was given the gun. He flew to the first turn in 12 4-5 seconds and went down the back stretch at a terrific clip, hitting the half-mile post in 24 4-5 seconds, a world's record for the half-mile on a dirt course. The first half of a mile drive was never made faster than the mark Oldfield established yesterday.

The hole on the lower turn cost Oldfield two seconds and it took him 13 4-5s. to make the final lower turn, as he swung far out. Coming into the stretch the car bucked on the bumps and it took him thirteen seconds to come down the stretch. The last half was made in 25 4-5s. The Pacific Coast record was smashed by one-fifth of a second.

Oldfield's last half-mile is always made faster than the first. The lower turn cut him out of a world's record in what would have been the most sensational drive ever made on any dirt course. This also, in spite of the fact that Ascot Park, in its present condition, is the worst dirt track in this country.

DEFIES DEATH.

Clockers at the finish almost had a was too much to expect. Tires will not stand such a clip. Oldfield was ready to flirt with death but the strain was too great on such a course. He will try again today and world records may be shattered by this champion of all track drivers and his wonderful Blitzen Benz. Oldfield will never drive on Ascot Park after today's efforts, even if he finishes without losing his life.

Ben Kerscher won the five-mile race against Oldfield in the Prince "Henry Benz" and Jimmy Ryall in the Knox "Giant." Kerscher went the distance in 4m. 59s., fast time, and for a short distance it looked as if the Darracq would smash a world dirt mark. Kerscher bounced in his seat almost too high for the nervy Dutchman, and he was satisfied to win from Oldfield and Ryall in fast time.

Ryall becomes an outlaw by his drive yesterday. His name will be sent to the A.A.A. by Roy P. Hillman, president of the Automobile Club of Southern California, who was at the meet yesterday. Ryall will be disqualified, for how long, remains with the contest board to decide.

OTHER OUTLAWS.

F. W. Williams, in the Petrel friction-driven car, won the five-mile race from H. Buckley in the Pope-Toledo and E. H. Bechtel in the Parry. His time of 6m. 52s. was not fast, but Williams drove a good race and won handily. He led by an eighth of a mile at one time and then slowed down. His car is good for a mile-a-minute on a dirt course like Ascot Park and would go faster on the Motordrome.

Ryall took the honors in the handicap event, which was one of the good races of the card yesterday. He was started only 15 seconds ahead of the Darracq, but the fast car which once won the Vanderbilt Cup Race could not be driven fast enough to catch the outlaw on the Knox.

One by one Ryall picked up the other cars. The Petrel, started 35 seconds ahead of the scratch car, was the first to be passed by the speedy Knox. Then the Parry was picked up after it had gone three miles on its 50-second handicap. The Pope-Toledo was not caught until the fourth mile. The handicap of 1 minute, 20 seconds was almost good enough for Bechtel, who drove a good race. He will be in again today. Ryall's time of 5m. 19s was made in the dust of the other cars.

Kerscher tried to smash the world's record for three miles but failed. His time of 2m. 59 4-5s was remarkable but not fast enough even for Kerscher and his Darracq. There is no other driver who could send the 100-horse-power car at such a terrific clip, but the course was too fierce even for Kerscher.

Men are to work on the turns at Ascot tonight in an effort to put it into shape for the races today when world's records may be smashed. The holes are to be cemented and Oldfield's chance of a life time is to come this afternoon. The weather is perfect and the champion promises to do his best. This means another thrilling drive.

Wagers were made yesterday that Oldfield would beat the Pacific Coast mark today. A bet of two to one was laid that he will break a world record. There is a possibility that Oldfield will wreck his car and lose his life.

This winner of records is ready to take a chance. He has driven so many times at such fierce clips that he is fearless. He knows how to drive the Ascot Park course better than any other driver on earth. Oldfield has a chance to establish a mark that will not only be sensational but that will be the best ever made in the West.

shape, to have the officials there, the timing correct and everything under the best of conditions. What if a world record was broken? Automobile men are asking themselves how the A.A.A. would take matters. Oldfield is an outlaw, but his records must stand.

The outlaw list is being lengthened every day. Eddie Maier, one of the best sports in the automobile game in the West, was referee yesterday. He must enter the outlaw list. He is a true sport, fair and square and upright, and has officiated at some of the biggest meets pulled off here under the auspices of the Automobile Association of America. Eddie says it's all right. He is a friend of Oldfield and is willing to take a chance. His name will be sent back to the contest board for its consideration.

Charles F. Stamps, the chief timer, also joins the outlaw list, maybe. He is willing and has always been ready to help out the racing game here. Charles Burman was at the meet yesterday, but did not officiate. He keeps his standing. Aubrey Austin was a judge. He is to lose out, perhaps.

Frank Chance, the big baseball captain, is to be the starter today. How about Frank? Of course he will join the ranks of the outlaws with Les Henry, J. Aleck Sloan and others.

Bill Pickens is there already. He will be on hand today for what he says is to be the greatest automobile race meet ever held in the West. Sloan will entertain the crowd with his big megaphone.

TO ANGLE FOR REAL MERMAID.

Sherman Baker With Light Outfit to Tackle Female Swimmer.

Sherman Baker, for whom tuna, yellowtail, and sea bass have lost their charm, is going after a mermaid. The other day, while talking to Venus, the girl who does the diving stunts at Luna Park, Baker remarked that with a Catalina standard light-tackle outfit he could tire her within a half hour and make her call "quits." Venus gave Baker the merry ha-ha. Then he offered to bet real money that he could perform the trick. Another ha-ha, was all he got.

However, the young woman agreed to submit to the test and Baker says he will attempt to subdue the mermaid before the end of this month. Venus will be "hooked" and Baker will attempt to land her before a half hour elapses. She, of course, will put up a fight to remain in the plunge.

Baker landed a twenty-two-pound yellowtail on three-four-five tackle while fishing from a skiff off Redondo a few weeks ago. What he will be able to do with a 120-pound mermaid

A Split.

COLLEGES TO KNIFE A. A. U.

Southern Institutions Will Cancel Membership.

Rules Are Deemed Inadequate for Collegians.

Ban to Be Lifted from "Pro" Summer Ball.

The conference colleges of Southern California probably will cancel their membership in the Amateur Athletic Union if the various school faculties endorse the sentiments expressed by the conference representatives at a meeting yesterday. No final action was taken in the matter as the representatives did not have authority to act definitely, but the spirit of the discussion was that the present strained relations between the colleges and the A. A. U. could be relieved most satisfactorily to both organization if the colleges withdraw.

Pomona, Occidental, Whittier and the University of Southern California were represented at the meeting and it was agreed that a definite statement of the position taken by the schools toward the association should be given out at a later date.

No ill feeling was manifest toward the local branch of the Athletic Union as the colleges feel that its action has been perfectly consistent, but it has become very apparent that there should be a different set of regulations governing college amateur athletes than those which the A. A. U. maintain for athletes generally. The schools in the Middle West have made this discovery and scarcely any of them are connected with the A. A. U. This action has not been taken because that organization is not efficient in its field but there are certain conditions in college athletics for which the regulations of the association are not adequate.

For instance, the A. A. U. will not permit any athlete to take a cash bonus for playing in any game at any time. The colleges and universities all over the country have decided that the prohibiting of summer baseball as a means of income to the players is an injustice to them and for this reason are allowing athletes to enter the professional ranks for the summer vacation. This is absolutely contrary to the A. A. U. ruling and no school which is a member of the association in good standing can permit it. The local colleges are expecting to make such a provision for their own baseball men and for this and several similar reasons it was thought best to draw out of the organization entirely, although willing to support it in so far as it is possible to do so without actually being members.

This action was influenced to some extent by the position which Capt. Franklin, president of the local branch, has taken in the matter. He said that it would be better for the colleges to withdraw than to attempt to remain members of the union and then openly defy the ruling which the registration committee had made when they saw fit, as was the case in the Hatch controversy last fall.

CAN GO IT BETTER ALONE.

The members of the committee who were present at the meeting were very desirous of keping the good will of the A. A. U., and they wish it understood that their action was taken in good spirit and with a keen appreciation of the effort which the local branch of the Union is making to maintain a clear and well-defined amateur group of athletes in the colleges and high schools of the South. The colleges simply consider themselves a more valuable influence for the cause outside the organization when the formal withdrawal is made.

Another matter of importance take up at the meeting yesterday was in regard to the Southern California trac championship. Previously, the matte has been settled at a conference trac meet of all the four schools. This ha proved very unsatisfactory in severa instances. The university won all it dual meets with the other schools fou years ago and then lost at the conference meet, which, according to the present agreement, lost them the championship, although they had prove themselves superior in the dual meet As other of the schools has had a similar experience, there was no oppositio to a rule declaring that the first honors should go to the school winning th largest number of dual meets.

The conference idea is to be enlarge so that any college in Southern California can compete regardless of conference membership. This will enabl the track men to decide the champion of the southwest, in addition to th conference winners. The meet will b very much in the nature of an invitation affair, and it was arranged s that California and Stanford could b invited to take part if the schools deem it advisable. A meet including th northern institutions would decide th State champions and would make i possible to pick out a fast team t represent the State in any easter meet.

The football championship for las fall was officially declared a tie by th committee. This action was hardly necessary, except for the matter of awarding certain prizes which were up fo the winners. The Pin Ton cup is lef in the hands of the donor until nex year, with merely the result of thi year's games engraved upon it. Th cup must be won three years befor any one school can lay permanen claim to it.

The track and baseball schedules which were to be arranged at thi meeting, could not be fixed definitely as Williel Thomson, the Occidenta manager, was not present. The othe representatives drew up tentativ schedules, however, which will be presented to the Tiger manager for endorsement.

A meeting of the conference will b held in the near future to take fina action on the matter of the A. A. U relations, and it is very probable tha the conference will draw up its ow definition of amateur standing, whic will be especially adapted to loca needs. All of the schools feel that th present regulations work undue hardship upon the athlete who is competing in good faith and that the rule can be modified without much dange of bringing in "ringers" and professional players.

ROAD RECORDS ARE DESIRED.

Shettler Tells of Apperson Run to Bakersfield.

Challenges Cadillac to Race Over Rough Roads.

Don Lee Breaks the Record of Jackrabbit Instead.

Leon T. Shettler claims to have smashed the Los Angeles-Bakersfield road record with the Apperson "Jackrabbit." He says his car made the run in four hours, thirty-five minutes. This mark was beaten by the Cadillac on Friday.

Shettler did not start from The Times office where the Cadillac was given the gun, but left the Alexandria Hotel five blocks from where Don Lee's car was started. The Apperson, however, had an advantage of road conditions, and had a chance to shoot through the Newhall tunnel.

When the Caddillac made its record the roads were in wretched shape from here to Newhall. When the Apperson made the run the roads were bad but Bramlette drove the thirty-horse-power were in better condition than when stock car.

Road record breaking is strenuous business. Shettler's car must be given credit for its wonderful work but the Cadillac has more road marks now than any other automobile in [illegible] Angeles and also holds the Fernando 'si-[illegible]on trophy for its drive of 14hrs., 9mins., from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

Shettler is a true sport, square and upright and his word is accepted by all of his friends. If Shettler says he started at 7 o'clock his friends believe him. The Apperson man desires to be fair and does not want anything that others cannot get.

The record of the Apperson was not made like any of Shettler's previous marks or like the records of H O. Harrison, P A Renton, W D. Howard, or Don Lee. Every other mark in existence in Los Angeles including the Chanslor and Lyon trophy run, for the Los Angeles-San Diego record, was started from The Times office and finished there.

SHETTLER'S DEFI.

In a statement made yesterday, Shettler says:

"I wish to state that I have established more road records in California than any other dealer in Los Angeles. Four or five years ago, I started a two-cylinder Reo from the Alexandria Hotel and landed at the New Southern Hotel in Bakersfield, seven hours and eighteen minutes later with Hanshue driving. This was the first Los Angeles to Bakersfield record and was accepted as such by every one.

"Two years later, H. O. Harrison drove an Oldsmobile from Los Angeles to Bakersfield in a few minutes less than six hours. No one seemed to question the record, least of all, me, who was the most interested. Shortly after this, I sent my Kissel-Kar, Tousco 1, out after this record, and brought this mark down to 5hrs., [illegible]min.

About three weeks ago a Cadillac left The Times office and finished at the New Southern Hotel, 4 hours and [illegible] minutes later. Now, the record this Cadillac broke was my mark held with the Kissel-Kar, yet I did not call the public's attention to the fact that the record was made over a course that was nearly half a mile shorter than the record which they were supposed to be breaking.

[illegible] December 29, Harris M. Hanshue [illegible] the Alexandria Hotel in this city, [illegible] a.m. with the Apperson fifty [illegible]power "Jackrabbit," being [illegible] out by R Scott, whose affidavit [illegible] hold and can easily prove. If [illegible] Hanshue was checked in in [illegible] of the Southern Hotel at 10:35 [illegible] by R. M Hamilton of Bakersfield, whose affidavit we also hold. [illegible] affidavit is attested by four other [illegible] of Bakersfield who are in no [illegible] the automobile [illegible]gotiated the distance from the Alexandria here to the Southern Hotel in Bakersfield in 4 hours and 35 minutes. I offer $1000 to be given to the Salvation Army, if any one can prove that these statements cannot be substantiated.

"If Don Lee has any idea that we are proud of the record of the "Jackrabbit" to Bakersfield in 4 hours and 35 minutes, he is mistaken. We know that the car can do a great deal better than this, and as evidence of our faith in this car, I hereby make him the following proposition:

That he is to take his "Thirty" horse-power car with the same equipment on it and the same drivers that made the record in 4 hours and 38 minutes to Bakersfield and start twenty minutes ahead of the Jackrabbit, and I will give him $250 if we do not catch him before he gets to Bakersfield

Now the distance to Bakersfield over this road is approximately 140 miles, and by giving him twenty minutes, it means that we have got to make every mile of this distance eight seconds faster than he does, which amounts to considerable of a handicap.

This challenge of Shettler's was not accepted. Instead Don Lee sent the Cadillac after the Apperson's mark and established the new record of four hours, twenty-six minutes, which is nine minutes better than the Aperson's time.

OHIO BATTLES WITH ELEMENTS.

Handsome Car at Auto Show Makes Great Run Before Doors of Exhibit Are Opened.

Its fenders bent out of shape by the snow drifts which it bucked during its journey through Ohio and Pennsylvania, the Warren-Detroit "Wolverine" succeeded in reaching Buffalo Monday and is now well on its way through New York Due to reach the Grand Central Palace exhibition by the first day in the New Year, Driver W H. Smith pushed the car to its limit from the minute of its departure from Detroit on December 30.

The "Wolverine's" crew found Ohio, east of Cleveland, deep with snow and the roads broken only by bob-sleighs of the farmers. The narrow tread of these vehicles made the traveling of the wide tread automobile more difficult. The car would continually slip from the crest of the road into the ditch. A half-dozen boards were kept piled in the tonneau of the car along with shovels and picks.

The two-men crew many times each day during the run through Ohio and Pennsylvania had to jack up the rear wheels and shove boards under for them to secure traction upon On two consecutive days this performance was so frequent that the "Wolverine" made only ten miles from morning until night.

Trying to push on in the darkness was out of the question. Only one automobile was met outside of a city limits and the two men in the "Wolverine" saved the occupants of this from possible death and certain severe exposure when in the soft snow it slid down a twenty-foot embankment and rested with its wheels spinning in the air. The "Wolverine's" crew happening along in the nick of time pulled the driver and his wife from imprisonment under the car and shut off the leaking gasoline, thereby preventing fatal results

KISSEL KARS ARE ACTIVE.

The six-cylinder sixty-horse-power Kissel torpedo, which attracted so much attention at the recent Shrine Auditorium auto show, was sold and delivered last week to Robert F Garner at San Bernardino The following Kissel Kar agents have reported numerous prospects for their cars, and anticipate a big business for 1911: J W Skinner of Anaheim Deane Laughlin of Santa Maria, J. D Gentry of San Bernardino, and Dayton & Buoy of San Diego The Southern California distributing house for the Kissel Kars at Pico and Main streets has been the scene of activity during the past week, with inquiries from interested parties regarding the 1911 models of cars.

Sweaters Ready.

The football men at the University of Southern California who won their monograms, playing last fall, will be presented with handsome monogram sweater coats at the assembly period some day this week This is a custom at all of the colleges as the football heroes can receive no money for their services and the sweater is sup-

GARDEN SHOW EXHIBIT GRAND.

PACKARD DISPLAY ONE OF THE FINEST IN THE SALON.

Madison Square Garden Open for Two Weeks and High-Class Cars Take the Palm—Inside-Operated Coupes and Closed Cars Vie With the Big Trucks for Honors.

Instead of showing the conventional and well known styles of open cars, the Packard Motor Car Company exhibits at the Eleventh National Automobile Show in Madison Square Garden, New York, January 7 to 14, four cars, each of which has some novel features.

The most striking car of the display is the Packard "Thirty" brougham, which is a recent addition to the line of Packard inclosed cars. It has a five-passenger, inside operated body on a phaeton chassis, this body being interchangable with the open phaeton body. There is no division in the body, the driver and passengers being all in the same inclosure. There is a door on each side, the right door entering to the rear seat and the left to the front seat. There is a folding seat ahead of the left front seat similar to that in the coupe The car is trimmed throughout with a gray checkered cloth that is an exclusive Packard design. The trimming is novel, as it is done without the conventional broadlace, being plain but elegant. The car is painted entirely in black and deep gray, while all the metal parts are nickel plated.

The other enclosed car exhibited is a Packard "Thirty" coupe, which is a two or three-passenger inside operated car, the body of which is interchangeable with the open runabout body on either a Packard "Thirty" or "Eighteen" runabout chassis The coupe exhibited is painted in bright red and black, the body panels and running gear being red, while the bonnet, fenders, upper body and other similar parts are black The monogram panel is bright yellow. The interior is trimmed in a light cloth that is one of the many exclusive Packard upholstery materials, designed and imported expressly for trimming Packard enclosed cars At the rear of the driver's seat there is a convenient pocket with a removable tray The left hand seat is further back than the driver's seat, and there is sufficient space in front of it for a drop seat, which, when not in use, folds under the extension over the dashboard.

There is also shown a standard Packard "Thirty" with close-coupled body, especially equipped for overland touring. In addition to such regular features as top and windshield, the luggage carrying space in the back of the body is provided with four special suitcases made of leather, to match the upholstery. One advantage of separate cases for touring instead of one large touring trunk is that they permit the passengers to carry their personal luggage separately. On the back of the rear seats there is also a large special case with three compartments In one of these may be carried inner tubes and in the others rain coats, dusters or any other apparel or touring paraphernalia which it is desirable to have where it may be conveniently reached without disturbing any of the other luggage The car is also equipped with extra tires on demountable rims and with tire chains, so that all it needs is gasoline, oil and water to be ready for the road

A Packard "Eighteen" town car is shown in finish and equipment which make it a particularly fitting town car Instead of the conventional leather upholstery, the entire tonneau is trimmed with tan whipcord, while the leather in the front seat is made to match. The carpet throughout matches the whipcord and the top is lined with the same material. The luxurious appointment of the tonneau is enhanced by an upholstered footpad. All of the woodwork is of a special light finish to match the light upholstery. The bonnet, frame, and fenders are finished in black, while the body panels and running gear are painted in Holland blue, striped with cream yellow.

The Packard "Thirty" line consists of a touring car, phaeton, close-coupled car, runabout, limousine, landaulet, coupe, brougham, fore-door limousine and fore-door landaulet. The Packard "Eighteen" town car is made as a five-passenger open car, close-coupled car, runabout, and in inclosed car styles similar to the "Thirty." Both cars are the same in quality and general design. The list price of the Packard "Thirty" open cars is $4200 and of the "Eighteen" open cars, $3200. The standard equipment of all open cars includes Packard tops. All cars are equipped regularly with Continental demountable rims. The tires on the "Thirty" are 36 by 4½ inches, all around, and on the "Eighteen" 34 by 4 inches.

The mechanical improvements in the 1911 cars are extensive but are all in the nature of detail refinement, developing previous models. The motor of the Packard "Thirty" has four cylinders of 5-inch bore by 5½-inch stroke. It develops 30 brake horse power at 650 revolutions per minute The "Eighteen motor is of 4 1-16-inch bore by 5 1-8-inch stroke, developing 18 brake horse power at 650 revolutions per minute The wheel base of the "Thirty" is 123½ inches, except in the case of the runabout, in which it is 108 inches The "Eighteen" standard wheel base is 112 inches and that of the runabout 102 inches.

The Packard Motor Car Company's exhibit of motor trucks during the second week of the show is a comprehensive display of commercial vehicles of different types. It occupies nearly 5000 square feet of floor space in the central arena of the garden

The exhibit consists of five "three-tonners" and three "Thirties." The latter are shown, respectively, as a police patrol, a fire squad and chemical wagon and a light delivery. These are comparatively new fields for the Packard "Thirty," but in each one the introduction gives promise of great success. The Packard "Thirty," by reason of its high efficiency, is particularly well adapted to patrol, fire, ambulance and other municipal and public service.

One reason that the Packard "Thirty" as a delivery wagon is brought to the public attention is because of the excellent opportunity there is to rebuild used Packard cars into delivery wagons and thus obtain high-class commercial cars at a moderate cost Several large users of commercial vehicles have done this.

The patrol wagon exhibited is practically the same as the Packard patrols which have entirely replaced horses in the Detroit patrol service and the fire wagon is a duplicate of one recently delivered to the fire department of Indianapolis.

The three-ton trucks displayed do not begin to cover the wide range of body designs whereby this truck is made adaptable to many lines of business and individual needs he summer of 1903 Oldfield aban- the "999" for the Bullet No. 2. Winton built for him. This was r which Oldfield brought to Los when he came here the first the fall of 1903 and on the tural Park track smashed the record putting it down to 54 4-5s.

A few months later Barney drove the "Bullett" against William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., at the wheel of a foreign car which cost him $20,000, for the world's straightaway championship over the Florida beach course. Oldfield defeated Vanderbilt with ease and the young millionaire was never a competitor in a race after that. Barney also had a smaller Winton racer known as the "Bullet No. 3" which he used in smaller class races.

PEERLESS ONE.

In the summer of 1904 Oldfield's services were in great demand by manufacturers, for he was the holder of all good records and the machines he abandoned never showed the same speed he got out of them. The Peerless Motor Car Company employed Barney and built for him the famous Peerless Green Dragon. This car proved a most wonderful racing machine. With comparatively small horse power and extremely lightweight, the Green Dragon developed great speed and Oldfield soon broke all his old records with the famous car. It was at Fresno in the winter of 1904 that Barney got all world's records from fifteen to fifty miles and two weeks later at Agricultural Park he broke every record from one to fourteen miles. Barney says Charley Burman's great mechanical knowledge resulted in keeping the Green Dragon keyed up to record-breaking pitch.

BOOSTS BURMAN.

Charles Burman raced with Oldfield several years and was with Barney when most of the world records were smashed. He paced Oldfield when the fifty-mile mark was beaten and tramped around the track at Fresno filling the holes and helping the Peerless car to ride the many bumps. The world record was smashed, thanks to what Charles was willing to perform.

His allegiance to the Peerless factory kept Burman at it unceasingly and he traveled with Barney, helping out in the record-breaking stunts which proved such a hit. Oldfield was ready to smash world records and always hit the mark squarely. He was there with bells every time Burman had anything to do with the meet.

For three years the Green Dragon lived; far longer than most racing cars with half the usage it received. But many attribute the long life of the "Dragon" to Oldfield's careful nursing.

Then Barney felt the need of a six-cylinder car of great power, so in 1907 he took on the Stearns "Big Ben," later selling it to Ed Maier, who now has the car in use in Los Angeles and it is his favorite for a hurry-up trip out to his ranch.

Oldfield made a ten strike from a publicity viewpoint when he purchased a six-cylinder National engine, built a low chassis and painted the bonnet on either side as an American flag, naming the speed car "Old Glory." A month later he was notified that he was violating the United States laws by using the flag and name, and with the importation of the 120 Benz he turned the National over to Johnny Aiken and the factory then took up racing and followed it successfully. The 120 Benz was the big road racing car Oldfield used at Ascot Park the latter part of 1909 and surprised the automobile experts by breaking the world's track records with it. The construction and balance of the car was thought by the experts to preclude the possibility of using it on a circular track. Probably it was Oldfield's skill that made the feat possible. The 120 Benz was turned over to Bruce-Brown by Oldfield and it captured the Grand Prize road race at Savannah last November.

When Barney imported the "Blitzen" Benz from Germany and broke the world's speed record by traveling 142 miles an hour on the Florida beach, no one believed he would dare use such a high-powered car on a circular track, but Barney not only has used the car on all sorts of mile tracks, but holds the record for a mile in 1:04 on a half-mile track. Oldfield seems to be able to do things on mile dirt tracks with any sort of cars. That is why he draws the crowds and is practically in a class by himself as a track driver.

Looks Good.

STODDARD HAS FINE EXHIBIT.

SALESROOMS ATTRACT MANY WHO STUDY NEW CAR LINES.

Baker Electrics Are Proving a Sensation and New Batteries Mean Much to Men Who Are Handling the Swell Machines—Full Display of Late Model Cars Good.

The display of 1911 models of Stoddard Dayton and Baker Electric cars, which is being held by the Stoddard Dayton Motor Company in their handsome salesroom, is proving a big success. Hundreds of visitors have inspected the high-class line of cars and throughout the afternoons there has been a procession of women looking at the new shaft drive Baker electrics.

This is the first full display of 1911 Stoddards that has been made. Here the enthusiast can see ten different models of various finish. There are natty roadsters, seven and five passenger touring cars, with and without the fore-door, torpedos and one fore-door limousine. This is the first fore-door limousine the Stoddard Company has received, and it is in every detail one of the richest appearing cars on the market.

The interior is upholstered in gray whipcord and there are seats on the inside for five, with the two seats in front. These front seats are also enclosed with a full-length door, making a car of striking and very up-to-date design. Pictures of the foreign shows received here show all the limousines with fore-doors.

In the inclosed type the Baker coupes are more than holding their own. Eight different Bakers are on display, and the person who does not like the blue broadcloth finish can have whipcord or a variety of other finish.

Manager Flint reports a big holiday business in Bakers. Among the late deliveries for Christmas presents were coupes to the following: Mrs. Robert Marsh of Westchester place, Mrs. J. A. Forthmann of West Eighteenth street, Mrs. Ora Monnette of Wilshire boulevard, Capt. Smith of Hollywood, J. M. Carpenter of West Thirty-first street, and a Victoria to B. H. Holmes of Redlands. Four carloads of Bakers have been received in the past two weeks. The Bakers can be had this season for either the Exide or the Edison batteries.

Among the new cars being shown for the first time in the Stoddard line is the 30-35 fore-door touring car. This machine is finished in maroon, and is stylish and in keeping with the other Stoddard models.

OVER LONE STAR STATE ROADS.

Mitchell Car Makes Long Run and Salesman Covers Much Territory on His Trial Trip.

One of the most notable business trips ever made in a motor car has just been completed by S. Halff of 1154 Magnolia avenue, Los Angeles. Halff has been trying out the possibilities of the automobile as an aid to a traveling salesman in covering wide stretches of territory. His recent trip has convinced him that not half enough has been claimed for the motor vehicle in this particular field of use.

Halff represents a firm with branch offices all over the West. It was for the purpose of testing the business value of a car over his territory that he covered all of southern Texas in a Mitchell "Thirty" touring car.

With Halff on his trial trip was Benjamin Straus, president of the Straus-Bodenheimer Company of Houston, Tex. Halff states that they covered a total of 3500 miles, a portion being over roads rarely if ever traveled by automobiles. Halff said that this was one of the most important points he wanted to determine, whether or not a car would cover the whole territory without too much attention from the business man driving it. This was an exceptionally good trip, the distance being made without any repairs to the machinery.

Not only was the territory covered without mishap or delays, but much quicker time was made than could possibly have been done by rail. Halff states that he was enabled to visit small towns and crossroads stores that a salesman covering the territory by rail would never have been able to visit. The peculiar part of it was that some of the biggest orders taken on the whole trip came from these crossroads stores.

Some of the worst roads in the country were traveled on portions of the trip. The going was particularly bad around Luling, where the sand was nearly hub-deep for miles.

The driver of the Mitchell says that this trip was so extended and that the car was so thoroughly tried out by him that there is absolutely no question but what traveling salesmen must in the near future come to the general use of automobiles, especially as he found that it greatly increases sales. This trip covered practically every town in southern Texas. The party was out about a month.

Good Enough.

FIAT SMASHES MANY RECORDS.

FIFTY MILE MARK MADE ON THE MOTORDROME IS FAMOUS.

Ralph De Palma and Caley Bragg Turn Good Stunts and Finish the Year With a Remarkable Average for the Italian Racer Which Is to Appear Again on the Board Course.

Records of speedway racing in this country for 1910, compiled by C. G. Sinsabaugh, conclusively show the endurance of the Fiat in these events. Fiat cars started in eighteen different races run on the Los Angeles, Atlanta and Indianapolis specially built motor car race tracks. Practically half of these races, twenty-one to be exact, resulted in victories for the Italian machine. Of the other races: In ten the Fiat was second; in five it was third, and in seven it failed to place.

Fiat drivers won these victories in races on all three of the big motordromes. Ralph De Palma and Caley Bragg, two of the racing pilots, were the only prominent drivers of the country who competed at all three tracks with the sole exception of Harroun, the Marmon driver. De Palma an dthe Cincinnati youngster raced against all comers, and in one instance, Bragg defeated a famous driver and his 200-horse-power racer with a 90-horse-power stock chassis.

Altogether there were fifty-four different makes of imported and American cars that competed in races on the three motordrome tracks. Only two of the other makes won as many events as the Fiat, the Marmon having twenty-three victories in eighty-three races and the National twenty-three victories in 121 races.

Not only did the Fiat make the best showing for the year in the proportion of victories to starts, but the greatest average speed for the year, in races of fifty miles and upwards. This average was 79 11-100 miles an hour, made by De Palma with the Fiat "Cyclone" on April 13, when he won the fifty miles free-for-all on the Motordrome here in 27m. 55 52-100s. A few makes of cars that started in a few selected events had a good proportion of victories to starts.

DARK PITCHER FANS NINETEEN.

Heaver Williams of Giants Blanks Doyle Team.

llows But One Man to Reach the Third Station.

Game Free from Errors Owing to Easy Chances.

Giants, 7; Doyles, 0.

Big, long-legged Williams, pitcher for he colored Giants team broke all Coast ecords, and certainly all out of big eague ball when he fanned nineteen atsmen in the game played with the Doyle club at the Vernon grounds yesterday afternoon.

This is something to be proud of in a way for three of the Doyle players are eal professionals, two of them, in Tennant and Burrell, being of the Coast League, and Reiger being a big eaguer. Only three hits were made off him and Tennant got two of these, but part of the good work was blurred by five bases on balls given by Williams. None of these were fatal for the Doyles could not make a run.

But one of them got as far as third base and this was Tennant, in the seventh inning, who reached there on singles by himself and Pitman and Pitman's force out at second base. In the second and third innings Williams struck the side out, and in the fifth he fanned the first man to bat, walked the next one and then struck out the next two. His catcher, Johnson, had sixteen put-outs and all of these were made off strike-outs, the other three men that Williams fanned being thrown out at first base by Johnson.

Williams did not seem to have much at that, but it is always these "have nothing" beavers that do the business. He shot the most of them right over the plate, but he varied his speed with a floater and flung many high balls which ball players generally like, but could not use yesterday.

The Doyles used Pitcher Miller, who was with the Covina team last year, and the Giants also used him for no less than eleven swats of different varieties. He walked four men and soaked one with the ball, but the blacks hammered him for three doubles and a triple at the psychological moments and found the gave a very easy one.

The first scoring was done in the sixth, when Moore hit a triple to center and scored on Johnson's sacrifice fly. A pass, two doubles and a single made three more runs in the seventh, and a single, steal and a double made another in the eighth. A single, double steal, a hit by pitcher and a long fly scored two more in the ninth. Several of McClelland's assists to first base were the good fielding stunts of the game, but there was nothing spectacular about the contest for the Doyles could not hurt Williams, and the hits the blacks made were generally clean ones.

A fair-sized crowd of sports saw the contest, and the game was well worth seeing, owing to the strike-out pitching of Williams. A double-header will be played this afternoon for one admission, play beginning at 1:30 o'clock.

CUBS GET WILLIS.

REDS ARE OUTLUCKED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Pitcher "Vic" Willis of the St. Louis Nationals, has been awarded to the Chicago Nationals. Word was received from President Lynch of the National League yesterday that the Chicago club had won Willis away from Cincinnati by lot.

Manager Griffith of the Cincinnati baseball club refused to waive claim to the veteran pitcher when the St. Louis club sought to dispose of his services to Baltimore. Knowing that Manager Chance thought well of Willis, President Murphy of the Chicago Nationals also interposed a claim for him. That made it necessary to draw lots, and the luck of the draw was with Chicago. The pitcher was obtained by Chicago by waiver of $2500.

RULES COMMITTEE TO MEET.

Hall of Dartmouth Is in Favor of Giving the Revised Game Another Trial—Suggests Few Changes.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—E. C. Hall, secretary of the Inter-collegiate Association Committee on Football Rules, has sent letters to the other thirteen members asking them to select the most convenient time for the annual meeting which will be held in this city the last week in January or the early part of February. Mr. Hall, Dartmouth's representative in the committee, is in favor of giving the new rules another season's trial practically without change. He thinks this will be the sentiment of the committee as a whole.

"The new rules worked better than I thought they would," said Mr. Hall, "and I think should go along for another year. I should like to see the plan adopted of five downs and fifteen yards to gain, the idea being to give more scope and strategy to the attack. With five downs a team trying strategical play and failing would not be afraid to try again."

CONTINENTAL TOURERS.

Reaches This City After Drive Over Desert—New York-Los Angeles Route Is Mapped.

The Ohio transcontinental car reached this city yesterday with H. [illegible] Masson on the path- came through from Phoenix over the same course followed by the Los Angeles-Phoenix racers. The desert roads are rougher than ever.

This auto was started on the hard tour for the purpose of choosing a short route to the Pacific Coast. The machine has crossed the hills and valleys on its 4000-mile tour and is here with men who have braved the elements on a trip that is tough at this season of the year.

An official route from New York to Los Angeles has been mapped out for the Automobile Association of America. The course is the shortest that can be taken from ocean to ocean. It covers a district where there are many good roads but where much road improvement must be done.

Through the towns passed by the Ohio, officials greeted the transcontinentalists warmly and sent them on their way with a promise that the good roads sentiment will be boosted. The proposition of a highway from New York to Los Angeles is nearer than ever.

WEBSTER HAS EVEN CHANCE.

YOUNG RIVERS LOWERED FROM POSITION AS FAVORITE.

Featherweights Are Working Hard to Get Into Shape for Mill That Promises to Be Hummer. Morie Bloom Is Developing Knockout Wallop for Roman.

After holding the enviable position as favorite for one day over Danny Webster, Young Rivers yesterday was regarded as having an even break with Danny. The backers of Webster were obliged to give dollar for dollar in order to get down any money on their favorite, and their only regret was that they did not get in while Rivers's stock was at the highest point. It is not likely that Rivers again will be installed as favorite over his Webster.

The match between these boys, who are scheduled to go fifteen rounds at Vernon, Saturday afternoon, is creating more interest than has any mill pulled off here for some time. Rivers had been fighting shy of Danny on the ground that he had not had sufficient experience to tackle the clever miller. But, since disposing of Cappelle so easily, he has convinced himself that he is now prepared to administer a package of sleep tablets to his rival. The battle promises to be full of thrills.

Danny is training at Eastside and yesterday he went six rounds with the mitts, taking on Frankie Harris for three rounds and Morie Bloom for the other sessions. Webster appears to be in shape and, with the weight question an easy one for him, he feels confident of going into the ring in fine trim. He bases his hopes of victory on his experience, shiftiness and ability to give a punch that will have a telling effect.

Rivers yesterday put in a busy day at Doyle's. He boxed five rounds in the afternoon. He is supremely confident of gaining the victory over Webster.

ROMAN HAS IMPROVED.

The bout between Bloom and Roman is exciting almost as much discussion as the main event. Bloom has improved so much since he last appeared at the Pacific Athletic Club that many expect to see him get the decision over Roman on account of his cleverness, but Bloom will not be content with this result. He said yesterday that he will go after Roman all through the contest and try for a knockout, and, as Roman is known to be a game boy and always is ready to stand toe to toe and exchange blows, there probably will be lots of action while the bout lasts. The boys will make 142 at 10 o'clock of the day of the contest.

Harris and Sullivan also promise to give a good account of themselves during their ten-round bout. Sullivan's style is well known, and Harris declares that he will make good this time or retire from the limelight. He also will adopt different tactics and intends to keep right after Sullivan during the time the contest lasts.

PAPKE WAS ILL.

UNHOLZ EXPLAINS DEFEAT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—That Billy Papke was suffering from yellow jaundice on the day when he lost on a foul to Dave Smith in Australia, is the information brought here yesterday by Rudolph ("Boer") Unholz, who arrived on the steamer Aorangi, after two years spent in the Antipodes.

Unholz left shortly before the match took place. Papke already had to obtain a postponement and was still sick a few days before the fight.

"He must have been pretty bad to have lost to Dave Smith," said Unholz. "The latter is a young fellow and looks to have a good future, but he has not been long in the game."

FOOTBALL IS ROTTEN LIMB.

SHOULD BE CUT FROM TREE OF SPORTS, SAYS PHYSICIAN.

Dr. Clurman Asserts That Gridiron Pastime Has No Advantages to Offset Its Grewsome Death List. Classifies Game as Prize Fight Multiplied by Eleven.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—In review of the football season of 1910, prepared for a New York medical society, Dr. M. J. Clurman of this city, declares that "the tree of college athletics would be greatly benefited by the lopping off of one distorted and unhealthy branch, football."

He finds that despite the much vaunted new rules, there were nineteen deaths and 400 injuries during the last year, while, "almost every man who played is physically weaker for the severe stress of the game."

Dr. Clurman advocates the adoption of sports which have less of violent exercise in them for a few picked men, but abundant exercise for all students of a college or university. He continues:

"Since 1905, there have been 11 deaths from football and 900 serious injuries. What possible arguments could be advanced in favor of football to offset these grewsome figures?

"After all, the affection for football is exactly the same as that which the ancients had for the gladiatorial contests and which the Spaniards have for the bull fight. A football game is mostly a prize-fight multiplied by eleven.

"There is tremendous fatigue connected with the playing of the game and severe physical stress develops various forms of heart disease. After the season is over, the hearts of the players, I find, having no longer such a severe stress upon them, undergo eration. While this criticism might be advanced against several other sports, it pre-eminently applies to football."

PASADENA MARKSMEN AT TOP.

Rifle Team Is Tied With Two Competitors for First Place in Big Shoot.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 7.—The second week of shooting in the western division of the National Rifle Association interclub indoor rifle league leaves St. Paul, Butte and Pasadena standing at the head of the list of twelve clubs, with two matches and none lost. The score of the week's match was reported to division headquarters in Minneapolis as follows:

St. Paul, 963, and Dickinson, N. D., 952.
Butte, 952, and Tacoma, 893.
Seattle, 922, and Los Angeles, 773.
Pasadena, 926, and Minneapolis, 914.
Cleveland, 881, and Adrian, Mich., 835.
Pasadena, 906, and Milwaukee, 890.
Los Angeles [illegible] and Santa Ana, —.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

Leon T. Shettler and Don Lee are the record-breaking kids. Don Lee is far in the lead and Shettler is a bad second.

"Wild Bill" Ruess also has the record-breaking fever. He wants the Los Angeles-Santa Barbara mark.

E. Roger Stearns is an outlaw. He was afraid to go to the Oldfield meet yesterday, but will be there this afternoon.

Barney Oldfield broke his record yesterday and is after a world mark today. Lookout for thrills.

J. Aleck Sloan is one of the best announcers that ever grasped a megaphone.

Automobiles may race aeroplanes in the future, but at present Oldfield can produce all the thrills necessary.

H. O. Harrison is making the longest visit of the year. He is giving the Los Angeles branch its real boost.

Charles Burman is not an outlaw. He is ready for a trip East with Mrs. Burman.

If you want to break road records take a Cadillac with "Bill" Bramlette and George Adair abroad. It's a hundred chances to one you will win.

The news of the accident to Masson and of his narrow escape was given to the crowd at Ascot by Announcer Sloan, one of Oldfield's managers. He is a jolly good fellow.

Ralph Hamlin is doing a big business. Following his success at the auto show he is making many deliveries.

Earle C. Anthony is glad the show is over. He worked hard and his salesmen made records fast.

The show is closed. P. H. Greer is taking his first rest today after two weeks of hard labor.

Why is an outlaw? Ask Eddie Maier, referee for the outlaw meet at Ascot Park.

W. A. Shafer has a long list of sales to show for his work at the auto show. He is paying bills fast and every account is ready for settlement.

The Ohio is here after one of the fiercest runs across the continent.

The Fiesta show was a great success. If you don't believe it, ask Charley Cotton, Beau Brummel of the Show Committee and incidentally manager for the Los Angeles Motor Car Company.

Woods R. Woolwine finished the auto show with a splendid report. His health is back and the Cartercar man looks younger than ever.

D. B. Rose sold so many Ohio electrics at the show that he is obliged to wait for electric cars.

W. H. Halliwell is not quite ready to join the Benedicts. He is a favorite just the same.

P. A. Renton has decided to give a dinner to some of his friends to celebrate his auto show sales record.

Warner Autometer Halliwell gave a dinner at Levy's Thursday night to celebrate his victory at the show.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Ollalio Rubio, who has been elected captain of the Los Angeles High School track team, is in fine trim. Rubio took first place in the 50 and 220-yard dashes in the interscholastic meet held at the University of Southern California, last year.

Ben Ward, formerly of Polytechnic High, has enrolled at Los Angeles High School. He won the high hurdle and high jumping events in the invitation interscholastic meet held at Stanford, last season.

Los Angeles High is still without a baseball coach. Joe Chapman and Mr. Osborne have been named as possible candidates for the position.

Prospects of a winning track team at Los Angeles High are bright. Most of last year's material will be available this season.

"Micky" McClure, all-around athlete at Los Angeles' High, intends to enter Stanford next fall.

Polytechnic High hopes to be represented on the cinder-path and field, this season. The faculty has partly removed the ban.

Los Angeles High will have a swimming team this year. Candidates for a representative team are being tried out at the Y.M.C.A. plunge.

The Y.M.C.A. Triangle department is to have a basketball team this season. Tryouts for positions are being held.

Los Angeles High School track candidates are without a practice field this season. Bovard Field was selected as the place, but the U.S.C. athletic management have asked too high a price for the use of the field, the Los Angeles boys assert.

An indoor athletic contest is to be held at the Y.M.C.A. this month. It will be limited to members. The winners will receive prizes.

Cross-country runs are becoming a part of athletics at the Y.M.C.A. Mountain climbs are also occasionally conducted.

A meeting is to be held at the Y.M.C.A. Wednesday, for the purpose of arranging a series of indoor baseball games between Long Beach and the Y.M.C.A. representatives, to decide the championship of Southern California.

Long Beach has won the majority of games in its territory, while the Y.M.C.A. team has an excellent record. Directors Reynolds and Horning, of the local organization, expect to fix a time for a series of three or five games, to settle the argument.

More Strength and More Power When You Buy a Mitchell

Two things you must have in Southern California are abundant strength and power.

Nearly nine hundred Mitchell cars are in use in Southern California, because the Mitchell excels all other medium priced cars in these two points.

This is the reason why Mitchell cars have been selected in nearly every case where long, hard, exacting service has been required.

In a Mitchell you get a quiet, smooth, comfortable riding and unequaled Mitchell service.

Whatever you expect in a medium-priced car, the Mitchell will go beyond your ideas.

Don't take a chance on a car with less than Mitchell reputation. Let us show you.

Edgar Smith with his little Demoiselle succeeded in flying some 250 feet a short distance above the ground. This was accomplished in the face of a pretty stiff breeze, and it was a remarkable performance, considering the fact that he could pick his machine up, engine and all, and run about with it.

Martin was the only one to qualify. He flew around the course on three different days, qualifying each day. On one occasion he was carried behind the grandstand, and he made a cross-country flight of considerable duration, finally returning to the course, alighting before the grandstand. In doing so, however, he swung around into the fence and damaged his machine.

The meet was a grand success from the standpoint of flying, but it was marred by the Hoxsey fatality. The attendance was not more than half of what it was last year. The people did not seem fully to appreciate the magnificent spectacle which the committee, headed by W. M. Garland, had prepared for them at great expense and risk to themselves. They gave their time and money, and the result was a magnificent display, the like of which Los Angeles will probably never again see. The public spirit displayed by these gentlemen is deserving of great commendation. At a large financial loss to themselves, they pulled off a meet that advertised Los Angeles to the ends of the earth.

Some Good Ones.

DIAMOND STARS RARE ARTICLES.

BUT TWO MARVELS EVERY FIVE YEARS, SAYS EXPERT.

Walter Johnson, the Boy Wonder Pitcher from Southern California, and Ty Cobb Are Given the Honors. Ed. Walsh's Place Above Mathewson's in the Famed List.

A baseball marvel appears every five years, according to some followers of the game. One of them goes still further and says there are two extraordinary players developed during this space of time, and that one of them always is a pitcher. As this man is connected with one of the National League clubs, and does not care to have his name divulged, we will call him Mr. Short.

"My point is easily taken, and to my way of thinking, easily proved," said Mr. Short. "These last five years both men have gone to and been developed in the American League. One of them is Walter Johnson of Washington, that marvelous pitcher and perhaps the greatest of this and former years. The other player is Ty Cobb of Detroit.

"The half decade from 1900 to 190 brought out Pitcher Ed Walsh of the White Sox, and Second Baseman John Evers of the Cubs. I would like to include Pitchers Mathewson of the Giants, and Joss of the Naps, in the list, but really believe that Ed Walsh tops above either. You see he hasn't the club behind him that the other two fellows have. It takes a lot of pitching to win a game for the Sox, especially this past year.

"To return to Johnson. He never was heard of until Joe Cantilon got him at Washington only a couple of years ago. Straight from the deserts of Idaho he lugged Walter, and Johnson has been a star ever since. He has not got what you could call a marvelous team behind him, but his winning average is close to .500 and he has worked in a big lot of games, too.

Cobb, Speaker, Lajoie and the other magnificent batters of the American League find him a hard proposition to face. Pat Dougherty of the Sox, who is really a pretty fine slugger, cannot do anything but whiff when he gets up against Johnson.

"Lots of the time he doesn't need many curves. His straight, fast ball is enough to baffle most of the batters. The last series with the Sox in Washington, when he first went against them, I don't think he threw fifteen curve balls the whole game. But when he has to he can put on every kind of a dress that a ball can stand.

"There is no need telling of the merits of Ty Cobb. He has figured in countless column baseball stories. It's a cold day when some kind of a layout can't be woven around Tyrus."

During the discussion several took exceptions to Short's remarks. They claimed that he was unfair. That if he counted in only two players every five years that would make about fourteen players of that caliber since the National League opened.

"That's not the point," continued Short. "I wanted to figure in the real, top-notch, amazing stars. They don't come any faster than that. Before Walsh and Evers, in that generation from 1895 to 1900, I would include Lajoie of Cleveland, and Wagner of Pittsburgh. Others whom I place in the list are Comiskey, Clarkson, Kelly, Jennings, Anson and Radbourne.

"I don't mean this as any knock against the others players. It's the same as classifying the great actors or the great Presidents. I don't think Sir Henry Irving would have justice done him if you compared another tragic actor of good ability to him. Sir Henry was a star of the first magnitude, just as Walter Johnson and Evers are in their profession."

Looks Shady.

JUDGES AT JUAREZ TRACK ARE CONVENIENTLY BLIND.

JUAREZ (Mex.) Jan. 5.—Guttenberg, in its palmiest days, never witnessed such a display of crookedness as is witnessed daily at the race track here. Unmindful of the fact that the toleration of just such practices as these killed the racing game at every important center in the United States, and drove these men who are fostering the game across the border, they are clearly acting upon the hypothesis that their twenty years' concession from the Mexican government is a concession to rob the public with absolute impunity, and notwithstanding the fact that the public, and the public alone, is what supports the game, their motto plainly is "The public be d——d." If the public chooses to stand for it, well and good.

The Juarez "raw deals" this season have been numerous. Here are a few samples of what we had handed to us recently:

On December 23 the horse Noon, carrying 104 pounds, started in a cheap field and was beaten ten lengths in a mile run in 1:40 1-5. The odds quoted showed a steady lengthening. On December 26 this same horse, carrying 100 pounds, getting off absolutely last and meeting with much interference, was beaten one-half length in a mile run in 1:39 3-5. On this day every one that bets on horses in Chicago knows that, for some mysterious reason, every one was betting on this horse.

On December 29 this same horse started again with a cheap field, was quoted at 4 to 5 in the betting (his odds had been 15 to 1 the previous start) and was beaten seven lengths in a race in which the time for the mile is given as 1:40. To square such running as this it is only necessary for the trainer to say that the horse went lame or broke down. No investigation.

Another case is the horse Clint Tucker. This horse can run six furlongs on the Juarez track in 1:13 with, say 110 pounds, easily. On December 23 he won a six furlongs race in 1:13 3-5, carrying 111 pounds, "in a canter" as the dope sheet gives it. On this occasion his odds opened at 5 to 1, and closed at 7 to 2. On December 26 this same horse, carrying 112 pounds and quoted at 1 to 2 in the betting, was beaten four lengths by a lot of old cows. To make it look reasonable, however, the association obligingly hung out the time of the race as 1:13.

The race was won by Gene Wood, who never ran a three-fourths' mile race in his life in 1:13 and probably never will. On December 29 Gene started again and with one pound more weight was beaten eight lengths in 1:13 3-5, and the strange thing about it is that the bookmakers who had seen him win in 1:13 (?) only three days before laid 9 to 1 against him. But getting back to Clint Tucker, on December 30 Clint again faced the barrier and with odds of 13 to 1 against him beat a good field of horses in a seven-eighths' mile race run in 1:25 1-5, and in which the fractional time for the three-fourths is given as 1:12 1-5. The instances of crookedness cited are only samples of what is going on at this track every day.

HAP HOGAN IS OPTIMISTIC.

Thinks Vernon Will Finish Within the Money.

Has Best Nucleus in League for Strong Team.

Hen Berry Has Many Irons in the Fire.

Hap Hogan of the Vernon team has the idea that he will have one of the best ball teams in the league next season and that the fans who saw him finish out of the money last year will see him fighting for first place. Hap figures that he has the best lot of men left over from last year of any manager in the league and, with such a nucleus, he can build up a very strong team.

He will have Hitt, Willett, Schafer, Brackenridge, Carson and Raleigh in the pitching department, and this bunch of heavers looks better than the bunch of any other team. He is to send contracts to the two Brashears, Burrell, Lindsay, Carlisle, Ross, Coy and Catcher Brown. In the way of new men he says he has bought Pitcher Stewart from San Francisco, Infielder McDonald from the Chicago White Sox, Infielder Reams, who played with Sacramento last year; Pitcher Cummings of the Cactus League, and Outfielder Teco of the Oxnard team.

Cummings is in doubt about which team he belongs to, and there is also a question about the status of Teco. This busher has been sought by a number of big league teams and word comes from Oxnard that he has signed with Detroit, but Hogan declares that Teco accepted the Vernon terms and that his name has been sent to the National Commission and will be bulletined this week. Hogan has also drafted Outfielder Stinson from the San Antonio (Tex.) team.

BERRY'S PLANS.

Henry Berry of the Los Angeles team has not given out much about his team up to this time. He says that a number of deals he has on hand are not finished yet. He has drafted Third Baseman Metzgar from the Hartford team to take the place of Hallinan, and will get a man from Pittsburgh in exchange for Nagle, and this is probably Outfielder Hyatt, on whom Pittsburgh has asked waivers. He has traded Waring with Cleveland for Catcher Abbott, and has signed Outfielder Teck of the San Pedro team and Pitcher Jim Agnew of the Seattle team. Orendorff and Murphy are to go, and probably Delmas, and it is believed that Berry is trying to get Pitcher Joe Seaton from Seattle, but this is almost impossible, as a number of other teams are after him.

Berry must do something about his outfield. Murphy is to go, and Bernard will not be able to play regularly until May, according to reports, for he is under contract with some institution to do osteopathy work until that time.

Catcher Hasty of the Vernon team is to be sent to the Northwest League under an optional agreement, and Pitcher Hensling will probably go there also. Hogan does not consider them strong enough for the Coast League, and it may be that other Vernon players will be farmed out to class B leagues.

Berry of the Los Angeles team says he is not figuring on trading Delmas for McArdle of the San Francisco team, for he does not think he would make anything by such a deal.

The latest report is that the Boston Americans are not to train at Long Beach, but at Redondo, which is believed to be a better place in every way for a ball team. The Los Angeles team is scheduled to play Boston here for a week beginning March 2. The Bostons are to play Vernon the next two weeks, and the Angels are to have the final week.

CUBS TO CHANGE.

OLD MACHINE WORN OUT.

According to the latest reports, the infield of the Chicago Cubs is to be completely shifted for 1911, and the fans won't recognize their old pals in new positions. While Chance may start on first, he is to train Vic. Saier, touted as a wonder, for the initial station job. If Evers has a bad ankle, he may not play at all, or he may go to short. In this event Tinker can have his wish and play third. Then there is Cooney, who may be chucked right into the battle, while Ingerton, the new third baseman, must be given at least a look in.

These, then, are the possible combinations of the Cubs for 1911: Chance, 1b.; Zimmerman, 2b.; Cooney, s.s.; Tinker, 3b.; Saier, 1b.; Evers, 2b.; Cooney, s.s.; Steinfeldt, 3b.; (in case Tinker is traded, as has been hinted by Charlie Murphy.) Saier, 1b.; Zimmerman, 2b.; Cooney, s.s.; Ingerton, 3b. And so on through a dozen changes that are possible. Only one thing seems sure—that the old machine, Chance, Evers, Tinker and Steinfeldt will never line up again in the order that won so many flags.

WANT MORE MONEY.

PHILLIES HAVE HOLD-OUTS.

Horace Fogel, president of the Phillies, again has put his foot in the molasses barrel, and as a result ten of his players are holding out on their contracts because they want more money. At times Horace is inclined to tell of the fabulous salaries he will pay some of his players who have signed up. These tales have come to the ears of the men who have not signed, and the figures called for in their contracts are much smaller than they think they are worth, according to the figures Horace says he is paying other men.

Now the "hold-outs" want to be shown before they affix their signatures to contracts. Among the "hold-outs" is Sherwood Magee, who led the National League last year in batting. The others who have not signed contracts are Pat Moran, Otto Knabe, Hans Lobert, Earl Moore, Bob Ewing, Eddie Stack, Rowan, who was secured in the Cincinnati trade, Lederus and Humphries.

Discovered Beckley.

William Hepburn Russell, the new president of the Boston Nationals, was a ball player in his boyhood. He pitched and played second base as an amateur for nine years. He was also instrumental in giving the national game one of its best players of a decade. Jake Beckley is the man who [illegible] his entrance to professional ball [illegible] Mr. Russell. Beckley carried pa[illegible] in Hannibal, Mo., for the paper [illegible] which Russell worked, and Russell, interested in an amateur ball team in the city, induced Beckley to try his hand with the team. Beckley did so and made good with a rush, going from the Hannibal nine to the St. Louis [illegible] when St. Louis had

FREDDIE WELSH CONFIDENT.

Little British Fighter, Who Holds English Championship, Believes He Can Defeat Champion Wolgast.

Freddy Welsh, the lightweight champion of England, who recently defeated Jem Driscoll, is planning another visit to the United States. Welsh has beaten all the men in his class at home and sighs for new worlds to conquer.

"I have figured out pretty closely just what my chances of getting hold of the world's championship are," said Welsh in an interview. "I honestly believe that they are better than those of any other fighter of class who has invaded America for a long time. You see, I have a big advantage in having fought my way up in America. I made a greater reputation there than I ever did before I left home. It takes a fellow some time to get onto the Yankee tricks, their different ways of handling fights, I mean, as regards the promoters, and, of course, the different styles of boxing in vogue among their men.

"I honestly believe that Wolgast would be easier for me to whip than Driscoll was, and everybody knows that Jem didn't give me much trouble. He has a puzzling way of covering up that fools a good many of his opponents, but I think I can get through the mystery of his defense. He is rough, strong and ready to mix at all times. Such was the case with a good many men I fought, but my record shows that I held my own on all occasions.

"If I can't get Wolgast right away, I won't refuse anything else in the line of matches that may turn up, provided that the purse is reasonable and the weight conditions right; but I don't intend to take on a bunch of these big fellows who call themselves lightweights and refuse to make anywhere near the proper weight. In England I have fought at 135 pounds, because that is the new limit laid down by our sporting authorities for the class; but I can make the American limit of 133 pounds as well, and will do so if asked to in America.

"Wolgast won't give away a single pound over 133. He won the title from Nelson at that figure, and I don't blame him for sticking to it. Moran fights well at that weight, too, but there are lots of big chaps calling themselves lightweights over there who would be hard put to get under 142 pounds ringside."

Small Beginning.

BROOM STARTED "GYM" BASEBALL.

BOXING GLOVE ACCIDENTALLY HIT WITH HANDLE.

Walter Wilmot, Old National League Pitcher, Says Gymnasium Instructor in Chicago Stumbled Over Game While Putting Class of Men Through Stunts.

Popular pastime often grows suddenly from small beginnings, and many a good game has resulted from an accident. Indoor baseball, which is strong wherever men can find a hall big enough, came into being as a result of an accident. Walter Wilmot, old National League pitcher and former manager of the Butte (Mont.) club, at present in Detroit, Mich., tells of the beginning of the indoor game.

"When I was in Chicago in the early 90s," says Wilmot, "there was a man named Hughes who gave boxing instruction and physical culture lessons to the members of the Board of Trade. He had a place near 'change, and members used to rush over there after the market closed to forget their business worries in a little exercise. This Hughes was a pretty bright sort of a chap and stood very high with the brokers.

"One day after putting a lot of corpulent business men through a course of sprouts calculated to reduce their abdomens, an old boxing glove happened to be lying on the floor. Hughes had a set of exercises in which he used old brooms or any sort of sticks that could be twisted about easily.

"A broker, in fun, picked up the old boxing glove and threw it at Hughes. He had just broken the sweeping end off his broom, so he took a swing at the boxing glove with the handle and started to run as though to a base. The brokers thought that was a lot of fun and soon had a game of 'one old cat' going with that disabled glove and the broom handle.

"Hughes saw the possibilities of the game, and next day came to the gymnasium with a large ball he made during the night. It was not a success, but he kept at it until in a couple of weeks he had a ball which closely resembles the present indoor sphere. He also got up the model for [illegible] which differed from the original [illegible]stick only slightly.

"The indoor game is all right," concluded Wilmot, "but not for the professional ball player who has bad legs. The hard boards on a gymnasium or armory floor will put a man's legs to the bad quicker than anything, providing he is weak in that respect."

Suggests New Golf Ball.

One hears a great deal about the standardization of golf balls, and there are those who think the time is ripe to return to the old guttapercha ball. This is not very probable. There is nothing so tiresome to the arms and so destructive to the modern clubs as the old ball. Willie Park, British open champion in 1887 and 1889, has this to say: "The principal topic of conversation at Sunningdale last week (where the News of the World tourney was held and which netted $ 200 to the winner, J. G. Sherlock) was the standardization of the golf ball. When one sees the first hole, 500 yards long, driven with a drive and an iron shot, and eleven years ago, in the guttapercha days, when I made the course, it took two full shots and a pitch to get on the green, it is surely time that something was done to prevent golf courses from being entirely spoiled. Here is my suggestion: Let the interior of the ball be made entirely of rubber and covered with a suitable material, no limit to size, but all balls must pass the test of not entirely sinking below the surface of the water when placed therein. I would further suggest that balls to be used by competitors should be tested in the same way by the secretaries or some other responsible person."

Vardon's Cleek Shot.

It is a pleasure to watch a professional make some of the wonderful shots that are frequently characteristic of their game. Vardon was particularly proficient at times. One of his best was a cleek shot played with a slice around a tree to the home green of the New Haven Golf Club, when he was touring this country in 1900. In a four-ball match between the late Willie Anderson and James A. Tyng and Walter J. Travis and David Hunter, at Oakland, Anderson, in playing the elbow hole, the odd eighth, drove a ball with a pull and passed around the elbow to give a clear sight and approach the green. The ball would leave the tee straight and break into a leftward roll as it fell. This he did twice. Vardon tried it, several times, but without success. Later, when Vardon and Taylor won first and second honors in our open championship, Anderson was

SENIOR GIRLS MAKE RECORD.

OCCIDENTAL BASKETBALL TEAM IS UNDEFEATED.

End Four-Year Course With Unbroken String of Victories Over All Rivals for Interclass Cup—Only Two Players Missing from Sextette Formed in Freshmen Year.

The girls' basketball team of the senior class of Occidental College have made a great record for itself during the last four years, having defeated every class team in the institution for that period of time. This team has undergone a few changes, but it includes practically the same girls that it did four years ago.

When the members of the present senior class were freshmen, the faculty of the college prohibited the girls of the institution from entering into match games with the women of the other colleges. They put the ban on intercollegiate basketball as far as the girls were concerned. However, a round robin basketball tournament between the women of the various classes was instituted.

In order to create enthusiasm for this tournament a bronze cup was offered to the team that first won the cup for three consecutive years. The class of 1911 resolved that it would win the cup. Not once has the team been defeated, and only once was it in danger of being vanquished.

During the four years there have been some changes in the line-up. Miss McCoy, Miss Chamberlin and Miss Heriot, who are on the team this year, have played four years. Miss McCoy was twice captain of the team. She has the reputation of being the best player in college for the four years of her course, but this year she was forced to share that honor with a member of the freshman class, Miss Rowena Rogers, who plays a fine, heady game. Miss Chamberlin was captain this year and Miss Heriot had the honor in her sophomore year. Of the other members of the team, Miss Crinkelaw and Miss Reiner have played three years and Miss Harvey has played two.

In playing together constantly, these girls have worked themselves into a machine that would be hard to beat. They understand each other, thoroughly, and play into each other hands. They have played a game with every team of every class in the institution each year and have not once been defeated.

The hardest game of their history was the game with the present freshman class in the tournament that just closed. After one of the closest games witnessed on the college court this year they defeated the freshmen by the score of 24-23. The playing of Miss Rogers of the freshman was responsible for the closeness of the game.

The senior girls have played their last game together. The tournament of this year is over and before the next one they all will have graduated. They have had their names engraved on the cup and will leave it in the trophy room. If they had been allowed to play with the teams of the other colleges there is little doubt that they would have made a good intercollegiate record. But they have left a reputation in the college for fine teamwork, and a record of victories that will not soon be duplicated.

SIGNS QUEER CONTRACT.

Phillippe of Pittsburgh Puts Name on Blank Paper and President Dreyfuss Fills in Salary Later.

A peculiar case of contract signing occurred yesterday in the office of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club. Charles (Deacon) Phillippe, the veteran pitcher, who just returned from a hunting trip in Indiana, called to wish President Barney Dreyfuss a happy New Year.

"How would you like to sign a contract while you're here?" asked Dreyfuss.

"One time suits me as well as another," replied the deacon.

"I wonder if you have the nerve to sign a blank contract and allow me to fill in the amount later?" asked Barney.

The deacon reached for the blank, wrote his name on the last line and handed back the contract to Dreyfuss. The club owner filled out the document, and it apparently pleased the pitcher, for he smiled when he read

B. Floorman of Vancouver plans to take two lacrosse teams to play at the Olympic games in Stockholm, Sweden, July 19 and 21, 1912. Floorman figures on the Vancouver and Westminster teams as the ones in line for the trip, and his plans propose an extended tour of Europe in addition to playing at the Olympic games. He proposes to play a couple of games in Eastern Canada and one in New York City before leaving America. In Europe he plans to play in London, Paris, Bordeaux, Hamburg, Berlin, Copenhagen, Christiania and Stockholm.

ODD FACTS ABOUT AMERICAN LEAGUERS.

The foxy Connie Mack is the quietest man.

Peppery Hughey Jennings is the noisiest individual.

Pitcher Fred Falkenberg is easily the tallest athlete.

Red Corridon of "Lajoie batting fame," is the shortest player.

Walter Johnson possesses more speed than any other pitcher in the organization.

Doc White is given credit for having the slowest ball of any of the twirlers.

Ty Cobb of the Tigers is generally regarded as the fleetest runner in the league.

Jim McGuire strenuously objects to being regarded as the slowest runner.

Eddie Collins is credited with being the best base runner, despite Ty Cobb's speed.

Terry Turner is the baldest player, now that Frank Isbell is a retired athlete.

Amos Strunk of the Athletics is the infant prodigy of the league, being sweet 19.

The Naps have it as to the fat and lean athletes. Cy Falkenberg and Addie Joss are the slats, while Cy Young and Sid Smith are the portly boys.

Now that Dusty Rhoades has passed out of the league, Bobby Wallace is the Beau Brummel when it comes to wearing the glad rags.

Joe Jackson of the Naps swings the longest and heaviest bat.

Kid Elberfeld of the Nationals uses the shortest club to get his bingles.

Art Griggs of St. Louis is universally recognized as being the strongest player as to physical ability.

George McBride of Washington is the only shortstop who handles both the long and short throw on an attempted steal with men on first and third.

George Stone of the Browns has the weakest whip. Base runners run wild on balls hit in his territory.

When Jake Stahl meets the ball on the nose he takes a healthier swat than any one, not barring Lajoie.

Jimmy Austin takes the shortest swing and leads the race in the Texas leaguers.

Russell Ford of the Highlanders is looked on as the most deceptive "spit" ball pitcher, having three distinctive breaks in his assortment.

Bobby Wallace puts the ball on the base runner better than any of the infielders.

Hal Chase is the best man at the plate when the squeeze or the hit and run-play is to be attempted.

Clyde Milan of Washington improved 50 per cent. more last year than any other man in the league.

Despite his falldown last season over his form of 1909, Dode Criss is easily the best pinch hitter.

At first aid to the distressed Pitcher Ed Walsh of Chicago has them all skinned. Walsh is always warming up to the rescue of some faltering twirler.

Frank Laporte of the Highlanders is the most easily injured.

George McBride of the Nationals is the hardest to put out of commission. He has missed one game in three years.

Catcher Billy Sullivan of Chicago is the best man on foul flies.

Germany Shafer of the Nationals is the funniest player. He's the comedian of the league.

George Stone of the Browns is the "Silent Man." Stoney has been known to speak a couple of times since entering the league.

Ed Walsh is the handsomest athlete. Some refer to him as the "Diamond Apollo."

Now that Nick Altrock is out of it the homeliest title is in dispute.

FIELD DOGS TO COMPETE.

Best Setters and Pointers in West Are Entered in Meet to Be Held by Pacific Coast Trial Club.

The best field dogs in the West are to compete in the twenty-eighth annual trials of the Pacific Coast Trial Club, to be held at Bakersfield, January 23. The number of entries that already has been received is larger than ever before and the meet promises to be above the ordinary.

Quail are reported to be unusually abundant on the trial field and training grounds. The cover and nature of the grounds at Bakersfield are such that the performances of the dogs may be viewed by the spectators without interruption.

The entry list for "all-age" nominations closed yesterday. There will be about twenty starters in this event. Entries for the members' and champion stakes will be received until the day before the meet.

The field trials are to be judged by Henry L. Betton of Alameda, J. W. Flynn of San Francisco, and John H. Schumacher of this city.

Arthur Schaefer, utility infielder of the New York National League baseball team, will coach the Waseda college baseball team, of Tokyo. He is to be with the Japs for two months, showing them a few of the secrets of the great national pastime of America. The Waseda nine is regarded as the strongest baseball team in the Orient and have shown their skill on the home diamond in recent years with the professional and college teams that have visited their country. They may come here for a series this coming summer.

Another Sensational Road Record for the Los Angeles to Bakersfield 4 Hours, 26 Minutes

A specially built racing car was reported last week to have lowered the Cadillac's former record from Los Angeles to Bakersfied from 4:38 to 4:35.

Newspaper reports did not agree on the time of this run, but we were not seeking a newspaper controversy. A far better way afforded itself of settling beyond any question which car was entitled to the record. We adopted that method and proceeded to chop nine minutes off the time of the Vanderbilt Cup racer.

And the thousands of people who saw the car finish this wonderful run in Bakersfield did not see a wreck, they saw a perfectly running car without a breakage of any kind. After refilling the oil and gasoline tanks the car was turned around and run back to Los Angeles and is running on the streets today as good as the day it left.

CLASS WILL TELL.

Luck will often play an important part in getting one record for a car, but luck will not enable a machine to perform the most remarkable record runs in the history of motoring. A machine must have the stamina and the power and the speed to be pounded over the roads as they are found at top speed for hundreds of miles.

The Cadillac which broke the Bakersfield record Friday was the same car which less than two weeks ago established a new record of 14 hours, 49 minutes, between Los Angeles and San Francisco, and then was turned about and chopped six hours and twenty-three minutes off the round-trip record.

After almost 1000 miles of the most heart-breaking punishment it would be supposed that a car would be ready for the repair shop, but Cadillacs are made of sterner stuff, and without being sent into our garage the car was run 500 miles on the city streets after the completion of the San Francisco trip.

The car was then sent to San Diego and but one day was used in preparing it for the Bakersfield run.

One vital point for the automobile buyer to consider is that the Cadillac Thirty, which now holds more Californi aroad records, regardless of horsepower or price, than all other makes combined made every one of its records on the first trial. There were no false starts or fall-downs. When the Cadillac "30" started after a record the Cadillac has never failed to get that record.

We do not believe there is another motor car in the world that can duplicate these performances. This may seem a broad statement, but not when it is considered that on its first trials the Cadillac iesta Exhibit Wins Honor and Passes into History.

No fair-minded motorist will question our right to that statement when they consider the above records which the Cadillac Thirty has established in California during the past few weeks.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

One of the most remarkable automo- e shows ever held in the West has w passed into history. The nineteen- ven exhibit of licensed automobiles Fiesta Park marked an important in the automobile industry. It was most complete showing of motor s ever made on the Pacific Coast attracted many thousands.

hen the announcement was made t the exhibit would be held for two ks many believed that a mistake been made. It was the first time how had been kept open so long. attendance, however, was a rec- -breaker and there was much to ect from a second week even though recedent was established.

n Thursday "taps" were sounded the doors were closed. It was im- sible to hold the exhibit longer as ost every car in the big tent was . This proved one of the most re- kable records of the exhibit which marked with many successes. It the hit of the week and though end came all too soon for many show was pronounced a great hit. rom the moment when the doors e opened Christmas eve, until the of the exhibit on Thursday the wds thronged the midways and kept on the machines which are proving so much value to the automobile d. The cars were there to be ax- ned carefully and the visitors made most of the time given them. o severe criticisms were made. The r market was in a healthy condi- . Many sales were recorded. The t important item of interest to the lers was the fact that the cars d good and claimed all the atten- during the last few days of the w.

he Bridel Veil Falls, the stream, the wood trees and the fern-bordered k were attractive but the cars were centerpieces of the big exhibit. thout the machines the exhibit ld not have been held. The nine- n-eleven motor cars were on display the first time and the public was en an opportunity to judge what world is to have for its own use year.

he idea that motor cars are to be d simply for pleasure was exploded this show. The use and the abuse the automobile was shown. The in- ested visitor learned what it is pos- le to do with a machine and also s taught how his business can be proved by the self-propelled motor. It was no unusual sight to see hun- eds of hard-headed business men king in the commercial exhibit. hese men knew why they had visited e show. They came to study the new eight trucks and were anxious to arn just what the motor market has offer for the new year. It was a monstration they seldom have a ance to gain.

When the annex was first lighted it ppeared to be too large for the truck splay which was the record-breaker the Pacific Coast. Before the show s a day old it was seen that the ace given to the commercial exhibit ould have been twice as large. The otor trucks came into their own in al earnest and claimed the honors hich have been due them for years.

As a result of the Fiesta Park ex- ibit the freight carriers are here to ay and a revolution, different from ny that was expected, has taken place the automobile industry. More uck agencies are to be secured here. ore stress is to be laid on the freight arrying business and more machines f the high-powered motor class and of delivery wagon type are to be sold. Then in the pleasure car class a vic- ry was gained. The car, it was oved, is not simply a "joy-riding" achine. The worth of the tourer as aid to the family in moderate cir- mstances was proven in real earnest. e cars are here to remain and those o do not rank among the million- s became purchasers.

It was interesting to follow the man wanted a new car. He learned about an automobile in an hour he had learned in all his life . This came as a result of his to know more about machines. A.A.A. PRESIDENT HOPEFUL.

New Year Prospect Is for Large Membership of Governing Body in Almost Every State.

"One hundred thousand owners of automobiles will be included in the American Automobile Association before January 1, 1912," confidently asserts Robert P. Hooper, president, "and it is my hope that we shall exceed this total by a considerable number. The national organization, with its State associations and local clubs, is a pronounced necessity in obtaining the advancement and bettering of automobile conditions generally.

"I shall admit frankly that at one time I had some doubt as to Federal aid in road building, but with the extending inter-State complexion of automobiling, it becomes more apparent and logical that governmental participation in highway progress is a certainty of the fairly immediate future.

"Of course, through our State bodies we shall contend vigorously for State aid, and that we can accomplish much in this direction has been demonstrated quite conclusively. It should always be kept in mind that the motorist is the most persistent user of the roads, and the problem of proper construction and economical maintenance is one which now comes to him without his seeking the task.

"Reports from all parts of the country indicate, with rare exception, a general increase in membership figures, with several more State associations in prospect before the next meeting of the committee."

Kirkaldy's Wit.

Andrew Kirkaldy, the well known Scotch professional, who has recently been appointed the professional at the Royal and Ancient Club at St. Andrews, is celebrated for his dry wit. Once a noble lord invited to luncheon four professionals who had played an exhibition match over a new course. Three of them retired to make their toilet, and, noticing that Kirkaldy lingered behind, his lordship said: "Come this way, Kirkaldy." "What for?" said Andy. "Oh," said his host, "you want to wash your hands, don't you?" "What?" cried Andy, "and spoil ma grip; nae fearr." At a certain club the tees for the women were ill defined, and it was decided to put in new sand boxes appropriately marked. This was told to Andy, who

SPEEDY CARD FOR PIEPAN.

Motordrome Races Look Especially Thrilling.

De Palma and Dearborn Are Matched By Hempel.

Wilcox and Others to Start Over Fast Course.

That Saturday and Sunday the meets at the Motordrome will be a real speed carnival, is now assured. The entry of Ralph De Palma, Frank Dearborn, Hal Wilcox and Charles Merz, the last two members of the famous national racing team, should give Los Angeles the greatest programme of racing seen here since the opening meet in April.

The reputation of De Palma as a driver of renown is established. After fighting all year with Oldfield for the possession of the much coveted mile dirt track record, De Palma finished the season with this mark to his credit. Driving faster than any human being had ever circled a mile dirt track, De Palma lowered Oldfield's record of 49 1-4 seconds to 48 2-5 seconds on the famous Syracuse track. Roosevelt, who was honorary referee at this meet, was the first to congratulate De Palma on his wonderful performance. Aside from the mile mark, De Palma also holds the five-mile, ten-mile, twenty-mile and twenty-five-mile records on dirt tracks and the speedway marks for five, twenty-five and fifty miles. The last three records he made at the Motordrome last April, averaging over ninety-two miles an hour for five miles and eighty miles an hour for the twenty-five and fifty-mile distance.

De Palma will drive Robertson's "90" Simplex in the free-for-all events, and will meet Frank Dearborn with his "90" Fiat, which, by the way, is De Palma's old Grand Prize car, and Hal Wilcox, who will drive his six-cylinder special National racer. These three cars, all of ninety horse-power and over, are specially constructed for racing and should assure highly sensational speed stunts and should reach a speed of 100 miles an hour in the four and ten mile events for the big cars.

The National entries will also include two forty horse-power stock cars which will compete in all the events for which they are eligible. Wilcox and Merz, who will drive the National cars here, are the only two left of the famous National racing team. Al Livingston and Kincaid were both killed this summer at the wheel of their National cars, Kincaid at Indianapolis and Livingston at Atlanta. Nothing daunted, however, by these fatalities, Wilcox and Merz are still in the game and their long list of victories prove them to be stars of the first magnitude.

The entries for the Motordrome races close tomorrow night, and Manager Hempel expects to have a large entry list of the local cars, as this will be their first opportunity for some time of measuring their prowess with the pick of the eastern racing drivers.

The Saturday and Sunday races begin with record trials by the three big stars and their specially built machines in an attempt to lower the mil record. The programme consists of four events for racing cars, two of five miles, two of ten miles, which should prove features of the meet, two free-for-all handicaps with nine entries, two short events for stock cars and a twenty-five and fifty-mile race, which will close the event each day.

Two of the Stars in the Motordrome Race Meet.

Below is Hal Wilcox, winning the Remy-Brassard trophy at the Indianapolis Speedway, and above is Ralph De Palma and his mechanician in the fast Simplex he is to drive here Saturday and Sunday.

Mule Had Been Obliging.

A Missouri darkey was endeavoring to sell a mule to a Jefferson City man, who, however was in doubt as to the animal's age.

"If," he said, "this mule is as young as you claim, why is it that he bends so at the knees?"

"Oh, don't let dat little fact worry you, boss," the negro hastened to say. "Dat mule bend at de laigs, but it ain't due to age dat he does. De hones' truth, boss, is dat I ain't had de money to look after dat mule de way he oughter been. ADICAL CHANGES ADVOCATED AT MEETING OF COLLEGE MEN.

RED THOMSON, the all-around champion athlete of America, represented Occidental College at the annual meeting of the Intercolte Athletic Association, held in York City, December 29. In a leto Dr. Baer, Thomson states that neeting was of the utmost impor to athletics in this country.

ny of the problems that confront collegiate athletics today were n up and discussed by the dele, among whom were some of the nost athletes of the country.

nong the problems discussed was advisability of permitting college to play summer baseball. Capt. ner E. Peirce of West Point, presi of the association, expressed himas much dissatisfied with the way men were treated at present. He sed that the collegians who used athletic ability in the summer to money should either be recog as amateurs or completely outd. The present method of placing under the ban and then allowing to play is detrimental to the best ests of amateur sports and he d the association to take definite n concerning the matter in the future. He also spoke against the tice of allowing college teams to with opponents not representing tutions of learning.

other institution of modern aths that was criticised was the traintable. The association thought the training table, while it had y good features had many more were not good and that worked nst the best interests of college tics. Prof. Smith of the Univerof Missouri, asserted that the Mis Valley League had entirely disinued the training table, and that ad found that athletic conditions greatly improved as a result.

NEW RESIDENCE RULE.

new one-year residence clause was nitted which makes it necessary every man shall be in college a before he can compete in aths. The new feature of this clause that it applies to all men entering ge, whether they be freshman or ors. This rule has been tried in y of the colleges of the Middle t and has proven satisfactory.

e association came out strongly nst the type of athletics that tend reate an athletic class in a school. delegates gave their opinion that abnormal physical and mental conns should be removed from athletics and that more men of the schools should be allowed to participate in sports.

In this connection they advanced the theory that all games should be planned for the good of the players and not for the enjoyment of the spectators. They urged the representatives of the different colleges to promote good spirit among the athletes of the different institutions, who have intercollegiate relations with each other. The representative from Missouri stated that in that State the visiting team was always treated to a banquet by the home team the night after the contest. This had the effect of establishing a friendly relation between the men of the schools, and tended to do away with any dirty playing on the field.

An interesting report by Prof. Freer of the University of Wisconsin showed that out of the seven fatalities reported in the newspapers, as the toll for the year of new football, only two could be directly ascribed to football itself. The other five were due to injuries received in the season of 1909 or were the direct result of unnecessary exposure and consequent pneumonia. The prevalent idea of the delegates seemed to be that the number of minor injuries were increased under the new rules whereas the number of major injuries were greatly decreased

OPPOSED TO HOLIDAY GAMES.

As a result of this year's experience, coupled with that of preceding years the delegates were opposed to all Thanksgiving Day games; specially paid coaches; participation of freshmen in college athletics except interclass events; participation of any athletes on more than two 'varsity teams of the same year; and the continuance of training tables. The association was in favor of an organized faculty conference between the competing colleges, composed of deldelegates chosen from the professors of the various schools, strict eligibility rules and strict adherence thereto; maintenance of high scholastic requirements and a one-year residence rule for all sports and for all men

The Intercollegiate Athletic Association was founded in 1905. Its organization was the result of an effort on the part of thirty-seven eastern colleges to remedy evils in athletics that were prevalent at that time. The original membership has been enlarged and the meeting at New York was attended by delegates representing eighty-one colleges, having an enrollment of more than 120,000 students.

GLIDDEN TOUR FOR THE WEST.

CLASSIC EVENT MAY COME TO THE COAST THIS YEAR.

Automobile Fraternity of the East, Including Pacific Highway Officials and Others, Are Ready to Boost Big Plan for Endurance Test of National Repute.

The Glidden Tour, the classic event of the many automobile contests that are held yearly, will be pulled off on the Pacific Coast this year if the members of the Pacific Highway Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California have their way. P. H. A. officials have already written the American Automobile Association and the other eastern organizations which manage the event asking that the big reliability run might either take place on the Pacific Coast or include a large western city in the route mapped out.

It has been suggested that a route from Tia Juana, Mex., to Vancouver, B. C., would be an ideal one for such a contest. Motoring in the three countries would make it an international affair and add greatly to the interest of the contest.

At present there are approximately 60,000 motor cars in use in the Pacific Coast States, and in British Columbia. This will give some idea of the scope of the automobile business in the West. The motor car business has been growing by such leaps and bounds in California that the enthusiasts feel that they are entitled to some recognition and will boost for the holding of the big event in their territory.

Should this national event be held in the West, it would undoubtedly result in a great deal of road-building activity. It would be safe to promise a good road for such affair, at least one in better condition than some parts of last year's Glidden Tour.

With all the good roads and automobile associations on the Coast co-operating, it would be possible to provide the fitting entertainment and hospitality that such a classic event would merit. Southern California people have proven themselves royal entertainers as have the people in the other Coast sections.

Jim Johnson, the negro heavyweight, has written friends in this city that the boxing game is very dull, as far as he is concerned, and he expects to be back in America before the winter is over.

RAMBLEM COMPANY PLANS.

Customers and Dealers Are Promised a Square Deal and the Same Good Treatment.

The attention of the automobile fraternity has been attracted to the publication by The Thomas B. Jeffery Company of a most significant statement of the policy governing all of its relations with Rambler owners, Rambler dealers and with prospective customers. The policy as outlined is most comprehensive and yet most brief. It assures those who have business dealings with the Rambler Company a product as near perfect as possible, a guarantee of fair treatment, and reflects the spirit upon which Rambler success has been founded. The statement of the Rambler policy follows:

To make all parts for the Rambler, and by limiting the output to make them so carefully that the Rambler may justly deserve distinction as a car of character and quality. To be exact in all statements; never to misrepresent or exaggerate and never to disparage others.

To be guided by the experience of many years and to value permanent rather than temporary success. To maintain independence as a safeguard to stability, and to assure to our customers the perpetuation of this policy. To serve every Rambler owner so promptly, courteously and thoroughly as to assure to each the pleasure and satisfaction he expects.

INDIANS ARE HONEST.

Admitted They Are Professionals on Account of Having Taken Coin for Ball Games.

"Pat" Wheelan, who managed the football carnival held on Bovard Field December 26, says that the Sherman Indians are too honest to be amateur athletes. In order to get a sanction for the day's sport Wheelan had to see that all of the men who participated in the games held amateur cards and therefore sent application blanks to the Indians who were to take part in the carnival.

Several of the copper-colored boys sent word to the Registration Committee of the A.A.U. that they had slightly violated the rules of their amateur standing by taking a few dollars now and then for playing baseball. They made it clear that they were not getting their living by playing the game but said that they did not object to taking money for their services.

According to the rules of the A.A.U. the committee was bound to reject the men as members of the organization as they were clearly professionals according to the definition of the A.A.U.

AMATEUR NOTES.

Workmen are busy getting the Manual Arts High School cinder path ready for track work. The Vermont avenue school has a number of strong track men this year and expects to put its first team into the field with some show of success, although handicapped for lack of experienced men.

Track men at the university are all rejoicing over the news contained in a letter which Manager Bovard received from Harry Trotter, the crack shotputter, who is captain this year. "Trot" has not been in school this fall, owing to sickness, but says he is feeling great and has been doing a little shot heaving in the back yard at his home at Santa Paula, which will astonish even his admirers whe he returns to school next semester. Coach Cromwell will have to rely largely on his old track men for point winners this spring, from the present outlook, and unless most of the last year's stars return next semester, he will be up against a hard proposition.

Probably the best pitcher among the indoor baseball teams that are playing in Southern California this winter is Louis Cowan, a 14-year-old boy playing with the Recreation Center team. Louis won thirty-two games straight when playing in the Junior League, and has made almost as good a record since joining the major league. He seldom fails to strike out ten men in a game and often puts several more than that out at the bat.

Baseball Manager Engels, at the U.S.C. Law School has just returned from a trip north, where he arranged a baseball schedule for the law team. Among the games scheduled are a series with St. Mary's and Santa Clara College. It is likely that the team will play both Stanford and California.

A number of men were out playing soccer football at the university during the past week. President Bovard seemed very favorably impressed with the game played at the football tourney Christmas day, and says it is very likely that the game will be introduced as a minor sport on the Liberal Arts campus next year. The popularity which this English game has gained this fall among the local schools seems to indicate that it will soon become a recognized sport in Southern California.

Slugging the referee has led to Jack (Twin) Sullivan being barred from the Armory Athletic Club of Boston. If that sort of treatment was made general boxers would learn in time to curb their tempers and behave themselves when the decision goes against them.

OCCIDENTAL NOTES.

Track work is humming at Occidental. Coach Himrod has taken arge of the squad and is putting the nder path aspirants through their ces. More candidates are coming t every night, and it is beginning to ok as if the Tigers were going to be the running for the pennant when conference meet is pulled off.

The interclass field meet is scheduled take place January 20. The faculty s declared a half holiday for that te and a good meet is assured. Himd expects some of the men who are lumnics for the first time to make od records in this tryout.

Himrod is proving himself very popuwith the athletes, and has the support of the student body. He of the best athletes the South oduced and he has the ability of rting that knowledge to his men realizes that he is up against a proposition in developing a firsttrack team out of the limited mal that he has to work with, but he s that his ambition is to have the gest number of men out for track the history of the institution, and t that ambition is realized he will be satisfied.

The handball court that has been built at Occidental is proving very popular and is crowded with players every Jack Lindy came all the way from Phoenix d felt well repaid.

Max Rosenfeld, the Apperson agent San Francisco, was another visitor. enfeld says he is having a big year with the Appersons. He was accompanied by Mrs. Rosenfeld.

Fred Fuller took a trip from El Centro and A. Hendrickson piloted a party of Santa Ana visitors. William Creswell, the San Diego branch manager, is having a big season and delivered a carload of Reos last week.

L. L. Whitman, who brought the Reo "Thirty" from New York to San Francisco in the record time of ten day and fifteen hours' is hoarse. This transcontinental Reo champion has spent the last ten days in the Shettler exhibit at the Fiesta Park show. In addition to telling the many visitors the fine points of the new Reos he talked about this long trip. He says he must have told the story at least 200 times a day, which means 2000 repetitions of the same story in one week. No wonder Whitman is weary.

"Do you expect to make any more transcontinental runs?" Whitman was asked.

"Not just now," replied the famous Pasadena motorist. "I do not fancy this ten below zero stuff I read of in the papers. And besides I don't think there is much likelihood of any other car lowering this Reo record. And until that is done there is really no reason for me going across."

No man knows more about these across the country runs than the Pasadena agent for the Reo. He has made half a dozen trips in the last few years and is an enthusiast over the building of a national highway across the continent. Whitman believes it will be done some day and that the popular long tour will then be from San Francisco to New York.

NO MORE OIL.

"I believe it is only a mater of time until oil lights will no longer be used on motor cars," said Manager H. H. West of the Western Rubber and Supply Company. "We are selling as many as 100 sets of small lights a week and this means that as many motorists are discarding the sidelights in which oil is used and wiring them up with the small electric lights.

"The demand has been growing steadily until it has become almost a rush. Hundreds of motorists have had the electric tail lights, but it is only recently that the demand became so heavy for sets of three lights. The auto show at Fiesta proved much that is of value to us.

"They are much better than the old lights from many standpoints. There is no oil or dirt to mark the fingers and when it comes to lighting up in the evening it is simply a case of press the button and the battery does the rest. We have several styles of switches, one having the one push button for the three lights, and the other with three buttons, one for each light. In this way the tail light can be turned off and the front two left burning or both front lights dimmed with the gas lights on and the tail left burning.

"Many motorists are using the electric lights in the city in preference to the gas lights, but the man who wants plenty of light will not discard his big headlights completely.

"The Western Rubber and Supply Company was well satisfied with the success of the automobile show," continued Manager West. "Our exhibit was as complete as we could make it and we were rewarded by a large crowd in the afternoons and evenings. Our line of Gray & Davis 1911 model lamps attracted much favorable notice and our toques, or sweater caps for women, were a real sensation.

"We had the pleasure of meeting practically all the trade of Southern California and can express nothing but satisfaction over the result of the show.

"December was one of the biggest months the concern has known. During that time we did considerable advertising and our big increase in business probably means that it pays to advertise. It also shows more life in the motor business than for several months previous and leads me to predict that the 1911 season will be the most prosperous in every line that the motor and supply industry has known. January means the beginning of the big season in California and from now on until fall there should be a booming in trade all down the line.

"Trade from our outside territory is immense. During the past week orders have been received which aggregate a carload of G. and J. tires. These will be filled from the big shipment which will arrive this week."

ANOTHER HERE.

Tom Evans of the Cadillac factory has been a visitor in Los Angeles during the auto show. Evans recently made a trip to the most northern point ever reached by a motor car from Vancouver, B. C., and while he is not accused of faking any of his records his new departure as an arctic explorer has earned for him the name of "Doc Cook." The Cadillac explorer was in San Francisco when the Cadillac smashed all existing road records by running from Los Angeles to the Bay City in 14hrs., 49min., and is highly elated over the showing of the sturdy little thirty-horse-power car.

After seeing the car finish in San Francisco, he came south and helped celebrate here. Evans will return to the factory in time for the big Eastern shows. Don Lee reports the delivery of 157 Cadillac "thirties" of the 1911 model up to date. He expects to pass the 200-mark before the end of January. The Cadillac record car made a trip to San Diego last week in order that the people in the south could have a look at the holder of the Fernando Nelson trophy.

The A.A.U. perpetual trophy, which was won by Occidental in the A.A.U meet last October, was presented to the student body of the Tiger institution last Thursday. It will be engraved with the name of the college on the first bar and hang in the trophy room until it is won by some other institution.

Occidental Academy expects to have one of the strongest track teams that ever represented the Tiger "kittens." There is a lot of good material and the men are coming out and going to work with a will. The "prep." department of the institution will be discontinued after this year, and as this will probably be its last appearance in athletics, it is planning to make the season a real triumph. The "preps." will send their track team to San Diego some time during the spring and as all the men are anxious to make this trip, competition for places on the team is very keen.

Warner Hollister, captain of the Tiger basketball team, accompanied the Los Angeles High School basket ball team on its holiday tour. He says the boys from the hillside institution showed a lot of real class, winning all but one of the games played. Hollister was referee.

BEST FIGHTERS OFTEN BLUNDER.

Kid McCoy, the Astute, Had Sad Experience.

Misjudgment Caused Finish at Hands of Dub.

Jack McCormick Got Nearly All the Receipts.

"Even the wisest and willest fighters sometimes mix up their plans," says Tommy Ryan, who was, in his day, just as wise and foxy a warrior as ever trimmed a mark, handed the public a lemon, or fought a hardy job.

"Kid McCoy was one of the craftiest of them all, I know, for I had some sad personal experiences with the kid, and when anyone can hand me anything he has to be pretty nifty. Let that pass, however—some things are too sorrowful to dwell upon.

"A few years ago, when the boxing game was running wide open in Chicago, the promoters who ran the Fort Dearborn Club, of that city, wanted to show the astute McCoy in a windup bout. The theater in which they gave their bouts was rather small, and hence it would be rather hard to match McCoy against one of the real top-notchers. Then said McCoy: 'Why not put me on with this Jack McCormick, of Philadelphia? You can get him cheap, he won't bother me any, and you can draw the limit of your seating capacity, anyhow.'

M'CORMICK WILLING.

"McCormick figured that he had nothing to lose, and needing the coin, gladly agreed to meet the terrible McCoy, and the promoters arranged the match accordingly. For once, too, figuring that this was so soft he would need to do no fixing, McCoy did not insist on his adversary flopping for him—a precaution, which, I regret to say, many champions usually adopt. What? Me? Why the idea! I was different, you know.

"The promoters had to pay McCoy $1000 in cash for his end of the show. So, to make sure of cliching the money, they signed McCormick to a set of articles that gave the winner—who would undoubtedly be McCoy—an enormous shade the best of things, and cut the loser off with about 20 per cent. of the whole. That's how foxy club managers usually do, you understand.

JOKE FOR McCOY.

"McCoy regarded the battle as the richest joke on earth. He told everybody that lumbering McCormick would never hit him. 'You see,' said McCoy, 'this fellow does nothing but swing His fist only travels so far, and in an unvarying circle, always the same. I'll push my face right up to his fist and yet he'll never hit me.'

"A big house came to see the massacre, and McCoy, smiling in his corner, chuckled and sneered in his cruel, chilly way. McCormick looked perfectly at ease, and had evidently resigned himself to the lovely licking he was sure to get. The gong rang. McCormick lumbered to the middle and began fanning heavily at the air. The cat-like McCoy swept in and out, hooking, jolting, cutting McCormick across the face, never missing. For twenty seconds this went on. Then McCormick started a full right swing from his hip. The fist came over slow as a log rolling up hill. Everyone in the house watched the fist move on its deliberate circle, and loud laughing could be heard.

KID KNOCKED OUT.

"The smiling McCoy thrust his face forward and seemed to try to brush his chin against the slow and futile glove. Suddenly there was an awful crash, and the lithe body of McCoy flew high in the air, toppled and fell heavily on the floor, the foxy head hitting first, and bouncing back and forth like a rubber ball.

"The referee, dazed by the shock, couldn't realize it for several seconds. Then he began to count, but there was no need. The astute McCoy was completely dead to the world. And there was wailing and shrieking in the box office, for, as things had turned out, the promoters had to pay McCormick 80 per cent. of half the gross, while they were still bound to pay McCoy his $1000.

"How did it all happen? Simply this: The astute McCoy, when he calculated the length of McCormick's slow, useless swing, had computed only the length of the McCormick arm. As he swung, McCormick had stepped about six inches forward. McCoy had never even figured on those extra six inches and the fist—which a baby could have dodged—instead of passing just before his chin, had caught him with all McCormick's 200 pounds weight, full below the left ear.

"Yes, friends, even the greatest generals make mistakes now and then, just as Napoleon did, and Kid McCoy."

Rusie Is Working.

Amos Rusie is now working in a bottle factory in Olney, Ill. Big Amos has tried a number of jobs since he left the diamond, all of them calling for hard work, and none of them remunerative.

CHALMERS WINS.

A Chalmers "30" won a Christmas road race from Mexico City to Puebla, a distance of 100 miles, in 3hrs., 13min. This is a new record for the distance on this road and beats the record set up last year by a thirty-horse-power car which sells for $4000, by fifty-seven minutes.

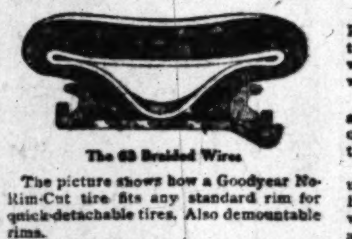
No-Rim-Cut Tires

Motor car owners have long and willingly paid 20 per cent extra for Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires. Now they cost nothing extra, because of our enormous production.

We have sold half a million Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires, and last year our tire sales trebled. Yet, until lately, these premier tires cost 20 per cent more than the ordinary.

All because the tires can't rim-cut, and because Goodyear tires are 10 per cent oversize.

Now these same tires—No-Rim-Cut tires—tires 10 per cent oversize—cost no more than other standard tires. Our multiplied output has cut the cost of production.



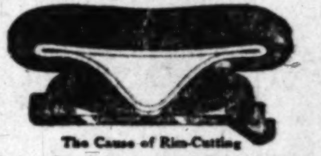
The 63 Braided Wires

The picture shows how a Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tire fits any standard rim for quick-detachable tires. Also demountable rims.

Note that the rim flanges, which are removable, are turned to hook outward with No-Rim-Cut tires. There are no hooks on the base to hook into the rim, as there are on other tires. The rounded flange comes next to the tire casing, and rim-cutting is made impossible.

The next picture shows how other tires—clincher tires—fit this same rim. The rim flanges are turned to face inward—to grasp hold of the hook in the tire. That is how the tires are held on.

Note how that thin edge of the rim



The Cause of Rim-Cutting

flange digs into the tire. That is what causes rim-cutting. A tire may be ruined beyond repair in a single block, if you run it flat.

The difference is this: Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires don't need to be hooked to the rim. Through the base on each side we run 63 braided wires—a feature which we control.

These wires make the base unstretchable. When the tire is inflated the wires contract. A pressure of 134 pounds to the inch then holds the tire to the rim.

Other makers, to get rid of this hook, use a single wire or a hard rubber base. But both are impracticable. The braided wires, which contract under air pressure, are absolutely essential to a safe hookless tire.

In addition to this, Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires are 10 per cent over the rated size. That means 10 per cent more tire at no extra cost. With the average car that adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage, because it avoids overloading. You get these advantages without extra cost when you specify Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires.

Together they cut down average tire bills half. They are more fully explained in our book, "How to Select an Automobile Tire." May we send it to you?

ER TENNIS PLAYERS FAST.

lental Has Good Chance for Championship.

nic Mace Expected to Win New Laurels.

es Merrill and Osmond Are Clever Players.

lental College has one of the est groups of tennis players this in the history of the sport at iger institution. Four players aring the colors of the Highland school, each of whom is a past r at the racquet game. The from present indications should no trouble in bringing the tenampionships into camp, when the ollegiate tournaments are pulled the spring.

men's singles are conceded to e Mace in any tournament in the He is the Southern California pion and there is no man in any southern institutions that can things at all lively for him. He istered as a freshman and an ollegiate championship looks to him along with the various championships that he has al- won.

e is very modest over his tenbility, and he has made himself the popular men at Occidental. as been practicing daily of late his recent triumph in the Mt. ington meet showed clearly that in shape to go after the interiate singles with all there is in nd bring the scalps of the racwielders of the other conference s home to the Tigers' lair.

GOOD RUNNING MATE.

the men's singles are not the vents that the supporters of the and gold are doping their play- win. They are as confident of en's doubles. Barker, a new man cidental and a new man in interiate tennis, is looked upon as a unning mate for Mace, and these en, after a little practice togethe showing a lot of real class in ouble events. Barker is also a freshman. He comes from Pasadena High and, although he was the star performer for the Pasadena institution in the net game, he has never achieved any particular fame. With very little practice he was able to pull a third place in the Mt. Washington meet and many of the wise ones are pointing to him as a real comer. He and Mace have played together several times. They play a good, heady game and seem to understand each other, a very necessary thing for men who are to play as a team in tennis.

In the ladies' events Occidental is particularly strong. Miss Osmond and Miss Merrill are both out this year and both are playing the kind of tennis that wins pennants. Miss Merrill won the college championship of the Presbyterian school last year and she still holds that title. In the intercollegiate tournaments she was only defeated once. Miss Merrill has a distinct style of play. She covers a great deal of territory, is very steady, and because of her fast returns and excellent placing, she is a very hard opponent to beat. She plays tennis all the year around on her court at her Mr. Washington home. She is rather small, but is endowed with wonderful endurance and her speed and aggressiveness never slacken as the game progresses. She is always fresh at the end of a set, no matter how hard the play may have been and she never loses her nerve, even when the play is apparently going against her.

GIRLS EVENLY MATCHED.

Miss Osmond, Miss Merrill's running mate, has not had quite as much experience, but she plays one of the best games of tennis of any one on the Highland Park courts. The interclass tournaments have not been pulled off as yet, but there are many who think that Miss Osmond stands a good chance taking the college championship when this meet comes off. Miss Osmond is a junior and as Miss Merrill is a sophomore, they will be pitted against each other for the honor of their respective classes. They are so evenly matched that no one has had the courage even to make a guess as to who will win. Miss Osmond plays a heady game, and like Miss Merrill she never becomes excited or worn out. She can play tennis all afternoon and leave the courts as fresh as when she started. She was a member of the team that beat U.S.C. last year and was Miss Merrill's running mate in the ladies' doubles which were won by them. Both have improved greatly and they are expected to put up a great brand of tennis this season. They should have things their own way if they continue to show the class in the intercollegiate contest that they are at present displaying in practice games.

There are several other players in the college who play good tennis. Seay and Musick are both strong players and either of them could make things lively for most of the players in the intercollegiate matches.

Fast Trio.

chassis of the car is finished in with blue stripes and the hood ears the number "3" which was so anxiously watched during the great race. The wheels are painted a dull lead color which has been chipped in many places by the gravel of the road. The car is of the Briarcliff model, named for the famous course.

THE POPE-HARTFORD.

With some of the trappings taken from it that gave it distinction in the Santa Monica race, stands the Pope-Hartford car that finished second in the free-for-all and the stock car events. The aluminum body that gave it the torpedo effect has been removed and "Bill" Ruess asserts that the car, as equipped, is capable of doing 100 miles an hour and that it did seventy-eight miles on the third speed just before it was brought to the show room.

The car made a great showing in the Santa Monica event and is to enter the Portola races, February 22. Bert Dingley, the veteran of many automobile races who handled the car in the Santa Monica event, has been spending much time on the machine lately and claims that it is one of the fastest cars in the world with its present equipment and says that he will land it in first place in the stock car event of the coming Portola events.

The motor in the machine is rated at fifty horse power, but it is claimed that under proper conditions it will develop sixty-six and one-half. It has four cylinders, and four and three-eights bore with a five and a half-inch stroke. It is equipped to carry forty gallons of gasoline and twelve gallons of lubricating oil. The front and rear wheels have 34x4½ Michelin tires on detachable rims. The finish is white with black stripes.

Unlike the other cars the Buick racer made its second appearance in the Fiesta Park show and judging from the people that gathered to look at it and the silver trophies that were banked close by, it has not worn out it's welcome.

Since it was last placed on exhibition it has achieved new honors, having won the world's ten-mile speed record for cars of a piston displacement between 161 and 230 cubic inches.

Joe Nikrent, the local driver, was at the wheel and made the record on the Motordrome track. Louis Nikrent also made a good showing with the car, winning second place in the road race from Fresno to Coalinga, and second place in the hour race at the Motordrome during the last meet held there.

The attendants in the booth spent much time exhibiting the car and think it is a beauty for a machine in racing trim. It has a 112-inch wheel base and carries thirty gallons of gasoline. The engine is the four-cylinder type with a five-inch stroke, a four and one-half-inch bore, and develops forty horse power.

The transmission is of the sliding gear type with a shaft drive and it is claimed that the car can make eighty-two miles an hour.

Compromise dthe Settlement.

Hudson Maxim relates in the January issue of Adventure how a certain Boniface hired a reckless laborer named Bender to dynamite some stumps. Maxim protested, but Boniface wanted Bender to do the work, and inquired the price of dynamite.

"Sixteen cents a pound," said Maxim, "but you can have it for nothing if Bender doesn't blow himself up."

A particularly refractory old stump, says Maxim, had resisted a couple of Bender's dynamite attacks. The failure to dislodge the stump Bender took as a personal affront, because it reflected upon his skill as a stump-blaster.

"Next time," said he, "something is going to happen. He placed about twenty pounds of dynamite under the deep-rooted veteran, touched it off, and several things happened in very quick succession. The big stump let go its hold on earth and proceeded to hunt Bender. It was a level race, but the stump won. Striking Bender on the north quarter, it stove in four ribs, dislocated several joints and damaged him inseveral other respects and particulars.

Boniface came to settle for the dynamite.

"Sixteen cents a pound," said Maxim. "Bender hasn't a chance in a hundred. Wait till the doctors are through with him."

"What do you say to a compromise," suggested Boniface, "of eight cents a pound? For really," quoth he, "I do

Cyclone Thompson Having Good Luck.

Fight Game Is Drawing Fair Houses at Sydney.

Letters received by Tommy Burns, former heavyweight champion of the world, from W. F. Corbett, the well-known sporting writer and authority on things pugilistic in Australia and from his son Claude, also an Australian newspaper man, throw some interesting side lights on the recent invasion of the Antipodes by the bunch of American fighters, including Billy Papke, Clabby, "Cyclone" Thompson and others. The letter from Claude Corbett is especially worthy of reference as it deals with the Papke-Williams fight in which the American was hooted by the crowd. Following are the portions of the letter of general moment:

"The American contingent of boxers have all had a fight and each man has been successful. Papke was the first to fight and beat Ed Williams of Victoria, knocking him out in the fifth round. The crowd hooted Papke a great deal for his roughing tactics, but the fault was mainly with Williams, who to save himself from being punished clinched a lot.

CLABBY MAKING GOOD.

"Bronson, the lightweight, went to Brisbane and beat Tommy Jones on points, and Clabby made a great impression. He cut Bob Bryant to pieces in eight rounds, after letting him off a lot. Clabby showed some remarkably fine boxing and is quite the best of the bunch.

"'Cyclone' Thompson beat Rudie Unholz in five rounds, but was about a stone and a half (twenty-one pounds) heavier than Rudie, who put up a game battle and was loudly cheered for his showing. The crowd hooted at Kelly when he announced that both men weighed under ten stone (140 pounds.)

"Bronson on Wednesday night got the decision over Kid Sullivan after twenty rounds, and he won fairly easily.

"Papke was to have boxed Dave Smith, November 23, but Papke was taken ill, so he said. (Papke was beaten by Smith when they did meet.)

"The game is drawing fairly well, the gates averaging in the neighborhood of £500 to £600 ($2500 to $3000.")

TAKES KNOCK AT PAPKE.

W. F. Corbett's letter is frank in its criticism of the American fighters, especially Papke:

"The boxing game is still good here. All the Americans have fought before good houses, but in every instance they had much greater weight than the Australians pitted against them. If Papke can fight no better than he did with Ed Williams he is the poorest champion I ever saw, and his form says very little for Stanley Ketchel's—poor fellow, what a sad end he had."

Tommy received a letter recently from Jack Curley, asking him to help in framing up a tour of the Coast for George Hackenschmidt.

In spite of the talk about extravagance, in spite of the debate about the life of the automobile business, the man with a car goes spinning and winning on his way.

A Good Motor Car Earns Its Keep

Yes, and a good car pays a high rate of interest on the original investment, too.

Nearly all the cars you see bearing pleasure parties at night have been working all day. They have earned their way.

If the automobile did not earn its way, it wouldn't last. Does the average business man keep on putting his money into unprofitable things?

Have you ever known a man who once owned a car willing to give up ownership? The man who once had the service of a car knows that without one he would feel as though he had lost a leg.

The man without a car these days is at a distinct disadvantage in comparison with the man who has one.

The automobile is typical of this age—the age of efficiency and rapid progress.

Men have not made any other thing in all their history which will render so much genuine service in a given length of time as the automobile.

The man with a good car only smiles to himself when he hears talk about motor car extravagance. He smiles when he hears two men who never drove a car debating how long the automobile business is going to last.

He smiles again when his neighbor says: "I don't see how you can afford to keep up an automobile."

He smiles because he sees his neighbor has been taking the funny papers seriously, which is always a funny thing to do.

Have you ever noticed those pictures in the funny papers about automobile troubles and expenses? Ever notice how the automobiles shown are of the models of ten years ago? That shows how old the jokes are.

In spite of the talk about extravagances, in spite of the debate about the life of the automobile business, in spite of the funny papers, the man with a car smiles, "starts 'er up," and goes spinning and winning on his way, well pleased with himself that he has so good and faithful a servant as his motor car.

He uses it for two or three seasons, sells it for a good round sum and—then does he go back to the horse and buggy and the street car? Hardly.

He gets "reckless" again and buys another motor car—a better one. He is able to buy a better one for the same or less money than he spent before, because the manufacturers from year to year learn how to improve and refine their products. Thus are prices constantly lowered. You can buy more for the same price this year than you bought last.

In fact, you can now buy all that any one needs in a five passenger car for as low a price as $1750 —it is a quality car, too.

In addition to the design, materials and workmanship necessary to insure perfect performance, this car has what many critics consider the most beautiful lines of any automobile in the world; and further, it has the refinements and the finish to suit the most fastidious taste.

We have a catalog that many people profess to admire which tells all about this good $1750 car.

After you have gone through this catalog, you'll probably be troubled with driver's itch until you get your hands on the wheel of a Chalmers. If you are willing to take a chance, write us.

Here's Just About All You Can Ask In a Motor Car

In a Chalmers "Forty," the car shown in the picture, you can go very far in a day. You can go with smoothness, with ease, with perfect comfort for driver and passengers,—100, 200, 300 miles—as fast as you please, over hill and plain, through city and valley and forest.

This splendid car meets the motorist's maximum desire in every direction. It has as much room as any car made. It will carry seven and still have "room for one more."

The 40 h. p. motor gives all the power you can use at any time—the power for mile-a-minute speed, for scampering over hills, for faultless pulling in mud or sand. It gives you smoothness and quietness of operation—economy, too; many "Forty" users average fourteen miles to the gallon of gasoline.

Chalmers "Forty"

has beauty and finish that suits those who demand the utmost. Handbuffed leather of the finest quality is used in the upholstering. Dash, heel boards and door strips are of Circassian walnut. The painting of a "Forty" is done with extreme care.

The extra long wheel base, the staunch double drop frame, the tilted seats and the long three-quarter elliptic springs, make this car as comfortable for the aged as for the vigorous.

A day's ride in some cars leaves your body feeling as though it had been beaten with a board.

Remember, you are buying a car to ride in, not to put in the parlor for an ornament.

In this car you really get just about all anyone can ask to get in a car—reliability, carrying capacity, comfort, beauty, refinement.

And this "Forty" is a Chalmers car. That's something. The owner of a Steinway piano, a Tiffany lamp, a Persian rug, a Roycroft de luxe book has a certain pride in them, simply because they are what they are.

You would have the same pleasant feeling in owning a Chalmers "Forty." It keeps its chin up in any company. $2900 including Bosch magneto, Prest-O-Lite tank and gas lamps.

At Last.

"NATOMA," LONG AWAITED OPERA.

VICTOR HERBERT'S FIRST EFFORT IN MUSIC-DRAMA.

Scene Laid at Santa Barbara, Story Is of Our Early Days, and World Famous Artists of Chicago Opera Will Give It Its Premiere Early Next Month.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Victor Herbert, who I suppose will be granted first place among American operatic composers without any dissension, has long been known as a writer of wonderful stage music. And so beautiful have been his light opera melodies that reviewers from time immemorial have sent up the cry, "Why does Herbert not do a grand opera?"

You can't play a Victor Herbert score, you know, as you would play a page of Von Tilzer or the meanderings of one of our favorite overnight tunesters. You never hear Herbert's music unless it is voiced by an orchestra of symphonic proportions. Herbert writes for horns, and oboes, and a whole battery of 'celli. His phrases reflect modernity as it is exemplified by the greatest of living Frenchmen and the twentieth century Italians. Herbert can't be compared with any one else of his sort in this country. Abroad, not even Franz Lehar equals him for real musicianship.

Herbert seems to have written his real music-drama at last. It is "Natoma," a romance of early California—in English, of course. The libretto is by Joseph D. Redding of San Francisco. The scene is Santa Barbara.

If the present plans are carried out, "Natoma" will be produced at Philadelphia on February 6, by the Chicago Opera Company, which, under the direction of Andreas Dippel, is in effect and actuality a working branch of the Metropolitan organization.

Costumes and scenery are being designed by Alexander F. Harmer, an artist who for some years past has lived in Santa Barbara.

In "Natoma" some license has been necessary in adapting the reality for the stage production. In the scene before the Mission, the fountain, which is actually in the center of the plaza, or fore-court, has been placed at the extreme right; also the corridors of the building itself will, in the opera, run diametrically opposite to their real direction.

The island of Santa Barbara, the scene of the first act, is here only a short distance from the mainland, when, as a matter of fact, it is farthest to sea of the Channel group. Redding, too, has introduced a market scene in the Mission plaza, a very usual thing for old Mexico, but which Santa Barbara never had.

However, it's all in an opera. And if in a play you are allowed to stand truth on its head, what topsy-turvy wonder can't you perform when you make the piece operatic?

The time of the story is in the year 1830, during the Mexican occupation, an epoch richly romantic.

The first act is laid on Santa Barbara Island, the second in the plaza in front of the Mission Church, and the third inside the Mission itself.

I don't know anyone who has heard the "Natoma" music, but I believe we can trust the resourceful Herbert for that.

The characters are Don Francisco de la Guerra (bass,) a noble Spaniard of the old regime, of great dignity, courtesy and simplicity; Father Peralta (bass,) padre of the mission church, likewise a Spaniard of blood; Juan Baptiste Alvarado (baritone,) a young Spaniard of fiery temper, ambitious to marry Barbara—he is also her cousin; Jose Castro (baritone,) half-breed, part Indian and part Spanish, a fellow of low cunning and hatred of both races, and a chum of Alvarado; Lieut. Paul Merrill (tenor,) a young officer on the U. S. S. "Swallow;" Barbara de la Guerra (soprano,) only child of Don Francisco, beautiful Spanish girl just from the convent; and Natoma (mezhalf playmate and half maid, since early childhood.

There are other characters, but these are the principals.

For facts concerning this work, and for pictures, The Times is indebted to Virginia Whitmore of Santa Barbara.

The story of the work, as narrated here, Mrs. Whitmore received directly from the composers.

THE PLOT.

Natoma and Paul meet, and she falls in love with him, but seems to feel that as soon as he sees Barbara he will love her. This happens early in the island scene. While she is battling with her own disappointment, Natoma is chided by Castro for staying with the white people. Having seen her and Paul together he taunts her because of this. He is also in love with her. Alvarado declares his love to Barbara, but she refuses to take him seriously and laughs at him. Alvarado and Castro, both enraged, then start their scheming, and it is planned that at the plaza in front of the mission the following day, while the fete is at its height, Barbara shall be abducted and taken to some canyon in the Santa Ynez range, while Castro promises to kill Paul, if necessary, during the melee which they plan to bring about.

The close of the first act will offer unusual opportunities for effects. It will be moonlight on the island with Barbara and Paul on the porch of the hacienda of Don Francisco. In the distance are seen on the horizon the faint lights of Santa Barbara. Vespers are heard very faintly coming from the mission church across the water. It is here that Paul declares his love.

The early part of the second act in front of the mission is devoted to the early customs of the Spanish with their music and dancing. A striking scene here will be the appearance of Castro alone, brooding over the advent of the Spaniards and Americanos in his country. He invokes the curses of the Great Spirit on both alike. The early matin bell of the mission sounds and he shakes his fist at the church and continues his imprecations. From an old adobe inn sounds of revelry are heard. The melee as planned by Alvarado and Castro results. It being Barbara's fete day, she cannot refuse to dance with her cousin. Castro challenges all comers to the Dance del Machete, the dagger dance. With an Indian companion they become more excited by the music and dance apparently in dead earnest. When the dance is at its height, and all are interested, Alvarado is to step behind Barbara, envelop her in his cloak and with assistants, speed away. Castro will presumably lunge at his opponent, but the dagger is to reach Paul, and in the general consternation he is to flee to the mountains.

Much of the old religious ceremony about the mission is introduced. Natoma appears at the scene disguised as an Indian boy and is not recognized. She has become acquainted with the plot and is biding her time. Barbara is seized at the exciting moment. Natoma is facing Castro, whose back is to Alvarado. She makes a lunge at Castro, but purposely passes him and plunges her machete into Alvarado. Paul and sailors seize Castro, Pico and Kagama; Don Francisco rushes to Barbara, who falls into his arms. Alvarado falls, and dies cursing the Indian boy and the Americanos. The crowd is about to seize Natoma, who stands transfixed, when Father Peralta, who has rushed into the church, appears on the steps holding aloft the crucifix. Natoma falls at the feet of Peralta with her dagger still in her hand. The priest gathers her to his breast under his robes, still holding aloft the crucifix, crying:

"By the church shall this crime be tried."

The third act will show the interior of the old mission with the altar at the back of the stage. It is in semi-darkness. Natoma, alone, still dressed as the Indian boy, is huddled on the steps of the altar. She sings a recitative, during which the Indian in her dominates. At the height of her invocation, Father Peralta appears at the back of the altar. He says:

"Peace, peace. Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord."

Natoma turns to rail at him, but her anger is quelled at the calm dignity of the priest. It is then that she discloses her identity, and she tells of the plot that led to the murder. He explains how it all might have been averted, had she told Barbara and her father of the plot. He tells her how he has devoted his life to preaching the words of the Savior in this far-off land.

an Indian, she had loved Paul. She knew her love was hopeless and that Paul loved Barbara. When she discovered Alvarado's plot she did just what her father would have done. She knew no other way. Peralta crosses himself. He realizes that if this crime goes unpunished his hold over his people will be gone. Yet he knows Natoma has acted according to her lights.

In the following scene an acolyte lights the tapers on the altar and the mission bells are rung and the church fills. Peralta from the pulpit calls attention to the crime which has been committed, but nevertheless his first duty of the day is to carry out the wishes of the good and beloved Dona Barbara de la Guerra, of sainted memory. This is the day and this is the will. It provides for the distribution of bullocks and sheep among the poor of Santa Barbara, each Easter and Christmas. On the Alcalde is bestowed 10,000 pistoles, the income of which shall be allotted each year for the fete day of Santa Barbara. The remainder is bequeathed to the daughter, Barbara.

Then Peralta turns to Natoma and says:

"A crime has been committed and blood has been shed. The accused admits the guilt. We are far from the rest of the world, alone, a little band, among the savage kind, and punishment must follow. To take the law into one's own hand is no excuse, and yet it is decreed that no man's soult cannot be saved. Behold the punishment we inflict."

The dors of the monastery open and a procession of nuns, headed by the Lady Superior, enters the church. They approach the altar and surround Natoma. One nun loosens her hair, which tumbles down; others quickly divest her of her jacket, and in a moment she stands before the congregation as Natoma, dressed as a nun.

The crowd cries, "Natoma!"

Barbara would rush forward but her father stops her. Slowly the procession of nuns starts from the altar down the center toward the monastery. The nuns pass through first; Natoma follows behind. As she reaches Paul and Barbara she pauses and takes an amulet from around her neck and places it around Paul's neck. She beckons to Barbara, who comes out into the aisle where Natoma joins her hands with Paul's. They kneel in the aisle, and all kneel in the pews. Natoma passes on, turning toward the monastery door, where she pauses and takes one last look back; and then the monastery dors close behind her.

The music then rises in a final anthem and Gloria with Paul and Barbara kneeling in the center aisle facing the altar.

Father Peralta, facing the congregation, holds his hand aloft, in benediction.

TWO BIG SHOWS COMING.

Jefferson DeAngelis at Hamburger's Majestic When "Dollar Princess" Is at the Mason.

Two big musical shows are due to compete in Los Angeles next week.

Jefferson DeAngelis, who has not visited the Coast in ten years, will play at the Hamburger Majestic Theater in his newest piece, "The Beauty Spot," beginning next Sunday night. This altogether frivolous vehicle was quite a success on Broadway last year, and Marguerite Clark, among others, was declared to have an especially captivating role.

"The Dollar Princess" is the Eu-er was "The Beauty Spot," for that matter—it was a popular success, and remained among the white lights a very long time.

Good companies are promised with both shows.

CUMNOCK SCHOOL.

The senior class of Cumnock School gave an interesting and entertaining group of plays on Friday evening, January 6. The class has been studying modern drama for some months under Miss Willamene Wilkes. As a great deal of interest has been developed along these lines, the Dramatic and Book Sections of the Ebell Club, and the Dramatic Section of the Friday Morning Club were invited as special guests. The first play, "The Intruder," by Maeterlinck, was very finished in its somber pathos. The grandfather was a potent part, played well by Miss Louise Draper. Miss Cora Glass, Miss Carolina Abrams, Miss Yetiva Smith, Miss Hazel LaCroix and Miss Hazel Bly played the other parts admirably. W. B. Yeats's "Cathleen Ni Houlihan," full of the superstition and patriotism of the Irish, was acceptably presented. Miss Ferris, as the Poor Old Woman, lent the strain of minor to the production, while the other parts—full of the plebian peasant atmosphere—were well taken by Miss Burtner, Miss Merrill, Miss Poppe and Miss Howell. The third and last play was "The Rising of the Moon," by Lady Gregory. It was full of humor and subtleness and was well received. The parts were taken by Miss Smith, Miss Poppe, Miss Abrams and Miss Glass.

The Week.

GREEN-EYE GIRL AT BELASCO.

"POLLY OF THE CIRCUS" RETURNS TO MASON.

"Gentleman From Mississippi" to Be Seen at Hamburger Majestic. Continuances at Grand and Burbank—Vaudeville at the Orpheum, Los Angeles and Pantages.

"The Girl wth the Green Eyes" will be played at the Belasco theater this week by Lewis S. Stone and the Belasco-Blackwood organization. The play is no stranger to the Belasco clientele. This week's revival, however, will afford Eleanor Gordan a fine chance to display her most effective acting in the role of Jinny Austin, her favorite part. Mr. Stone as Jack Austin will be seen in a part that is distinctly to his liking, while Miss Farrington, in a typical Farrington role, should prove a delight. Mr. Vivian, Mr. Yerance, Mr. Applebee, Mr. Giblyn, Mr. Bacon, Miss Sullivan and others of the Belasco company will be concerned in the production of "The Girl with the Green Eyes," as will a number of specially engaged players.

In this piece the author has supplied a strong and always interesting story concerning the marriage of a young Yale student to a servant in a New Haven boarding house. The ceremony is kept secret, but a year afterward the same young man falls in love with the brother-in-law of the young Y chap, discovers the secret and tries assist in straightening out the tan Here enters the "girl with the gr eyes" in the person of the wife of well-meaning Jack Austin. She p sesses such an extraordinary jeal disposition that from childhood parents have called her the "girl w the green eyes." She immediately m takes her husband's good intenti toward her own brother and his pair wives and accuses him of being love with one of the girls. This cau a vast amount of confusion and bri to the young Mrs. Austin so mu trouble that she makes an unsuccess attempt to asphyxiate herself.

The scenes of "The Girl with Green Eyes" are located in Brook and in Rome, Italy, the latter city a its points of interest affording a ca tal chance for the introduction of crowd of Cook's tourists in charge, a cockney guide whose descriptions some of the Eternal City's show pla are inimitable.

Frederic Thompson's producti "Polly of the Circus," with one of youngest stars, Ida St. Leon, will seen at the Mason Operahouse, op ing Monday. In the construction this remarkably successful drama M Mayo went far off the beaten path playwrights and achieved a story refreshing as it is original, the p of Polly showing with admirable fi ity the life of a pretty little cir rider and the doings in the mys land behind the scenes in the big te as well as pictures of the daily eve of a small village in the Middle Wes

Polly, from whom the play deri its title, is the head of the circus, a having been severely injured by a from her horse, is carried to the p sonage, adjoining the circus lot. recovery of health under the supe sion of the village preacher forms basis for one of the prettiest love st ies given to the stage in many a d From the first curtain to the last, interest is well sustained, while the scenes required for the development the plot, give opportunity for elabor scenic productions

The company engaged in its pres tation is said to be unusually com tent.

The attraction at the Hamburger M jestic for the week beginning toni will be "A Gentleman from Mis sippi," under the direction of Willi A. Brady. The play is a clever com written around a stout and genial M sissippi planter, William Langdon, w has been newly elected to the Uni States Senate. Representatives of trusts have engineered his election, he is deemed to be just the man t can mould to their own purpo through feelings of gratitude to supposed friends who put him the Langdon arrives in Washington w his daughters and takes up his quart at the one time famous haunt statesmen, the International Ho Here he is interviewed by a yo newspaper correspondent, Bud Ha who impresses the new Senator so orably that he offers Bud the po secretary. Bud, catching a glimp the Senator's youngest daught cepts. He proves a valuable a pilots Langdon safely through gerous places. A trap is set f don to compel him to work fo tablishment of a naval base at in Mississippi on the Gulf of where the politicians have in heavily in land. Bud discovers plot and helps Langdon defeat scheme and saves his honor and tune. [illegible] rewards him [illegible] omedy. The cast includes Robert A. ischer as Senator Langdon and John utler as Bud Haines, the newspaper porter. Others of the company are ohn Arthur, W. H. Townsend, Arthur . Ebbets, Thomas A. Irwin, Ernest vers, Frank Hartwell, E. H. Bender, 'alter Pollock, George H. Palmer, eah Beard, Jane Otey and Mitchell obinson.

Walter De Leon's musical comedy of ollege life, "The Campus," which Fers Hartman and his company proiced at the Grand Opera House last eek, has scored a genuine success and is proved such a popular offering at Mr. Hartman will continue it for nother week, commencing with the sual Sunday matinee.

Among the song numbers which are ow heard whistled and hummed outde of the Grand are "The Girl That ikes Me," and "Before You're Old," oth of which have pretty melody and ever lyrics; a rousing "Pipe and ein Song," a delightful waltz song, The Same Old Love;" "The Old Gym eps," and "Spooks."

Mr. De Leon himself has never apeared to better advantage than as obby Short, a breezy young healthy merican college boy who is the 'varty yell leader. Ferris Hartman is ontributing a clever characterization ' the old German janitor, who was ice a professor in the University of eidelberg and who has been comelled to leave the Fatherland because insisted upon talking Socialism and riticising the army.

Myrtle Dingwall after an absence of wo weeks, is again seen in the cast nd is heard in three solos. Little Muggins" Davies makes a chic, viacious Nellie Perkins; Josie Hart is ell cast as the college widow, Boby Leonard as "Fat" is doing by far e best work since his career with the artman company and Joseph Fogrty makes a dignified professor.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer," undoubtlly the most entertaining comedyrama staged at the Burbank this seaon, will be repeated for the week beinning with the matinee today. Quincy Adams Sawyer" is entertaing because it does not pretend to be ything else. It is a lively picture of community back in New England, here a number of incidents occur in uick succession, and give occasion for uch merriment, with an undertone of athos which gives the piece human terest without allowing it at any me to become sad.

The cause of all the rumpus is the rival of an energetic youth from oston in a quiet village. It has about e same effect as putting a whale in millpond. It is one of those neighorhoods where everyone knows everyne else's private affairs, so Quincy dams Sawyer soon becomes tangled in the lives of half the natives. hen the fun begins. The city youth nocks out the village bully, buys the illage store, straightens out the vilge romance which is going awry, utwits the village mischief-maker, nd finally marries the village belle afr he has her blindness cured. He is e busiest little person you ever saw. All this time the country folk, picured in delightful types, some groesque, some lovable, are enjoying hemselves at their impromptu parliaents at the general store, at the usking bee and other gatherings. All e members of the Burbank company nd a dozen extra players are required. Following "Quincy Adams Sawyer," ee Arthur's "The Fox," will be givn its premiere.

Mirth and mystery, with a touch of echnical skill, are the elements which ombine on the new Orpheum bill.

Mr. Hymack heads the new aggregaon, and furnishes the mystery, in arge doses. Just what Hymack does best represented by a highly indiidualized human question mark. He an Englishman who appears as "the hameleon comedian." In this role, he oes some remarkable changes of cosime, character and pose, before the yes of his audience, which is said to unable to do more than guess how is done. He appears, for instance, in d gloves, which change to green and en to brown right in front of the ill glare of the lights, yet no one can y how he does this. Other antics of e same sort are played by other porons of his wearing apparel. Hymack alone in his class, as a rapid change rtist.

Harlan E. Knight with an allegedly ood little company, comes in a sketch y Una Clayton, founded on life, called The Chalk Line." Up in Maine live wo old duffers who have one room and severe grouch. A chalk line divides heir quarters, and neither dares tressass upon the other. How a girl comes to their lives and works out their estinies to a happy union is the little ory, in which some clever character ork develops as it goes along. The ttings, accessories and atmosphere re retained.

The Four Vanis are declared the remier aerialists of today, and the uintette of them do feats, singly and gether, that are startling. On the ire, both boys and girls are equally t home, and the costuming of their ct, the perfection of their training, nd the things they do, make it stand uite apart.

Hilda Thomas and Lou Hall have a it called "The Substitute" that is r fun only. Hall as the rube is clever, d Miss Thomas finds him an excellent il for her own high-grade specialties. Remaining another week are "Marelous Griffith," the human marvel at gures, Cook and Lorenz, Quigley rothers, and Scheda, while new otion pictures will complete the ary of talent.

The dates for the Orpheum road show e January 23 and 30, with Alice Lloyd, e peerless little English comedienne, the second week feature.

Another attractive vaudeville proramme of seven new acts will open the Los Angeles on Monday afteroon, headed by the well-known team vaudevillians, Frederick Hallen and ollie Fuller who for their present ur are appearing in Fred J. Bean's one-act comedy, "A Lesson at P.M."

Hallen and Fuller are known as genine funmakers, and are well liked and lways welcomed by the theater-going ublic. The story of their skit is all bout a jealous wife, a careless husand and a burglar—a friend who nows his business and does it.

Of second importance on the new bill re the Rials, two eccentric comedy crobats who were recently imported om Europe especially for the "S. & C." ircuit. The Rials's work is declared r above the ordinary and they perrm their feats without the usual -play that is characteristic of such ts.

Another important member of the w bill is Thomas Potter Dunn. It is ifficult to say in which line Mr. Dunn xcells, whether it is in his impernations, his singing of popular pardies or the rattling good stories he s to tell. In the little vaudeville t he is offering, he shows himself to vantage in all three lines and adds the three a personality that is aging.

entroloquists Alf Camm and ra, together with "chuck," in their ng, "Ventrolo-Drama," should add novelty and fun on the new bill. act is brand new and will be be a decided novelty in this ers on the new bill will be Beatcire ert, a dainty little singing comne, and the Seven Zingari Singwho will furnish the musical porof the programme. Exclusive of new acts [illegible] the comedy act upon the Pantages bill for the week starting Monday. It is said to be the largest act of its kind upon the vaudeville stage today. Featured among the menage stock are the "Good Night" horse and the "dancing horse," a duo of equine aristocrats that demonstrate unusual intelligence, and the highest development in training. The "Good Night" horse dresses himself in modish male attire, then undresses himself and, crawling into a "regular" brass bed, blows out the candle and goes to sleep. The dancing horse has been taught a number of steps and also the waltz.

The R.A.G. trio are called clever entertainers, both musically and in a comedy vein. Stevenso and Nugent are excellent singers and eccentric dancers who have many attractive costume changes and a budget of the latest song hits; Charles Howe and a supporting company will present the serious side of the programme in the one act dramatic playlet, "A Broken Heart." Special scenery and electrical effects add effectiveness to the little play.

Mlle. Haney and her company will offer an original number in her series of poses. Upon her figure will be thrown screens, showing the latest Paris and London creations of the costumer's art.

Vardaman will show artistic feminine types.

New moving pictures close the bill.

Luna Park.

"Mysterio," Arabian horse from the Wintergarten of Berlin, will be the new attraction at Luna Park, Washington and Main streets, for the week commencing today. The local management have imported this act from Europe at considerable expense, and, according to their assertion, will present it for the first time in the United States, before it is seen upon any of the big vaudeville circuits. "Mysterio" is said to be possessed of well-nigh human intelligence and, in addition to the regulation tricks of fancy dancing, leaping and running, can perform mathematical problems, tell the letters of the alphabet and give correct geographical answers.

The big show of the Southern California Poultry Fanciers' Association, which, with its 1800 rare birds, has occupied the pavilion for the past four days, has been extended in time, and will remain until Tuesday. There is an extraordinary collection of feathered prize-winners in evidence.

This week there will be added to the park's daily routine, especially for the amusement of the children who visit the premises, the intelligent antics of a group of a dozen trained seals. These will occupy the big rocked tank near the main offices and will disport all day long in the sun and, in addition, will give two regular performances, afternoon and evening, of all their feats.

The Schilzony Band, during this fair weather, has been giving its afternoon concerts in the big pavilion erected over Luna Lake, while the seating capacity on the benches under the shade trees surrounding this body of water has offered comfortable quarters for the many listeners. These outdoor concerts will be continued during good weather.

Life's Opposites.

This life is made of good and ill;
  Not equally their gifts divide;
Our souls with comfort it should fill
  That more is on the better side.

The years are made of night and day;
  Our hearts with joy might speak aloud.
To know, for sorrow to repay,
  Ther is more light and sun than cloud.

Our lives are filled with hopes and fears
  And though each follows each in flight,
Together take the changing years,
  Hopes last the longer, shine more bright.

Our days are filled with joy and woe;
  And, though such opposites they are,
They follow us where'er we go,
  But joy fills larger space by far.

Count up the things that cause us grief,
  The good the years unto us bring,
And truly it is my belief

TITO RICORDI, MUSICAL MORGAN.

EUROPE BIDS FAIR TO FOLLOW TRUST-MAKING EXAMPLE.

Great Milanese House Has Control of Puccini's Revenue-Bringing Works, Rules in New York, London, Paris and Berlin, and Is Planning Great Opera in English.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Europe is taking America at her own game.

We send trusts abroad to corner iron and cattle and crops, even money, and the time is at hand when Europe will respond with an artistic trust.

In the economy of nature, not all the good things are given to one animal. American genius can beat the world on railroads and oil, but so far it has been not so monopolistically fortunate in the arts.

But the old proverb of "Monkey see, monkey do," holds good in the realm of the aesthetic, as well as in commerce, and, having observed some of our methods of benevolent assimilation in things mundane, the European, who has long been the unwilling subject of these little pleasantries, prepares to retaliate in the first thing that comes to hand, and that first thing is art.

The nearest likeness to a musical trust is the House of Ricordi. This firm of Italian publishers, with offices in Milan, are more than printers of scores and issuers of musical books. They are a family of astute men whose shrewdness would well adorn the office equipment of J. Pierpont Morgan, and their hand is upon the music of every country.

Tito Ricordi, the youngest and most aggressive member of the firm, is at present in New York, where he "permitted" an American premier for "The Girl of the Golden West." He now proposes English opera for all of the larger cities of the United States, and it is highly possible that next year, with the co-operation of the Boston and Metropolitan Opera Companies, which he can certainly have at the wave of his hand, he may put his scheme into operation.

A friendly affiliation of the Ricordi house, Giulio Gatti-Casazza, is already emperor of New York's greater music. The Boston opera is, of course, deeply indebted to the Ricordis. Their London, Paris and Berlin relations are cemented by ties almost as strong as those of New York. this remarkable family would be complete.

The basis of the Ricordi operatic mastery is the Puccini operas, all of which they control.

We might chafe under a foreign yoke, but with our example in worldly affairs, can you blame them?

—o—

Gerville-Reache.

Attune your ears, all ye music-lovers; Jeanne Gerville-Reache is coming to town, and will make the Friday symphony glorious.

How little this means to many people! How little it meant to me on a November evening two years ago, as, at 8:30 o'clock, I sat in a Manhattan orchestra chair and read her name on a programme of "Samson et Delila." But how much it meant to me when, at 11 o'clock, I was leaving the theater with her majestic voice still re-echoing in my ears!

The French contralto will sing, with the symphony, an excerpt from Gounod's "Queen of Sheba," and the great aria from Gluck's "Orpheus."

Not at all behindhand is Mr. Hamilton's programme.

His big band will play the Sinding symphony in D Minor, op. 21; Carl Busch's "Prologue to the Passing of Arthur," and the brazen "Sakuntala" overture of Goldmark.

—o—

Kocian Again.

Jaroslav Kocian, the faultless technician who charmed a capacity audience at Simpson Auditorium last Thursday evening, is still in Los Angeles, and many lovers of violin music as interpreted by a master will doubtless be glad to hear that Herr Kocian and his accompanist, Maurice Eisner, are to give another concert at Simpson, Tuesday evening.

There will be an entire change of numbers, and Mr. Kocian will play the Greig C Minor sonata, the Bach Andante and Allegro Assia, Kocian's "Hymn to Spring," Godard's "En Regardant les ciel," a Sevcik Mazurka and the Wieniawski "Faust" fantasie.

—o—

McBurney Recital.

Thomas N. McBurney, Chicago baritone who is here visiting relatives in Hollywood, will give a recital at Simpson Auditorium next Thursday evening. Mr. McBurney will be assisted by Mrs. M. Hennion Robinson, at the piano.

His programme includes a variety of classics in French and Italian, powerful modern German songs by Sinding, Kaun and Weingartner, and several beautiful modern ballads in English.

New Songs.

Congratulations to Charles Farwell Edson on his new ballad, "Over the Rush of the River." It has been on my desk quite some time, but not until now have I had a chance to examine it closely. Both words and melody are the products of Mr. Edson's fruitful imagination, and in "Slumber Song," from the German of Hoffman von Fallersben. Strength and sentiment are well combined in this song. The arrangement is by A. D. Hunter.

—o—

Von Stein.

The semi-annual distribution of scholarships of the Von Stein Academy will take place next Thursday evening at the Auditorium of the Gamut Club, on South Hope street. As usual, there will be an excellent musical programme.

At the 191st pupils recital, given at the school on the last evening of the old year, the following programme was presented: Helen Perry, Third Movement Sonatina in C, (Clementi;) Blanche Perry, Petite Tarantelle, (Heller;) Dorothy Garrison, Spinning Song, (Elmenreich;) Stella Smoot, First Movement Sonatina, (Clementi;) Thela Wyman, Etude, (Lebert;) Ruth Whittington, Sonatina, (Kuhlau;) Lance D. Smith, Sonatina, (Kuhlau;) Lloyd Herron, Violin Solo, Bach Air G string; Dorothea Vogel, Sonatina, (Kuhlau;) Anna Hayes, Album Leaf, (Kirchner;) Hazel von Stein, In the Month of May, (Behr;) Kenneth Tipton, L'Avalanche, (Heller;) Selma Siegelman, Chacone, (Durand;) Lola Diegel, Souvenir, (Jadassohn;) Augusta McGilliard, Venetian Boat Song, (Mendelssohn;) Genevieve Edwards, Feu Folet, (Liebling;) Reta Mitchell, Sonatina Op 14 No. 1, (Beethoven;) Ethel Leaver, Rondo in C, (Beethoven;) Nellie Brigham, Valse in E Minor, (Chopin;) Mona Newkirk, Waltz in A flat, (Chopin;) Clarence Bates, Sonata in D Major, (Beethoven;) Clara Russakov, Valse Caprice, (Strauss Tausig.)

Victor Records.

The January list of Victor records, while without novelties, yet contains some standard works presented in faultless style.

Among these is the ever-beautiful "Porgi Amor," from "Nozze di Figaro," sung by Gadski in her characteristically unimpeachable style.

Admirers of that marvelous young violinist, Mischa Elman, will delight in his entirely individual rendition of the Wilhelmj arrangement of the "Meistersinger" prize song. An air from Reyer's "Sigurd," and the more familiar "Couplets de Vulcan," from Gounod's "Philemon at Baucis," from the offering of Marcel Journet, reliable bass who has long been a pillar in the Victor temple of audible art.

Even Williams and George Hamlin, tenors who sing in English and thus delight thousands to whom the possibly greater productions of the foreigners, in foreign languages, are a closed book, have happy holiday selections.

John McCormack, the well-nigh faultless Irishman, sings "Dear Little Shamrock," and "My Lagan Love," an old Irish ballad, in a voice of warm silver.

Fritz Kreisler vouchsafes the "Variations" of Tartini, the "Lebesfreund," an old Vienna waltz, and his own "Caprice Viennois." The last is the best, and is a beautiful example of the human note which is predominant in Kreisler's playing.

LEVY ENDS CAFE CHANTANT.

Conclusion of an Interesting Experiment in Concert-Giving—Kammermeyer Orchestra Remains.

Al Levy terminated the existence of his "Cafe Chantant" at midnight last night.

"No more for me," said the little caterer impresario yesterday "at least for the present. I don't believe Los Angeles wants a combination of food and high-class vocal music."

corner of Third and Main streets. A number of artists of note have appeared in brilliant selections, and the series of its concerts reached its apogee, in all probability, during the engagement of Johanna Kristoffy, a Viennese prima-donna who scored a local hit not only by her singing, but as well by her beauty and magnetic personality. Mlle. Kristoffy remained as a principal attraction more than two months.

The Kristoffy engagement was really fatal, however, for it invited a succession of similar acts which continued, in fact, until last week. The manager could hardly be blamed for endeavoring to duplicate a triumph, nor was it the fault of the singers that they were not all Viennese and bewitching.

One feature of the late concerts, however, has been retained by Mr. Levy. This is the Kammermeyer orchestra, which has provided a fine menu of classic and popular melody there for the past six months.

As the leader of a cafe orchestra, E. C. Kammermeyer seems to have struck the proper medium of popular favor, and his efforts have been warmly applauded.

In the future the orchestra, somewhat enlarged, will occupy the stage upon which the singers sang. Good and varied programmes are promised.

Moore's band, at Hollenbeck Park, will present a programme this afternoon, including Kiesler's "Wien Thuringen" waltz, a selection from Donizetti's "Lucrezia Borgia," the Suppe "Morning, Noon and Night" overture,

—o—

Through the Old World.

Mrs. Lilian C. Rand and her daughter, Miss Lilian Rand, were in Rome on December 16, at the Hotel Boston. Leaving New York, October 1 and arriving in London October 7, they have been touring "the effete monarchies of the Old World" ever since. From London they journeyed, successively, to Paris, Marseilles, Genoa, Firenze, Venice and Rome, enjoying themselves everywhere. After staying in Rome and its always interesting environs for several days or weeks, they were destined, at the latest private advices received from them, for Egypt and the Holy Land, expecting to return to their Los Angeles home via France and England, in the spring of 1911, thus completing a journey, rich in incident, lore and enjoyment, lasting, approximately, six months. This will have been mainly for the benefit of the one daughter, and in pursuance of a loving plan and a filial pledge, long since made by her parents, the purpose of which was to give their child the benefit of a tour of Europe and other countries beyond the seas, covering half a year. Before the death of Mr. Rand it was arranged between the father and mother that when the young lady reached the age of 18 such a trip should be taken and a fund was set aside for that purpose. The letters written home by both the mother and daughter are said to be full of interesting description, incident and enthusiasm.

To Honor Nieces.

Anaheim.

ONE of the most elaborate and perfectly arranged weddings that has ever occurred in the Mother Colony was celebrated on Monday, January 2 at 11 o'clock, when Agnes Lulu Rimpau became the bride of Edward Lamont Olmstead. Father Dibble of the Catholic Church officiated. The wedding occurred in the newly furnished Knights of Columbus Hall, which was artistically decorated under the direction of Mrs. Cornelia Gates, the color scheme being white and green.

Queen Emeline of the recent Orange County Carnival at Santa Ana, and her court, composed the bridesmaids, and were Miss Emeline Peterson, Juanita Metzgar, Edna Hamaker of Santa Ana, Helen Kramer and Edna Brann of Orange. Agnes Hardin of Buena Park and little Dorothy Warren acted as flower girl. The sister of the groom, Miss Nellie Olmstead of Redlands, acted as maid of honor, her gown being of pink messaline with gold trimmings. Pink hair ornaments were worn and pink carnations carried.

The bride, a handsome brunette, presented a picture long to be remembered as she entered the hall leaning on the arm of her father, Adolph Rimpau, who gave her away. She was elaborately gowned in a creation of white messaline with over lace. The trimmings consisted of heavy pearl passimenterie. It was cut en traine. The long flowery veil fell in graceful folds and was caught up in the hair by a spray of natural orange blossoms plucked by broadcloth, a coat suit of the military effect. She wore a white chiffon picture hat with trimmings of gold lace rose buds. Her white furs were ornamented with white lilies-of-the-valley.

Stephen Rimpau, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

The bride is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Rimpau, who are pioneers of Anaheim, and belong to one of the aristocratic Spanish families of the Southland. She is a native daughter and belonged to Queen Emeline's court during the recent Orange County Carnival. The groom, whose home has heretofore been in Redlands, is now engaged in business in Orange county, and has won many friends since he located here.

Pomona.

MRS EDWARD PARKER was hostess to the Ganz Genung Card Club Tuesday afternoon.

The Shakespeare Round Table of the Pomona Ebell was entertained by Mrs. Theodore Krysto on Wednesday.

The "D" Club was entertained at a 7 o'clock dinner at the Elks' Club on Tuesday evening and afterward enjoyed an evening at cards at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Midgley.

Mrs. Henry Greenwood Tinsley entertained at a bridge luncheon Thursday afternoon. Azalias formed the chief decorations, and a delicious luncheon was served preceding the game. The guests were Mmes. G. S. Phillips, A. M. Dole, W. S. Hufford, Jessie Burleson, G. B. Bonham, C. M. Stone, A. T. Richardson; Misses Coates, Graham, Pierce.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis S. Jones of Cucamonga avenue entertained at dinner at Levy's Cafe, Los Angeles, on Monday evening in honor of Miss Grace Shoemaker, whose marriage to Charles Howard Barnett of Redondo will occur at the Pomona Ebell Club House here next month.

Miss Bertha Yeend entertained at cards at the home of her parents on Tuesday afternoon a number of her young friends. The guests included Misses Bollerman of Walla Walla, Wash., Miss Mary Wertz of Cleveland, O., Misses McKim, Estep, Dodd, Findley, Nesbit, Weber, Poston and Eva Yend.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clark entertained the Monday Evening "500" Club at their home the first of the week. The house was attractively decorated with carnations and the guests enjoyed an oyster supper after the game. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Fich, Mr and Mrs. Elliott Hinman, Mr and Mrs. Walter M. Avis, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. George Belcher, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Martin, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Norton were substitutes for Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, who were unable to be present on account of the illness of Mr. Taylor. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clark and Arthur Clark were also present.

Highland.

A WEDDING of much interest in Highland and one that came as a great surprise to the groom's host of friends, was solemnized in the parlors of the Van Nuys Hotel in Los Angeles last Saturday evening at 5 o'clock, when Moncelias R. Yerkes was married to Miss Capitola Houser of Covina. The bride, who is a charming lar. His many friends will be glad to welcome his bride when they return from their honeymoon in San Diego.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Dodge and son Donald came from Chicago to spend Christmas week with Mrs. Dodge's sister, Mrs. G. W. Parsons and her family. They left Thursday on the Santa Fe Limited for the East.

Mrs. Lawrence Mosely returned Thursday from a week's visit in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Randall and N. Rheinhart came up from Los Angeles in their machine and spent New Year's with relatives here.

Mrs. Dorcas Randall and Mrs. Gratz Barnes entertained informally on Saturday afternoon for their guest, Miss Brigham of Los Angeles who spent holiday week with them.

Tropico.

IT has been the custom of James P. Scott and his sister, Miss Nellie Scott, for the past few years, to decorate a large Monterey pine, that adorns the lawn, at the Scott residence on Glendale avenue, with the holiday motif and then load the tree with many Christmas remembrances for the children who reside in the vicinity of the Scott residence. This year the usual custom was observed and twenty-seven of the youngsters in the Scott neighborhood were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Scott. After enjoying a number of childish sports and games the children with the host and hostess assembled around the huge Christmas tree and received the many pretty presents that were suspended from the branches of the beautiful pine tree. Above the mirth and laughter of the children could be heard the soughing of the wind through the branches of the stately Monterey pine.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Harris and daughter, Lucile, of San Fernando, accompanied by Mr. Harris's mother, Mrs. M R. Harris, of Keokuk, Iowa, were the guests of Mrs. Harris's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Light, the first of the week.

Mrs. E. C. Pierce of Tacoma, Wash., is the guest of Mrs. C. M. Scott of Gendale avenue.

Mrs. James R. Maxwell of Park avenue, is entertaining as her guest her sister, Mrs. Stella Boyton of Colorado Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kaste, who have been the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Leppleman the past month, returned to their home in Chicago the latter part of the week.

Mrs. Flora Jackson of Ventura, who has been spending the holiday sea-

Clearance Sale

Bootery Smart Shoes For Wome

Beginning

Monday, January 9th.

New Clever Styles in Boots, Oxfords, Pumps and Evening Slippers that have made the Bootery famous and the most talked of shop in the country. One Big Opportunity for all to become familiar with the combination of value, quality and smart design in Bootery shoes, and to become acquainted with the business principles and methods of one of the greatest organizations in the shoe world.

This is not a sale of out-of-date styles, nor a sale of some rejected lot of factory floor goods, but a never-to-be-forgotten sale of the smartest shoes ever produced for women, and backed by the reputation of the Bootery. Never in the history of the shoe business, has there been shown, under one roof, such an array of smart original styles, shoes of beauty, character and distinction as shown at The Bootery this season and offered at this sale. We want every woman in Los Angeles and the adjacent country who appreciate smart footwear to take advantage of this one opportunity, not only for the unheard-of values we are giving but for the one to acquaint all with the character and quality values in the footwear we offer at all times at sensible prices.

The Bootery

is practically a new concern in Los Angeles, not quite two years old, catering exclusively to women, working on different methods and principles in shoe merchandising; our success has been the talk of the country. The stock carried is of the highest grades made in the world, and are sensibly priced. Our original styles and smart creations have established our leadership among the smartly dressed women, and are acknowledged by even our competitors to be the cleverest models produced in women's footwear. New York merchants, trade journals and leading fashion magazines have adopted and hailed original Bootery creations as style leaders. Again demonstrating that Los Angeles is among the style creators and fashion centers of the world.

Service

Extra Seating capacity and an increased force of salesmen has been provided, and it is our aim to give you the same prompt, courteous and intelligent service that has characterized the Bootery since opening We are extremely anxious to maintain our service and urge upon all that early morning shopping is much to your advantage as the values we are offering in new seasonable styles, are bound to crowd the shop to doors during the busy shopping hours.

We need at once a number of high-class salesmen. Only men of experience should apply: its not a case for beginners. We want men who are able and willing to understand the difference between serving a customer and merely selling her something. Call at once ready to go to work.

$2.85 At this price we include the best values ever offered at $4. Together with broken lines worth up to $5.50.

$3.85 for Smart, Exclusive Bootery Creations that are style setters at $5. At this price are also to be had broken lines that you will recognize as $6 and $6.50 values.

$4.85 Custom-made ready-to-wear boots, oxfords and pumps, made to bootery specifications by the best shoemakers in the world, [Garside & Sons, N. Y.] Sterling values to $7.50 specially priced $4.85.

This Sale is our supreme effort to acquaint all women with Bootery Smart Shoes for Women. These styles are endless in variety, (shown in all known and popular leathers used in footwear,) and the values are beyond belief and conception. We invite all who are strangers to Bootery Shoe Superiority to test it now at little expense.

Presenting a Series of the Most Daring Cut Prices in Years

75c to $1 Fancy Silks 49c
Fancy poplins, coteles and dotted pongee, in Alice, natural, wistaria, light blue, gray blue, Copenhagen and cedar. 75c to $1.00 values at 49c.

Several months ago we conceived the idea of holding an Annual Silk Sale in January. We sent our silk representative into the market with unlimited cash with the instructions that we wanted to make this a silk sale that would become a household word for values in Los Angeles.

—Surely he has lost no opportunity in assembling such a startling lot of silk values. For weeks the silks has been rolling into the Receiving Room until it looks as though they would never stop coming. Actual invoice figures show 17267 yards and every single yard in that lot at a daring cut price.

—Another point, nearly all the good weaves in plain and fancy silks are represented. Silks that are to be worn the coming spring and summer season.

—Think of being able to buy $1.50 chiffon poplins for 59c—$1.00 Louisenes for 59c—1000 yards of 24-inch pongee at 29c—$1.25 Peau de Cygne at 59c—35c Shantee Pongee 25c—39c to 59c Fancy Silks at 29c—$1.00 Persian silks at 59c—2000 yards of 85c to $1.25 silks at 69c.

—And so on through the list, the values fairly sparkle. Unquestionably it's to be the greatest silk sale ever presented in this city if values are a criterion.

—Additional selling space, additional salespeople, cashiers and wrappers and every other facility for quick and efficient handling of the great crowds that are to attend this sale have been provided for. Let nothing keep you away from the event, tell your neighbors. Such values are only possible at very long intervals.

Half and Less Fine Haviland China Dinnerware

Certain patterns of Haviland china dinnerware, as indicated by the numbers below, are patterns that we are closing out.
—Of course, some of the pieces of the dinnerware sets are missing, but perhaps the very pieces you need to fill in on your set is here. The prices are cut to half and less than half what they were marked. Such patterns as 22004, 22079, 21019, 1723, 4881. The reductions are as follows.

10,905 Yards, 25c and 35c Persian Lawns 12½c Yard

One of the big Eastern Mills was forced to dispose of in the neighborhood of 100,000 yards of these fine Persian lawns. 75 per cent. of the entire quantity was taken over by the big New York stores within a few hours after the sale opened. Broadway has inside information on this sale and wewere fortunate enough to secure 10,905 yards of it. That's a quantity, but these are great values. You'll want to buy them in bolt lots.

—Could anything be more timely just in advance of the spring season to be able to buy this beautiful 25c and 35c Persian lawn at the ridiculous price of 12½c.

—Remember these are not seconds nor imperfect goods, but absolutely new, perfect goods in full pieces, fine Persian lawns that you are always glad to buy at 25c and 35c. A one great sale feature from the 3rd floor for Monday. The quantity is large and yet we advise early selection for the merchandise should melt away at this price.

Great January Sale Feature

Car Load Linoleum and Oilcloth

A great car-load shipment of linoleum and floor oilcloth has just been unloaded in time for our greatest January event in floor coverings.

—40,000 pounds represented in 7000 yards of inlaid linoleum, printed linoleum and floor oilcloths in the different widths.

This purchase comes direct from one of the largest mills in the country, secured just at the time they were taking stock.

A great portion of the immense lot is in half rolls and some slight damages in the print enabled us to buy the merchandise under price, therefore we give you the opportunity of

Saving 25% to 50%

That the full importance of this sale may be brought to your attention we announce that a greater portion of the 3rd floor annex will be given over to the sale. It's an event that will eclipse all past efforts in floor oilcloths and linoleums. Note the savings, they tell their own story.

Men---100 Dozen New 50c Four-in-hands . . . 25

January Purchase

We say 50c four-in-hands for 25c because this neckwear is made up from the same specifications, from the same silks and in the same generous cuts as you will find in the 50c neckwear. Just one difference will you note. A single row of stitching in the neck band, instead of a double. One in a hundred would note this difference, and yet here they are, 100 dozen of them to sell at 25c.

It's the first big scoop in 1911 for the Men's Section—100 dozen, we wish there were 100 times 100 dozen. You'll buy them in half dozen lots when you see them, beautiful patterns.

Work Shirts 39c
Plain tan or blue work shirts for men. These have the full faced sleeve. Sizes 14½ to 17. Quite unusual to see such fine work shirts for 39c.

50c Underwear
Heavy jersey ribbed shirts or drawers, regular 50c garments, we sold cases of them. January clearance price sizes.

Men's $1.00 Underwear 75c
Heavy weight, natural color Australian wool shirts and drawers. A big value at the retail price of $1, save garment Monday.

ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

Osthaus and His Dogs.

A well-known painter of hunting dogs, Edmund H. Osthaus of New York and Toledo, came quietly to Los Angeles a few weeks ago, to remain here all winter, and to go to Mississippi when the hunting season opens in the South. In February he will go to Bakersfield, to make sketches of dogs in action when the field trials take place there. Thus, in the pursuit of his calling as a painter of hunting dogs, he follows his quarry from north to south according to the season. He is himself a passionate devotee of the sport, and owns two prize-winning setter dogs.

Mr. Osthaus, who is a native of Hildesheim, Germany, came to America in 1883. He has a studio in Toledo, and for a few months in the winter season one in New York, where he paints portraits of famous hunting dogs. Like every other student of art, of course, he worked from the human figure, and even thought of becoming a painter of portraits of men and women, but always, from early childhood, he had loved and studied the ways of dogs—as a lad had gone on hunting expeditions with his father, in fact—and when free from the conventions of the Royal Academy in Dusseldorf he turned at once in the direction of his affections.

However, he does not entirely disdain the doing of a man's portrait. One of his most important canvases, ten feet long and proportionately high, almost big enough to be called a mural decoration, was painted last spring and contains a good portrait, that of Paul A. Rainey, the famous Mississippi sportsman. It represents Rainey returning from a wolf hunt in Texas. He is shown riding back to camp, the wolf over his saddle, the pack following.

The painter of dogs has already opened a studio in Los Angeles, in the Walker Theater building, and I found him hard at work on a group of pointer dogs the other day, one picture among the three or four that have just been started. When a dozen pictures of fair size are finished, it is his intention to hold an xhibition ih some downtown galley.

I found Osthaus exactly what I had expected him to be—a cheery, hearty, healthy, outdoors man, tanned to a nut brown by wind and sun, his brawny arms bared to the elbows while he wielded his brushes and talked to me at the same time.

I found him to be an enthusiast on the subject of the American hunting dog. "As compared with the English," said he, "the American foxhound is lighter and speedier. An English foxhound wouldn't catch up with a wolf in a week. The American goes wider and faster, because in this country he is expected to hunt out a wider range. He also can carry a cold trail and work out an old trail better. The English hound is more assisted in his hunting than the American. The same differences are in favor of the American pointer and setter, as compared with the English."

I glowed with pleasure at these praises of our home product in dogs, especially as I knew that the eulogist had studied the dog in the field both from the sportsman's and the painter's point of view. "Mr. Osthaus," said I, "I have read somewhere that no animal has any understanding or appreciation of art—that even a monkey, when confronted with a painted picture, will see nothing in it but meaningless streaks of paint. Is the statement true?"

The painted smiled. "Monkeys are no more intelligent than many humans, it seems. But I don't believe the statement you speak of is true—at least, it isn't true as regards some dogs I have known. One pointer, I remember, stood at attention for fully two minutes, on coming across one of my pictures which called for that particular pose on his part. You should have seen his discomfiture and shame when he discovered his mistake. It was very laughable."

Usually field trials are followed on horseback, but in order to make his sketches at any moment, Mr. Osthaus, who is a large, powerful man, often follows them on foot. It is said that he sometimes outwalks the horses through a week of all-day riding.

An eastern critic writes: "Dog men consider that Mr. Osthaus's pictures, and especially his dog portraits, perpetuate the real type of excellence in each breed as he paints it, and believe that, aside from their artistic merits, his pictures will be of great value to future historians of the sport."

The exhibition which this artist will hold in the spring will be looked forward to with great interest by lovers of sport as well as lovers of art.

Esthetic Impressions.

The costume portrait of the Countess Thamara de Swirsky which Piero Tozzi has been painting in Heinrich Schneider's studio on Figueroa street was finished last week, and on Thursday Mr. Schneider gave a reception—a delightful affair—in honor of the Russian dancer, the Italian painter and the American picture.

As we passed through the wicket and crossed the yard to the little red barn, the scene was so quiet that we scarcely realized there was any one inside, and we were quite unprepared for the beautiful tableau which held us as we entered the door. The twilight falling through the garden window was reflected in the glossy depths of an ebony piano-forte, before which, in the graceful folds of violet and fawn toilets, stood four beautiful blonde women, while beyond them the velvety shadows framed a pretty little stained glass window in delicate greens. The air was fragrant with the perfume of violets and the fumes which rose from a bowl of some nectar upon a table in the corner. It was a rare composition, denoting exquisite taste, enveloping the entering guest immediately in an atmosphere of art and refinement.

After greeting the four charming hostesses, one of whom was the beautiful Countess de Swirsky, whose portrait by the well-known Italian-American painter, Piero Tozzi, we had come to see and enjoy, we passed into the studio where the painter and his host, Heinrich Schneider the sculptor, were making their guests happy. Here another picture presented itself to absorb the artistic eye. The high green stained wooden walls of the studio were panelled with tall palm branches and hung with ropes of smilax, while pieces of lovely old Chinese brocades caught the light in their gold threads and soft faded colors. Against the farther wall upon an easel stood the portrait of the Countess in a [illegible] green Russian costume, blazing with jewels and surmounted with [illegible] quaint high head dress which added [illegible] bizarre dignity to the graceful pose, [illegible] hands crossed and back to back in one of the figures of her dance. The handling of the brush was free and sure, and the expression of the [illegible] full of subtlety and charm. [illegible] this elegant period, with its variety of stuffs and shades and styles, seemingly borrowed from every age and clime, while the golden rays from a branched candelabrum contended with the dying daylight until at last it usurped the field.

From time to time the Countess sat down to the piano and played harmonious compositions which blended with the scene, the Rachmaninoff prelude, the Beethoven "Moonlight" movement and McDowell's "Water Lily," and as we stood in shadowy corners and listened to her poetic and dramatic playing, it seemed as if some invisible old master was composing pictures with the guests as models and the studio for a setting.

The unfinished busts, wrapped in cloths upon their tall pedestals, were like silent spirits in the transports of creation, and seemed to hold forth an invitation to return some day and visit them. And whether we do or not, the memory of that hour will often return to charm.

As we emerged from the atmosphere of art and looked back at the little red barn in its innocent complaisance, we felt as though we had been in Wonderland through some magic door.

In the Blanchard Gallery.

An exhibition of pictures, landscapes and portraits, by Eugene C. Frank is now being held in the Blanchard Gallery. The exhibition opened last Wednesday evening with a reception, and the gallery was thrown open to the public on Thursday at 10 a. m.

The most of Mr. Frank's pictures are in oils, but he also shows a number of interesting water colors, scenes from Venice, where he painted for many summers

Mr. Frank came to Los Angeles from Pennsylvania a few years ago and has decided to throw his fortunes permanently with us. Last year he built himself a studio in Glendale, where he has a beautiful garden of several acres.

The present exhibition, which includes pictures painted in California, as well as in Europe, will receive further notice in next week's "Art and Artists."

ART NOTES.

Rob Wagner, who spent the Christmas holidays in Santa Barbara, has returned to Los Angeles.

Thirty-three of John Donovan's marines were sold rrom the exhibition of thirty-five held in the Steckel gallery. The artist feels so much encouraged by western appreciation of his work that he has decided not to go to New York after all. He left the other day for Santa Barbara and San Francisco, where he will open negotiations for exhibitions of pictures.

Helma Heynsen Jahn has just painted a pastel portrait of Mrs. George Fishburn, senior, a charming old lady with a fine, strong face. Mrs. Jahn's understanding of her sitter's character is admirable and true, and this is one of the most delightful of her more recent portraits.

Last year Susie M. Dando exhibited at the Kanst gallery a collection of charming flower studies which attracted a great deal of attention. She is about to hold anotner exhibition of her late work in the same gallery, from January 23 to February 4, with a reception on the first afternoon and evening.

Jack Gage Stark has been in Santa Barbara since October, after a summer in New York City. He writes me that he is "helping Clarence Mattei hold down Wagner's old studio," and that he is still trying "to learn things about color." He has been experimenting in half a dozen other manners of painting, but still finds "strong and broken color the most satisfactory."

At Kanst's a little exhibition of twelve or fourteen water colors from the brush of E. Galien-Laloue will be held for about two weeks beginning tomorrow. They are studies of Parisian squares and boulevards, and are full of life, color and movement.

Among the exhibitors at the recent show of the American Water Color Society in New York is Norman St. Clair who contributed three of his fine landscapes of California.

Harvey C. Everts is in Ballymahon, County Langford, Ireland. A Christmas card from him reached me the other day. He and his wife will remain in Europe for a year. They will shortly go to Dublin, where Mr. Everts hopes to find some good subjects. He has already painted a number of street scenes, and worked for some time in Auburn on the ruins of Oliver Goldsmith's old home, which he declares are a fine subject for a picture. This is a large canvas, 28x36.

To a Nun.

BY MAURINE HATHAWAY.

I watch as you hurry with swit tireless feet
Here and there, on your errands of love,
And your face is so gentle and placidly sweet,
With its radiant light from above.

That I wonder sometimes, are you always so mild?
(Your cheeks have a healthful glow.)
Does your heart never cry with a mad longing, wild
For the life that the worldlings know?

Is your soul never hurled back again to the world
And lost for a time in a dream.
Does your blood never thrill like a spring flooded rill
Or are you as cold as you seem?

Do your lips never yearn for the cling of a kiss,
As they send gentle prayers above,
Do no flames in your breast ever flare up and hiss,
And demand that you quench them with love?

Does your breath never quicken, your cheeks never flush,
Do your lips with no wild words part,
Does your blood never take to your brain with a rush,
A challenge of war from your heart?

Do your arms never tremble and pulsate and thrill
And burn with a fierce desire,
Do you never once feel you could smother and kill
And crush in embraces of fire?

In the world that you left was there never some one
You would brave even hades to see,
For whom you'd renounce e'en the veil of the nun,
Just to meet once again—you and he?

Would you never give life but to gaze on his charms
Or bask in the glow of his smile,
Would you never give Heaven to lie in his arms,
And forget every vow for a while?

Or are you so filled with the power of grace,
So firm with a strength within,
That you can retire to some lone secret place
And war with your heart—and win?

Escape of a Pennsylvania Jury.

"Bargain stands as it is. Each party pays half the costs. Jury escaped." This is the entry in the docket of Justice of the Peace Thomas Allen of Mercer county after a suit over a horse trade. The jury retired and soon a slip of paper was handed Justice Allen bearing the jury's verdict that the deal should stand and the costs be divided between the litigants. Declaring that no such verdict should be rendered in his court, the justice went to the jury

SLEPT THIRTY-TWO YEARS.

Remarkable Experience of a Swedish Girl Who Now Sleeps Normally and Has Apparently Recovered.

[The Wasp:] After an unbroken sleep extending over thirty-two years, Caroline Kronboeck has awakened to find the world changed considerably. This extraordinary case of somnolence has occurred at Oknoe, a village in Sweden, and is described by Dr. Frederstroem of the Stockholm Hospital. Caroline Kronboeck fell asleep when she was 14, in the winter of 1877-78, and remained until recently in a comatose condition. Consciousness returned to her suddenly. She did not know where she was; didn't recognize her father or the room where she had lain thirty-two years. Presently she felt hungry and asked for a baked herring—her favorite dish when she was a young girl. She said she felt tired and somewhat dazed. Her memory came back by degrees, how she walked half a mile to school, the name of the teacher and those of her school friends and what the local parson looked like. She remembered having a toothache, but could not say whether she had suffered from headaches or whether she had hurt her head. As to her long period of suspended consciousness her mind is a complete blank. It took her a month to learn to walk again and her eyes remain very sensitive to light, but her appetite was excellent from the time of her awakening, and she has since slept normally every night. Strange to say, she has forgotten nothing of what she learned at school and at once wanted to go on with her lessons. She showed good mental aptitude and has just been confirmed by her Lutheran pastor.

AN OLD LAWSUIT.

Its Hearing Has Been Resumed After a Vacation of Four Centuries in the Chancery Court.

[Pittsburgh Gazette:] A law case, which was begun in 1348, and was interrupted because Richard de Maundeville had to leave for the war in France, has just been resumed in the British Chancery Court.

The point at issue is the right to hold a market at Stowmarket, Suffolk, and the suit was originally brought by the Abbot of St. Osyth, Essex, in the twenty-second year of Edward III, against [illegible] was "to the grave damage of the said abbot."

Richard claimed the King's protection, and eventually the case was adjourned sine die because of his departure abroad.

At the resumed hearing the modern representatives of Richard asserted that the modern representatives of the abbot had no right to set up a rival market. This assertion was supported by Mr. Ogden, a famous London lawyer, who cited the Domesday book and other recent authorities to prove his case.

"When Richard de Maundeville went abroad," remarked the judge, "he little foresaw that he would be fighting the same question 600 years afterwards."

The hearing was adjourned for the second time after extracts from the abbot's pleadings had been read.

Tax on Bulgarian Bachelors.

The Bulgarian bachelor, who is now groaning under an annual tax equivalent to 8s. 4d. a year, has less cause to grumble than many a British celibate who shied at the altar a couple of centuries, or rather more, ago.

During the eleven years from 1695 to 1706 the man over 25 who shirked his matrimonial duty was called on to pay an annual shilling, with a further sum, ranging according to rank, from 5s. for a gentleman to £12 10s. for a duke—a tax which yielded to the revenue about £1,000 a week. More than this, in these good old times the Briton had to pay a tax when he took himself a wife and another every time he qualified as a father.

Thus a duke's nuptials cost him £50 4s., his heir £30 2s., and for each later male addition to his family his joy was discounted by a payment of £25 2s. The benedick whose income was less than £50 a year had to pay 2s. 6d. for his bride and 2s. every time he became a father. [Westminster Gazette.

When Football Was Rough.

Paul Withington, the Harvard coach, was praising the milder football of 1910.

"Football in the '90's was a terrible game," said Mr. Withington. "Bourget, you know, devoted a whole chapter of 'Outre Mer' to its horrors. Some of the stories of the football of '90 and '91 are, in fact, almost incredible.

"A Philadelphia sporting editor returned one November Saturday from West Philadelphia with a pale, frightened face.

"'Many accidents at the game?' a police reporter asked him.

"'One frightful accident,' replied the

The spouse on the other hand he honestly is love with a rich girl. even his own friends will never once reminds her husband that the bills are being paid with her money and not his.

"And in after years, does the husband take more pleasure out of life than the wife? When the children are past the whooping-cough age, the hardest of the mother's duties are done, but so long as his family require a roof over their heads and three meals a day, the breadwinner must stay in the harness. A woman's work in the home, rearing children, cooking the food, making and remaking garments, may be equally as important and at times equally as hard as her husband's; but under modern conditions it leaves her younger at fifty than her helpmate. Child-bearing still slays its thousands, but it is the men who are killed in mining accidents, in railway disasters, in any of the many dangerous occupations, not to mention the great silent army of underpaid bookkeepers and clerks who die, not of old age so much as of overwork.

"If condemned to life of celibacy, is the old bachelor with his club any less lonely than the spinster with her clubs? Some say a single woman is less forlorn than a man, because a woman ipso facta has the faculty of making a home out of one room, if need be, where she can gather her friends and her friends' children about her. Any success she may gain in the business or professional world is greeted with rounds of applause, because she is a woman—as in the case of Dr. Johnson's dog, which walked on its hind legs.

"A man, just because he is a man, must always stand ready to perform little services for women; to carry heavy suitcases, to give up a comfortable chair, to pay car fares, though he go without his luncheon, to endure insult that he would knock a man down for. He must pay more for manicuring; he must give larger tips than a woman, because a man is—presumed an—any woman! He may defiantly retain his seat in the subway, despite disapproving glances, but in the great crises of life and death the creed of civilization embodied, in 'ladies first' seems to prevail.

"On the whole, it's a dicult thing to live up to—being a man."

What Interest Does.

In the drawing-room car of a Washington limited, the conversation turned on the way interest mounts up.

"It's like this," said R. B. Brown of the American Surety Company. "The leading negroes of a Georgia town started a bank and invited persons of their race to become customers. One day a darky with shoes run down at the heel, a gallus over one shoulder, and a cotton shirt, showed up at the bank.

"'See here,' he said, 'I wan mah ten dollahs.'

"'Who is yuh-' asked the cashier.

"'Mah name's Jim Johnson, an' I wants dat ten dollahs.'

"'Yuh ain't got no money in dis here bank,' said the cashier, after looking over the books.

"'Yes, I has,' insisted the visitor. 'I put ten dollahs in here six months er go.'

"'Why, man, yuh sure is foolish. De intrist done et dat up long er go.'"—[New York World.

Gossip and Scandal.

Many people confuse gossip with scandal, but the two things are quite different. The scandalmonger is usually detested, while the gossip is often universally popular. In fact the popularity which it brings in its train is one of the strongest incentives to gossip. A really accomplished gossip is a social acquisition.

Thousands of people who do not gossip themselves like to listen to it. It saves them the trouble of talking. The gossip is generally good-natured. The scandalmonger seldom is. After all, what is more interesting than human Commemorative.

MORE THAN SIXTY ANNIVERSARIES TO BE MARKED DURING NEW YEAR.

Christian People Planning World-Wide Commemoration of the Completion of Authorized Edition of the Holy Bible—Among Two Dozen Birth Centenaries. Twelve Expositions Scheduled.

THIRTEEN MOST NOTEWORTHY ANNIVERSARIES WHICH WILL BE CELEBRATED DURING 1911.

THE TERCENTENARY OF THE KING JAMES BIBLE. (Completed, 1611.) In the poorest cottage is one book, wherein for many years the spirit of man has found light and nourishment and an interpreting response to whatever is deepest in him.—[Carlyle.

CHARLES SUMNER; Born January 6th, 1811.
There have been greater orators, but Sumner's strength lay in his moral character, which raised the question of slavery out of "practical politics" into the domain of morals.—[A. B. Hart.

HORACE GREELEY; Born, Feburary 3rd, 1811.
With all his aptitude for sharp political discussion, and a capacity, if need were, for noisy storms of temper and floods of Billingsgate, he had a nice sense of poetic beauty, and an intelligent, helpful, tender sympathy for the poor.—[Donald G. Mitchell.

JEAN LOUIS ERNEST MEISSONIER: Born, February 21st, 1811.
To a delicate skill in handicraft, to which no microscopic task came with too great difficulty, he added a breadth of treatment as rare as delightful. Indubitably was he one of France's truly great artists.—[Russell Sturgis.

"L'AIGLON,"—DUC DE DEICHSTADT: Born, March 20th, 1811.

Courage, Infant Duke, of race divine!
You bear upon your brow the celestial sign
All men may see, and welcome, in your eyes,
A ray of kingly splendor from the skies.
—[Lamartine.

DAVID HUME: Born, April 26th, 1711.
Hume, from whose fascinating narrative the great mass of the reading public are still content to take their opinions, hated religion so much that he hated liberty for having been allied with religion. He plead the cause of tyranny with the dexterity of an advocate while affecting the impartiality of a judge.—[Macaulay.

WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY: Born July 18th, 1811.

Oh, Gentle Censor of our age,
Prime master of an ampler tongue,
Whose word of wit and generous page,
Were never wroth except with wrong.
Fielding—without the manner dross;
Scott—with a spirit's larger room.
—[Lord Houghton.

FRANZ LISZT: Born October 22nd, 1811.
That word "genius" is much bandied, and often used without warrant; but for those rare beings who leap from the brain of Jove, full-armed, it is the only appellation. No fine-spun theory of pedagogics or heredity can account for the marvelous talent of Liszt—he was one sent from God.—[Elbert Hubbard.

HARRISON'S VICTORY AT TIPPECANOE; fought November 7th, 1811. I cannot too highly praise the diplomatic wisdom and warrior-like skill with which this decisive and important blow was struck—[President Madison's Message to Congress, Dec. 18th, 1811.

JOHN BRIGHT: Born November 16th, 1811.
If rhetoric were poetry, Bright would be a poet at least equal to Milton.—[A. C. Swinburne.

WENDELL PHILLIPS: Born November 29th, 1811.
He was what Clay would have been with a university education. To the Kentuckian's fire and magnetism he joined Everett's rhetorical art and marvelous vocabulary. As a master of sarcasm and invective he can be compared only to Randolph of Roanoke, and as a fierce delighter in opposition compare him to Webster.—[Prof. F. A. Pattee.

GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS: Acceded to the Swedish throne, December 27th, 1611. He was the most illustrous hero of his time, incontestably the first commander of his century—a man, a Christian and a king.—[Schiller.

"THE SPECTATOR:" First issued March 1st, 1711.
To bring Philosophy out of Closets and Libraries, Schools and Colleges, to dwell at Clubs and Assemblies, at tea tables and in Coffee Houses. The motto of the paper. The primary invention, the creative idea, came from Steele; the shaping power, the decorative craft, from Addison.—[Austin Dobson.

AT A TIME when centenary celebrations, of all-but-endless sort are so common that we begin to el as if everyone worth while had en born, and everything of note d happened an even one or two hun- ed years ago—at such a time the w-come twelve-month brings to the ristian world a commemoration eater even than will be the ter- ntenary of the death of Shakespeare 1916. In 1611 was completed the uthorized" translation and publica- n of the Holy Bible, and the me- rials of that immensely important ent, already figuring in the talk of e day in six continents, will write l in letters of red across the an- ls of modern centennials.

Leagues beyond all other happen- gs, measured by its high and last- g value, as is this tercentenary of e appearance of the Bible we use d venerate, 1911 offers nearly four- ore other opportunities for memor- s, differing in kind, yet all of worth d interest. This count includes an en dozen expositions, three splendid geants, and another (and new) assion Play," to be produced this mmer in Protestant Saxony.

HE WORD OF LIFE TO TODAY." ssued from present-day presses at rate of 10,000,000 copies a year, d translated in whole or part into arly 500 tongues or dialects, w rcely realize at this writing how stly prized, through scarcity, were printed forms of "The Word of e" i othis world ten generations . Of the making of versions of the riptures, between the "Cromwell ble" of 1539 and the King James' 1611 there had been hardly an end, t none had continued satisfactory, , at the Hampton Court conference 1604, the English monarch was pe- oned to reprint the so-called enevan" edition or else to authorize entire new translation. We may indebted only to [illegible] at pedantic er's fancy that the latter proposi- n found instant favor with him, t certainly no other act of sover- nty invested his reign with more dit.

he work was done by a commission forty-seven, acting under his gen- direction, and was completed and ished in 1611, with a duly fulsome cation to its kingly patron. Five ntings were called for in three and though the Genevan issue trong rival for a half century, and "authorized" version lly had the field to itself among -speaking peoples. For three d years has it been the anchor lth for all progressive nations, y has it been identified with the y of Protestantism the earth while its influence upon litera- been almost as immeasur- upon life itself.

es a propriety which none can question, and efforts now being made by Christian teachers both in Europe and this country are perfecting arrangements for a tercentenary observance throughout the English-speaking world. The plan is to have a celebration on the same day by churches, colleges and schools, a feature of that comprehensive occasion to be the exhibition of rare copies of the Book of Books wherever possible.

WILLIAM MAKEPEACE GOLIATH.

While this will properly absorb the greater part of Anglo-Saxon attention in 1911, the two great branches of the race each will have another happening of an even hundred years ago to recall with honor as with interest: the birth, in the July of 1811, of the novelist Thackeray, and the battle of Tippecanoe, four months later, in the then scarce-opened "west" of this country.

A young man not yet forty was then Governor of what we called the Indiana Territory, having been in charge there since, in 1801, he had laid aside his medical studies in Philadelphia—William Henry Harrison by name, destined to become our ninth President. The Shawnee chief Tecumseh had been making trouble, and his brother, "The Prophet," had proved fully as bad, and when, in the early winter of 1811 the tribe took the field, led by the latter mischief-maker, Harrison set out to settle the matter once and for all. The redskins were found encamped near Tippecanoe, on the Wabash, and promptly made overtures for a parley. Their opponent, wise to their ways, while agreeing, had his men sleep on their arms—and before the gray dawn of November 7, the sudden but expected attack was made by the natives. For two hours the tide of battle rose and fell, but at the end of that time final victory rested with the whites—and the country had found one of the fittest men to command her forces in the war with Great Britain already growling close under the international horizon.

If this centenary is peculiarly of the United States, so is the similar festival recalling the great Thackeray not peculiarly of England; all the world of fiction readers knows and loves the giant Victorian whom Quiller-Couch has so picturesquely dubbed "William Makepeace Goliath, white waistcoats and all." Poet and historian, essayist and lecturer, he was above all else a satirist of the whims and shams of his age, a kindly mentor fearlessly poking fun at the false and joyously penning praise of the real and true. "Vanitas vanitatum" may have been his motto, but behind his keen appreciation of the emptiness of so much of the life in which he spent his short fifty-two years, lay so large a heart, so warm and generous a love of the good in man, that it is not merely the supreme literary artist, but the man himself, who will be recalled and praised

Another Great January Purchas

Women's Suits, Styles Practical for the Spring Season, $19.50 to $35

Garments, 250 of Them, Each $14.50

Here's another event, the direct result of previous planning.

Some two months ago our representative visited the Eastern market with the idea of securing tailored suits for a great rousing sale at $14.50.

For downright value-giving the event will surely surpass any sale we've held in this department for months.

26 to 32-inch coat lengths.

Skirts vary from the close fitting to the full pleated models. Prettily trimmed and braided effects.

Choice of black, blue and the prevailing colors.

Here are rich broadcloth suits, suits of serge, and all-wool materials. Practical styles for spring.

Here are suits that could not be procured ordinarily under $19.50 to $35.00, and they're bright, new garments, just unpacked and brought forward for the first time in this sale.

125 of our own suits marked regularly $19.50, $22.50, $25.00, $29.50 and $35.00, will all be included in this event at $14.50.

We want the women of Los Angeles to investigate this offering. We want you to see the beautiful suits we have assembled for this event. Not thousands, but 250 suits, sufficient to make another startling Broadway feature at $14.50.

alph P. Merritt and his wife, after ix-month honeymoon trip through rope, were guests at the Angelus the week for a few days previous to ceeding to Berkeley, their home. rritt while in Europe made a study university affairs, traveling to a mber of the larger institutions and orbing in addition to the old his- ical subjects, a little of the present thod of management of these won- ful places of education. "The busi- s methods of the American uni- sities are ahead of the European most ways, but for the other end of school system, the teaching, the ropean universities are undoubtedly most thorough and show the best ults in the average run of their dents as graduated," he declared. rritt before he left for Europe was private secretary of Benjamin Ide heeler, president of the University California. On his return to duty will take up a position in the ad- inistrative department, which he ves as his reason for having studied ropean methods.

American hotels in the average run e far superior to European, accord- g to Conrad Uhl, for many years oprietor of the Bristol Hotel, Ber- n, who is in Southern California for e winter. "They have all of the ost modern improvements in this untry, not only in the great city otels, but also in the little country laces I have visited," he said yester- y. "This is particularly true of the est where all of the building is of ecent period. Our European hotels an excel only in one way and that in the service. Some of the hotels ave a little better service as far as he working force of a hotel is con- erned." Uhl and his wife, children and mother-in-law, are at the Alex- andria.

Australia is going into manufacturing lines, not only into productive branches as is supposed by most persons who are not well informed of that country, according to Eric N. irks of Sydney, who has been staying t the Westminster for some weeks. "My father is in the chemical manufacturing business," he stated. "It is one of the newer lines, but is proving very successful and is encouraged not only by the buyers of this particular line in the antipodes, but also by the official governments who are doing everything possible to make Australia one the world's manufacturing countries. Our business has not been restricted with Australia but has spread rapidly so that we are working through the Orient and on this first trip to the Pacific Coast I have been very successful in introducing new lines which will be shipped here instead of being shipped out of the United States to Australia as was done in the past."

CHURCHMEN.

Rev. John William Lynch, now of Harper's Ferry, celebrated his first mass in Roanoke, Va., a quarter of a century ago, and remained as pastor of St. Andrews Church in that city until two months ago, when he was transferred to Harper's Ferry. On a recent visit to Roanoke he was waited upon by a committee of prominent citizens and presented a purse of $1000 in gold from Catholics and non-Catholics of the city.

Rev. J. A. Baylor of Bristol, Tenn., was a locomotive engineer before entering the ministry. Recently he was in a train wreck on the Southern Railway, and at once he seized a red handkerchief and ran back around a curve where he waited to flag any train which might approach. He said his action was instinctive.

Rev. George H. Houghton Butler, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Sherwood Park, N. Y., announces his intention to sue for libel sixty-four signers of a petition to Bishop Greer asking for his dismissal.

Rev. J. Robinson of St. Lea's Catholic Church, St. Louis, has recently received from Ireland some very valuable antique vestments—a benedictive cape and dalmatics which were embroidered before the time of James I, a Gaelic Bible of the seventeenth century, and a unique chalice made after the fashion of 200 years ago. The vestments were attached to the old chapel adjoining the Castle of Kildare. Their color is a dull rose with a silvery sheen enhanced by the pure silver threads freely used in the embroidery.

Dr. Solomon Schechter, president of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, who discovered a short time ago the Hebrew original of Ecclesiasticus, has made another discovery among the Genizah documents which has just been made public through the Cambridge University Press. In speaking of the discovery Dr. Joseph Jacobs says that it "reveals an entirely novel Jewish sect, probably of the first century of the common era, and emanates by all accounts from just those circles out of which primitive Christianity drew its earliest adherents. The document is therfore of equal interst both to Jews and Christians.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Commander Peary was held up by a restaurant waiter while he was making his recent navy test horseback ride at Washington. He entered the restaurant to buy a cup of coffee and, after drinking it, he found he had no money. Peary confronted the waiter with a guilty smile, and said: "You've caught me without a cent in my trousers, my man, but I'm Commander Peary." "The h—l you are!" replied the waiter. "Well, I'm 'Doc' Cook, you know, and say, Mr. Commander Peary, it would be a good thing for you to come across with the cash." The arc-struck him. "Since you're so confounded obstinate about it, I'll have to give you my overcoat as a guarantee. It's too warm in this weather for overcoats, anyway." The deal went through, and the overcoat was held until late in the afternoon.

S. M. Braunstein, now a prosperous merchant at Atlantic City, N. J., some thirteen years ago failed, but he has never forgotten the debts he owed. Recently he mailed to all creditors the sums he owed, together with the interest up to date, amounting to several thousands of dollars.

Congressman William L. Calder of New York recently participated in saving Harry Lewis, a strike-breaking grocery wagon driver, from serious injury by a gang of strikers. While Lewis was making a delivery the strikers surrounded his wagon, unhitched his horse and turned it loose, and when Lewis came out of the house he was beaten. Calder and a couple of his employees were among the first to run to Lewis's rescue.

Vera Jones, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Crantz Jones of Wyoming, weighs 117 pounds, though at birth she weighed a scant four pounds. She has a bust measurement of thirty-seven inches, hip measurement of forty-eight inches and a calf measurement of seventeen inches. She is one of the healthiest specimens of humanity to be found anywhere.

Though Ralmro Bates, 11 years old, of Richmond, Ind., has led his class for months, he is totally blind and not even his teacher knew it. He memorized his lessons by having his brother read them aloud at home, and while reciting in school he held his book before his eyes just as if he could read.

Heaton W. Harris, one of the five American consuls general at large has returned to New York after an inspection of the 180 American consular offices in his district, which includes Europe, exclusive of Russia and the Balkan States and the British Isles.

RECORD BREAKERS.

Lewis Hiler, a freshman at Cornell University, is paying his way through college by giving demonstrations of magic and other occult arts. For a number of years he has been traveling about the country giving exhibitions and making money by them. When only 14 he began the study of legerdemain, and while still an amateur was giving performances at church entertainments.

J. Ellison Carroll of Erick, Okla., holds the world's record of roping and tying a steer in seventeen seconds.

John W. Guy of Melfa, Del., gave a Christmas dinner to his thirty-two children. Besides these children there were present also all of the grandchildren, and it took just eight large turkeys to serve the large family. Guy's young wife served the dinner. Guy has had three wives, who have presented him seven, eighteen and seven children respectively. Guy is now 77 years old and is strong and hearty.

Dr. Patrick H. Hayes, 60 years old of Chicago, recently pummeled a man in Municipal Judge Himes's court, and was unrebuked for his attack. He was attacked the night previous by Edward Meyers, an alleged pickpocket and hold-up man, whom he punched until the latter cried enough, when Dr. Hayes called a policeman and had the fellow taken to jail. "What did you do, doctor, when this man tried to rob you?" asked the court when Meyers was arraigned for trial. Without making a reply Dr. Hayes jumped at Meyers with the agility of a boy, seized the prisoner by the collar of his coat, threw him against a bench, struck him repeated blows with his clenched fists and wound up by hurling Meyers to the floor of the courtroom and sitting upon him. "There, judge, that's what I did," said Dr. Hayes, as he loosened his hold on the frightened prisoner. Meyers, who is 7[illegible] years old, was held for the grand jury on bonds of $1000.

Two striking achievements which have come into notice within a week deserve to be recorded together. The first is credited to one Razak of Chicago, who has accomplished the tremendous feat of consuming a broiled quail accompanied by a quart of champagne every day for thirty-two consecutive days. The other achievement goes to the credit of Moris Olgers, a 16-year-old Virginia boy who has won a prize for the best acre of corn, his crop amounting to 16[illegible] bushels.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

Maj.-Gen. Frederick D. Grant, commanding the Department of the East, took part in the Vicksburg campaign while a boy of 13 years, by his father appointing him a volunteer aid with the rank of captain. This appointment was never entered on the muster rolls, and is therefore not on the records of the War Department. Lately Gen. Grant has been trying to have his official war record amended by act of Congress in order that he may qualify officially as a Civil War veteran, and have his name on the memorial in the Vicksburg national military park. The House passed the bill last April, but it has been held up in the Senate because it was not in a form satisfactory to the War Department.

Rear-Admiral Charles S. Sperry, retired, who commanded the Atlantic fleet on its cruise from San Francisco to Hampton Roads, has been detached from active duty at the naval war college at Newport.

Lieut.-Col. J. S. Mallory, First Infantry, has been detailed to fill a vacancy in the Inspector-General's department, and is ordered to duty at San Antonio, as Inspector-General of the Department of Texas. He will relieve Lieut.-Col. F. H. French, who is assigned to the First Infantry. After a special course at the Army Service School at Fort Leavenworth, Col. French is ordered to join the regiment to which he is assigned.

Col. Walter S. Schuyler of the Fifth United States Cavalry has been appointed brigadier-general to succeed Gen. Earl D. Thomas as commanding officer of the Department of the Colorado. Col. Schuyler graduated from West Point in 1866 and was assigned at once to the Fifth Cavalry. During the Spanish-American war he was promoted from captain to colonel of the Two Hundred and Third New York Infantry. Later he was colonel of the Forty-sixth United States Infantry. In 1899 he was assigned as lieutenant-colonel to the Second Cavalry and in 1906 was made colonel of the Fifth. He was born in 1849 and will be retired for age within a short time.

First Lieutenant E. T. Weisel, Coast Artillery Corps, has been ordered to Manila to take command of the mine-planter Gen. Henry J. Hunt, relieving First Lieutenant Maxwell Murray, who is assigned to the One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Company for duty.

Brig.-Gen. Walter Howe, in command of the Department of Dakota, has been placed on the retired list because of having reached the statutory age of 64 years.—During the war with Spain he was in command of Fort Washington, Maryland, one of the principal defences of the capital on the Potomac River below Washington. Later he served in the Philippines as colonel of the Forty-seventh United States Volunteer Infantry. After the Philippine insurrection he reentered the Coast Artillery Corps, and he was the senior colonel of the corps when he was appointed a brigadier-general on January 11, 1910, at which time he was in States Infantry, has been appointed a brigadier-general as a result of the retirement of Gen. Walter Howe.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. Rosander D. Hendryx of Husum, Wash., 77 years old, has just sold her 117-acre ranch for $16,200. Twenty-five years ago she traveled overland with her husband from Texas, riding horseback the entire distance and being five months on the road. She took a man's part in clearing and developing the ranch, and since her husband died three years ago she has conducted the ranch alone, donning overalls and working in the fields and orchards and taking care of the livestock with only the help of a boy.

In July, 1909, H. G. Stover, of Penn, Center county, Pa., offered to sell for one cent to one of Frank Kramer's daughters a little pig that was considered to be a runt. The girl promptly bought it, took good care of it, and last fall fattened it. The pig was killed last week, and weighed 357 pounds dressed.

A young peasant woman named Xenia Kritzko has been recognized by the Czar as a Knight of St. George, with a right to wear the St. George cross for valor in battle. Living in East Siberia, she enlisted in the infantry at the outbreak of the Japanese War as Konstantin Kritzko. She was wounded at Patiloff Hill, but recovered and rejoined the army.

Mrs. F. L. Ricketts, formerly of Spokane, now a resident of Medical Lake, Wash., has the unique distinction of being the first woman in the world to win public recognition for alighting from a street car in a proper manner. She is a native of Spokane county. The award was made by the American Safety league, recently organized in Spokane, for the purpose of safeguarding life and limb by educating women to alight safely and gracefully from street cars. Mrs. Ricketts will have the gold piece mounted as a souvenir. The league will award 500 prizes before the close of the campaign in Spokane.

Miss Gertrude Riskin of Passaic, whose fiance, Dr. Morris Korsher, gave her, in place of an engagement ring, a literary cocktail, including works by Balzac, Hugo, Bernard Shaw, Ibsen, Zola, Tolstoi, Jack London, Israel Zangwill and H. G. Wells, stated calmly that she preferred the books to a diamond.

BITS OF VERSE.

After All.

There is nothing in life but the joy of the minute.
There is nothing in love that we do not put in it.
There is nothing can happen unless we begin it,
There is nothing worth winning but what we can win it.

There is nothing so sad as to set us a-sighing.
There is nothing we'd do that is not worth the trying.
There is never a danger too great for defying.
The beauty of earth is folly denying!

There is never a sorrow should cause us repining,
For sorrows were made for the spirit's refining;
So, turn all your clouds inside out till their lining
Of silver shall rival the sun in its shining.

If you think that too long you have waited and striven,
Then remember you've gotten as much as you've given.
In the loaf of your burden just look for the leaven,
For God's in the world—and the world is His heaven.

—[New York Evening World.

The God of Peace.

Fleet-pinioned as the gale he rides!
The man-bird wheels his easy flight;
New monarch of the new age, guides
The eager millions into light,
Long-waiting world hear thou his cry:
"Put battleships and rifle by!"

Builders of dreadnaughts, useless now;
Armed ranks that wait the nod to slay;
List ye to call of loom and plow,
The aeroplane is king today!
Long-suffering world hear thou his cry:
"Lay uniform and bugle by!"

No more shall patent shell and mine
Our tax-born navies split and mow;
Nor trumpets spur the charging line—
The God of Peace has writ it so:
War-weary world hear thou his cry:
"Put hate and all her furies by!"

The man-bird sweeps the conquered sky,
To honor turns the lust to slay;
The nations set their quarrels by,
Peace makes the heroes of today;
Hear thou the happy millions pray:
"How blind we were but yesterday!"

—[Percy Shaw, in Hampton's Magazine.

Imperishable.

Build thou a temple high,
Its towers mounting to the sky,
Its turrets flashing in the sun;
And when 'tis done,
There comes at last a fatal day
When down it crumbles to decay.

Build thou a goodly name,
All weft of a resplendent fame
As one who served his fellow man,
And through his span
Did well the Father's work alway—
'Twill last to the Eternal Day!

—[Harper's Weekly.

Solitaire.

To play the game of solitaire
I sat me down in life,
For other styles I did not care.
They stupid seemed to me—unfair,
And like to lead to strife—
"I'll play the game alone," I swore,
"Two-handed euchre's such a bore!"

But, lo! one day my eyes I raised,
And there across the board
Sat someone smiling, quite unfeased—
"My deal!" she said to me amazed,
And dealt the cards and scored—
To take a trick was now most rare,
But still the game beat solitaire.

We played, unconscious of time's flight
The trifling tips now known
Just gave the fillip to delight,
And made me think how sad my plight
While playing quite alone—
But then one day, first thing I knew,
To three our playing number grew.

Now, strange, I found this game surpassed
By far the game of two,
And when a fourth one joined the last
The fun increased, grew wild and fast—
Three players are too few!
They say five-handed euchre's great—
I only answer, "Well, just wait!"

Tragedy Caused by a Cow.

When a Louisville and Nashville passenger train out of Mobile struck a cow near Kirkland late Saturday afternoon the consequences were as unusual and unexpected as they were fatal. The cow was hurled to one side, striking a negro who was watching the train go by.

The negro was knocked into a puddle of water and killed. In falling he

Mrs. Knox's only daughter is married and living in Pennsylvania, but in the official burdens of her position, she will be ably assisted by two charming young matrons, Mrs. Huntington Wilson and Mrs. Chandler Hale, whose respective husbands are under secretaries of the State Department.

Mrs. Elihu Root, Mrs. Knox's immediate predecessor, as leading hostess of the Administration Circle, cares little for society anywhere, but less for pier in her present position as a Senator's wife, than she ever was in the Cabinet where her husband served both as Secretary of War, and Secretary of State.

That this is a very independent Cabinet in which each hostess is allowed to manage her own household as her taste and purse dictates, is shown by the absence of the weekly meetings at the White House, which distinguished past administrations when not only the form of entertaining was dictated, but the personal visiting lists of the different hostesses made a matter of criticism and suggestion.

The much discussed question of serving a cup of tea on Wednesday afternoon, that agitated society for seven years or more, is left entirely to the wish of each hostess, neither Mrs. Taft nor Mrs. Knox having the spirit of a dictator.

Consequently some do, and some don't, when it comes to the tea table. Mrs. Knox and Mrs. MacVeagh being leaders in re-establishing this once universal custom. A custom which, according to a former Cabinet hostess, and woman with twenty years of official life to her credit, assured the writer cost just about $10 per afternoon. That was, however, before the increased cost of living, so that to offer a cup of tea, a thin slice of bread late coating, would now cost $100 for the season.

One can, of course, spend $100 per week feeding the multitude if one desires, there is a tradition that the late Mrs. William C. Whitney and Mrs. Sanford, when her husband was Senator from California, offered a lavish hospitality which was frequently abused. That is however only a tradition, and this column is treating of facts.

The nearest approach to the Whitney and Sandford standards in recent years was by the former Vice-President and Mrs. Fairbanks, who opened their house to the world at large every Wednesday afternoon from January 1 to Ash Wednesday, when a well appointed and generously provisional tea table was always a feature of the reception.

Mrs. John W. Dwight, wife of the Representative from the Thirtieth Congressional District of New York, has contributed a charming addition to the debutante ranks in the person of her young niece, Miss Elizabeth Hicks, daughter of Mr. Frank X Hicks of Los Angeles, who recently returned with Mrs. Dwight to pass the winter at the latter's home on R street.

A fashionable company representing all that is best in Washington society, welcomed this California bud at pated in the dance at the White House, where Mrs. Taft entertained the friends of her son and daughter, at one of the merriest dances of the holiday season.

Mrs. Dwight, as the wife of a Congressman from New York, paid a graceful compliment to her native State. She was Miss Emma Childs of California, by having the assistants at her nieces tea from the California contingent in Washington, this group of very attracive young people all closely allied with the land of sunshine, including Miss Katherine Jennings, Miss Gertrude Williams, Miss Dora Clover, Miss Marie Stevens and Miss Jennie Fassett.

In the tea room Mrs. Beekman Winthrop, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Mrs. Garrison McClintock and Miss Josephine Patten did the honors.

Had Spent It.

The late Gov. Allen D. Candler of Georgia was famous in the South for his quaint humor, says the Washington Star.

"Former Gov. Candler," said a Gainesville man, "once abandoned cigars for a pipe at the beginning of the year. He stuck to his resolve till the year's end. Then he was heard to say:

REAL POETRY.

E TOWN DOWN THE RIVER. Edwin rlington Robinson. Charles Scribner's ns. New York (Price, $1.25.)

HE poets will not down!

We have with us this morning many of these rhymsters, large small, domestic and imported, -winded and breathless, good and , he and she. This is not a poetic , despite all the assurances to the trary which emanate at frequent rvals from the pages of our literary kilies. This generation has yet to duce one great poet. The era seems be the hiatus which comes between death of winter and the birth of ing. It is not even necessary to pare modern prosody with that of golden age of Elizabeth to find how rile and inefficient are the songs of modern poets. We have but to w collateral comparisons between poets of today and those of the Vic an age of literary senility. The e was completed and the decadence already set in when Swinburne making his incomparable music, n Rossetti was chiselling his al t perfect sonnets, when Oscar de was poetizing his esthetic phi phy, when Arthur Symons was pleting his psychology of love in e of the most perfect lyrics in Eng , when Matthew Arnold was sing of pessimism and darkness, when wning was transcribing his homi cs into chaotic and subtle verse.

oday there are a myriad young s hanging on the coat-tails of the t, and singing their little songs. e of them are good. Occasionally find flashes of genius on the lips our modern poets. With the excep of Lisette Woodworth Reese, no has of late written such admirable original poems in this country as se which come, far too seldom, from pen of Edwin Arlington Robinson. n 1905 Robinson leaped into limited e by the appearance of a slender ume of poems under the caption of he Children of the Night." In these ses—mostly in sonnet form—he es very near striking a new note poetic literature. They distinguish immediately from the mediocre of poets who harrass the magazine tors with rhymed space-fillers. Rob on has individuality. He can say one line what it would take a whole inary of Theodosia Garrisons seven rs to say. He has that faculty, pe liar to Browning, of creating in a words a character with a signifi nt name, and of dramatizing and ualizing in terms of this character own particular philosophy. He has er been a poet of generalizations. e tragedies and the comedies of life can depict in fourteen lines and at h the significance of them to men ose names are already symbols— hn Evereldown, Luke Havelgal, Cliff ingenhagen, Fleming Helphenstine, lverly, Leffingwell, Miniver Cheevy . . . Each one of these striking ems suggests, with strange dramatic stinct, a whole life story.

Robinson's new book, "The Town own the River," is distinguished by e very qualities which marked s first public appearance. If any ing, he has grown more subtle in ecution. His themes are similar: e meet new victims of the tragedies life. And throughout this volume, in his other book, we are brought ce to face with the spiritual sig ficance of the sordid realities.

While Robinson's poetry is not great, has the individual qualities of sin rity and comprehension, of analysis d phychological suggestion, which ake it eminently worth while. There in it not a touch of the gaspings d complainings of the weaklings ho comprise the ranks of the minor ets. And, in addition, it reveals a aft of a high order. Simple words d simple phrases produce a spiritual ticence which is interwoven with e very composition of feeling and ought. The charge of symbolism ay be brought against Robinson. But everything significant there is sym ology. He has succeeded in making short lyric a complete story of hu an fate. He is without a competi or in the field of individualistic Amer an poetry.

FAKE POETRY.

ROVENCA OF EZRA POUND. Thomas Y. Crowell, New York. (Price, $1.)

EZRA POUND, the expatriated American ballyhoo-bard, who is now residing in London in a flan el shirt—an article of clothing which e wears on all occasions, both formal nd informal—has hornswoggled the nglish critics into favorable notices f this book. These notices speak elo uently of the sorry condition of Eng sh criticism at present. It can only e accounted for as a temporary re ction against conservatism in bow ng down before the braggadocio spirit enerally attributed by foreigners to outhful Americans. Eccentric bosh rom beginning to end, these erratic tterances demonstrate the amount of oetic flapdoodle which the public will ometimes fall for.

Pound is a charlatan masquerading in Rennaisance speech. There is not a poem in the book tinged with either simplicity, sensuousness or passion. Though there are many simulations of these qualities, never once is there that inevitable juxtaposition of words, that undercurrent of spiritual significance, that indefinable magic of poetic genius, which translates an idea into one's own personal experiences. If the poet wishes to back up to life instead of facing it, and to rhapsodize with his Canzoneiri or Villonaud or Sestina, I have no particular objections. But Pound has merely stated them in stilted and unnatural English. In faking recondite figures of speech and in using characters and incidents of the Rennaisance as subject matter, he has missed the whole spirit of the era which he has endeavored to portray. His romantic figures are merely modern cowboys in brocaded pantaloons, and their speech is not seldom the vulgar parlance of the plains thrown into the English of the Rennaisance.

Pound's mechanical devices are so obviously artificial that they do not even inspire admiration. He mistakes braggadocio and vulgarity for passion. The red-blooded vulgarity of Kipling was natural, but Pound's is so obviously unreal that it is obnoxious. He is essentially an imitator, and he has evidently had too large a poetic diet to digest any of it sufficiently to express himself.

REAL POETRY.

THE TOWN DOWN THE RIVER. Edwin Arlington Robinson. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. (Price, $1.25.)

THE poets will not down!

We have with us this morning many of these rhymsters, large and small, domestic and imported, long-winded and breathless, good and bad, he and she. This is not a poetic age, despite all the assurances to the contrary which emanate at frequent intervals from the pages of our literary weeklies. This generation has yet to produce one great poet. The era seems to be the hiatus which comes between the death of winter and the birth of spring. It is not even necessary to compare modern prosody with that of the golden age of Elizabeth to find how sterile and inefficient are the songs of our modern poets. We have but to draw collateral comparisons between the poets of today and those of the Victorian age of literary senility. The cycle was completed and the decadence had already set in when Swinburne was making his incomparable music, when Rossetti was chiselling his almost perfect sonnets, when Oscar Wilde was poetizing his esthetic philosophy, when Arthur Symons was completing his psychology of love in some of the most perfect lyrics in English, when Matthew Arnold was singing of pessimism and darkness, when Browning was transcribing his homilies into chaotic and subtle verse.

Today there are a myriad youngsters hanging on the coat-tails of the past, and singing their little songs. Some of them are good. Occasionally we find flashes of genius on the lips of our modern poets. With the exception of Lisette Woodworth Reese, no one has of late written such admirable and original poems in this country as those which come, far too seldom, from the pen of Edwin Arlington Robinson. In 1905 Robinson leaped into limited fame by the appearance of a slender volume of poems under the caption of "The Children of the Night." In these verses—mostly in sonnet form—he comes very near striking a new note in poetic literature. They distinguish him immediately from the mediocre mass of poets who harrass the magazine editors with rhymed space-fillers. Robinson has individuality. He can say in one line what it would take a whole seminary of Theodosia Garrisons seven years to say. He has that faculty, peculiar to Browning, of creating in a few words a character with a significant name, and of dramatizing and visualizing in terms of this character his own particular philosophy. He has never been a poet of generalizations. The tragedies and the comedies of life he can depict in fourteen lines and attach the significance of them to men whose names are already symbols—John Evereldown, Luke Havelgal, Cliff Klingenhagen, Fleming Helphenstine, Calverly, Leffingwell, Miniver Cheevy . . . Each one of these striking poems suggests, with strange dramatic instinct, a whole life story.

Robinson's new book, "The Town Down the River," is distinguished by the very qualities which marked his first public appearance. If anything, he has grown more subtle in execution. His themes are similar: we meet new victims of the tragedies of life. And throughout this volume, as in his other book, we are brought face to face with the spiritual significance of the sordid realities.

Simple words and simple phrases produce a spiritual reticence which is interwoven with the very composition of feeling and thought. The charge of symbolism may be brought against Robinson. But in everything significant there is symbology. He has succeeded in making a short lyric a complete story of human fate. He is without a competitor in the field of individualistic American poetry.

These notices speak eloquently of the sorry condition of English criticism at present. MAUDLIN POETRY.

THE PIONEERS, A Poetic Drama in Two Scenes. By James Oppenheim. B. W. Huebsch, New York. (Price, $1.)

WE NOW encounter "The Pioneers," by James Oppenheim, a reading rights, both professional and amateur, are reserved, and that if any one attempts piracy of infringement upon this masterpiece he, she or it will be prosecuted under the provisions of Sec. 4966 U. S. Revised Statutes, Title 60, Chap. 3.

Having thoroughly acquainted ourselves with this very necessary information, we discover on page seven that this little play was first produced on the banks of the Piscataqua in Maine, at 8 o'clock on a dark August night; and that it was gazed upon by several hundred people of the countryside, who were bewitched by the wind, the flames and the night. We are also acquainted with the fact that the aforementioned several hundred people of the countryside were stirred to tears.

Now to the play:

We have before us a party of pioneers on the western prairies. They belong to the '49ers and are headed for the Coast. In the midst of Tom's strumming of "Home, Sweet Home" on the mandolin, David, the New England hero of this poem, arises and astonishes the assemblage by wishing to return immediately to New England. Later, the others withdraw, leaving David alone with Margaret, the daughter of the party's leader. David gets busy at once and proposes. But Margaret turns out to be a full-fledged suffragette, and there follows quite an argument on the subject.

"I am not so keen for marriage," she informs David. "It is not the all of a woman's life, for there comes upon the earth a newer kind of women."

David, naturally, is put out. "A woman's a woman," he asserts, rightly enough.

Whereupon Margaret lugs out that pet suffragette, phrase, "More than that; she is a human being."

At this juncture a friendly Indian leaps upon the scene and informs them that they are about to be tomahawked.

In the second scene, a pitched battle has taken place. The Indians have been repulsed, but not without loss to the white forces. Margaret's father has been found dead. David gazes at the corpse and decides that he is a new man. After which discovery Margaret yields herself to David's embraces. And 'tis westward, ho! they push.

Undoubtedly there is an epic to be written of those splendid pioneer days, but the youthful pen of Oppenheim is not sufficient for the undertaking. He can neither write blank verse nor think clearly. In his most passionate moments he succeeds only in being maudlin.

HARMLESS POETRY.

LIPS OF MUSIC. By Charlotte Porter. Thomas Y. Crowell, New York. (Price, $1.)

HARMLESS enough is the optimistic piffle by Charlotte Porter which is gathered in a book called "Lips of Music." For the most part the verses are built up round platitudes of the most inane order, and not even the frequent adroitness of the craftsmanship raises them above the dead level of the commonplace. Many are of the be-sweet variety, and most of them "breathe the spirit of hope"—I believe that is the phrase.

MEDITATIVE POETRY.

THE BORDER OF THE LAKE. By Agnes Lee. Sherman, French & Co., Boston. (Price, $1.)

A POET of the same sex as Charlotte Porter, but of much higher qualities, is Agnes Lee, whose book of verses, "The Border of the Lake," contains many charming lyrics. There is undeniably a quality of distinction about her work, and more than once she touches our emotions into pleasure. Her moods are never rapturous, but are usually meditative. The subjects which she treats are those of every-day experience. In "Motherhood," and in "The Asphodel," we have two rather illuminative bits of poetry on the subject of mother love taken from two very diverse aspects.

SCRAMBLED POETRY.

POEMS OF MAX EHRMAN. Dodge Publishing Company, New York. (Price, $1.)

IN the "Poems" of Max Ehrman, we encounter 190 pages of that hop-skip-and-jump, eat-em-up, hearken-to-my-ophecleide prose poetry, which has been so popular with a certain class of frowsy socialists since Walt Whitman, the bosh-bard of filth, made omelets of the English language. Here is this poet's platform:

"If I have written poetry, it was in the hope that I might help at least a little to soften the hard places in life, to arouse the slumbering against injustice and to make more clear the possibility of the brotherhood of man. It is a beautiful world, but not well organized. Let everyone, therefore, lift his voice for justice. In my imperfect way I have lifted mine; and the hope of a better and sweeter life has been the purport of my songs."

Oh, noble man!

PROMISING POETRY.

VISIONS. By Thomas Durley Landel. Sherman, French & Co., Boston. (Price, $1.)

I HAVE never before heard of Thomas Durley Landel, but he evidently has a spark or two of the divine fire in him for his book of poems "Visions," has much fine stuff in it—stuff far and away above the average magazine space-fillers. In his shorter lyrics, especially the erotic ones, he is simple and musical. Only in his "sustained flights" does he fall down hopelessly. He is probably laboring under the delusion—as are most of our falsetto-voiced critics—that there is no merit except in length. This, however, is an asinine assumption. We read every day of "sustained flight," as though there were some particular merit in long distance poetizing. Some of our finest poetry is cast in very brief form. And most of our most abominable poetry is written in "sustained flights." I need only point to that tiresome and unpoetical harangue, "Paradise Lost," to show how easily the reading public is impressed with bulk.

FLAPDOODLE POETRY.

POEMS OF TRUTH, LOVE AND POWER. By William Lee Popham. The Broadway Publishing Company, New York. (Price, $1.25.)

IN "Poems of Truth, Love and Power," we find a collection of verses which are downright atrocious. In the whole volume there is no inkling that its author has any conception of what poetry is. The information that accompanies this bundle of jargon acquaints us with the fact that William commands the attention his time in frivolous and foolish occupations, but that every little minute of his life is spent in belching forth beautiful sentiments and in exuding helpful thoughts whereby the waves of life's great ocean become calm.

Piffous pishmince!

HINDU POETRY.

WOMEN'S EYES. Being verses translated from the Sanskrit by Arthur William Ryder. A. M. Robertson, San Francisco. (Price, $1 net.)

AN interesting little book of verses is to be found in "Women's Eyes," translated from the Hindu by Arthur William Ryder, professor of Sanskirt in the University of California. The verses contain much Oriental wisdom and humor, and are shot through with flashes of the various phases of human nature. There is much admirable stuff in Hindu literature, In the short verse from it excels.

Not only does it display mastery of form but through its lines there is a play of fancy, a tenderness of feeling, an exquisite evanescence, a quaint wit. I quote a characteristic vignette:

"The world is full of women's eyes,
Defiant, filled with shy surprise,
Demure, a little overfree,
Or simply sparkling roguishly:
It seems a gorgeous lily-bed,
Whichever way I turn my head."

HOW TO WARBLE.

CORRECT PRINCIPLES OF CLASSICAL SINGING. By Max Heinrich. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard, Boston. (Price, $1.50.)

THOUGH I have never been guilty of warbling, and thought I detest the abominable art of singing, which seems to have fallen like some devastating plague over our fair land, I will not let my prejudices influence my mentioning a very good book on the correct principles of classical singing, by Max Heinrich. It is not my intention by so doing, however, to encourage this diabolical practice, but to improve that which has already begun to make life hideous for that small class of vulgar and uncultured beings of which I am a life member.

This singing business seems to be on the increase. There was a time when a person with a peace-loving disposition could go to a moving-picture show (one of my supremest delights) and have only the passionate syncopations of an automatic piano to bear. But of late these quiet retreats have been turned into halls of pandemonium, with every other number a singing feature. Thick-thumbed bassos in rented evening clothes wrestle sepulchrally with operatic selections. Fat tenors with pecks like steamship funnels give correct imitations of 40-horse-power calliopes. Wall-eyed young ladies, balancing on their heads miniature Leaning Towers of Pisa made of hair, chirp in their upper registers concerning love and hate and other fervid topics.

In these warbling days, one is afraid to spend the evening at a neighbor's house, for there are always sure to be several singers in the crowd who will go through their hellish stunts on the slightest provocation. And when there are no singers, phonographs are produced, with Tetrazzini and Caruso records (which, the hostess informs us, cost $5 apiece) and we sit in horrid silence while these expensive throat specialists practice scales.

Everyone sings nowadays. Singing and respectability are our two national diseases. Nor is the objective aspect of singing the most discomforting phase of the question. In some subtle and recondite way, the accomplishment of singing and the training of one's voice have become associated in the public mind with culture; just as twenty years ago an actor or an actress was considered a superior individual. The most abominable nimcompoop, provided he was a mummer or even a ham-fatter, was received in the drawing-rooms of the educated and intelligent, as though belonging to the histrionic profession placed him on a pedestal.

So with singing today. These illiterate song-birds, both he and she, are invited into households of people who ought to know better. One is ever in danger these days, even when visiting some of our best families, of running foul of an unwashed singer. However, the evil is with us, so let us make the best of it.

In behalf of the cause, I hereby give notice that Herr Heinrich's book will be of value and interest to all warblers, both professional and amateur, and to all those who imagine they delight in classical music. It will aid the vocal aspirants in interpreting the recitatives and arias of the "Messiah," as well as the entire song-cycle of Schubert's "Die Schone Mullerin." The book contains many valuable hints on phrasing, diction and tone color, and includes more than an entire term of vocal lessons.

Up and at it, ye obscure Jenny Linds!

LITERARY GOSSIP.

The following letter from Max Nordau to Israel Zangwill is interesting:

"8 Rue Henner, Paris.

"My Dear Zangwill:—I am rapturous about your Italian Fantasies. This is really a wonderful book. New, tho' speaking of the oldest things, fresh albeit dealing with the stalest subjects. The unrivaled triumph of self-asserting subjectivity. You see art with the poet's eyes. Art gives you a start for a poetical flight. And how high you soar! I am not accustomed to put such stress on the anecdotal aspect of works of art, but I understand well that an impressionable fantasy does.

"Your 'go' at Pragmatism (the most preposterously stupid invention of American babbledom) was particularly gratifying to me.

"Your new book ought to become an English school classic of students of higher and highest culture. It is more fervent, more true, more eloquent than anything that has given fame to Ruskin. With heartfelt congratulations,

"M. NORDAU."

"I was born on the shortest day of the year," said Marion Harland on her eightieth birthday last week, "and I've been trying to catch up ever since." She added that cultivating her sense of humor was responsible for her many years and good health. Her most recent literary work, "Marion Harland's Autobiography," was published only a few months ago, and is a thick volume of historic and personal narrative which has much of the author's personality. In speaking of the book Marion Harland pointed out one unique feature of her career: "The idea of reviewing my life upon paper first came to me with the consciousness—which was almost a shock—that of all the authors still on active professional duty in our country. I am the only one whose memory runs back to the stage of our national history that preceded the Civil War by a quarter-century I alone am left to tell of my own knowledge and experience what the old South was in deed and in truth."

Dr. Emil Reich, who died this month in London, was remarkable as a historian who really lived. In his thirtieth year he made up his mind that the study of books and documents gave no satisfactory comprehension of history and he went out into the world to learn history from life He traveled widely, spending five years in the United States, four in France, and thirteen in England. What he thought of America is indicated in one of his most popular books, "Success Among the Nations." Of success in America he wrote: "The Americans have, of all modern nations, the greatest chance of success, economic or material, provided the Far East will be ready to underga a process of Europeanization. Intellectual success in the highest sense is less likely in America. American women have, by over mentalization, weakened their power for good. What a nation wants consists mainly of two factors: Real women who do not want to be men, and real men who do not try to be women."

Arthur Rackham, the English artist, who makes such fantastic, delightful illustrations, plays hard during leisure moments—lawn tennis, golf, fishing, cycling and gardening. He travels abroad and sketches; he enjoys music and the opera, and is a member of the Langham Sketch Club, the Art Workers' Guild, Arts Club, and other clubs and societies. Moreover, he has a little daughter who, he declares, takes up as much of his time as all his art put together. At one time Mr. Rackham was an insurance agent.

Amelie Rives is to spend the remainder of the winter in New York. She lives most of the time at her Southern home, Castle Hill, Cobham, a delightful spot in Albemarle county, Virginia She has worked steadily, whether in the north or the south or traveling abroad, since her first success, "The Quick or the Dead?" She is the wife of Prince Troubetskoy, well known as a portrait painter, and while writing "Pan's Mountain," spent some time in Italy and Servia.

BOOK NEWS.

Although it is now nearly fifteen years since the death of H. C. Bunner, his work, which was of the fragile and delicate sort that never lasts unless it has genius, is still quoted, and the demand for his books has been large enough to call for a separate edition of "The Seven Old Ladies of Lavender Town," last fall. Bunner was revealed in "The Way to Arcady," as a poet of rare fancy, and in such tales as the "Story of an Old New York House" and "Love in Old Clothes" he gave Americans humor and sentiment with a new flavor. Probably the most widely known of all his work is the little operetta, "The Seven Old Ladies of Lavender Town." This title is familiar to many who do not know that H. C. Bunner was the author or that Oscar Weil wrote the music. The Harpers recently brought out an illustrated edition of "The Seven Old Ladies of Lavender Town' which will probably introduce Bunner to a new generation of readers.

"A Bibliography of Mark Twain," which has been in preparation for several years, has at last been issued. It is the work of Merle Johnson and is published by Harper & Brothers. In his search for information, the compiler made use of every available source. He examined libraries and private collections and interviewed numbers of publishers, printers and bookdealers. The difficulty of the task was extraordinary, for Mark Twain's literary production covered a period of practically five decades. His range of activity included newspaper, magazine, book and speech, and he lived in a dozen places, from Honolulu to Vienna. Still, it is thought that the lists are nearly complete.

A new general magazine to be the "National Post" has just been announced. The magazine will be published semi-monthly in New York. It is to be guided in its career b men, E. E. Garrison, an exper countant and the author of "Acc ing Every Business Man S Know;" David G. Evans, Samuel win, both formerly with Su Nathan A. Smythe, and Amos Pi a brother of the ex-chief forester

In the spacious arcade of the tiful new Pennsylvania station in York City will be found Doub Page & Co.'s full and complete book store. Here, not only their publications, but others as well, be found on sale. This quiet home-like corner will change the monotony of the traveler waiting his train into quiet moments of ing among delightful book fr Every one is welcome.

The title of Owen Johnson's Varmint" has, like all other p titles, been much parodied, the lishers receiving orders for "The met," "Varmints," and finally for Vampire." Johnson has yielded repeated requests from his reader publishers and has decided to w story of the "Varmint," and so his fellows at Yale. This will fir pear as a serial in one of the popular magazines, and later book.

Messrs. Henry Holt & Co. ma be printing by the aftermath Johnson Centenary, as they are, same time, having to reprint C Grosvenor Osgood's "Selections Johnson" and Johnson's "Chief of Poets," edited by Matthew A

One of the attractions of "Way Days Out of London" is that th tho. has based the narrative up tual experiences, which gives the a double value for those who like to use it as a guide. It ha added virtue, also, of being qu to date.

New Matrimonial Departure

The diamond engagement rin symbol of plighted faith is a " of inferiority," according to Dr. Kershet, one of Passaic's leading sicians, whose engagement to Gertrude Risker has just bee nounced. At the reception whe announcement was made Dr. R surprised the guests by giving Risker a set of elegantly bound by Victor Hugo, Balzac, George nard Shaw, Ibsen, Tolstoy, Za and others, instead of an engag ring. Speaking of his departure the time-honored custom, he sai

"In times long gone by man captured his female partner o chased her from her parents with ents. n Edgar Allan Poe wrote that oncelt "The Bells," the first two s of which are printed above, s compelled to rewrite it twice it was acceptable, and then he nable to secure for his labor than the paltry sum of $45. It was for even when Poe attempted this poetic effort—and in many it was a remarkable one—he ready gained considerable repu- both as story teller and as When the original manuscript ffered for sale, close to a cen- fter it was written, in Phila- , the appreciation of the au- ad risen to that extent that the ser was compelled to pay $2145 just $2100 more than its value time of its writing. If Poe, life-time, had received as many ds of dollars for the poem as the s of the manuscript received nds for the mere autograph; and pondingly as much for his other y efforts, the life of the poet no doubt have been comforted losing days, or might even have prolonged to a green and useful hose who are well versed in the ter of the life led by the poet, ay be doubted, for the reason would have been an incentive e led his life into even more ted channels, but this can have been the result, for the tion which ended with Poe's bauch at Baltimore, in June, as undoubtedly prompted by and that despair resulted from domestic and partly cial troubles.

Mrs. Marie Louise Shew, friended the poet in many ways, in his declining Poe owed the suggestion Bells." It is a strange fact had never found time t of the writings of the poet n she felt so deep an af sympathy. One day Po and said: "Marie Louise poem. I have some tea, which she served in the conservatory. Through the open window came the sound of church bells. Mrs. Shew said, playfully: "Here is paper." But the poet declined it, declaring:

"I so dislike the sound of bells tonight, I cannot write. I am exhausted."

The lady then took up the pen, and, pretending to imitate his handwriting, wrote: "The Bells, by E. A. Poe." Then in pure sportiveness she added this line:

"The bells, the little silver bells."

Poe took the hint and expanded the line into a stanza of six lines. Then Mrs. Shew suggested for the next stanza:

"The heavy iron bells."

This Poe expanded into eleven additional lines. He next copied out the poem and headed it "By Mrs. M. L. Shew," remarking that it was her poem, as she had suggested and composed so much of it. Such was the germ of this remarkable poem which melodiously mimics, in verbal and metrical harmonics, so marvelously the respective metallic tones—silver, golden, brazen and iron, of sleigh bells, wedding bells, steeple bells and alarm bells.

The poem went through no less than three transformations, however, before it reached the public in the final form published in Sartain's Union Magazine, in November, 1849, one month after Poe's death. In a note accompanying the poem in this magazine Mr. Sartain gave the following account of its evolution:

"There is a curious piece of literary history connected with this poem. It illustrates the gradual development of an idea in the mind of a man of original genius. This poem came into our possession about a year since (consequently about December, 1848.) It then consisted of seventeen lines. About six months afterward we received the poem enlarged and altered nearly to its present size and form, and about three months since the author sent another alteration and enlargement, in which condition the poem was left at the time of his death."

The original version, containing only seventeen lines, divided into two stanzas, was as follows:

"THE BELLS"—A SONG

I.

The bells! Hear the bells!
The merry wedding bells,
The little silver bells!
How fairy-like a melody there dwells
From the silver tinkling cells
Of the bells.

II.

The bells! Ah, the bells!
The heavy iron bells!
Hear the tolling of the bells!
Hear the knells!
How horrible a monody there floats
From their throats—
From their deep-toned throats!
How I shudder at their notes
From the melancholy throats
Of the bells, bells, bells!
Of the bells!

Poe's enemies have charged that he sold the poem three times over to different magazines. The charge is entirely false, but Mr. Sartain explains that it was he who paid Poe three times for the three versions of "The Bells," himself insisting on so doing, because the poems were substantially distinct pieces. "In the form he first submitted it," says Mr. Sartain in his reminiscences, "consisting of seventeen lines of small merit, he received $15, but after he had rewritten and improved it to one hundred and thirteen lines, he was paid $30 more."

The poet, it will be remembered, ost his wife, Virginia Clemm, on January 30, 1847. Thereafter he was as one distraught. "Deprived of the companionship and sympathy of his child wife," writes Mr. W. F. Gill, a friend-biographer, "the poet suffered what with the eighteenth of the coming July.

BIRTH CENTENARIES.

The twelve-month adds to the name of Thackeray another dozen of those worthily remembered now as the year brings the hundredth anniversaries of their arrival in the world. In each case one might fittingly recall the couplet of the late Richard Watson Gilder:

"Navies nor armies can exalt the state,
But one great name can make a country great."

Franz Liszt, the foremost of all Hungarian musicians and one of the greatest composers in musical annals, arrived in the little town of Raiding, October 22, 1811. Jean Louis Ernest Meissonier, who well may stand for art as Liszt does for music, was born, at Lyons, France, February 21, of the same year. Statescraft of highest sort is represented by the polished American, Sumner (January 6,) and the sturdy Englishman, Bright (November 16,) while elbow to elbow with them in brilliant gifts of oratory must be placed Wendell Phillips, whose birth fell thirteen days later than Bright's. Sharing February honors with the talented Meissonier will come the centenary of the birth (the third of the month) of that giant of mid-century journalism, Horace Greeley.

Charles Kean, one of the striking figures of the footlight world of a generation past and gone, made his debut in life at Waterford, Ireland, January 18, 1811, and a week later (the 24th,) was born that leader in education and philanthropy, Henry Barnard. Forty-eight hours before the latter's natal day Edwin Hamilton Davis came to bless a little farmstead in Ross county, Ohio—destined to write that too-much-neglected "Ancient Monuments of the Mississippi Valley," which a great European scholar has called "as glorious a monument to American archeological research as Bunker Hill was to American bravery."

With these should be written the birth of Henry James, the elder (June 3,) as representing theology; and of John A. Winslow (November 19,) as standing for our naval service (here was the commander of the Kearsarge in her famous fight with the Alabama, off Cherboug, in the June of 64,) and, as of an unhappy class not of "Kings in Exile," but rather of those who have never known the thrones to which the accident of birth had seemed to destine them, the Duc de Reichstadt—"L'Aiglon," the little "King of Rome;" Francois Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, whose coming had set Paris ablaze with fetes on the 20th of March, 1811, and whose passing, a short score of years later, in one of the Austrian country homes of his grandfather, Francis I, was all but unnoticed.

DELIA BACON TO CLAFLIN.

To complete the 1911 birth centenaries eleven items are to be added to the baker's dozen already referred to. They are as follows:

February 2—Delia S. Bacon; first to give currency to the "Baconian" cipher in connection with the Shakespeare plays.

February 24—Edward C. Herrick; astronomer and meteorologist.

April 29—Jacob W. Bailey; "Father of microscopic research."

July 9—"Fanny Fern," (Mrs. Sara Parton;) poet and authoress.

August 3—Elisha Otis; inventor of the elevator.

August 7—Elias Loomis; astronomer.

September 6—James M. Gillis; astronomer.

October 27—Isaac M. Singer; inventor of the sewing machine.

December 14—Noah Porter; educator and philosopher.

December 18—Horace B. Claflin; merchant and philanthropist.

"Sons of '11" in two earlier centuries were Robert Leighton and David Hume. The one, born in 1611, was a leader in Scotch episcopacy, in the days of the Second Charles of Stuart England, orator and scholar and (as his earthly reward) archbishop. The other, born April 26, 1711 (again a Scotchman,) is, somewhat strangely, yet held a great figure in British letters—"strangely" because, though an undiscriminating Southey called his work "perspicuous," he remains a biased historian and a philosopher of but one point of view—that based upon "human experience," which, after all, would scarcely seem infallible.

OF LITERARY INTEREST.

Literary interests in the opening year are not confined to Hume, however, nor even to the greater names of Thackeray and and Wendell Phillips. A half-score entries of lettered sort may be made on its anniversary records, not the least interesting being the founding, 'way back in 1411, of that stalwart university (standing for stout muscles as well as robust learning) of St. Andrews, the first great seat of learning to be opened in the United Kingdom after Oxford and Cambridge. Two hundred years later (the 1611, which brought the initial appearance of the "Cateline" of "rare Ben Johnson") and that same James I, whom we have to thank for the Bible in its present form, figures again in the annals by witnessing a very splendid performance of "The Tempest," given on November 1, "By Royal Warrant and Command," at the Palace of Whitehall.

In 1711—the twelve-month, both of the death of the French satirist, Boileau, "strong in sense and sharp in wit," and of the initial printing of Pope's "Essay on Criticism," which permanently established the reputation of its 23-year-old author—was born "The Spectator" as "The Tatler" died. It was January 2 which saw the farewell issue of the latter little sheet, after its twenty-one months of clever and influential life; its more famous fellow followed on March 1, its single folio leaves, set in double column, to enrich (and one had almost written it "to found!") the essay literature of the English-speaking world for 555 mornings ("excepting Sundays.") Each copy was composed of but a single essay, prefaced with a Latin quotation and tailed off with a little string of advertisements, and the initial number sketched the kindly "Spectator" himself. Thank Joseph Addison (that "parson in a tiewig") for the best of the workmanship, but fail to give due credit both for initiative and management to Dick Steele, much sinning, but more sinned against.

The new books of 1811 were not important; Scott's "Vision of Don Roderick" was far behind "Marmion" and "The Lay," and Niebuhr's history of Rome, though it did effect something like a revolution in the principles of historic narrative, was not epoch-making. But, if these two happenings lack even interest, two others of the same year's entry are well worth at least a glance in passing. On the 25th of March, at the London Church of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, which, in those easier-going times, was really what its name portended, Tom Moore was wedded to Miss Bessie Dyke, a pretty Irish actress, who may have unwisely led him to the writing of that flat failure of a comic opera, "The Blue Stocking," but who admirably well tended the poet's own hose and household. Five months later (August 28) befell a marriage which started the "high contracting principals" along quite the other road. On that day, Percy Bysshe Shelley, not long since "sent down" because of that expulsion disowned by a caddish Baronet of a father, took to wife Harriet Westbrook, daughter of a retired inn-keeper. It was not to be long till an early-morning stroller by the Serpentine was to find the drowned body of the girl, while the gifted, irresponsible husband had crossed to the continent with another woman.

SOME HISTORY.

Boileau's death is but one of a half dozen recalled by 1911. A hundred years ago the Mexican patriot Hidalgo was executed by the Spanish troops; a hundred years before that, the courageous and scholarly Episcopalian, Bishop Ken, whose morning and evening hymns are still repeated daily in thousands of Christian homes, laid by the cares of this world; and, going back yet another century, the observer of dates sees Henry Hudson (June 21) set adrift in a small boat by the mutineers of the ship he had just sailed into the bay that still bears his name. Nothing was ever again heard of the great navigator or his eight companions. In 511 died Clovis, King of the Franks, a convert to Christianity and the victor over Alaric the Goth at that Poictiers which, 850 years later, was to witness a greater though no more important struggle. In 211, at York, England, died a Roman Caesar, Septimus Severus, who had thrown across the isle, as protection against the marauding Picts from the Highlands, the "Roman wall," whose scanty ruins today lure travelers from the beaten path of cathedrals and galleries.

If such items as these carry one back to a history when ancient was become medieval, let it be chronicled as well that 711 brought the Moors into Spain, to overwhelm King Roderick, and open for the Iberian peninsula such a period of good government, along with high achievements in the arts and sciences, as it had not before known. Spain won, not lost, 800 years later, when (1511) her Capt. Velasquez set Cuba beneath her feet, to have and to hold till nearly four centuries of misrule should drive her forth. In 1611, there acceded to the throne of Sweden "the most illustrious hero of his time," Gustavus Adolphus, then not quite 17, and destined to meet a violent end, on the field of his greatest victory at Lutzen, before he was 38.

Passing over the South Sea Company's establishment in 1711—for that was a good nine years before the "bubble" should be at last inflated to a tragic bursting—a half-dozen happenings of 1811's history may be briefly tabulated, the first suggested by the death of Hidalgo.

Morelos carries on the war in Mexico, the revolt against Spain spreading south to New Granada (now Colombia) and Venezuela, thence into Peru and Paraguay, all of which proclaim their independence. Spain, temporarily and bloodily victorious in New Granada, loses elsewhere, Paraguay naming Francia dictator.

In Spain itself Rodrigo and Badajoz were carried by storm by the allied English, Portuguese and Spanish troops, the French forces under Soult and Massena being further worsted by Wellington at Fuentes de Onoro (May 15) and by Beresford at Albuera, the day following.

On that same day (May 16) the American ship "President," 44-guns, John Rodgers in command, captured the British 20-gun corvette "Little Belt"—anticipating by thirteen months the formal declaration of our war with Great Britain.

TRIO OF NEW LAWS.

Eighteen-eleven stood sponsor to three new rulers, two of them styled king, for the quaint but capable Christophe, crowned sovereign of tiny Hayti, on the second of June, must be counted as well as the soon-to-be George IV of England, who, as Prince of Wales (select "Florizel") in Febru-were the days of "pocket boroughs," usually "rotten," with the shortsighted Spencer Percival weakly attempting to fill the Premiership just vacated by Portland. Those were the days, too, of the since-notorious "Orders in Council," soon to prove beyond diplomacy to palliate and to lead to the second great struggle between these United States and the mother land. We saw it coming here; John C. Calhoun, just sent to the Representatives from South Carolina, had as good as announced it from the floor, and another southerner, Clay of Kentucky, "The Mill Boy of the Slashes," elected Speaker of the House on the very day he first entered it in 1811 (and was he not the third real "ruler" of the twelve-month's appointing?) was working with characteristic energy and shrewd skill to prepare us for the fray.

England remained blind. The fighting in Spain claimed what of her interest was not demanded by corrupt politics at home, or, if she gave a thought to anything over seas, it was perhaps, to Java, of which she had become mistress on September 18.

FAIRS AND PAGEANTS.

Italy has assumed the center of the annual stage so far as world's fairs go, offering the genuine novelty of holding (from April 11 to November 1) an exposition in two places at once; the artistic, historical and archeological features to be displayed at Rome, while Turin will handle the products of today's industry and labor. Those who care for nothing but culture and those interested only in tomato cans and safety razors may enjoy their respective preferences without cluttering up each other's footsteps. The object of this duplex exhibition is to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the proclamation of the Italian Kingdom; a reminder, as it were, that the realm of the House of Savoy, often spoken of as an upstart among nations, is reasonably ancient, for half a century is a considerable time as things go in modern Europe; the Dual Monarchy is only forty-four, the German Empire forty, and the French republic a year younger than that.

We are to be "officially" represented to the extent of $130,000, and to a far greater extent through individual efforts, J. P. Morgan, for instance, lending his invaluable collection of masterpieces of Italian art. Two other details are to be mentioned. The government of the boot-shaped peninsula has undertaken a project of high permanent value and large immediate interest, namely to demolish the buildings which now infringe upon the site of the ancient Baths of Diocletian, and partially restore the ruins of that famous edifice. For the second; an international exhibition of caricatures and cartoons is to be held at Rivoli, the attractive little town in Turin's environs, the display being made in the castle built by Victor Amadeo II, on the hill crest overlooking the Alps and the valley of the Po.

Another half-dozen international foreign expositions scheduled for the twelve-month are:

Montevideo, Uruguay: (February) paintings, sculptures, and bronzes.

Glasgow: Scottish national history, art and industries.

Florence, Italy: (May) horticulture.

London: exemplifying the commerce of England and Russia.

Frankfort, Germany: (September,) the culinary arts.

Rouen, France: commemorating the 1000th anniversary of the creation of the Duchy of Normandy.

If Rouden's millennium suggests the tragic execution in that old market square of Joan of Arc, let it also be added that 1911 is to bring an open-air pageant of her life and death. At Domremy, on the very spot where the Maid of Orleans heard the miraculous "Voices" urging her to the rescue of king and country, an immense theater is to be constructed where a cast of Origin of the Handshake.

Shaking hands is a relic of [illegible]lism. It became the custom i[illegible] days when every one carried a d[illegible] in his belt, and when one friend [illegible]ing another thought it necessar[illegible] attest the peacefulness of his in[illegible]tions by extending an open palm, [illegible] the Dundee Advertiser. Owens River Valley Red Apple Lands

The only place in this State which will produce the big red winter apples that have made Washington, Oregon and Colorado famous and have brought to their owners untold wealth. California farmers must recognize the fact that real apple lands, under development, are equal in value to the choicest orange lands and produce far greater revenue. The productiveness of Owens Valley soil exceeds anything in California. Corn grows 13 feet high, with ears 18 inches long, running from 70 to 90 bushels to the acre—Timothy with 11-inch heads—Potatoes 300 to 500 bushels to the acre, equaling the famous Greeley, Colo., district, where such land is worth $500 an acre. Alfalfa as high as 4 tons to the cutting. Celery and berries unsurpassed in America.

Consider this land purely upon its ability to earn, rather than comparing it indifferently with acreage in other sections. There is just as much difference between the value of Owens Valley and the ordinary land offered, as there is between the value of Hill Street and Broadway frontage.

Elevation is 4000 feet, just sufficient frost in winter to make perfect red apples. Fogs and hail unknown. Unlimited supply pure mountain water. Our lands will have most modern and complete irrigating system in the State. Steel pipes will be run through the entire property and made circulating, which will give water under pressure, thereby avoiding the necessity of domestic wells.

There will be a greater increase in the value of Owens Valley lands in the next few years, than in any other point in California. If you own orange or walnut land and can sell this winter, you will certainly make a good move to go into this new country.

Our representative leaves for North Yakima next week to place orders for apple trees for about 500 acres of land, which will be all set out this spring. You have from now until March first to plant trees. Otherwise you will have to wait for a year.

MANY SPLENDID BLOCKS PLANNED

Six Million-Dollar Buildings in Sight for Year.

Transformation of Business Section Amazing.

Construction Work Promises to Reach Big Total.

There is already every reason for believing that 1911 will lead all other years in the history of Los Angeles in the expenditure for huge business and office blocks in the downtown section, even as there is a practical certainty that all previous records will be broken by the home builders. The smashing of the best previous January construction total is assured by the certainty that a $1,000,000 permit will be taken out during the present month for the magnificent eleven-story Chester block at the northeast corner of Fifth and Spring.

It will not be long either until permits will be taken out for the fourteen-story building projected by the Los Angeles Investment Company for the northeast corner of Eighth and Broadway, the construction of which is scheduled to begin in April. March is the date set for the probable beginning of excavations for the eleven-story Van Nuys block at the southwest corner of Seventh and Spring, a structure which will cost approximately $1,250,000.

The date of the laying of foundations for the eleven-story Title Insurance and Trust block on the north side of Fifth street, between Broadway and Spring has not been definitely determined, but this will be a notable 1911 project. The same may be said of the ten-story office block which is to be erected by R. C. Gillis and J. J. Davis at the southeast corner of Hill and Second.

These are the definite skyscraper projects in sight in the first week of the new year, and there are any number of the same magnitude "in the air." It would probably be hard to overestimate what the future has in store in the way of imposing business and office blocks for the main business streets. At least six splendid structures now in various stages of construction, the cost of which is credited to the 1910 building record will be completed and ready for occupancy before the middle of the year.

It is going to be an even more imposing business section which the visitor to the city will see a year from now, and the amazement created by the evidences of substantial progress in the streets as they are now will be succeeded by still greater amazement when the huge structures of 1911 are added to the city's collection of dignified and substantial commercial piles.

YEAR STARTING BUSILY.

The building activity of the first week following the holidays has naturally not been of very large proportions. It has, however, picked up from day to day and there is every indication that the officials of the building department will be busier than ever in another week or two.

Some of the early-year building reported in the columns of the Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer follows:

Otto Janssen has drawn plans for a two-story brick building, 100x45 feet to be erected on North Main street, between LeRoy and Ann streets for Jacob Jenssen. The first floor will contain five stores and the second twenty-three rooms and three bathrooms.

C. C. Rittenhouse has completed plans and is now receiving bids for the erection of a three-story, Class D, apartment building on Bonnie Brae street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, for J. Burris Mitchell. There will be sixty-six rooms in all, with reception room and sun parlor. Suites of two and three rooms will be provided.

Plans have been prepared for a one-story brick factory building, 75x135 feet, extreme dimensions, to be erected on the corner of Tenth and Santee streets, for Thomas J. Stephens. It will be occupied by Forve-Pettebone Co., lighting fixture makers.

Walker & Vawter have completed plans and are taking bids for the erection of a one-story studio building and shop to be erected on Hollywood boulevard, near Ivy street, Hollywood, for the Hoover Art Company.

John P. Krempel and Walter E. Erkes, associated architects, have drawn plans for a one-story warehouse, 100x120 feet, at Macy street and Mission road, for the Agricultural Chemical Works.

Dennis & Farwell are taking bids for the erection of a two-story, ten-room frame residence on Sunset boulevard, near Florence avenue, for W. W. Morsman. Pressed brick veneer first story and cement plastered second story, will be the materials used.

H. M. Allen will commence the erection immediately of a two-story, nine-room frame residence on Fifth avenue, near Pico street, to cost $8000. F. M. Taylor is the architect.

F. R. Greenleaf has drawn plans for a six-room bungalow to be erected on Westlake avenue, near Temple street, for Mr. Rosenbeck. The Westen Building Company has prepared plans and will build for Elizabeth Cross on West Jefferson street, near Seventh avenue, a five-room bungalow. Frank M. Tyler has drawn plans for a five-room bungalow to be erected at Thirty-eighth and Western avenue, for W. L. Stevenson. The same architect has plans for a two-story, nine-room brick residence to be erected at Eighth and New Hampshire streets, for Joseph Metzler.

Paul C. Pape has drawn plans for a two-story, nine-room brick and artificial stone residence to be erected at 675 South Vernon avenue, for L. Kleinberger. The estimated cost is $15,000.

MANCHESTER HEIGHTS.

The J. M. Oswald Company, owner of Manchester Heights No. 2, reports the sale of lots in the last week as follows: Millie Jones, 45x135 feet, on Seventy-ninth street between Budlong and Normandie avenues, $375; A. E. Latham, 50x135 feet, Eightieth, near Budlong avenue, $450; H. B. Emery, 50x135 feet, Eightieth near Budlong, $450; Albert Edstrom, 45x135 feet, Eightieth,

New Highland avenue home of D. C. Lefferts. Robert D. Farquhar, Los Angeles, architect.

FINE HOME COMPLETED.

Colonial Mansion Near Smiley Heights One of Southland's Most Beautiful Residences.

REDLANDS, Jan. 7.—One of the most attractive residences in Southern California has just been completed by D. C. Lefferts on Highland avenue, near Smiley Heights, this city. The structure was planned by Robert D. Farquhar of Los Angeles, and its cost with the grounds is over $50,000.

The dwelling is of the colonial type of architecture and is set in the midst of an eleven-acre orange grove, which is beautifully laid out in drives and walks. The house has a frontage of 192 feet and is about forty feet deep. It contains twelve rooms, exclusive of halls, and there are three baths.

From the large logia on the second floor a magnificent view of the entire San Gabriel Valley, with its different cities and towns, and of the mountain ranges beyond can be obtained.

The living room is 32x23 feet in size and the dining-room, which is octagonal in shape, is 20x20 feet. The floors throughout are of oak. A glass roofed breakfast-room and a circular, glass-encased sun-room are features of the interior arrangement. There are beautiful terraces both in front and at the rear.

"Off With the Gun."

FIRST WEEK IS RECORD PERIOD.

SAN DIEGO BUILDING TOTAL EIGHTY THOUSAND.

Unprecedented Activity in Construction Marks Opening of New Year—First Day's Business Is Over Sixty-four Thousand Dollars. Outlook Never So Good.

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 7.—San Diego's building permits for 1910 broke all records, the exact figures being $4,005,200. The start for 1911 bids fair to help along another year of unprecedented building activity. Tuesday, the first day of the New Year, the office of the building inspector was open for business, nineteen permits were issued, the aggregate value of the buildings represented being $64,150. To date the value of permits taken out since the first of the year is $80,000.

One of the first important buildings of the new year is a three-story brick store and hotel building to be erected near Second and D streets, opposite the Union building. The permit was issued to Charles Engebretsen, a contractor, who will construct the block for a local syndicate promoted by J. C. Rice. The cost of the structure will be $30,000. Three months ago the ground, 50 by 100 feet, was purchased by a Montana capitalist for $60,000. The ground floor will be divided into two store rooms, the upper rooms to be fitted with private baths and other conveniences of a modern hotel.

The Star Builders' Supply Company will build a concrete warehouse at California and Beech streets to cost $9000. It will be used for the company's business of handling and storing building materials.

L. Hesenbeit has broken ground for a store building at Washington and Goldfinch streets to cost $3000. S. W. Morgan has begun the construction of a residence at Georgia and Robinson streets to cost $3700. George W. Barkley has begun the construction of a cottage at Thirtieth and C streets to cost $3000. The Pacific Building Company this week started work on three cottages to cost $1000, $1700 and $1800, respectively. One is to be built on Nineteenth, between F and G, and the two others on Utah, between Polk and Lincoln.

M. D. Murphy, who came here recently from South Dakota, will build a fine residence on a block of ground, 200 by 300 feet, bounded by Utah, Idaho, Landis and Dwight streets, which he bought of J. E. McFadden for $5000. The property formerly was owned by Ward McFadden, of the Venice Ship Hotel.

Architect Irving J. Gill has asked for bids on the construction of a two-story plastered building for the San Diego Country Club to be located at the southeast corner of Upas street, overlooking Balboa park. The main building will be 44 by 76 feet. It will be divided into a card room, ball room, dining room and kitchen, dressing rooms and a reception hall. Extending from the ceiling to a level with the ground floor will be a spacious balcony. Besides the main card room there will be private rooms for small parties. The main entrance will be a porte-cochere and arcade leading into an entrance hall, and thence into the reception parlor. There will be dress-

Retired Hawkeye and Buckeye Capitalists Quit Frozen Middle West For Land of Sunshine.

Maj. Loren S. Tyler, a retired merchant from Keokuk, Iowa, who has been spending his winters for several years in California, has purchased from Frank E. Hartigan a residence at No. 710 Kingsley, containing nine rooms, two baths, attic, sleeping balcony and garage, and located one block from Wilshire boulevard. This is to be Maj. Tyler's future home. The consideration paid is reported at $8500.

F. F. Rempel, Jr., a retired banker from Logan, O., has purchased from Mr. Hartigan a residence at No. 720 Kingsley drive, containing eight rooms, two baths and attic. This purchase was made for a home. The price paid is reported at $8350.

MANY BUNGALOWS SOLD.

The Consolidated Los Angeles Builders report the following sales: No. 1308 West Fifty-third street, six-room bungalow, to Ralph J. Reese, $3000; No. 1301 West Fifty-third, six-room cottage, to Hope H. Buckley, $3100; No. 1324 West Fifty-third, six-room bungalow, to S. D. Turner, $3100; No. 1266 West Fifty-third, six-room house, to R. Gallegos, $3000; No. 1241 West Fifty-third, six-room house, to Peter Gardner, $3000;

The same company is building for the following purchasers: J. Daly, No. 1260 West Fifty-third street, six-room bungalow; Forrest C. Ekstrom, No. 1209 West Fifty-second, six-room bungalow; B. M. Dempsey, No. 1240 West Fifty-third, six-room bungalow; Charles Westrem, Arroyo Woods, six-room bungalow; Z. Marceau, two six-room bungalows, No. 1340 West Fifty-third street and No. 1341 West Fifty-third street.

FINE BUILDING ASSURED.

Second and Hill Bought by Men Who Propose Immediate Improvement with Skyscraper.

The most significant realty transfer reported during the past week was the purchase by R. C. Gillis and J. J. Davis from the Baroness von Zimmerman of the southeast corner of Second and Hill streets for a consideration of approximately $250,000. Through the conclusion of this deal a modern fireproof business and office block of at least ten stories in height is assured for this important corner. James North represented the seller and E. M. Hills the purchasers.

The buyers of the site declare that the structure to be built will be one of the finest and most imposing in the entire west and that its construction will be begun within a few months. The lot has a frontage of 120 feet on Hill street by 115 feet on Second.

The new owners, both of whom are capitalists, with large property holdings in this city and vicinity, believe that the price paid for the property, $2000 a front foot on Hill street, is a bargain figure in view of the great development which is reasonably to be expected in the portion of the business section north of Third street during the coming few years.

Another notable deal of the week was the sale by Judge Moss to a local investor of 100 feet frontage by 247 feet depth on the west side of Olive street, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, for a consideration of $90,000. R. A. Rowah & Co. and Robert Marsh & Co. were the agents in this deal.

The former company also sold for Lee Phillips to W. M. Bayly 300 feet on the north side of West Adams street, just west of Western, the price being $30,000. The property is 225 feet in depth. A fine residence will be erected on the site.

RAILROAD CONSTRUCTION IN 1910.

New Line Built in the South of About the Same Amount as Last Year, But Outlook is Promising.

[Advance sheet from Manufacturers Record.]

The annual review of railroad construction regularly prepared at this season for the Manufacturers Record shows that 2048.1 miles of new line were completed this year in the South and Southwest, which is only seventeen miles in excess of the amount that was built in 1909. The amount built in the South proper; that is, excluding Missouri and Oklahoma, was 1872.2 miles, or eleven miles less than last year. It is estimated that next year in the South and Southwest there will be built 3285 miles of line, or about 450 miles less than was estimated for 1910. In the South the outlook for the new year is 3003 miles, or twenty-seven miles less than for the present year. It will be noted that the actual construction for 1910 runs but little more than half of the amount estimated at the beginning of the year, and if a corresponding result is reached during 1911 the actual construction will consequently be less than for 1910.

The small amount of line built is due principally to the fact that the railroads, on account of agitation concerning rates and because of increased expenses, had little to encourage them to build new line, although much is needed, and the absence of some big roads from the record of construction is conspicuous. Consequently, until conditions are changed, it is not to be expected that the financing of railroad extensions can be accomplished with ease or that the companies will be disposed to undertake new work excepting such as is absolutely necessary for the movement of traffic. The most conspicuous pieces of new railroad built in the past year were of the latter character, and those promised for 1911 are the same. It may be noted that in the estimates for the new year only construction which is apparently assured of accomplishment is considered in the table herewith; such as is merely contemplated is not embodied in the tabular statement, although it is mentioned in the detailed account below.

As usual, Texas leads the list of States with the largest amount of new track, namely, 791 miles, with which amount she is far in the lead, North Carolina coming next with 161 miles, from which point the figures dwindle to almost nothing, Maryland having the smallest amount of any State. Texas also leads the list for 1911 with 971 miles, and Florida second, proposing 481 miles, most of which is likely to be constructed. Georgia promises 379 miles, but from that the figures fall off abruptly and show the least promise of new mileage to be in Louisiana, namely, thirty-five miles. The new mileage in Texas consisted principally of the work done by the Santa Fe system, which will complete its extensive new construction, or at least most of it, during 1911.

In connection with this glance over the work of the year, it is particularly interesting to look farther and see what has been done since 1902, when a big record for railroad construction was made in the section under construction. In that year 4100 miles of new line were reported built, of which 1274 miles were in the State now known as Oklahoma but part of which was then called Indian Territory. Texas in 1902 had only 566 miles of line to report, although for the last several years she has built more than any other State. The grand total in 1903 fell off about 400 miles as compared with 1902, and in 1904 a low mark of 2421 miles was made, from which there was a gradual rise until 1907, in which year 3331 miles were reported. From this there was an abrupt drop to 1761 miles in 1908. In 1890 there were 300 more miles reported, and, as noted above, the amount this year is practically the same as last. The large table presented herewith reveals that Texas established a low-water mark for railroad construction in 1905, leaping next year to a high record, and the last two years she has practically lived up to that mark although 1907 and 1908 were coonsiderably below it. The record for Oklahoma is remarkable. After 1903 there was an abrupt drop in her amount of construction from 1111 to 255 miles, and since then there has been comparatively little built each year in that State. It must be remembered, however, that the large railroad companies soon after the opening of Oklahoma and Indian Territory to railroad construction vied with each other in building, thus supplying their needs in the way of trunk lines for some time ahead, although they now need to build more largely to keep up with the development of that country. The table follows:

The controller is said to be removing every particle of the objectionable solids from the smoke, and the management anticipates no further trouble. The steel electrodes have been replaced with new ones constructed by weaving a strip of micanite, three-fourths of an inch wide, around two copper wires. Each of the new electrodes are ten feet long and there are 600 in each of the nine precipitating tanks. The process has been in operation several days and is giving perfect satisfaction in every way.

The Mother Lode.

At the Plumas Eureka twenty of the forty stamps are dropping and excellent ore is coming from the lower adit and Seventy-Six workings. Fifty men are employed and more will be engaged shortly. The company has recently opened several splendid bodies of ore, and it appears that the Plumas Eureka will again become one of the premier producers of the North. About twenty-five years ago it was the greatest producer in California, and its record has been approached by but few California gold mines.

The Jamison mine, near Quincy, has resumed the production of ore, the mill resuming activities after being idle two months because of lack of water. Sixty men are employed and excellent ore is being mined.

The Argonaut has placed an order for a new hoist and as soon as it has been installed operations on an enlarged scale will be inaugurated. The company has opened large reserves of excellent quartz in the lower workings and has an excellent surplus in the treasury. This property is one of the largest on the Mother Lode.

MINERAL MAP OF CALIFORNIA.

ONE HAS JUST BEEN ISSUED BY STATE MINERALOGIST.

It Is Complete in Every Particular and Shows About Fifty Substances That Are Mined in This State. Will Prove Good Advertiser for California.

State Mineralogist Lewis E. Aubury has just issued a mineral map of California which is unique in its scope and completeness. Upon its surface the locations of mineral deposits of all kinds that have been operated, or that have been found to be extensive, are marked and there is a key to the map that at once points out to the observer the nature of each and every deposit that is indicated in California's fifty-eight counties. The map is four by five feet in size and contains twenty square feet. This size has made it extremely valuable for use upon a wall, for the letterings and other markings are large and easily discerned and an idea of the vastness of the territorial extent of California is at once suggested.

There are about fifty mineral substances that are mined regularly and in commercial quantities each year in this State. To get the exact locations of deposits of the fifty substances in fifty-eight counties has taken time and a vast amount of labor and care. The result is satisfactory. The map will be in demand in all parts of the world where there are mining interests and also wherever there are capitalists, mining engineers, or others directly interested in mining problems. For this reason the map will largely advertise California. The abundance of varieties of minerals and the great number of places in which they are found attest to the richness of California as a mineral State.

The gold and silver deposits are found in more than thirty counties. In fact the precious metals are more widely distributed than other substances. The map indicates a great distribution of copper deposits.

The known petroleum fields and the developments in each make up another interesting showing. The general effect of the mineral map is to furnish an immediate bird's-eye view of mineral distribution. Coupled with the statistical bulletin issued by the State Mining Bureau the map will give a more complete idea of mineralized California to the inquirer than any publication that has appeared previously. In completeness it surpasses any State publication of a similar nature.

In this connection interest will be caused by the list of substances that are mapped with definite locations for the individual occurrences of deposits. The mineral substances are the following: Antimony, argentiferous lead, asbestos, asphalt and bituminous rock, barytes, borax, building stones, cement, clay, coal, copper, chrome, diamonds, Fuller's Earth, natural gas, gold, gems other than diamonds, granite, graphite, gypsum, infuserial earth, iron, lime, lithia, mica, magnesite, manganese, marble, mineral paint, mica, mineral waters, nitre, petroleum, platinum, pyrites, quicksilver, quartz crystals, sandstone, salt, serpentine, silver, slate, soda, sulphur, talc and soapstone, tin, tungsten and zinc.

MONEY IN THE TREASURY.
WILL PROSECUTE WORK.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Jan. 6.—By a late sale of stock, $60,000 has been added to the treasury of the United Verde Extension Company, giving a total fund of $100,000 for the more thorough exploration of the company's ground at Jerome. In a winze at the depth of 1100 feet, sulphide has just been cut and there is belief that a large ore body has been encountered. Sulphide carrying 5 per cent. copper has been struck in a drift on the 800 level, the ore carrying as high as $6 a ton also in gold and silver, together with some lead. Application for this ore has been made by the Humboldt smelter, but it has been deemed wiser to withhold shipments till more development work has been done. L. E. Whicher of New York is president of the organization. Active management is in the hands of J. J. Fisher, a pioneer mining engineer of Arizona. The property, formerly known as the Little Daisy, adjoins the United Verde and has an area of seventy-five acres.

In Cherry Creek district, twenty-five miles east of Prescott, the Federal Mining and Milling Company has finished a reduction plant of unusual completeness, capable of handling the company's ores by several processes.

Work is to be resumed at once on the property of the Arizona Gold-Copper Mines Company in Cherry Creek district, following investigation lately made by a committee of stockholders. The main shaft on the Leghorn claim is to be sunk from the 500 level to 1000 feet of depth. The mill will be run only for test purposes.

The Kay company has purchased the Comet group in Black Canyon district of T. F. McDonald and W. B. Callum of Phoenix, adding the group to other property lately bought in the same locality.

TOMBSTONE CONSOLIDATED.
REPORT OF PRESIDENT.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

TOMBSTONE (Ariz.) Jan. 6.—According to President F. M. Murphy, whose annual report has just been made public, there has been unsatisfactory response to the appeal lately made by him to the stockholders for additional funds with which to carry on the work of development of the Tombstone Consolidated Mines Company's property. Mr. Murphy does not mince words in speaking of the work that must be done on the property.

He says: "From such information as I have been able to gather, relating to what has been accomplished thus far, the present condition of the mines, the result of several years of extreme effort on the part of those in charge, involving the expenditure of many millions of dollars, I cannot help but reach the conclusion that it would be little short of a crime if you permit your property to be abandoned at this time for the want of a few hundred thousand dollars to finish the great work that has so persistently been carried on under the greatest difficulties ever experienced in mining. I am pleased to be able to report that the principal physical difficulties have been overcome, leaving but a few thousand feet of development work to be done to demonstrate beyond a question either that you have one of the most valuable mining properties in the entire country, or that the judgment of mining engineers and geologists of the very highest standing, and upon which we have been depending, has been in error."

The new work being prosecuted is in ground described as having yielded more than $30,000,000 in the camp's early days. Brief mention is made in the report of the strenuous work that was necessary in order to reach the submerged pumps on the 1000 level. The pumping capacity is now ample to handle the water that has to be lifted.

CLARA CONSOLIDATED.
REASON GIVEN FOR DELAY.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Jan. 6.—Since its completion the smelter of the Clara Consolidated Company at Swansea has been in operation only intermittently. This has been due, according to the best information available, to the lack of fluxing sulphides, as the Clara ores generally are from shallow depths and a vast amount of development work remains to be done before the sulphide levels may be reached. The lack is to be supplied by an exchange of ore with the Humboldt smelter and it is now understood that the Swansea furnace is to be fired up again January 15, with an excellent prospect for a long and profitable run.

Undoubtedly, one of the greatest silver mines of the Southwest is the Reymert, in Pinal county, north of Florence. The property has an immense ledge, through which the silver is uniformly distributed, though in percentage too low to be attractive since the white metal went below a dollar an ounce. There is now a prospect that the once-famous mine may again be worked, favored with modern concentration methods and with bettered transportation facilities. It is expected, also, that the lead in the ore will assist in making the mine a profitable one. The property has not been worked to any great depth and there is speculation whether it really is not a copper mine with a silver-lead capping, such as has been known on many of the best copper ledges of Arizona. The mine is now only eighteen miles from a railroad station and is in a district which may soon be tapped by a mining railroad projected to end at Superior.

Work has been resumed on the Relief mine, on the plain, twenty-five miles northwest of Phoenix. The property is under charge of George Hamlin, a pioneer of this locality. It has been developed by means of an inclined shaft, 500 feet deep, in which a cave at the 400-foot station is now being cleared away. The ore is gold, free-milling, handled in a Lane mill.

MIAMI CONCENTRATOR.
NOT STARTED ON TIME.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) Jan. 6.—Owing to unforseen delays in the shipment of machinery, the Miami concentrator could not be started on the first day of the year, as had been planned. February 1 has now been set as the first day of operation. The first ore will come from a great dump at No. 4 shaft, mixed with richer ore from the mine, through which the dump will be stoped down, for raising through the shaft to the concentrator bins. The concentrator has capacity of 1500 tons a day. The ore treated will average forty pounds of copper to the ton, the output being expected to net the company $72,000 a month over all costs, with copper at 13 cents.

Six churn drills are being operated on the Inspiration property. The company is about to start work on a six-compartment working shaft, near the mouth of its main tunnel, to handle ores lying below the tunnel level. Commercial ore has been found to the depth of 500 feet, giving an ore supply that will last for many years to come. Test runs on the ore are being made in a seventy-five-ton mill lately completed, and economy has resulted in the utilization of concentration methods that have proven successful in the works of the Utah Copper Company.

A couple of drills are to be started at once on the Boston-Miami claims, near Miami. It is expected that ore will hardly be found at a less depth than 500 feet, as this was the experience on the adjoining Live Oak property, where ore was found at 475 feet and continued till 700 feet.

ALASKA GOLD PRODUCTION.
PRESENT YEAR THE BIGGEST.

Carlyle Ellis, an authority on the gold production of Alaska, says it will be the largest in the history of that country for 1911 and places the figures at $23,000,000. He has made an estimate according to districts as follows:

Fairbanks	$ 6,000,000
Southeastern	4,500,000
Nome and Seward Peninsula	4,000,000
Iditarod	5,000,000
Kubok	500,000
Susitna Basin and Kenai Peninsula	700,000
Koyukuk	200,000
Kuskokwim	200,000
Yukon River camps	200,000
Valdez	500,000
Nizina and Copper River	300,000
	$23,000,000

Angelenos Secure Placers.

Just across the Siskiyou county line, in the Galice district of Oregon, Bedford, Dillon and associates of Los Angeles have purchased the noted Dean hydraulic mines of Dean & Corliss for $20,000. The property has been a consistent producer for years, and large areas of virgin ground remains to be worked. The Angelenos are installing improved equipment and plan to operate the holdings along Mining.

RESUME OF THE YEAR'S BUSINESS
ON THE SAN FRANCISCO EXCHANGE.

WHILE the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, during the past year, has been the arena for almost exclusive dealing in oil shares, the San Francisco Exchange has done a large business in mining stocks. The issues most largely traded in were the Comstocks and the Goldfields. With the closing call Friday afternoon, another year on the northern exchange passed into history. B. F. Taylor's resume of the market follows.

Conditions from January 3 until December 30 have been decidedly mixed. Goldfield stocks in some instances have shown wild fluctuation. Goldfield Consolidated, the market leader, has held steadily in the neighborhood of 8¼ during practically the whole year. On two days it sold as high as $10, but the balance of the time it has been comparatively steady in the neighborhood of 8.25. Florence which opened the year $2.60 bid, selling down as low as 1¼, shows the most important loss of any of the Goldfield issues. Jumbo Exchange opened the year selling at 12 cents. During the Rice boom it worked up to 73, and is now back in the twenties. Combination Fraction has fluctuated from 16 to 50, and closes the year with a loss. St. Ives is up, Yellow Tiger is off, C.O.D. shows an increase of about 100 per cent. Atlanta has moved within narrow limits, as has Booth and Blue Bull.

The Bullfrogs have given a very poor account of themselves, Bonnie Clare showing drastic decline; Tramp closes the year neglected, and Mayflower, while better in price, appears to be out of public favor.

The Rawhide stocks which have always been subject to violent manipulation, close the year in bad odor, Rawhide Coalition being offered at 3 cents after selling in the thirties.

Nevada Hills has been one of the bright spots in the mining market. After it was found out George Winfield and his strong Eastern associates had secured control, the stock moved up from 48 cents to $2.50, and when the mill is completed, which will be early next year, it is confidently believed it will enter the dividend-paying class. Until the Round Mountain Company lost its case, dividends were maintained regularly at 4 cents a share a quarter and the stock was looked upon with great favor, but it closes the year with a loss of about 20 cents a share compared with the sales of January 3. Dividends will be discontinued by this company until such time as their case has been carried to the higher courts. Fairview Eagle, which is exchangeable for the Nevada Hills, shows an increase of over 300 per cent.

To the camp of Tonopah should go all the glory and praise, with Belmont at the top. The opening up of the ore body at the 1000-foot level on Belmont put this property in the premier class, showing a net profit from the first of the year until today of $4 a share. Jim Butler, which has recently resumed work on the company account, shows net profits of 30 cents. McNamara has held its own; Tonopah Ex. which has completed its mill, is making money and should soon be on the dividend basis; it is up 30 cents and the recent strike in West End has put this property in the profitable producing class, with an increase in price of about 300 per cent.

Tonopah Mining which has always been looked upon as the backbone of this camp, has gone steadily along, paying dividends quarterly, but increased from 25 cents to 40 cents per quarter on its last two dividend disbursements. Since this mine has become an active producer, it has paid dividends equal to 700 per cent., or seven times its issued capital.

The Comstocks have maintained their reputation for being the most erratic, most manipulated and most active stocks traded in on the Exchange. These issues are in a class by themselves and are subject neither to the laws of God or man. The plan which was formed early in the year for the consolidation of all these properties upon a basis of exchange of stock did not go through. The old pumping association was dissolved and a new organization formed under the management of Maj. Burbank. This promises great things for the future of the camp. No one attemps to predict with any degree of certainty what the Comstocks will do market-wise, but it is certain that they move fast enough and often enough to satisfy the most fastidious trader.

The following table showing the closing bid prices on the active stocks in the Goldfield, Tonopah, Bullfrog, outlying camps and Comstock district at the close of business each two months beginning January 3, indicates clearly what has been done on this exchange during the year just closed:

"The Only Water Supplied Alfalfa Lands on Sale in the State"

On Main Line of Santa Fe—Two Stations on the L

Lots of land is obtainable throughout the State WITHOUT WATER at comparatively low prices—but land without water is dear at any price.

Go to the fertile Iowa Colony with us and see the magnificent water system. Land with a perpetual free water supply is dirt cheap at $90.00 per acre. Prices advanced $5.00 per month until $150.00 per acre is reached. Iowa Colony's water system cost $100,000. Its source is from 12 steel-cased flowing wells—1200 feet deep—a mighty stream flowing through a main canal and through laterals over every acre. The soil is a wonderful silt deposit, as rich as the bed of the Nile. No fertilizer necessary. Alfalfa, dairying and hog raising are big money-makers here. Let us introduce you to ranchers who are netting $2500 to $10,000 per year. All social, educational and transportation advantages conveniently accessible. See the best land in the State at under the market prices. Buy NOW before the advance. $137,000 sold last month. Write or call for maps, booklets, etc.

VALUE OF COTTON SEED.

Worth to Farmers One-fifth as Much as the Fibre Itself and Is Increasing Each Year.

The farmers of the South will receive this year for the seed from their cotton approximately $165,000,000, at least one-fifth as much as they will receive from the fleecy staple itself, says the Wall Street Journal. Within the memory of men still comparatively young, the seed from the entire cotton crop, with the exception of the few saved for planting the next crop, were regarded as a bother and nuisance and were used to fill gullies or thrown into waste places. Later in their raw state they were used for fertilizer, and even a few years ago, when cotton seed crushing had got a fairly good start, 20 cents a bushel was regarded as an excellent price and the returns were regarded as "velvet" by the farmers. The seed this year is selling for 40 cents to 50 cents a bushel.

There are in the South today several hundred plants for crushing the oil from cotton seed. Three large corporations are engaged extensively in the manufacture of the products of the seed, these three alone owning nearly 400 crushing mills and quite a number of refineries. These companies are the Southern Cotton Oil Company, the American Cotton Oil Company and Procter & Gamble. The scores of other mills in the South sell their crude oil to these larger companies or to independent refineries and the packing-houses.

crude oil. The hulls and meal are sold to farmers who mix them themselves for cattle feed, while the crude oil is sold to the large companies or to refineries, etc. In some of the large mills the meal and hulls are scientifically mixed and blended into boveta and other balanced cattle feed which has within the last year or so been shipped to the eastern States to dairymen and stockmen, while, by the introduction of corn, rice, bran and a small amount of molasses, a horse feed resembling oats in its constituency is made, and this product, called scocotes, is becoming quite popular with those who purchase instead of raise their horse feed.

Cotton flour for human consumption was manufactured for the first time last fall and winter. It is made by a product. Its claim to favor lies in the fact that it contains a very high per cent. of protein, a larger proportion, in fact, than almost any other article known, while the proportion of starch is exceedingly small. The flour is so rich that it cannot be made into bread by itself, but is mixed with wheat flour or corn meal. Mixed with wheat flour in the proper proportion it makes a bread that resembles graham bread.

The oil is by far the most valuable product of the seed, being worth probably three times as much as all the other products put together. Few people have any idea of the large number of uses to which cotton seed oil is put. When the crude oil is refined the flour oil results with soap stock as the by-product. This by-product is worked and others, while new uses are stantly being found for it.

The refined oil has many but the most important are ing fats.

IN THE EARTH.

Rare Minerals, Metallurgy and Chemistry.

To Correspondents.

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and investigations contained in the paragraphs below:

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender and the general—not the exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed. Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.)—No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

GUANAJUATO (Mex.) Nov. 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am mailing you with this a sample of mineral from a narrow stringer crossing the ledge in a shaft near the San Cayetano y Anexas mine in the Santa Rosa mining district.

Assays show no gold or silver present in this ore; it is volatile when heat is applied to it, and it may be tellurium.

Please test the sample and publish results in the "In The Earth" column and oblige, yours very respectfully,

H. G. P.

ANSWER. The sample is a reniform (kidney-shaped) piece of native arsenic. Of slight metallic luster. Streak and color tin-white. Rapidly tarnishes on exposure to the air. Of uneven feature. "Yields to the knife. Easily frangible."

Easily fusible before the blow-pipe, coloring the flame bluish-white, and owing to the purity of the sample, entirely volatilized with heat. Hardness 2.4 and sp. gr. 5.90.

The fumes of burning arsenic are alliaceous; or in other words, the fumes resemble those of the good old Italian garlic.

Dear Sir:—I have received an advance copy of your prospectus or pamphlet in regard to the West Riverside Estate. Let me congratulate you on your showing and on your plan of operation.

I think you have stated the case very conservatively and in such a way as to appeal to prospective buyers. Your statements will bear the closest scrutiny and I think no real estate man or orange grower could criticise anything you have said.

Personally, I have been acquainted with the tract in question ever since it was set out, and having been an orange grower for twenty-five years my testimony should be of some weight when I say that the groves you are offering are among the best in this vicinity. The water right is absolutely perfect and the soil and situation ideal.

Yours very truly,

Native Arsenic.

GUANAJUATO (Mex.) Nov. 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am mailing you with this a sample of mineral from a narrow stringer crossing the ledge in a shaft near the San Cayetano y Animas mine in the Santa Rosa mining district.

Assays show no gold or silver present in the ore; it is volatile when heat is applied to it, and it may be tellurium.

Please test the sample and publish results in the "In The Earth" column and oblige. Yours very respectfully,
H. G. P.

ANSWER. The sample is a reniform (kidney-shaped) piece of native arsenic. Of slight metallic luster. Streak and color tin-white. Rapidly tarnishes on exposure to the air. Of uneven fracture. "Yields to the knife. Easily frangible."

Easily fusible before the blow-pipe, coloring the flame bluish-white, and, owing to the purity of the sample, is entirely volatilized with heat. Hardness [illegible] and sp. gr. 5.90.

The fumes of burning arsenic are alliaceous; or in other words, the fumes resemble those of the good old Italian garlic.

Nickel Not Present.

BEAUMONT, Nov. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I believe the enclosed sample, from fifty miles east of Riverside, California, contains nickel. Please tell me if I am right? There is a large body of the ore. Is it tose mica rock and carries no nickel values. There are traces of (pseudorph after pyrite) iron oxides in the mass; magnesium carbonate is present, and the chances are—judging from the samples only—that the property is not worth locating.

Impure Ilmenite.

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) Nov. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed please find sample from the Colorado River east of the Searchlight country. What we want to know is: What is the black metal which we find amalgamates with quicksilver, and we are up against it on the metal?

Yours truly, G. F. C.

ANSWER. Platinum is not present. We find that the sample carries "peacock iron," trace of covellite, microscopic portions of cuprite, hematite and ilmenite. The mineral, powered, amalgamated with quicksilver, panned (washed) and squeezed through chamois, yields a blackish residuum of metal obtained from the sulphurous constituent present with the oxides named that (for practical values—losses, rather) results only in the "sickening" of the mercury used in the test.

Triboluminescent Blende.

CALIENTE (Nev.) Nov. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] This sample of ore comes from a claim near Frisco, Utah. I would be glad to know what this ore is. Some say it is a luminous limestone, but it does not stink like some limestone does if you hit it with a hammer.

Please name this ore for me in "In The Earth." Oblige D. S.
(Prospector.)

ANSWER. Fetid limestone and fetid baryte surely do give off obnoxious fumes when struck with a hammer.

"Scratch my back" is a "direction" often placed on wall cards (of sandpaper) by the thrifty housekeeper who objects to scratching matches on walls or on the carpet.

If you scratch the back of the sample, however, or any part of the sample, with a nail or pocket knife, in a dark closet or room, a streak of fire, as it were, follows the line of the scratching process.

The sample is a variety of blende (zinc sulphide) "black-jack" of the mining boys in the hills.

Calc Tufa.

SAN LUIS REY, Nov. 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I respectfully ask your mineralogical aid in determining the granular substance herein, and also that the substance coated on the piece of wood; both found in a sort of a bog south of San Jose Del Cabo, in Lower California. Please give me the information desired in your "In the Earth" column. Very respectfully yours,
F. P. W.

ANSWER. The granular substance and the "coating" on wood is calcareous tufa, "a loose and friable variety of lime carbonate, deposited in and about waters which are charged with lime. Calcareous tufa is frequent-waters which possess this property are called petrifying springs."

Frequently, we read of cadavers turned into stone, and it is probable that the process is occasioned by waters percolating in and through the graves—like some of the burial grounds near Portland, Or.

Igneous Rocks.

SAN LUIS REY, Nov. 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you two samples of ore from a large ledge or dyke forty-five miles north of San Jose Del Cabo, Lower California. The ledge is "honey-comb" and burnt in spots as shown by sample, I think they carry low values in gold.

Please inform me through "In the Earth" what the samples are, and tell me all you can about the ore values?

Yours truly, T. J. C.

ANSWER. Sample No. 1 is a lava-like substance carrying oxides with very low values in gold. No. 2 is a gray lava-like (trachyte) also very low in gold. The samples do not represent a gold mine by any means.

Slickenslide.

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Seeing an article on nickel ore in a recent publication of your "In the Earth," and thinking this like it, I herewith send a sample which comes from a ten-foot vein some ten miles northeast of Julian. Kindly give me a qualitative analysis, if possible, and oblige. Yours sincerely, J. A. H.

ANSWER. The sample is iron-manganese slickenslide on one side and carrying in the mass, sparingly, microscopical pyrrhatite (magnetic pyrite.) The sample, at your request, was sampled for nickel values with the result that nickel is present in a trace only. The ore, however, is too "lean" to work for nickel at a profit.

Not Meteorites.

NOGALES (Ariz.) Nov. 26.—[To the Editor of The Times.] I gathered the round samples in the foothills eighteen miles north of Nogales in Arizona, and have no idea what kind of ore they belong to. A prospector, and friend of mine, thinks they must be meteorites and he suggested that I had better "send them to The Times and find out about it."

Please state in your "In The Earth" all about it.

Yours truly,
"DON."

ANSWER. The samples are not of meteoric origin. They are a somewhat rounded form of iron disulphide and known mineralogically as pyrite.

Quartz and Ankerite.

SAN BERNARDINO, Nov. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed please find sample of ore from a ledge in a quartzite formation near Big Bear Valley, San Bernardino Mountains, Cal. As a sample of this ore assayed seven times as much gold as it panned (free) notwithstanding it carother combination with gold. I trust you can settle the question.

Yours truly,
T. H.

ANSWER. It is not always from tellurium alone that high gold values occur. There is no tellurium present in the samples, however.

One of the specimens (quartzitic) carries microscopical (cockscomb) pyrite with iron oxides present. It is possible that this pyrite is auriferous (gold-bearing.) The other sample carries considerable decomposed ankerite with a trace only of vanadic acid.

Quartz Present.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please find enclosed a specimen of ore or rock taken from the face of a ledge about three miles north of Sierra Madre, Cal. The vein of quartz starts in about ten feet above the creek bed and extends down to the water running diagonally across the face of the ledge. It is about two inches thick at the lower end and eight inches at the top. I am told the ore carries iron, silver and gold. Please tell me in your "In The Earth" column what it contains and what its value, and oblige an old reader of The Times.

Yours truly,
F. F. B.

ANSWER. The rock is quartz with aluminum silicate. It carries most beautiful microscopic pyrite (iron disulphide) with iron oxides. Gold is present in low monetary value. Not tested for silver, but lead is present, trace only.

Sulphides Present.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed is a sample from a ledge of rock traced by the croppings and iscovered a few feet under the surface. This piece comes from about ten feet deep.

Will you kindly tell me the commercial value of it, and what may be expected in following the vein?

This is from about twenty miles from San Diego, and there is plenty of water near. Thanking you in advance for your kindness in giving the desired information. Yours truly. R. R.

ANSWER. The sample is iron silicate with sparingly disseminated pseudomorph (after pyrite) present.

We did not assay the sample for gold; assaying for gold is not within the purview of this department.

It is impossible to state what the vein may amount to commercially with development.

You might run into pyrite with depth, auriferous or otherwise. The water near is a valuable asset at all events.

It might have been well to submit a sample of the croppings.

Cobalt Not Present.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] This sample comes from a big deposit back of Indian Springs, Nevada. I submitted a piece of the rock to an assayer, who of the assay, and while I would be sorry to get your "In the Earth" department into a scrap over the assay, I would be glad to know if the sample carries cobalt." Very respectfully,

B. F.

ANSWER: "Scrap" (huh!) This department of The Times does not go up and down in the earth with the figurative chip on its shoulder seeking a scrap with any one, but if it is ever necessary to defend itself for stating the truth, about contents of rocks and minerals, we'll go the limit. Sure, Mike!

The sample is simply micaceous iron ore (a variety of hematite,) and does not carry a trace of cobalt.

Silvery Lustered Schist.

SAN JACINTO, Nov. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you some rock samples by mail. The rock is found on our place about one mile and a half from town. These stones, I think, contain gold and silver, but I do not know. Will you kindly find out what they contain, and what is it worth a ton? Do you think it would pay to install a plant?

Thanking you in advance, I am,
Very truly yours, J. T. R., JR.

ANSWER: The sample is a silvery-lustered mica schist and may carry gold. For gold values you are respectfully referred to assayers.

Its value per ton is nominal unless assays would show gold present.

It would be well to have some known valuable ore reserves before installing a plant.

Magnetite and Magnesite.

RIVERSIDE, Nov. 28.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The white sample comes from a new location fourteen miles from Pala, and the black crystals come from a three-inch gouge eleven miles southeast of Riverside. I take the white sample to be a kaolin of some kind, and the black sample may be tungsten ore. I confess that my knowledge of minerals is but little, and it has been a sort of fear that kept me from offering samples to your "In the Earth" department for identification long ago.

Yours truly, F. K.

ANSWER: What a bugaboo that word "fear" represents to the human race; it is a fact that if we allow our thoughts to be controlled by such a force, eventually, it gets the supremacy over mind and body and the results are more injurious than from any other known disease.

The white-gray sample is a low-grade magnesite (magnesium carbonate.) The blackish-brown samples are not ores of tungsten, but they represent a high-grade iron ore—magnetic iron ore.

Silicates.

GRANT'S PASS (Or.) Nov. 28.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am forwarding by this mail two samples of rock—Nos. 1 and 2—I wish you would kindly classify them in the "In the Earth" department of The Times.

No. 1 (white,) I call white jade (Californite,) of high grade. The county, California in serpentine formation. Thanking you in advance.

Yours truly, C. F. W.

ANSWER: Sample No. 1 is not jade it is chalcedony. No. 2 is rock, with silica, alumina, iron and magnesia present and is in part dolerite.

Feldspar and Baryte.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I now hand you three samples of rock from a surface prospect in Inyo county, California.

No. 1 is just as I picked them up from where scattered over the ground, they are the most peculiar lot of rock I ever run up against. What are they anyhow? No. 2 looks like tungsten because it is so heavy. No. 3 I do not know what to make out of it; is the red part zinc or copper?

Thanking you in advance for your trouble.

Yours respectfully, T. A. S.

ANSWER: Sample No. 1 is made up of crystals and blocks of feldspar (variety orthoclase.) No. 2 is "heavy spar" of the mining boys and known also as baryte; it is pure enough for paint (pigment.) uses. Tungsten does not occur native; the chief ores of tungsten are scheelite (calcium tungstate,) and wolframite (iron tungstate.)

No. 3 sample is a multi-colored quartz (variety jasper,) the red is jasper and carries no zinc or copper values.

Foliated Talc.

NEWHALL, Nov. 29.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you a sample of rock from a six-inch lead of it and located eleven miles southeast of Newhall. The sample I send you is the smoothest and softest part of the lead. Has it any value? What is it?

Yours truly, G. A. K.

ANSWER: The sample is a very good grade of foliated talc, of value for mixtures such as the various talcum powders and foot-powders found in the open market.

Owing to the narrow width of the vein, together with the fact that you have submitted a selected specimen the find is of no commercial value.

Talc.

SILVER LAKE, Nov. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] This local sample may be meerschaum that tobacco-pipe bowls are made of. Please name the mineral for me, anyhow.

Yours respectfully, J. A.

Serpentine Asbestos.

LOMPOC, Nov. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you with this letter a piece of asbestos, a cropping from an exposed ledge of the same. I would like to know if it is of a merchantable quality, also do you think that farther down under the ground on this ledge would be found a better grade of asbestos, also what is a fair grade of asbestos worth per ton?

Found in Lake county, this State. Thanking you for past favors, I am,

Yours truly, A. McD.

Answer. Glad to hear from you. The sample is the high grade (chrysotile) asbestos of commerce and worth, when separated, say $80 per short ton.

The production of the Paula property, in the Ventura and in the Midway field, is to be largely increased in the immediate future. On the Palmer Junior one well is expected to come in at any hour, and another is down something like 1400 feet. These are expected to become as large producers as the gushers on the Palmer property adjoining on the north. Material for a derrick and rig has been ordered for the Palmer Senior property and a well will soon be spudded in there.

RECCVERING ITS BLOOM. WORK IN VALLECITOS FIELD.

The Vallecitos is at last coming into its own. It is a new, yet in a sense an old oil field. Years ago the Union Oil Company put down several test wells there and got a good flow of oil in each, from one of them the oil spouting above the crown block of the derrick. Satisfied with the territory, the company capped the wells and removed the tools, placing a watchman there who has remained on the ground ever since behind locked gates.

The reason for not developing the property then was its distance from transportation, and the further reason that it was not considered desirable to handle the light oil along with the heavier grades from other fields. Where these wells were drilled there are several live seepages of very light oil, and there are a number of seepages elsewhere along the rim of the valley on both sides, all of which contain high gravity oil. The oil is dark brown and emits a pleasant odor, and the seeps in this respect remind one of those in the Oil City area of the Coalinga district. The formation here is the continuation of that district, and the oil has the same origin.

The Vallecitos is now only thirty-four miles from a railroad, and a number of companies are commencing to operate there, the Range 16, the pioneer of them all, being already down nearly 500 feet in promising blue shale. The field has the further advantage of being near deep water harbor of Monterey Bay, most of the distance down grade, and a pipeline can be cheaply built to the sea. The companies that have entered the field, most of them close corporations, are satisfied that it has a great future.

HAS FAITH IN FIELD. BELIEVES IN LOST HILLS.

James A. Ward, formerly fire chief of Fresno, and one of the best known oil men in the San Joaquin Valley, has just come out of the Lost Hills country. He is running two strings of tools there, and is enthusiastic over the prospects for a big field.

He declares the Lost Hills is the most promising looking oil field in the State at this time, and he says that within sixty days the district will be alive with producing wells and wells drilling. It is a subject of remark that the big operators who have secured holdings in the Lost Hills have gone about their work quietly and seem to feel perfectly secure in the promise of the future.

Getting Things in Shape.

The Santa Maria Midway Oil Company is setting up the engine for its power plant and will spud in soon. The Princess Company, adjoining its property, is down about 1400 feet and making good progress. The log in this well continues to read like those of the Palmer gushers, only a short distance to the southeast, and this part of the Cat Canyon district will doubtless make good. Several new companies are preparing to drill in the immediate vicinity of the Princess ground.

THE "LITTLE-LANDERS."

A Socialogical Experiment in the Southwestern Corner of the United States.

During the past two years there has been going on the working out of a new idea in tillage and home making at San Ysidro, Cal., in the extreme southwestern corner of the United States, in the little valley of the Tia Juana, just before one crosses over the border into Mexico, and but fourteen miles from San Diego. It is almost within sight and sound of the sea. Few persons ever heard of San Ysidro, but San Diego has been watching this experiment with deep interest. Mr. Smythe the parent of the colony, tells the world that his experiment, is proving a great success. Although it is a very modest experiment, he is convinced that the same thing can be done successfully anywhere.

Perhaps, if you have been dreaming of making your fortune, and of possessing country estates, and city houses, and automobiles, and conservatories, and diamonds, and steam yachts, and all the other visible and outward signs of the predatory rich, you will not be impressed by a tale of rural simplicity, with each member of the community working more or less unselfishly to promote the general welfare and to secure the blessings of community comforts, independent homes, freedom from wage slavery, healthful surroundings, and plenty of open life clea nair and unobstructed sushine. If you are such a one, read no further, for this is a pastoral. It is a tale of the simple life. Not for the ambitious, but for them who love peace and contentment is the epic of the little lands.

What the founder of the colony aims at may be described under two heads. When he set out he found a modern Utopia in California, and called it the "Little Landers' movement, he wished, first, to show people how they could get out on the land, occupying small farms for intensive cultivation, cooperating for light, water and sewer service; perhaps uniting to secure expert adivce on the problems of the farm—what to plant, how to plant, how to fertilize, and how to market the produce of their little farms. Secondly, he felt that a way might be provided for people who lived in the city to have a few acres where they and their boys could do some farming "on the side," as a help in supplementing the family income and at the same time providing a diversion, with the thought in mind that it would be giving the youngsters a chance; that it would be providing them with a practical training which might in later years prove of value to them.

Very fascinating, no doubt, were the study and contemplation of the variations of the plan, and the possibilities it held out. But it was necessary to make a start, and the simpler the plan to begin with, the better. The result, then, was the organization of the "Little Landers," and the selection of the rich little valley in the Southern California border, where water required for domestic and irrigation purposes could be pumped from comparatively shallow wells at little cost, and where the climate was so genial, healthful and at the same time favorable for many products as to be almost ideal. Without being oppres-could be carried on all winter, and to live under its kindly sway was a delight. There were no storms, no insect or other pests, no sunstrokes or lightning to harm, and the land could be made to work for the husbandman every day in the year.

Not to go into the history of the Little Landers too specifically, it may be said that a number of families settled on the small "ranches" or farms in the colony, each family taking tracts ranging in size from a plot as small as one-fourth of an acre to comparatively large "farms" of seven acres. They lived in tents in some cases while they were putting in crops and erecting homes. A schoolhouse was built among the first things, and before some of the colonists had roofs over their own heads the bell in the diminutive belfry was calling the little folk to their lessons. But the climate made the people somewhat indifferent to the character of their houses. One can live in a tent in Southern California all the year around, and it is not very unusual for persons to do so, particularly invalids, who have been advised that the outdoor life is the thing for them.

The little colony co-operated thoroughly in the cultivation of their land, and in about everything else that people can co-operate in. As soon as they had crops to market, they co-operated in marketing them. Being so near to San Diego, where 40,000 people were but too anxious to become customers, a member of the colony owning a team of horses became the selling agent. He went to the city and disposed of his wares at good prices, many who bought them became regular customers. On figuring up the receipts and expenses it was determined that the returns to the actual purchasers amounted to rather more than 75 per cent. of the selling price. This, said Mr. Smythe, is about twice as good as can be realized on the usual commission plan of doing business. He admits, however, that it is still very much of an experiment, and that possibly if conducted on a large scale, the business might not show quite such good returns.

Upon the wall of the clubhouse at San Ysidro is a tablet, inscribed on which are the hopes of the Little Landers expressed in this wise:

"The Hope of the Little Landers: That individual independence shall be achieved by millions of men and women walking in the sunshine without fear of want. That in response to the loving labor of their hands the earth shall answer their prayer, 'give us this day our daily bread.' That they and their children shall be proprietors rather than tenants, working not for others, but for themselves. That theirs shall be the life in the open—the open sky and the open heart—fragrant with the breath of flowers, more fragrant with the spirit of fellowship that makes the good of one the concern of all, and lifts the individual by lifting the mass."

In order to realize the best advantages the Little Landers located their homes on lots 50x140 feet, mostly facing on parks, and selected lots adjoining the village. Some had larger plots of acreage, some smaller. The idea was to keep only as much land as the owners could cultivate to the best advantage without the employment of additional help. Many of the settlers have been farmers before, but many are from other callings. There are ministers of the gospel, college professors, merchants, teachers, accountants, and persons who have followed other vocations. Most of the houses are very humble, the average cost being but $285. The social life is charming. It centers in the clubhouse with its great chimney and fireplace, its library of several hundred volumes, and the little hall where religious services are held on Sundays. Colony meetings are also held here, and topics of general interest, such as intensive cultivation, are discussed. There is no communism, but plenty of co-operation. The idea is to find contentment with independence by means of the loving care of a little land and intimate association with many good neighbors.

An Historic Ivory Cane.

An interesting curio in the form of a beautifully carved ivory cane is in the possession of Louis P. Griffith of Baltimore. Mr. Griffith said that the cane has been in the possession of his immediate family for the last 300 years, and that tradition says that it was presented to one of his ancestors by King Llewllyn, who was known as the "Lion King of Wales." Mr. Griffith said that he knows that the cane was presented by Gen. Greenberry Griffith, a famed leader of the American Revolution, to his son, Greenberry, Jr., who in turn, left it to his son, the late Howard Griffith, who was an old defender in the war of 1812-14. Howard Griffith gave it to his son, the present owner, who states that he has had it in his possession for the past forty-six years. The cane is one piece of ivory, and measures thirty-three and one-half inches in length. It weighs about one and one-fourth pounds. The cane is a masterpiece of the art of carving.—[Baltimore American.

TEN-MILLION MARK PASSED BY LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

L. P. Parsons, assistant secretary and manager of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, has compiled a statement of the business done in the year 1910. It shows a grand total of 16,269,267 shares sold through the exchange clearing house, of a total value of $10,511,233.41.

It was the biggest year in the history of the exchange, and the trading in oil stocks was the feature. This class of trading has expanded enormously during the past year. A resume of sales shows: 275 bonds, valued at $336,952.75; 472 shares of bank stock, valued at $82,751; 27,784 shares of industrial and public utility shares, valued at $421,203.03; 12,906,886 shares of oil stocks, valued at $9,525,123.28; 2,233,750 shares of mining stock, valued at $147,203.25.

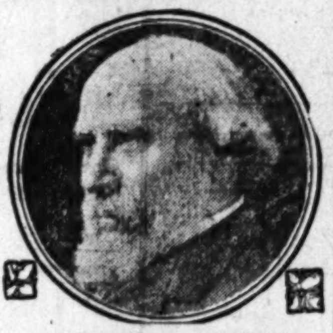
Why You Should Invest In The Los Angeles-Western Railway

Los Angeles city is growing westward to the ocean as fast as men and money can build, improve and lay out the intervening territory, and by the time the Panama Canal is completed it will virtually be one great home community, which will require many railroads to do the local transportation thereof. The stocks of said railroads will then pay large dividends and sell for big prices.

The Boulevard System.

The Los Angeles-Western Railway is in the section traversed by the Boulevard System now being built by Los Angeles county out of the $3,500,000 county boulevard funds, and as a result of the said grand boulevard system the section traversed by same is bound to grow daily. Invest your money in the stock of a railroad line in such a section and you will make large profits.



How Jim Hill Made $260,000,000.

That great giant of multi-millionaires, Jim Hill, was once worth only $10,000. He then bought cordwood from F. Wildung, who now lives in Los Angeles. Jim Hill had the foresight to buy stock of the old Duluth & Pacific Railroad when it was 40 cents per share. He, with five canny Scotchmen, put in $283,000 into the deal, which has since produced over $260,000,000, by reliable accounts. Jim Hill had the foresight to buy railroad stock when it was offered by the Dutch stockholders at 40 cents per share, and he does not have to buy cordwood today from F. Wildung. Do likewise, and make your money work for you.

Follow Rockefeller.

You have a right to think for yourself and invest your money as your brains think best. Rockefeller had a chance to put his first hundred where it would grow and increase and where he got big profits. Carnegie invested his first few hundreds in the same way, when he was a telegraph operator, and in 1873 it had grown to $300,000, and then he invested it all again, where it increased more than 800 times, which equaled about 100 per cent. every thirteen days. They thought and then acted. Do likewise. Great oaks from little acorns grow.

Do Like Charles M. Schwab Did.

You have a right to make your money work for you. Schwab worked for a dollar a day when a young man, but carefully and wisely invested his savings and at the age of 39 was a multi-millionaire. He put it where it worked night and day for him. Marshall Field clerked in a country store, saved his money; invested where it would work for him and where it would get every penny of profit that it earned, and during his splendid career piled up a fortune of one hundred and eighteen millions ($118,000,000,) principally through his investment in railway stocks. And he set a splendid example for all young men who have $100 to invest.

Jay Gould, the Financial Wizard.

You owe it to yourself to invest now, while you have this one great financial opportunity. Jay Gould once said: "$100 properly invested in the right place at the right time will earn as much as one man kept steadily at work," and the subsequent career of that able financier conveys its own impression as t or not his judgment was correct pioneer father, after and the district is whose prosperity has grown with that of the community. Mr. Tustin has made some exceptional returns on his citrus groves which equal the highest figures obtained anywhere in the State. A. E. Bennett also has some Valencia orange groves from which he has realized about the same returns as experienced by Mr Tustin.

The soil conditions of this section are well nigh perfect for the cultivation of citrus trees. Last year parts of Southern California suffered from frosts, the Tustin district almost escaped entirely.

The location is ideal for the development of the Valencia orange, the best paying crop of the Californian farmer. The money in the Valencia business is made by holding the fruit on the trees until very late in the season. This is a difficult thing to do without imparing the quality of the fruit. To hold the orange late, the condition of the soil is one great factor and a very equable, warm but not excessively hot climate is required to prevent rapid ripening. The Tustin district has a very good soil for this purpose and its location is sufficiently close to the ocean to be in the path of the cool modifying air currents which never reach the interior valleys. Some of the latest Valencias in the world are grown in the immediate vicinity of Tustin—netting the growers the highest prices in the eastern markets.

The average income on Valencias as experienced by the growers in this pense of maintaining a Valencia grove is about $100 per acre, including labor, water and taxes.

Walnuts are returning from $150 to $300 per acre; the expenses run from $20 to $25 per acre including irrigation and taxes.

In the Heart of Tustin.

The Tustin district is one of the largest lemon producing sections in Southern California. The returns on the lemons are higher than even that of the Valencia oranges, but lemons are a trifle more expensive to handle.

At the present time the principal crops grown in and about Tustin are navel and Valencia oranges, lemons, walnuts and apricots. Other fruits and berries are also successfully grown. Aside from the fruit industry, hay, beans, sugar beets and general farm crops are produced in the outskirts of the settlement and the values of this culture total hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

One of the greatest facilities offered the farmers in this location is the irrigation system which covers some 18,000 acres in Tustin and the surrounding country. The Santa Ana Valley Irrigation Company is a mutual company of all the land owners in the vicinity. The water is taken from the Santa Ana River about fifteen miles north of Tustin and is conducted through cement ditches over the country. There are at present 20,000 acres of land which carry the stock of this company and the company is serving all but about 2000 acres with water at the present time. The water is supplied at the rate of $.30 per hour for a full head of 100 inches. The average amount used by the ranchers in a single irrigation is from 45 to 60 inches per acre.

The soil of the district varies from a rich heavy loam to a light mellow sandy loam and runs from 25 to 40 feet in depth. Almost anywhere wells may be sunk and water may be obtained at depths of from 45 to 300 feet. The deeper wells tap a strata of artesian water and in these wells the water rises by its natural pressure 100 or even 200 feet which greatly lessens the amount of pumping required. The water supply has always been constant and is practically inexhaustable.

There are three packing-houses in the district. The Tustin Packing Company, The Tustin Lemon Association and the Tustin Hill Citrus Association. These plants will ship about 500 cars of oranges and lemons the coming year. Up to the present time much of the produce of the section has been shipped from Santa Ana and Orange.

THE YEAR'S CROPS.

It is expected that during the coming year there will be raised 800 cars of citrus fruits about one-quarter of which will be Valencia oragnes. About thirty cars of walunts and 300 tons of dried apricots will complete the bulk of the shipment.

The valuation of the several crops this year was estimated to be as follows: Total cirtus output, $384,000.00; total walnut output, $90,000.00; apricot output, $60,000.00; miscellaneous products, $100,000.

To the north and east of Tustin lished by a number of ranchers. There is a large area of land suitable for the purpose and which can be purchased cheaply. In this location also the land offers opportunities for sugar beet culture and for the raising of many crops which are produced in the central and middle west States such as corn and grain etc. This section would undoubtedly appeal to man farmers who have come from those locations and desire to raise those crops with which they are most familiar.

EAST VS. WEST.

A very marked and definite comparison of conditions between the East and the West is shown by th progress of L. C. Awe of Tustin. Mr Awe owned 160 acres of land in Iow before he came to California. This land was valued at about $100 pe acre and produced various grain and garden crops. He worked the entir 160 acres alone and found it an immense undertaking. It occupied hi entire time and in the evenings he would return home from the worn out with fatigue from his ha work.

Owing to the delicate condition of his children, Mr. Awe was forced to move his family to a warmer and more equable climate and came to California about three years ago. The first thing that confronted him was what he terms the high price of California lands. Lands that appeared to him no better than his $100 an acre farm back in Iowa were selling from $500 to $1000 an acre in this State. He hesitated to invest, for all his capital after selling out his place in Iowa would only permit him to purchase about ten acres in California. If he found it difficult to make a living on 160 acres in Iowa, how could it be possible to subsist on ten acres here?

But he took courage at the success of other California ranchers and bought ten acres in Tustin. Today he is making three and four times as much money on his little ten-acre ranch as he did on his 160 acres in Iowa, and he does not have to kill himself to do it. He has time not only to work his own ranch, but to manage two other ranches in the neighborhood. In California he is allowed to work the whole twelve months of the year, while in Iowa, as in many other eastern States, there were always from four to six months of the year that climatic conditions prevented his working out of doors.

Mr. Awe is a typical example of the progress of the Tustin district, and he has made his success in three years. He has a lovely residence on his little ranch and will welcome strangers at any time desiring to obtain information on the district.

TOWN OF TUSTIN.

Tustin is not a large business center by any means. It provides, however, convenient trading facilities for the surrounding rural homes. There are two church denominations represented, namely, the Presbyterian and Adventist Christian. Both of these have active congregations, Sunday-schools and various social organizations.

There is a good public school with ample facilities for the education of the young people in the primary and grammar grades. Two hundred boys and girls are enrolled and a corps of excellent teachers maintained to instruct them. High School facilities are extended to the Tustin people by Santa Ana without tuition charges.

The Tustin Improvement Association is the only civic organization. Judge H. A. Stutsman is president of this body and a very active man in matters pertaining to the welfare of the community.

A branch of the Woman's Ebell Club of Santa Ana is a very active social organization, of which many of the Tustin ladies are members. Nearly all the ladies of Tustin are members of the local W.C.T.U. The Knights of Pythias, the Fraternal Brotherhood and the Fraternal Aid Association are also represented.

The inhabitants are supplied with electricity for power and illumination purposes by the Southern California Edison Company. The illuminating current is 10 cents per kilowatt with a minimum charge of $1 per month. Current for power can always be supplied at a low rate.

It is expected that some time the coming year gas will also be piped through Tustin. Two companies are considering the matter.

Both the Home and Sunset telephone systems cover the entire district. Nearly every rancher has a telephone in his home. Telephone communication with Santa Ana, Orange and a number of the surrounding towns is made without extra toll.

REAL ESTATE.

A notable feature is that so much of the property is changing hands among the people of the district and no particular effort has been made to interest the ouside public. People who first settled in the district six, ten and fifteen years ago, and who have seen the property values steadily climbing up do not hestitate to buy at the advanced prices, so much confidence have they in the income to be derived from the lands.

The unimproved land of the district varies from $200 to $800 per acre and undoubtedly will not last long at these prices. Improved lands, including established orange, lemon and walnut groves, bring from $1000 to $2000 per acre, according to location and facilities. Business lots in the town 50x150 feet can be had for $500 each, while residence lots of the same size range from $350 to $600 each. The higher priced residence lots are planted in income bearing trees and are typical residence sites.

THE SAN JOAQUIN RANCHO.

Just to the east and adjoining Tustin lies the immense San Joaquin rancho comprising something over 100,000 acres and owned by James Irvine. This vast farm is under unique management and nearly every tillable acre is producing some kind of a crop.

The management of the ranch is in the hands of the Irvine Company. Thirty-seven thousand acres are farmed by tenants who rent small tracts of from 140 to 300 acres from the company paying their rent with a portion of the crop raised. Sixty-three thousand acres are used as pasture lands.

The company has about 200 acres under its own irrigation system. The water is obtained from wells and is distributed under ground by an extensive system of cement piping. All the orchards will be placed under irrigation some time this year.

This ranch produces about the largest crop of beans of any farm in the world under one management. Last year over 17,000 acres of limas and black-eyes were harvested from which were obtained from ten to twelve sacks to the acre. These averaged about $3.25 a sack, the total receipts for the entire crop coming close to half a million.

About 8000 acres were given over to barley last year and from eight to twelve sacks to the acre were obtained bringing a price averaging $1.25 a sack. The land devoted for this crop was not the best to be found in the district for this purpose. About 3500 acres produced from one to two tons of barley hay an acre.

Over 500 acres of the ranch are being cultivated for alfalfa hay. From five to six cuttings a year are made which average from three quarters to one and one-half tons to the acre each cutting. The alfalfa has paid for the last five years from $8 to $10 a ton loose.

Some 200 acres are planted in bearing walnut trees which are producing from 600 to 800 pounds to the acre and selling all the way from $250 to $300 a ton. A new grove of 200 trees will be set out this year.

One hundred and sixty acres are uncertainty of this crop, the results have not been entirely satisfactory to the company. From one to two tons are produced an acre which command a price of from $65 to $75 a ton.

Celery, asparagus, all vegetables, chile and bell peppers are also grown. Seven hundred acres were devoted to the cultivation of sugar beets last year and this year 2200 acres will be laid out. From ten to twenty tons an acre are produced, the sugar percentage ranging from 15 per cent. to 28 per cent. Beets containing 15 per cent. sugar bring $4.50 a ton and for every percentage above that 20 cents per ton extra is added.

Mr. Irvine is now organizing a company to build a large sugar factory about two miles south of Tustin. It is expected he will have it in operation in about eighteen months. This will be an added resource to the community's wealth.

The Santa Fe Railroad passes through the center of the San Joaquin Rancho on its way to San Diego from Los Angeles, and Irvine Station on that road is in the very heart of the property.

Each year the Irvine Company is adding improvement after improvement to its lands and as the property is adjoining and tributary to Tustin, the town shares in its trade and wealth.

5 Per Cent Interest On Your Savings

And a Share in the Profits of the Company

Make your savings earn the greatest possible amount of interest and profit without impairing your security—that's the secret of financial success. Five per cent sounds small perhaps to the man or woman who is anxious to get ahead in the world. Do you realize that the interest upon a $1000.00 American Finance and Realty Company 10-year bond paid for at the rate of $8.50 per month means an interest earning of $251.90? Or that for a 15-year term the interest amounts to $375.74? Take your pencil and figure it out for yourself.

American Finance and Realty Company
5 Per Cent Installment Gold Bonds

Are conceded by experts to be the safest form of investment ever devised. Every dollar received from a bondholder is put out in first mortgages on Los Angeles and Southern California Real Estate. When a dollar leaves the Trust Fund, a dollar and a half in securities takes its place. The management of the Company is conservative, careful, and is forever on record as being opposed to any form of speculation, no matter how attractive the surface conditions may be. Bondholders share reateably in 25 per cent. of the profits.

"Home Builders"

Offers You Cash Dividends

January 31st On All Shares

Fully Paid at That Date

The first of the year, or during January, is the time of changing and adjustment of investments with many. The distribution of annual or semi-annual dividends places ready cash at the disposal of many who are otherwise handicapped in making other investments.

To all such, now is an opportune time to buy "HOME BUILDERS" shares. All shares bought and paid for before Jan. 31st will participate in the cash dividend to be declared by this enterprise the last day of the month.

The 16% dividend per annum, on par, is paid in cash 4% every 3 months. This, at the price of shares, $2.10, makes your annual earnings about 8% on a "HOME BUILDERS" investment. In about a month or so the dividend rate will be increased, so then your earnings will be more.

Read How to Get Two Dividends in One Month---It's Important

To get two dividends in January, all you need to do is to use the money you have received from your other investments and savings, as paid you January 1st or thereabout, and buy "HOME BUILDERS" shares beforp the month closes and participate in the cash dividend then to be declared.

It's easy, it's safe, it's profitable—then why not.

Pressing Question.

CAN'T WE STOP IDIOTIC WASTE OF LIFE AND FORTUNE BY FIRE?

In an Interview With Edward Marshall, Chief Edward F. Croker of New York Fire Department Points Out Vast Preventable Annual Loss from Conflagrations in This Country—Faulty Construction Greatest Cause.

BY EDWARD MARSHALL.

EDWARD F. CROKER is the first chief of the New York fire department who did not serve in the volunteer department, which passed into history in 1865.

All his predecessors had been volunteers, but Croker is a professional fire fighter.

He was first appointed in 1884, his first important post was that of Chief of Battalion. He was made deputy chief of the department in 1898, became chief a year later, and was dismissed in 1902. By a unanimous vote of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court he was reinstated in 1904, and is today regarded as the first fire fighter in America—which means the first fire fighter in the world.

No waste is so complete as fire-waste, and in this waste, as in most others, we lead the world. Our fires cost every year enough to fight a war, or buy a kingdom, fertilize a hundred thousand farms now lying idle in neglect, build a mighty railway, a greater university than the world has ever known. If we but saved this money and expended it for education and philanthropy, the total benefactions of the lifetime of a Carnegie or Rockefeller would be overshadowed by it every year.

Nor is the waste alone of money. The annual sacrifice of life as well as that of treasure is as great as a great war's; the total force of men enlisted and devoting their activity to fighting flames is great enough to make an army of defense or offense of impressive size. No nation in the world was ever rich enough to stand a constant drain of such vast magnitude without a wince. Ten years of last year's loss would total up enough to pay the nation's debt, and but two years of it would build the Panama Canal. Any nation taxed by a King or Congress as ours is by its fires would rise in quick revolt, and justly, too.

In 1910 the total loss was, roughly speaking, for the nation, $225,000,000.

And yet year after year we go on building firetrap workshops, firetrap tenements, tinder dwelling houses, and great business blocks as inflammable almost as gunpowder, and go on supporting, without thinking of it, at a total cost sufficient, annually, to fireproof every building raised, according to one expert's estimate, a force of men and horses, and a mighty battery of engines to extinguish the continual assaults upon them by the enemy—the flames. Of all our national wastes this waste is, probably, the most absurd, most tragic, most—American. Europeans look at this phase of our national life with either smiles of real contempt or thrills of horror. Within a few weeks nearly every section of the nation has had dreadful fires—dreadful in their cost of life and property, more dreadful in their indication of a bad break in American logic. The study of the subject and origination of some means of meeting the great evil is one of the time's great needs—a greater need than the great need of finding ways and means of stopping the terrific slaughter of our railway accidents. And nothwithstanding the increase of fireproof buildings, the loss per capita throughout the country is increasing steadily. It grew 7 cents in the last year.

I had a talk the other night (while fire gongs clanged incessantly around us, while the pawing of too eager horses in the stalls below came up to us with nerve-racking persistency, while the record showed that several "unimportant" fires were burning in the territory over which he holds his jurisdiction) with Chief Edward Croker of the New York Fire Department about this.

Chief Croker is a very able man, who, born of stock emphatically political, has never been in politics; whose education has been gained almost entirely amid the acrid fumes of smoke, whose muscles are gigantic, and whose movements are like those of a young panther in their spring and quick recoil. He is in direct command of a department larger than the combined fire-fighting forces of the five next largest cities in the union—Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, and Baltimore; he has under him 4457 men, divided into 258 companies and equipped with 1600 horses, to say nothing of the motor apparatus. He himself attends all second-alarm fires in New York City proper, and all thirds throughout the greater city. He is no theorist, but eminently practical. A rough man, handling rough men amid rough surroundings, he has also studied deeply and learned much besides the details of department routine and department discipline tactics.

AMERICA THE LAND OF FIRE.

"There is no body of men in all the world more utterly devoted to their duty, more competent, more admirable in many ways, than the American firemen," he said, thoughtfully, "and when you come to think of it it is a pity that they should be at the work—that there should be so great a need of them that they must be kept at it. The whole country is made up of poorly planned and poorly built construction. What was true of Baltimore (and what a price she paid for it!) is just as true of this town and of Philadelphia, and the western cities, such of them as I have visited, are worse than those on the Atlantic Coast.

"America is the land of fires because it is the land of frame construction, and frame construction should be absolutely prohibited in cities. Every building should be fireproof in large cities, and, so far as that goes there is no reason why most buildings should not be in towns and villages. The cost of building a slow-burning or a fireproof structure over the cost of putting up a wooden fire trap, is not great, and constantly is lessening, both because of increased cost of lumber and of decreased cost of other and more suitable materials. The man who plans an ordinary non-fireproof structure to cost [illegible] could build it safely fireproof [illegible] to 12 per cent. additional. It [illegible] be cheaper in the end—if the [illegible] cost amounted to 30 per cent., or [illegible] 40 per cent., but it does not. Add [illegible] half to the cost of the average American city building, and by doing [illegible] eliminate all fires, and you would [illegible] saving money in the end.

"[illegible] fires which wise men cut are [illegible]," he went on at length. "This annual sacrifice of firemen is a foolish waste of admirable human material. No man working side by side with the smoke-eaters as I have for years could fail to be impressed with the undoubted fact that fire-fighting has brought a distinct type into being, and a very admirable type, at that. It seems a pity that such splendid fellows should be snuffed out every year in such great numbers—for the aggregate each year is great—by accidents which easily might be avoided. Almost every fire fatality is due to bad construction, or, where construction is not notably imperfect, to overweighted floors. A certain number of firemen must, because of the extrahazardous nature of their calling, be expected annually to lose their lives, but such wholesale slaughter is unreasonable. Officers in charge at fires cannot always tell just what condition the burning buildings may be in, and may, and often do, send their men where they would not send them if they were thoroughly informed. They cannot always foresee the exact moment when a wall, for instance, will collapse. When a man joins a fire department he commits an act of bravery, but his calling should not be more hazardous than necessary.

THE PERILS OF A FIREMAN'S LIFE.

"I've sometimes thought the public failed to quite appreciate the perils of a fireman's life. If he is injured he receives his wound in public service quite as much as any soldier does when hurt in battle; if he gives his life when fighting fire the sacrifice is clearly made in the interest of his fellow-citizens. His warfare, as a matter of plain fact, is far more strenuous than any soldier's, for his battles are the things of every day. The fireman is up against the game continually. The soldier who enlisted for the Spanish War had three good days of fighting and then he was all through and has been through ever since; the man who, in the same year, joined the Fire Department of any city in the country has often had as much, as hazardous, and as fatiguing fighting to be done each week for long months at a time. The great secret of stopping fire is to get at it quickly and not let it spread. Great risks are taken in this work and often lives are lost at it. Invariably when the chief officer in charge of a fire places his men in dangerous positions he informs them that they are in peril, that they must stay as long as possible, and that, in case they are cut off, he will tell them what, in his judgment, it will be best for them to do; but despite his watchfulness, many men are sacrificed. The old saying that you cannot go to war and not lose soldiers is quite as true of fire departments as it is of armies. We cannot go to fires and not lose firemen. This has been true since the first fire department was organized in Rome in 1500. Existing records show that members of that fire department lost their lives while at their work, and, doubtless, firemen always will, but the loss here in America, in 1911, is quite beyond all reason.

OUR NATIONAL CARELESSNESS.

"It is a matter, I suppose, of the national temperament—a detail, and a sorrowfully bad detail. Even children—children notably, indeed—are careless about fire, and many fires are due to this same carelessness. I wonder if something of real value might not be done by way of education which would be of value? I am strongly of opinion that children should be taught at school about fire dangers.

"The matter of impressing on the young idea the great gravity of what a lighted match may do should not be neglected. Lectures, I believe, should be established in the public schools to deal especially with the magnitude of our fire losses, both in life and property, and what to do in case of fire. If, thus, the gravity of the fire menace was impressed upon the child, he might make a much more careful citizen than he would otherwise, in later life. This, I think, should be considered necessary to the education of a child. How many mighty conflagrations every year are started by boys' bonfires in the street? It seems to be the most natural thing in the world for a boy to play with fire, and in this country this dangerous tendency remains almost unchecked. There is a chance here for some broad-minded educators to plan a general scheme of specialized tuition which might well accomplish wonders. In the tenement house districts of the large cities free lectures should also be given on these subjects, for the benefit of old and young alike.

"A large proportion of the loss of try rue to fires may be traced to lack of knowledge of certain small essentials on the part of the general public. In some way it should be made certain that every human being old enough to learn, knows where to find the fire-alarm box nearest to his home and to the place of his employment, and knows exactly how to operate it. The public should be taught that buildings will not fall immediately after a fire starts in them, and that to jump until the fire is actually at one's back is foolish. Everything that can should be done to teach the mass of factory workers and tenement house dwellers to be cool and calm in case of fire. A large proportion of the appalling number killed each year in the United States is killed through foolishness.

POSSIBLE TO REDUCE THE LOSS.

"If I had proper laws to work with in the organization of proper supervision of a fire-preventing bureau, though, I believe that in twelve months I could reduce fire losses of both life and property in New York by 25 per cent. and in the second year I could cut the loss down by not 25, but 40—loss of both property and lives. This matter of prevention is the next thing which must certainly be taken up throughout the country, and the sooner it is done the better. Last year the money loss in New York City was $5,936,333, and 40 per cent. of that would be two million dollars odd. Pretty good interest that would be upon the cost of such a bureau, and in other cities bureaus of prevention could do as effective work.

"Such a bureau should have full police power to make people keep their premises in safe condition. Its chief's power should be absolute. He should be empowered to go to you and say: 'You've a cellar full of rubbish underneath your building and we'll give you twenty-four hours only to completely clear it out.' Then if you did not attend to it the Bureau of Prevention should send men and do it for you, sending you the bill and taking everything they found in the offensive cellar whether it was rubbish or of value, to the public dump. Your cellar after that would be kept clear of massed inflammable material, and as a large proportion of the first start in such cluttered cellars, an important forward step would have been taken. The way to do things is to do 'em, and prevention should have complete authority to force people to protect themselves. It would make a mighty difference in our fire losses both of property and life. The general campaign of education which I have spoken of, including free public lectures, is the first thing; and the bureaus of prevention are the second things which I would recommend in planning to reform America, the land of fires, and after that would come a general movement toward fireproofing in construction. I have already pointed out that that would be a real economy.

REFORMED TENEMENT AND FLAT CONSTRUCTION.

"In the cities of America the greatest fire dangers lurk in tenement-house cellars and stairways, where coal and wood bins become storage places for rubbish of all sorts, from their legitimate contents to cast-off mattresses and baby carriages. Men who definitely set out to fix a house so that it would catch fire if possible, and when it caught fire would burn quickly and completely, or at least, would give firemen a tough fight, could not possibly devise a better place to start a blaze which would entirely accomplish what they wanted than the average tenement-house cellar. This should, of course, be all reformed, but tenement and flat house cellars should be so built that if it should not be they still would be less of a menace to the structure, often a veritable human hive, which towers above them. No stairs should lead from cellars to the inside of the upper building. All communication with the cellar should be from the outside. This, and the prohibition of accumulated rubbish, would prevent a mighty fire loss annually in the United States, and there are other details, quite as simple, which would help materially. All pipe recesses, for example, should be filled in, top and bottom, solid, with cement. Pipe recesses are too often flues which carry fire from floor to floor. All partitions in all cellars should be quite fireproof. In all cellars sprinkler systems—they are not expensive—should be required by law—you know the kind I mean, the sort which start to operate whenever a high temperature exists near to their thermostats. There are many systems of this sort. In flat houses the sprinkler systems should be required to have a head upon the ceiling of each tenant's compartment, and there should be outside connection with a regulation fire department two-ways Siamese hydrant. It should be compulsory that the owner should have a properly protected gas or electric light burning in the cellar at all times, with an automatic fuse connection back of the gas meter, if it be gas which is used, to shut the flow off if the fire comes close enough to make an explosion likely. So much for the cellar.

PRECAUTIONS ABOVE STAIRS.

"Now for the upper house. Lights should be kept burning, property protected, on all stairways at all times of the night. Many fires, we find, are started upon stairways by people striking matches, late at night to light their way to their apartments. And the stairways generally should be improved. They and the halls, at least, should be fireproofed, even if the balance of the structure is not. Stair wells often spread a fire from floor to floor, often stairways burn away, leaving the balance of the building in good shape. As dangerous as stairway wells are dumbwaiters and elevator wells. They should be quite fireproof in every instance. In lieu of ladders upon the fire escapes there should be stairs with hand rails, so that women and children can make use of them in time of fire peril without incurring, as they struggle to escape from fire, the other peril of a fall. The ladders of all fire escapes should be placed as far from windows as possible, so that flames issuing from such events will not burn the people trying to escape. Builders sometimes are astonishingly foolish about such things. I have seen fire escapes so placed that their name, in case of fire, became at once a misnomer. They led not from but to the fire on every floor. The doors leading to the bulkheads on the roof should not be locked, but closed by springs and built to open outward.

WHERE PEOPLE ARE IN CROWDS

"All places of public amusement, schols, hospitals, asylums and other institutions, should be thoroughly fireproof throughout, with more than one stairway in a building, the stairways to be remote from one another and should have no direct communication from the cellar to the upper floors within the building. All elevators and well-hole stairways should be inclosed in walls of solid brick without wood work, with openings iron framed and wire glassed. All shaft skylights should be covered with thin glass, protected on the top by a wire netting, so that in case of fire the rising temperature would break the glass and allow the heat and smoke to find a vent instead of spreading through the building. Here again the ample fire escapes should be equipped with stairs, not ladders, and provided with hand rails, and where practicable should be inclosed in independent towers without direct entrance to the buildings. Of course, such places should be perfectly equipped with fire alarms connected directly with the fire department, with hose and hydrants, and all that. Such precautions as I indicate would save a lot of lives in the United States each year.

"All fireproof office buildings and so-called 'loft' buildings used for manufacturing purposes should be equipped with fire escapes enclosed in wire mesh to prevent panic-stricken people from falling when they try to use them, and provided with good iron stairs with rails instead of ladders, as is general throughout the country. The law is strict in almost every city in the Union in regard to theaters, and it should be. It requires asbestos curtains, specified and ample exits, and all sorts of safety devices, besides a fireman upon duty on the stage, to guard the prosperous who go to them to find amusement. All this is as it should be, but it protects the prosperous alone in most part. The poor devils who are forced to work in factories all day and often through the night, the laborers in loft buildings, the toilers in the sweat shops are much less elaborately guarded, and the risks they take are necessary. A large percentage of the deaths from fire throughout the country happen in such places and nearly every one of them could be easily prevented. I know of not a single city in the Union, and I have traveled it from coast to coast and am continually in correspondence and in consultation with fire chiefs from all parts of the country, where the poor are as closely guarded against fire danger while occupied at the necessary tasks by which they gain their livelihood as the prosperous are while seeking their amusement."

OTHER DANGER POINTS.

The Chief, sitting at his desk, with feet up, easy in a loose shirt of gray flannel, his trousers caught in by an old belt of strap leather, paused in thought.

"Schools," he went on, presently, "should be especially well built and guarded against fire. They should be fireproof, and, besides, should be provided with escapes inside and out." [illegible] whole talk the fact that buildings might be fireproof never made him think of the omission of the fire escape from their construction. "There should be no entrance to the cellar of a building of this character from the inside; all doors through the whole building should open outwardly, and be left unlocked through school hours. Each school building should have direct electrical connection with the fire department, and the pupils should be thoroughly instructed in fire drills.

"More police power of a sort should be invested in the Five Departments generally. They should be empowered to make necessary regulations, and require property owners to comply with them. I mean that they should be empowered to order sprinklers in, require that axes, extinguishers, and the like shall be provided at convenient places, and so on. The law, in many instances, orders these things now, but the process of compelling people to obey it is too slow and cumbersome to make it possible to secure a general compliance. The Fire Chief should be empowered to tell a man to do these things or have his building closed forthwith.

"There is, so far as I know, no city in the Union where a proper system of fire inspection is in vogue. Some of the construction inspection is all right, but after people have moved into the completed buildings they can do about as they please, and build bonfire heaps around themselves, which then lie merely waiting for a fool or accident to touch a light to them. Take New York City, for example. One Building Inspector has from Fourteenth to Twenty-third street, and from Broadway to the Hudson for his district. It is absurd. One man in that district could not even watch the alterations and new buildings properly, let alone inspecting other structures. Such fire inspection as I indicate is, I thoroughly believe, more important to the preservation of human life and property than any other form of police work. One tenement house fire may easily snuff out as many lives as twenty murders.

STATE FIRE INSPECTION.

"I am a very strong believer in the creation in such States as do not already have such an office of a State Fire Marshal, with at least a 10-year office tenure and a sufficiently high salary to make the office tempting to an able man. A few States, among them Ohio and Massachusetts, already have such a system. The marshals have full power to make investigations of all fires which may occur in any portion of the State, and are provided with assistants to help them to a thorough execution of the work. All fires should be investigated. There is more incendiarism than the public dreams, and where there is not straight incendiarism there is often negligence so gross that it almost equally merits punishment. The penalties for arson, as provided by the laws, are generally great enough, but evidence is hard to get, and under the existing system is almost never gathered. State Fire Marshals should have all kinds of power, including that of arrest, of course."

DEALERS PREDICT RECORD YEAR.

SOUTH PASADENA IS STEADILY FORGING AHEAD.

Past Twelve Months Period of Unceasing Building Activity—New Year Opened With Week of Encouraging Animation in Realty. Fine Subdivision Is Projected.

SOUTH PASADENA, Jan. 7.—The real estate men of this city are a unit in believing that 1911 will be the banner year in the realty history of South Pasadena. The outlook for building and general development is much more promising than it was the same time last year. The year has been one of unceasing building activity in the residence districts. Old boundaries have been greatly extended and values have gained steadily.

The Sparks Realty Company reports the sale for O. C. Conley of Los Angeles, to J. N. Coutts, of 80x155 feet on Fremont avenue, between Oak and Rollins street, the consideration being $3000. This lot is situated near the High School and the proposed Women's Improvement Association Clubhouse, and Mr. Coutts will improve with a fine story and a half residence to cost in the neighborhod of $5000.

Gilbert Co. also reports the sale for Mrs. C. W. Fuller to F. T. Newcomb, of 50x165 feet on Hope street, between Fremont and Fair View avenues, with a five-room bungalow, for $1600. This building was purchased as an investment.

Mrs. Caroline Dobbins is subdividing nine acres that she owns on Garfield, Monterey road and Oxley street. The street improvements are being put in, and the tract will soon be placed on the market.

P. J. Dolan reports the sale of his home place to W. C. Hale of Los Angeles. The holding consists of a lot, 100x563 feet, on avenue, between Monterey road and Oxley street, with an eight-room bungalow. The grounds are set out to all kinds of fruits and fancy shrubbery and flowers, and about 100 eucalyptus, spruce, sycamore and oak trees. The consideration was $7500.

Mr. Dolan also reports the sale of 180 feet on Fair Oaks avenue, fronting on the Raymond golf grounds and running through to Mound, a distance of 360 feet. The lot is situated on the northwest corner of Grevalia street and Fair Oaks avenue, which makes it face three streets. This is known as the Dr. Judson Gibbs property, and was sold to Edwin Potter of Cleveland, O., who will immediately improve with a handsome residence for a winter home. The reported price paid for the site is $11,000. Mr. Potter also owns 120 feet on the southwest corner of Grevalia and Fair Oaks avenue.

Other sales reported follow: Mrs. L. Wall to J. P. Probst, 50x156 feet on Monterey road, between Elm and Garfield avenues, $1500. Mr. Probst will immediately improve. Mrs. E. D. Mills to Pasadena buyers, 50x165 feet on Ramona avenue, between Rollins and Oak street, with a six-room bungalow, $5000.

Mrs. L. Drammon, to out-of-town buyers, 50x165 feet on Ramona avenue, between Rollins and Oak street, with a six-room bungalow, $5500. D. F. Howry to unknown buyer 50x155 feet on Fletcher avenue, between Oak street and Huntington drive, with a seven-room bungalow, $5800. These same purchasers also bought the lot adjoining for $1800.

Marietta Coleman to Andrew F. West, 50x165 feet, Bushnell avenue, near Huntington drive, with a modern home, $6000. A. Mohr to Mrs. Jessie Bryan, 100x150 feet, Laurel street, between Fair Oaks and Fremont avenues, with a twelve-room residence, consideration $10,500. Mr. Mohr at the same time purchased Mrs. Bryan's [illegible] which could be brought into Tustin by people from the outside which should prove profitable undertakings to the newcomers. A commercial bank is needed and should pay well. Many local people could be interested, and one gentleman in the town has offered to construct a bank building if an outside capitalist will organize a banking company.

The town lacks a garage, and being one of the State and county high roads between Los Angeles, Santa Ana and San Diego, it should be a good site for such an enterprise. There are thousands of autoists passing annually through the town, but Santa Ana is the nearest place for repairs. Many of the local ranchers who have machines would be glad of the convenience of a garage.

For many years past the Tustin people have tried and tried in vain to get the Pacific Electric Railroad to extend its road from Santa Ana the two short miles to Tustin and accommodate about 1200 people in the district with direct and rapid communication to Santa Ana and Los Angeles.

Owing to the fact that the Southern Pacific company had a branch line running a little south of Tustin, the Pacific Electric Company did not appreciate the idea of extending their line to Tustin. Such conditions, however, were ended when the Pacific Electric Company was taken over by the Southern Pacific late last year. The Southern Pacific intends to further continue the Pacific Electric lines and the extension of the Santa Ana division will soon occupy their attention.

At the present time there are many miles of new construction being completed by the new Pacific Electric management and a number of outlying towns are taken into the extensions. Just how soon attention will be given to a line between Santa Ana and Tustin is not definitely known, but before a great while it will undoubtedly be taken up.

PROSPEROUS RANCHERS.

Failure is an unknown word to the Tustin farmer. His success and progress can be attributed as much to himself as the climate and the soil of his beautiful country. Most of the Tustin ranchers are energetic, thrifty and enterprising men and they are anxious to meet and correspond with men of their own stamp who are looking for a select rural home community in which to dwell.

The following persons have small or large holdings in the district and all are interested in its conservative growth and development of their country. They will be glad to give any further information on the district that a stranger may desire:

Educating the Liberians.

The Episcopal bishop of Liberia, Dr. S. D. Ferguson, in a recent letter from Monrovia, praised the shrewd wit of the west coast natives.

"I addressed a school of native boys the other day," he wrote, "and, taking them on arithmetic, I tried to show them the impossibility of adding 'like' to 'unlike' and getting a total of 'like.'

" 'Now,' I said, 'let us take an example. Suppose we added four sheep to eight cows. Would that make twelve cows?'

"A lad as black and shining as a patent leather boot grinned and answered:

" 'No, no. You cannot make cows out of sheep, bishopy. Four calves would be the best for that.' "—[Washington Star.

A Small Boy's Experience.

To have a small safety pin become unclasped in his nose was the experience of a 2-year-old boy of Cottage Grove, Or., who was brought to Eugene by Dr. Kime of that city, says the Eugene Register. The child was playing with the pin and shoved it up his nose and past the clasp. It became unclasped and it was impossible to pull it out the way it was put in. A Eugene surgeon pushed the pin up the nose until it could be reached with a hook through the throat, and it

VICIOUS LABORITE BILLS.

[Editorial.]

THE unionites of California, particularly in San Francisco and vicinity, have prepared vicious bills which they hope to have passed by the State Legislature. Among the most menacing of these measures is a bill legalizing the boycott and the atrocious system of picketing which received a crushing blow by city ordinance in Los Angeles. Another bill prepared by the unionists would restrict the Governor's power over the State militia, prohibiting him from calling upon that body in the event of serious industrial disturbances. Both of these measures are receiving the unanimous support of the laborites, and every effort will be made by them to have these bills enacted by the present session of the State Legislature. Many central labor councils throughout the State, also the California State Federation of Labor, have appointed legislative agents who have established headquarters in Sacramento and have been furnished with unlimited funds which they have been instructed to use in efforts to have these bills enacted. While there is small chance of the majority of the legislators being prevailed upon to view these dangerous measures with favor, it is well known that many of the Senators and Assemblymen from San Francisco and the counties bordering upon the bay are pledged to support any measures that may be introduced by the laborites, and it behooves every legislator who has the interest of California at heart, and who would protect and foster our manufacturing industries, to fight these bills and not be caught napping. It would also be well for every citizen who is in favor of industrial freedom and who desires continued peace and prosperity in the commercial life of the State, and is anxious for the progress of the manufactures of California, to get in touch with the Senators and Assemblymen from their district and urge them to vote against these measures.

Merchants and manufacturers in other parts of the country who have been approached on the subject of investing capital in manufacturing industries in San Francisco have in the past refused to consider the proposition, on the ground that conditions imposed upon the employers of labor by the unionites of the North were such as to prohibit them from doing business at a reasonable profit. It is a fact that many large manufacturers could have been induced to locate in San Francisco, to the great advantage of this State, were it not for the tyrannical power of the labor unions up there. Now if the unionists should succeed in having these vicious measures enacted by the State Legislature, free Southern California will receive a blow from which it will take many years to recover; and it is to be hoped that every legislator and every citizen of this commonwealth who has the best interests of California at heart will see to it that the mischief-brewing laborites are foiled.

bids were recently asked for the construction of two revenue cutters, it was provided that they should be built with eight-hour labor, and each of the ships was to cost $250,000. One is needed on the Florida coast and the other on the Pacific. Because of this restriction as regards the length of the day's labor, every shipyard in the country has refused to bid on the new vessels. Under other circumstances one of the vessels might have been built on the Pacific Coast, where it will be used, and thus have given employment to the iron workers and machinists of this coast. In this instance the eight-hour day demand has proved an injury to Pacific Coast laborers, as well as to the communities in which the shipyards are located.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins From All Parts of the World.

In the year just closed the American factory turned out a total product worth at least sixteen, if not seventeen billions of dollars. This is a safe estimate, because at the special census of manufacturers in 1905, the year's product was ascertained to be worth nearly fifteen billion dollars ($14,802,142,087), exclusive of neighborhood and hand-trades and some minor industries. It is also safe to estimate that one-fourth, if not one-third, and some authorities even say 40 per cent. of the factory sale price, is represented by wages paid out. Such being the case the workers in American factories were paid at least $4,000,000,000 and perhaps even $5,000,000,000 or more as wages in 1910. Not only that, but the wages were based upon American high rates instead of upon European low rates, or Oriental much lower rates still. How foolish then for American wage-workers to allow themselves to be persuaded to prematurely endanger, and certainly to impair, if only for a time, this vast volume of wage-earning power, by strikes.

It must be borne in mind that strikes in one trade always affects the allied trades, sometimes many in number. A strike by 100 men, for instance, in one trade may arbitrarily deprive a thousand or more men in allied trades of part of their earnings, even though, as is almost always the case, the workers in the allied trades have nothing whatever to do with the matter in dispute.

The writer personally remembers, as an active, unwilling participant, the great strike (lock-out they called it) in the building trades in London some years ago. It was brought about by a row in a little carpenter shop, and reduced several hundred thousand people to starvation for about four months. Strikes have never "paid" and never will "pay," even though, as is very seldom the case, the strikers gain their point. Wages unearned by strike idleness are wages irrevocably lost, because time once gone is gone forever. Workers should seriously heed this inflexible fact. When will American labor let itself alone?

Then as directly bearing on this wage question, note what Fibre and Fabric says: "Do we in big, free America, with forty to fifty million working people, (of all classes, laboring, professional and otherwise), want to repeat the business depression of the low-tariff period, (1893 to 1896), just to enrich the importers and foreign competition? It was then, as stated by Samuel Gompers, that 3 million men were out of work, out of wages their families starving, in American wage-earning cities.

A recent visit by the writer (May, 1910), to Schenectady, N. Y., revealed busy and prosperous conditions in that city whose population is almost entirely made up of workers in the great shops of the General Electric Company and the American Locomotive Company, and their families. Fully twenty-thousand workers in the two establishments, and all earning wages of the American high rate class. The evening whistles blew and as in a flash the streets were black with the throng of men on their way home, to meet their families, and spend their evening as best suited themselves. One striking thing was noted by the writer, who purposely stood at a point surrounded by saloons, and that was, that a very trifling percentage of the men went into the saloons. How different that from what the writer has also personally seen in English factory towns, where, it is said and not contradicted, that, on the average, one-third of the wages paid to British in the effort to satisfy a craving for excitement, engendered by the low scale of wages and low scale of living which is almost universal there. The American wage-earner may not fully realize it, may not even know it, but, compared with England and almost every other country, his "lines are fallen in pleasant places." For the workman, the United States is "heaven" in comparison. Again we say "when will American labor let itself alone?"

Members of the machinists' union, Baltimore and Ohio Railway, have been on strike since May, 1909—over a year and a half. What have they gained by it? How will they ever make up to themselves and their families, the more than eighteen months wages lost, though the Baltimore and Ohio Railway has gone on all the time?

Fifty-five thousand longshoremen in and around New York and also their families and dependents, will be seriously affected at the worst (for the East) season of the year, if the strike proposed for this week begins.

If, as is hinted, a general strike in prosperous Los Angeles occurs on February 1, which will suffer most—capital or labor? Los Angeles, minus general labor troubles, is a success for all of us, including labor. Los Angeles, plus persistant general labor troubles, would be a financial graveyard, as we are largely all borrowers of money for development, and interest goes on night and day, work or no work.

What good did it do the strikers in Winnipeg on the day before Christmas to stone and smash thirty street cars and burn one of them?

A few days ago sixteen labor-union men (coal miners on strike) were sent to the Denver County Jail for one year for violating an injunction of the court. What good will that do them and their families? When will American labor let itself alone?

According to labor leaders Lynn, Mass., is close to one of the greatest strikes in New England since the Fall River mills were closed several years ago. Some of the shoe factories may permanently withdraw from that city.

The cotton mills of Fall River, Mass., may have to go on short time because the price of cotton goods is low and the cost of the raw material.

The British Board of Trade reports the operative existence of 1600 "collective agreements between employers and work people in the United Kingdom," affecting 2,400,000 workers. Of these agreements thirty are sliding scales, 563 are piece price lists and 1103 are working agreements. Their distribution is:

Industry—	Agreements.	Workers.
Mining and quarrying	56	900,000
Transport	92	500,000
Textile	112	460,000
Metal engineering and shipbuilding	163	230,000
Building	803	200,000
Clothing	303	50,000
Printing	79	40,000
Other trades	87	20,000
Totals	1,696	2,400,000

In many cases the agreements are connected with permanent conciliation boards and joint committees in the various trades, of which there are at present 262, also fourteen district boards. As stated in a British government report, the real value of these conciliation boards is in preventing stoppages of work and wages, rather than in settling strikes of lockouts already in force. Of the 7508 cases settled by these boards in the ten years, 1900 to 1909, inclusive, only 104, or about 1 per cent., were preceded by a stoppage of work. Some of the agreements contain many details and provisions not only as to rates and hours of labor, but also as to the number to be employed in specific tasks, distribution of work in slack times, enticing away workmen, conditions under which youthful labor shall be employed, conciliation and arbitration. While these collective agreements are undoubtedly beneficial to work people, by aiding stability in wages and hours, they are also of equal benefit to employers in fixing equality in cost of production.

If labor troubles had been serious or general in Los Angeles, would 5161 houses have been built (as they were) in the city last year? When labor lets itself alone, labor finds work, plenty of work, and at good wages.

Though The Times quoted it last Sunday (from the Fortnightly Review of London), it is worth repeating: "Between 1880 and 1905 the number of wage-earners in the United States doubled, and their wages trebled, so that the wages per worker increased by 50 per cent."—in the twenty-five years. And again: "Between 1850 and 1905, the value of the yearly product of the United States manufacturing industries increased more than fourteenfold, the workers almost sixfold and their wages more than elevenfold." And again: "American wages, as a rule, are from two to three times as high as corresponding wages in Great Britain. The cost of living shows a slighter variation, leaving the American better

WATCH OUT FOR SKULKING FOE.

Imported Union Hirelings Under Suspicion.

Foundrymen Illumine Area About Plants.

No Labor Troubles in Other Near-by Towns.

Police detectives are keeping close watch on a gang of San Francisco laborites just brought here for some dastardly purpose, as yet not revealed. There are about fifteen in the party. Nearly all have been identified as dangerous agitators of the anarchistic type. They will be shadowed as long as they remain in Los Angeles.

Secret meetings are held each night at the laborite headquarters on Maple avenue. The bosses are trying to devise new means for subjecting the business men of the city to the union yoke. Heretofore every attack has failed. The officers of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association and Chamber of Commerce declare they are prepared to meet any vicious outburst of the desperate laborites.

With the complete failure of the so-called strikes maintained here for the past eight months, the walking delegates are apparently convinced that lawless attacks and cowardly dynamitings will shake the courage of the manufacturers. That this expectation is far from the truth is shown by the vigilance displayed by the shop owners in the industrial district.

Arc lights have been installed to illumine the dark corners and alleyways contiguous to the foundries, and guards have been reinforced at points most liable to attack. Capt. Lehnhausen, formerly in the United States army, at his own request, has been given charge of the East Side section, which embraces practically all the iron foundry district.

The special grand jury which was impaneled to inquire to the cause of The Times disaster and to indict such of the murderers as could be connected with the infamous plot, is still in session. In its partial report, made in the Superior Court Thursday last, twenty-three indictments were found. It is believed that several of the "higher-ups" are thus placed under the ban of the law. But the District Attorney and the court announce the policy of holding the warrants in abeyance until a smashing blow can be delivered at the real criminals, their inciters and co-conspirators.

Nearly 100 picketing cases have been set for trial in the Police Court. Several convictions have been obtained. Indicative of the result of the wholesome administration of law, it is stated by the police that the wholesale arrests put a quietus upon picketing. True, rabid unionites still gather about the largest iron plants at the noon hour, trying to fraternize with the loyal workmen. But the lawless interference with business houses so obnoxious several months ago has practically ceased.

Outside of Los Angeles there is little, if any, labor trouble. The strike at the Craig shipbuilding plant, Long Beach, did not affect work to any extent and new men were quickly secured. One or two attempts to maltreat the non-union laborers were punished and all rioting or picketing prevented by the attitude of the city officials.

Expensive.

LARGE LOSSES FOR UNIONITES.

ABOUT FOUR MILLION DOLLARS IN BRITISH STRIKE.

Slight Reasons for Calling Strikes Illustrated by the Labor Disturbances in the Shoe Factories of Lynn, Mass., Which Are the Result of Quarrels Among Union Men.

The expensiveness of strikes and the slight reasons for their inauguartion is illustrated by the ending of the Boiler-makers' strike i nthe shipyards of England, and the strikes recently started in some of the shoe shops of Lynn, Mass. The English labor trouble began with a strike of riveters employed at the Walked Shipyard at Newcastle-on-Tyne. The Shipbuilding Employers' Federation asserted that the strike was a violation of the agreement made between the Federation and nineteen workmen societies last spring for the prevention of strikes and lockouts, and declared a lockout to remain in force until the Boilermakers Society was prepared to guarantee the fulfillment of the agreement. For fourteen weeks this strike-lockout continued, and was finally ended by a vote of the members of the Boilermakers' Society which stood 13,715 for the ending of the strike, and 1290 for its continuation.

During the period of the strike the strain on the funds of the Boiler-makers' Society was extremely heavy. The 15,000 men affected each received 10s per week as lockout pay. One-half of this was paid by the society, the other half by the General Federation of Trade Unions. The outlay therefore was—15,000 men at 10s per week, £7500. Fifteen weeks' pay at this rate meant £112,500 ($562,500.) At a very moderate estimate the loss in wages has been enormous. Fifteen thousand boiler-makers at 30s ($7.50) per week is an estimate well within the mark. The amount of money withdrawn from circulation has been about £22,500 per week. In addition there have been at least 15,000 other workmen thrown out of employment as well as about 8000 laborers, and it is calculated that the following sums have been lost: 15,000 boiler-makers at 30s per man for fifteen weeks, £337,500; 15,000 other artisans at the same rate, £337,500; and 8000 laborers at £1 per man for fifteen weeks, £120,000—a total of £795,000 ($3,975,000.)

During the past year there were, according to the annual report of the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, 827 strikes called, nearly a third of which were still pending at the end of the year. A little thought, based on the ordinary experience and observation of any individual, says the Battle Creek Enquirer, will show that there can possibly be no credit balance to the record of 827 strikes, when every working man has so much capital in working days given him, none of which he may waste with the hope of getting it back. This is the count of the loss to employing capital and to the public—all of which loss is distributed through every interest and to every individual.

Time and working energy are the same as money. When money is destroyed on a large scale, everybody feels the effect. The San Francisco fire, which wiped out hundreds of millions, made times hard around the world. The San Francisco fire loss was no such loss in actual dollars as the loss in labor-energy and earning-capacity dollars, in stagnated business and destruction of property, through these 827 strikes. And this money is gone where it cannot be gotten back, and the whole industrial world is the poorer.

At Lynn, Mass., about a week ago 2000 shoe shop workers became voluntarily idle because of the employment of a couple of non-union men. One of these non-union men was employed by his son, a union employee in the "niggerhead" department, but the union officials declared it a breach of contract, and went out on strike. In none of the factories affected was there any question of wages or better hours, but the strikes were simply unionite quarrels, one union man trying to get ahead of another one. The sensitiveness of the members of the unions has been the cause of a large proportion of the labor disturbances that have become the rule since unionism became a feature of the industrial life of the country. Separate unions are formed for so many minor branches of industry that the work frequently required of the members on large contracts overlaps onto the work claimed to belong to another union. Quarrels and strikes result and the owners of the building and the contractors who are in no wise to blame in the matters are serious sufferers. Many other workmen are thrown out of employment, and are the victims of personal loses that are entirely uncalled for. Unionism has thus been a serious injury to many an industry, and many a locality, as well as to the laboring people themselves. Could the unionites themselves be induced to strike a balance showing the difference in the matter of hours and wages, with the losses that have resulted from assessments and enforced idleness, it would show very little if any gain had been secured to the day laborer. Gompers and other union officials who have held on to the offices have enjoyed fat salaries and have have been accomplished "boosters" for unionism. The millions of dollars that have been paid for strike benefits have all been previously taken from the monthly pay envelopes of the union workmen, and have only come back as a moiety when wage losses were being suffered.

TAXATION OF LABOR.

San Francisco Unions Are Tired of Paying Money on the Demand of Labor Trust Chiefs.

[San Francisco News Letter:] Those unfortunate in labor's ranks who belong to the unions are gradually revolting against the blind taxation which is constantly being applied. The demon of unrest is in the union ranks, and unless the leaders are wise men and desist in their ways of extortion, there is sure to be a big labor revolution against labor.

In speaking of a local row in the union ranks over this very fact, the Bakersfield Californian says:

"It is the heaviness of these monthly charges to which both the plumbers and the painters objected. The reason for the dues being large is that the money is needed for what is called 'the Los Angeles situation.'"

The Californian makes mention of the fact that certain trade unionist members have had to hold cards in both the State and the National labor federation, besides being subject to the exactions of the local union. Every one of the organizations has a high-salaried corps of officers, who take advantage of any and all things to create strife, and such a thing as "the Los Angeles situation" is haying time for them.

Recently the unions of Sacramento revolted and demanded information about the details of disbursement of funds by the San Francisco labor junta in Los Angeles, and furthermore refused to pay a nickel in aid to the alleged Los Angeles sufferers until they knew just how and why every cent was expended. To date, no answer of a detailed nature has been given the labor unions of Sacramento.

Twenty-one unions in San Francisco are threatened with discipline if they do not put up the blind tax demanded by the chiefs of the local labor trust. So far, the twenty-one stand firm and do not support the Los Angeles graft scheme. There is no strike in Los Angeles. The places of the strikers have all been filled. Whenever it is possible, the vagrants who are doing the bidding of the San Francisco agitators in the free city of the South, and who interfere with free labor, are arrested and fined. One got several years in San Quentin for battery, and another, last week, got two years for a similar infraction.

Rulings Wanted.

ARE ANXIOUS OVER BOYCOTTS.

JUDGMENTS OF THE COURTS ARE AWAITED.

Anti-Boycott Association in the Danbury Case Has Sued Banks for Attached Funds of Hatters' Union Against Which Damages Were Given—The Gompers Suits.

Decisions of the courts on boycott cases now pending are being awaited both by employers and labor unions with more or less anxiety, says the New York Journal of Commerce. The Supreme Court of the United States has on its docket its hearing as to the contempt of court sentence passed on Samuel Gompers, president; John Mitchell, second vice-president, and Frank Morrison, secretary, of the American Federation of Labor, which involves a review of the Danbury Hatters' case and the Buck's Stove and Range case. In the local courts similar suits of great importance to employers are expected shortly to be advanced a stage by decisions of circuit judges. Appeals, in any case, will probably be taken to the Federal Supreme Court, though much depends on the ruling established in the leading cases if the judgment given at Washington should be final on the boycott question.

In this city the case of Lowe vs. Lawlor, ordinarily known as the Danbury Hatters' case, in which judgment was obtained by the plaintiffs against some two hundred members of the Hatters' Union for over $232,000, is to be heard before the Circuit Court of Appeals sometime in the latter part of next month on appeal by the defendants. The American Federation of Labor at its convention held at St. Louis in November reported that a special assessment that was levied to meet expenses of this suit had raised about $28,000.

The plaintiffs have now brought suits agains the various banks which hold the attached bank accounts of the defendants because the banks refused to pay the money over on execution. The plaintiffs, it is contended, wehe entitled to execution, in spite of the appeal that had been made and is pending, because of the failure of the defendants to file a bond which would act as a stay in the proceedings. The record in the appeal includes over 2700 printed pages. The attorneys for the defendants, the representatives of the labor unions, are John K. Beach of New Haven, and Frank L. Mulholland. The attorneys of the plaintiffs are Daniel Davenport of Bridgeport, and Walter Gordon Merritt of New York, who together made the pleadings in the case.

In addition to the Hatters case, the Buck's Stove and Range case is expected to come up early next year in the Supreme Court of the United States in the hearing on the contempt sentences passed on the labor union leaders, Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison. The questions of injunctions and the injury done to manufacturers and their clients all over the country by a boycott alleged to be in restraint of trade are involved, and are held by the Anti-Boycott Association to be of vital importance to its members.

On the death of Mr. Van Cleave, the president of the Buck's Stove and Range Company, his successor, Mr Gardiner, is stated to have entered into some kind of settlement with the labor leaders; but this settlement, it will be argued, cannot affect the criminal prosecution for contempt.

The American Anti-Boycott Association is also conducting two important local cases against the Carpenters' Union. One of these is the Irving and Casson case, in which an injunction was obtained in the Federal Court against the strikers in the carpenters' work at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the grievance being, as is alleged, that the carpenters of the union bound themselves, under the penalty of a fine, to prevent the use of non-union trim.

The other case is the Albro J. Newton Company case, started in the State Court in Brooklyn. A preliminary injunction was granted in that case, which is still standing. Both sides are now awaiting the decision of Justice Blackmar on the question whether the injunction shall be continued.

In both of these carpenters' cases the defendants have alleged as a defense that the plaintiff has entered into an improper arrangement with the Anti-Boycott Association concerning the prosecution of the case.

In the Irving and Casson case Judge Ward, in the United States Circuit Court, recently ordered that the allegations concerning the Anti-Boycott Association should be stricken from the answer as irrelevant.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

The industrial conditions of the country show up well from about every direction they are viewed. The productions of one section closely balance those of other divisions of the country, and altogether they emphasize the prosperity of the country, and therefore of the people who are the real producers. Statistics of the cotton crop for a decade, an industry almost exclusively confined to the South show that it has exceeded the entire world's gold and silver production for the same period. Thus for the ten years from 1899 to 1909 the cotton crop amounted to $6,387,000,000, while the world's gold and silver production for the same period amounted to only $4,625,282,200. During these same years the raw cotton exports of the United States brought back in gold or credits more than $3,650,000,000, while the world's gold production amounted to only $3,581,205,200. This one product thus brings back to the United States the value of the world's entire gold production.

The beet sugar industry is a comparatively recent one, and yet in the single State of Colorado the annual value of the beet sugar manufactured amounts to about $8,000,000, of which more than one-half goes to the farmers themselves. Merchants, manufacturers and farmers are all made more prosperous by the development of such an industry. The several beet sugar factories now in existence and being built in Southern California will have an important influence upon the prosperity of the several communities in which they are located.

The Texas growers of fruit and truck received $5,693,500 for their crop in 1910, according to an estimate of the Houston Post, based upon returns from eleven railroad systems which moved the same.

The output of wines in California during 1910 amounted to about 45,000,000 gallons, of which almost 18,000,000 gallons were sweet wine, while the output of dry wine amounted to 27,000,000 gallons.

A new industry is reported from Fresno county, the manufacture of raisin syrup. This is a new thing, and its promoters claim that it will prove a success. Already a company has been incorporated in Oakland for its manufacture, with a capital of $250,000.

At Spokane a company is erecting a chemical plant that will be the first of its kind in the country. The function of the factory will be to manufacture chemicals, taking lead or galena or and zinc ore, and by treating them with chemicals to convert the lead into white lead and chrome lead, and the zinc into zinc white, the iron into umbers and Persian blue, all bases for the paint-manufacturing industry. The sulphur is converted into sulphuric acid and the silver into metallic silver. The salacious or rock matter is turned into mosiac. Other properties from the concentration process are salsoda and lead arsenate, the latter one of the most important products to the fruit-growing industry in the Northwest.

One of the largest buildings in the world is to be erected at Haverhill, Mass., to be devoted to shoe manufacturing. Eight shoe manufacturing companies will be accommodated, giving employment to about 3000 operatives. Already six of the factory "sites" in the building have been engaged, and this before the erection of the building has been begun. It is intended to have the building ready for occupancy by July 1 next.

Another million dollar cotton mill is projected at Greenville, S. C., being the second one announced within a few weeks from the same neighborhood. One of these plants will manufacture India lawns and linens, and the other will produce a variety of fine goods.

The manufacture of American lace is to be increased the coming year by the transformation of the large Groveville (N. Y.) carpet mills into lace and embroidery plants. They have been purchased by New York manufacturers of lace and embroidery, and the required machinery will be soon installed.

And again: "The British workingman is ill-employed, ill-paid and poor if compared with his exceedingly prosperous American colleague."

Again we ask, "When will American labor let itself alone?"

ANGELENO BUYS GROVE.

BIG PRICE FOR DUARTE ACRES.

MONROVIA, Dec. 31.—Though there are many inquiries for all classes of property by winter guests arriving from the North and East, realty dealers do not expect to make many sales until the close of the holiday season. The only important sale reported during the week is that of A. H. Johnson to A. C. Rutledge, of Los Angeles, of a twenty-two-acre, full-bearing citrus orchard, the consideration stated being $36,000.

The property is in the Duarte foothill district and is in navels, Valencias and lemons, and carries proportionate stock in the Duarte-mutual Irrigation Company. Building improvements consist of a cottage, ranch barns and storehouse. The purchaser takes the crop on the trees, which is valued at $9000.

BUYS ALFALFA RANCH.

IMPROVED TRACT IS SOLD.

PERRIS, Dec. 31.—Clarence Howard has sold through the Harford & Jordan agency his sixty-acre alfalfa ranch north of town on the boulevard, the buyer being Henry Karstens of Riverside. The consideration was $18,000.

The property is improved with a five-room bungalow, a large stock and hay barn, two wells and a forty-horse power gasoline engine.

BUYS FOR INVESTMENT.

"American" Apartments at First and Bunker Hill Transferred for Consideration of Forty-six Thousand.

U. W. Murphy has sold through R. A. Rowan and Company, the southwest corner of First street and Bunkerhill avenue. The property has a frontage of 60 feet by 102 feet and is improved with a three-story frame building, known as the "American" apartment hotel. The building has fifty-eight rooms and is under lease for a period of five years.

The purchaser was John P. McKay. The price paid is reported at $46,000. Mr. McKay will hold the property for a permanent investment.

TRUNK HOUSE TO MOVE.

A lease covering a period of ten years has been closed by Tom Griffin on one of the store rooms of the new Orpheum Theater building on the east side of South Broadway, between Sixth and Seventh streets. R. W. Fongway was agent in the deal. Mr. Griffin is now situated at No. 305 South Spring street, where he handles trunks and leather goods, and it is probable that the present store will be retained as a branch of the Broadway business.

BUYS WILMINGTON SITE.

THEATER IS STARTED.

Construction has been begun upon a brick store and theater building which is to be erected by Mrs. Jeanette G. Donovan at No. 533 South Main street. The plans were drawn by Parker, O. Wright, Jr., and R. W. Woodley is the lessee. The place will be 50x160 feet in size and will seat about 800 people. Its cost will be close to $30,000.

CORNER TO BE IMPROVED.

The southwest corner of Fifty-second place and Moneta avenue, 56x140 feet in size, has been sold by John Wollenschlager to Marc Meiller for a consideration reported by the agent, B. W. Barker, at $5500. The new owner contemplates the early improvement of the site.

Marriage and Liberty.

Liberty comes in such different ways! For women it comes most often through marriage, says the London Spectator.

Nine out of ten women have more space after they are married for the exercise of their wills than they had before; therefore we can all see more clearly what they really are. The most tyrannical husband cannot rob a woman of her authority over her children and her household. The good woman is better, the hard woman is harder, the mean woman is meaner than ever she was.

Usually a married woman has a more strongly marked character than her unmarried sister. Her friends find it more easy to call up her mental face; they are more sure how she will act in given circumstances. Marriage is almost always fraught with some surprises to the student of character. These surprises are loosely described as changes; but change in character is so rare an occurrence, more especially in women, that it should never be regarded as an explanation unless all others fail.

A Lively March.

Princess de Montglyon of Paris, who came to America to exhibit her beautifull and famous collies at several kennel shows, said at a dinner in New York apropos of an embarrassment:

"That reminds me of a story told about Queen Alexandra of England.

"The Guards's band was playing on the terrace at Windsor castle during luncheon, and the Queen was so pleased with a lively march that she sent a maid of honor to inquire what it was.

"The maid of honor blushed deeply as she answered, on her return:

"'"Come Where the Booze Is Cheaper," your majesty.'"—[New

LURTON'S DAY AS TROOPER.

Rise of Confederate Raider to Supreme Bench.

First Case as Lawyer Was Over a Stolen Pig.

Studied Medicine But Failed to Make a Hit.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—A cannon was on the bluff, half a mile away from the banks of the Cumberland. It was trained upon a wagon in the middle of the river.

John Marshall Harlan, now Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, then colonel of the Tenth Kentucky Infantry, was in command of the gun. He was a long-legged, blue-eyed, big-nosed, and distinguished looking man even then.

In the water, on horseback, just behind the wagon, rode Horace Harmon Lurton, private in the Third Kentucky Cavalry, now also an Associate Justice in the United States Supreme Court. His eyes were gray and his chin was almost as wide as his head.

The Tenth Infantry was Federal. The Third Cavalry was Confederate. Col. Harlan was trying hard to hit Trooper Lurton with a cannon ball. The shells splashed so near that the drivers cut the tugs and fled with their mules, leaving the wagon in the water. Private Lurton, rear guardsman, followed as quickly as he could.

So began, at long range, the peculiar acquaintance of two great Kentuckians. Forty-seven years after Harlan attempted to kill Lurton with a cannon ball, they sat in black robes, also in friendship and forgetfulness, on the bench of the nation's highest court.

In Frankfort, one Sunday morning, James Harlan and his son, John Marshall Harlan, were on their way to church. Fifty negro men and boys, chained in pairs at the wrists, came shuffling down the street. Sold away from their wives and mothers, they were bound for the river, where they were to be shipped to the cotton fields of the South. An armed slave driver marched in front. James Harlan halted. When the slave driver came abreast, James Harlan walked into the street. He was a tall man like his son, and could look very fierce. Sticking his index finger almost into the face of the slave driver, he roared: "You are a damned scoundrel! Good morning, sir."

Whereupon the Harlans went to church. Judge Harlan is a Presbyterian elder. "That was the only time," he said, when telling me of the incident, "I ever heard my father swear." The emphasis he gave to his father's remarks seemed to indicate that profanity, in his opinion, was excusable and even theological, under the circumstances.

HARLAN WAS A UNION MAN.

Generically, therefore, John Marshall Harlan was a Union man. He raised the Tenth Kentucky Infantry and became Colonel of the regiment, although he was a clever lawyer and not a soldier by profession. Shooting at Lurton, therefore, was a praiseworthy performance.

The elder Lurton was Lycurgus L., a physician. When the war broke out he put his family into a carriage and started South. He had lived at Newport, in Kentucky, on the Ohio River, not far from Cincinnati. There Horace Harmon, his son, was born. From Newport, the Lurtons moved to Louisville and thence to Clarksville, in northern Tennessee.

"I wanted to enter the army, the Confederate army," Mr. Justice Lurton said to me, putting considerable stress on the word Confederate; "but my father stopped me temporarily by his vigorous opposition. He thought I was only a small boy, but I was 17 years old and had begun going with the girls. When I received a hoop-skirt or two, gentle hints from somebody that my duty was at the front, I felt that I should be disgraced forever if I didn't fight. While we were in a carriage on our way toward the Confederate lines, during the fall of 1861, we came upon a body of soldiers, and so I jumped out. Efforts were made to get me back, but I remained where I was and joined the Fifth Tennessee Infantry as a private.

"Late in January, 1862, I was sent home sick. Gen. Grant started to invest Fort Donelson on February 12. Fort Donelson was in the county west of Clarksville, where my parents lived. I thought that Gens. Floyd, Pillow and Buckner, who were in command of the Confederate forces, would whip Grant, and end the war on the spot. There was to be a big battle, I felt sure, and my place was in the ranks with a musket. I was not entirely well, but I departed for Fort Donelson without saying much about it to my parents. Well, I fought in the snow and rain as a volunteer, unattached. Fort Donelson was surrendered on the 16th, and I was taken prisoner. We lost 2000 men in battle and about 14,000 of us were captured.

"With the rest, I was sent to Camp Chase, near Columbus, O. A number of negro servants were permitted to accompany us. I exchanged clothing with one of them, giving him my gray uniform for a suit of dark cloth, and, pretending to be an outside workman, helped around the barracks which were being built on the grounds. At the first opportunity I walked out of the gate, and then to Columbus, where I boarded a train for Louisville. I found friends in Louisville, and was soon back in Clarksville again. In a short time I joined the Third Kentucky Cavalry."

MR. LURTON IGNORED THE QUE

"And became one of John Morgan's raiders-" I said.

"I served with the Third Cavalry," Judge Lurton replied, ignoring my question, "until again captured, which occurred at the battle of Buffington Island, after Gen. Morgan had completed his demonstrations in Indiana and Ohio and was returning to his own country by marching day and night and changing horses at nearly every farm."

The atmosphere of the old South was fanciful and tournamental. Men rode to foxes and with mock lances, armored in love, on occasions that were sentimental. Wood fires burned on flaming hearths and yellow eggs and nutmegs were beaten into strong liquids for Christmas.

John Hunt Morgan, the cavalryman, omnipresent and nocturnal, hitting here and hitting there suddenly and secretly, sleeping in the woods when out of his saddle, so stirred the imagination of the South that every boy and most of the men wanted to fight and ride under his flying banner. Though but eighteen, young Lurton was a veteran of Fort Donelson and an escaped prisoner. Many of Morgan's raiders were college students and sons of lawyers, doctors, and planters. They bridges, tear up railway tracks, scout between lines, and surprise pickets.

At the outbreak of the war Morgan was thirty-five years old. Six feet in height and weighing 185 pounds, he looked pretty big on his black mare Bess. He had been a prosperous manufacturer of bagging at Lexington and captain of the rifles of that town. Leaving Lexington at night, he joined the Confederate army on Green River and began his service as a scout with twenty mounted men. In time he commanded a division. During twenty days in July, 1862, at the head of 900 troopers, he rode 1000 miles, captured seventeen towns in Kentucky, destroyed many million dollars' worth of government stores, put 1000 home guards to flight, and captured and paroled 1200 regular soldiers. Furthermore, he had picked up 300 recruits on the way.

In the December following, Mr. Justice Harlan attempted too shoot Mr. Justice Lurton with a cannon. Rosecrans, the Federal general, had strong garrisons at Gallatin, Castalian Springs, and Hartsville in Tennessee. Morgan, then a colonel, attacked the garrison at Hartsville on the 7th.

FORDING THE CUMBERLAND IN WINTER.

"We forded the Cumberland River very early in the morning," Judge Lurton said to me, "going down, one man at a time, over a narrow bridle path, and jumping our horses from the bank, four feet above the water. The weather was bitter cold, snow was on our bodies, aond our clothing froze on our bodies when we reached the other side. The Federals had about 2000 men, Ohio and Illinois infantry, Illinois and Kentucky cavalry, and a section of the Thirteenth Indiana Battery. We had 1200 cavalry, infantry and artillery. The Federals surrendered in a little more than an hour. We lost 125 men. The Federals lost 262 men, and 1834 of them were made prisoners.

"As soon as the battle was over we hastily recrossed the river, each cavalryman carrying an infantryman behind him. I was left with the rear guard to pick up Federal muskets and other portable property, all of which we loaded into wagons. Mr. Justice Harlan is an early riser. He was up that morning soon after daylight, at his camp, near Castalian Springs, six miles distant from Hartsville. He heard the artillery fire, and immediately started with his regiment to the relief of the garrison at Hartsville, reaching a bluff back of the river just as the last wagon was going over. I was with the wagon. Col. Harlan opened on us with a piece of artillery. The shells dropped so near to the wagon that the drivers, becoming frightened, cut the mules loose and got to shore as quickly as possible. I went with them, of course. And that was my introduction to Mr. Justice Harlan. Morgan was made a brigadier-general for the battle he won at Hartsville."

At Buffington Island, not far from Cincinnati, most of Morgan's men were captured by the Federals. Morgan was caught a few days later and locked up in the Ohio penitentiary. Trooper Lurton was sent to Johnson's Island, in Lake Erie, "the best prison," he said, "in the North. I was taken ill with pneumonia and was given up to die by the surgeons. My mother came from Tennessee, and I returned home with her. I didn't die, as you see, but quickly recovered, sleeping again in a bed, eating wholesome food and having the services of my father who was a physician."

WANTED TO BE A LAWYER.

"What influenced you to study law?" I asked.

"Oh, I thought I should like to be a lawyer. My father, however, wanted me to be a doctor. There was some discussion and I tried to read medicine. In a month or two my father said: 'You may stop. If you keep on you will be a disgrace to the medical profession. I desired you to be my successor, but I have changed my mind.' Consequently, I went to Cumberland University, at Lebanon, Tenn., and was graduated in law."

"You began practice at Clarksville, your home?"

"I hoped to settle in a large city, but I didn't have any money. So I remained at Clarksville, where my board wouldn't cost me anything. My first case concerned a stolen hog. Tennessee was then passing through the reconstruction period, and our magistrates, usually ignorant men, were appointed to office by the Governor. I was hired to prosecute a negro caught with another man's hog on his back. I had witnesses to identify the animal. The magistrate, looking mighty solemn, said: 'I fine the prisoner $2.50 and shall let him keep the hog; it's dead.'

"Did you find any embarrassment in earning a living?" I asked.

"Well, I boarded at home; otherwise I would have starved to death. Within a year and a half, however, I was doing very well. Unexpectedly to me, I was invited to a partnership with Col. James E. Bailey. He was the best all-round lawyer I have ever known, and had practiced at Clarksville for many years. In 1877, he succeeded Andrew Johnson in the United States Senate. I had great respect for him and knew, of course, that he had a very large business for Tennessee. 'I have had no partner so far because I didn't want to divide my fees,' he said to me. 'If you will come into my office I will give you one-third of all we make.'

"As I observed, I had great respect for Col. Bailey. I lost some of it, I am free to confess, when he made me the offer. At the end of the first year, after we had looked over the books, he surprised me by saying: 'I will give you half the fees hereafter, and the new arrangement shall be retroactive, that you may have half the fees from the day you became my partner.' In a word, Col. Bailey's change of terms, with respect to the first year of our association, added about $4500 to my income.

TELLS OF HIS CAREER.

"I practiced law steadily until 1874, when I was appointed chancellor of the Sixth district by Gov. James D. Porter. Col. Bailey advised me to accept the office, simply for the experience as an equity judge. I purposed to serve out the term and return to my business. However, when the time came, I decided to be a candidate for a full term. I thought I should be disgraced if I didn't run; people might say that I was afraid. I resigned, however, when Col. Bailey was elected to the United States Senate and resumed my practice. In 1886 I was elected judge of the Supreme Court of Tennessee, and Chief Justice seven years later. President Cleveland appointed me a United States circuit judge in 1893, and President Taft appointed me an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court on December 20, 1909."

"When did you become acquainted with Mr. Taft?"

"When I went on the circuit bench. We served together for seven years and became close frinds. I had no official information concerning my appointment to the Supreme Court, but somehow I felt that it would be made. While engaged in hearing a difficult case in Cincinnati, a reporter came in and whispered to the clerk. The clerk a moment later handed me a slip of paper on which he had written: 'Your nomination has just gone to the Senate.' I put the paper into my vest pocket, saying nothing at the time to my two colleagues sitting with me in the hearing of the case."

How to Aim a Shotgun.

Point your finger at an object quickly, without any effort to sight or closing an eye, and you will find that while it is directed precisely yet nevertheless you are glancing some distance above the finger. Now close one eye and you will note at once a tendency to drop the head and sight the finger. The same optical principle applies to pointing and sighting a gun; under the former system you naturally keep the barrels well down out of the line of vision, but at the same time direct them at the object with exactly the same precision as in the other way.

In gun-pointing the sight should never be seen, nor rib, nor barrel, neither should they be even thought of, for if the eye is permitted to interfere with the calculation of the brain two bosses of equal authority are installed with the obvious result that nothing will be accomplished. In this style of aiming the gun should be swung methodically, with mechanical uniformity of movement, and the trigger pressed the moment you feel that the aim is correct. No mystery need be made of this feeling of being right, for it is merely the signal of the brain to the nerves that the work has been well accomplished. The same feeling is in evidence when a baseball pitcher has released a ball which he knows will split the pan, or when the billiardist or golf player has made a true stroke.—[From an article in Outing.

The Time Between Drinks.

Gov. Martin F. Ansel of South Carolina and Gov. W. W. Kitchen of North Carolina met the other day at Louisville, Ky., and issued the following joint statement:

"It has been the legend that the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina, 'It is a long time between drinks.' No such statement was ever made. The facts as told by an eye witness of that famous meeting brands the whole story as a fabrication. This is what really happened:

"The governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina, 'Remember the fate of Montgomery?'

"'Well, who in the hell was Montgomery?' asked the governor of South Carolina.

"'He was the man who died between drinks,' replied the governor of North Carolina."

This official statement was posted on the bulletin board of the Seelbach

FAMOUS ROMAN PALACE DUPLICATED RIGHT HERE.

Opening to Society of Home of Judge and Madame Ross—Every Room Represents Some Especial Period or Country—Large and Brilliant Party at Afternoon Tea and Reception.

OPENING TO SOCIETY one of the most palatial and artistic homes ever built in the United States, the tea party and reception given by Mrs. Erskine Mayo Ross yesterday afternoon was the notable function of the New Year in Los Angeles. The guests numbered about 600 and they obtained a view of a mansion ranking with those of the Astors and the Vanderbilts.

The decorations were choice and not profuse as the home of Judge and Mme. Ross is one which needs no extra adornments. Ornate in its setting and unique in finish this tea became a tete-a-tete where scores of matrons and debutantes formed new acquaintances.

The Pompeiian hall was beautified with a single bouquet of American beauties which rested on a table in the center of the room, and the marble stairs were danked with palms. My Maryland rosebuds graced the music-room and the library was gay with red blossoms. In the English dining-room where refreshments were served Richmond roses and Jerusalem cherries were combined while red and yellow tulips enlivened the Dutch breakfast room, where punch was served by Miss Sinnot, Miss Mina Bernard, Miss Anna McDermott and Miss Ruth Kays. The guests were received in the French room, where ferns were the only decorations. Mme. Ross was attired in point de Venise lace with tunic of hand netted pearls. The train which fell over the tunic was of rose pink chiffon embroidered in crystal and pink roses, laid over delicate pink moire silk. The receiving line was composed of Mrs. Alfred Solano, Mrs. Cameron Erskine Thom, Miss Suzanne Lynch, Mrs. L. N. Brunswig, Mrs. Henry W. O'Melveny, Mrs. Walter Scott Newhall, Mrs. J. C. Mossin, Mrs. Walter Jarvis Barlow, Mrs. C. C. Desmond, Mrs. George H. Burton, Mrs. James C. Kays, Mrs. Dan Murphy, Mrs. A. C. Bradley, Mrs. Leila Burton Wells and Mrs. Dean Mason.

During the afternoon music was furnished by an orchestra and at twilight William Strobridge rendered selections on the pipe organ.

THE MANSION.

The home of Judge and Mrs. Ross at Wilshire boulevard and Vermont avenue is without doubt as fine as any to be found west of New York city.

From the terrace and parterre at the entrance, which is a reproduction of the Borghese Villa, throughout the superb mansion and even to the patio and Italian gardens, perfect taste and judgment are displayed.

The exterior of the house is a copy of the Medici Villa on the Pincian Hill in Rome, and each room and hall of this rare home represents some especial period or country, and is furnished with the trophies of travel and research.

The great entrance hall is furnished in Pompeian style, with massive pieces of handsome carving in tables, chairs and couches and a few French articles to add the lighter touch, such as found in the copy of the Madam Recamier lounge and in the huge Meisen vase, as well as the French lunettes, which are in preparation now in Paris.

At the rear of the entrance hall one obtains, through a doorway of exquisite open-work carving, a vista which includes the state dining-room and extends to the patio and the gardens beyond.

The superb stairway of white marble, leading from this hall, is a masterpiece in domestic architecture, illuminated, as it is, by a great stained glass window representing in the colors of the original, the Aurora of Guido Reni.

The state dining-room is pure Elizabethan, the table having carved at head and foot the coat of arms of Madam Ross's family in Hungary. The high wainscoating is in Elizabethan fashion, finished with a frieze in tooled leather, while the ceiling is a copy of the Lembach studio in Munich. The floor is carpeted with a rare rug bordered with texts from El Koran. Cabinets of rare Venetian glass, screens of old English carved and painted leather, and others of teakwood from India, ornament this great room, which gives onto the patio with its Italian columns and tinkling fountain. Consols and a high mantel in the oak carving of Flanders add still further to the stately effect of this handsome room.

The key-note to the library is found in the immense mantel which is a reproduction of one in Warwick castle, Eng., with the exception that the motto is that of Hungary and the Bear of California is substituted for the lion which flanks the hearth. English oak is used in this room in the high wainscotting of the country and rare Indian rugs and paintings supplement the air of culture which books lend by their presence.

The grand salon is probably the most unique as well as the most luxurious room in the house. It is reached by a descent of several steps and this entrance effect is complemented by a similar set of steps which lead to the platform upon which rests the magnificent pipe organ at the opposite end of the salle. Ivory and gold throughout, in every detail from the decorations of wall and ceiling, woodwork and furniture, to the great pipe organ itself, the ensemble is inexpressibly dainty and rich. The music gallery located above the fire-place, is a striking feature of the room, and the clear crystal chandeliers are such as are seldom seen in America, having been especially designed and made in Bohemia, for Madam Ross. Priceless rugs carpet the floors of this regal apartment, which adheres very closely to the style of Louis XIV.

One of the striking features of the Louis XVI reception room which is reached from the right of the entrance hall, is the set of Imperial furniture which was at one time in the possession of Maximillian. This beautiful room is finished in French blue and among its embellishments which are gathered from all parts of the world, is a rare piece of work signed by Hondeketer. It is in the shape of a charming little settee, the scene upon the back presenting a rural scene in the artist's best coloring. Inestimable treasures in Limoges, Sevres and carvings are assembled in this room, which opens into a conservatory fragrant with exotics and brilliant with bloom.

One of the most delightful rooms in the house is the Dutch breakfast room, which is furnished in genuine Marquetry and decorated throughout in Dutch effects. The blue of the walls and ceilings with friese of tulips in yellow and red, afford just the proper contrast to the tints of the inlaid wood of the furniture, while the tulip blooms again in the tapestry upholstery of the graceful chairs and the windmills of Holland are cleverly devised in the chandeliers and candelabra of mantel and cabinet.

The second floor is devoted to the family sitting rooms, furnished in antique mahogany and the luxurious leather upholstery of Birch of London, and to the family sleeping apartments and guest rooms.

No detail which makes for comfort, beauty or luxury has been omitted here. In some of the chambers the period plan has been carried out, while another idea, original with Madam Ross was that of furnishing one room for the young lady guest, another for the matron and others for the bachelor guests. One room is in gray and rose, the dainty coloring being carried even into the tiling of the baths and dressing rooms; another is the most dainty of blue, third in corn color. One stately boudoir is entirely Colonial in its furnishing, another is strictly French.

A private chapel is in Greek design, with white fluted columns and stained glass windows which were made in Munich.

There is a capacious billiard room and smoking den upon the third floor and a tower or "look-out" from which may be obtained a view of the mountains, the ocean and the entire surrounding country.

No modern convenience has been forgotten, from the electric lift automatically conveying passengers from the first to the third floors, to the well arranged and commodious servants' quarters which include dining-rooms, bath rooms and sitting rooms.

Every object of beauty which wealth and culture could command and which travel could seek out and bring together has found its place in this fine home.

Paintings, marbles by masters of art, bric-a-brac from far and wide—the poesy of oriental rug weaving and the fairy fabrics of finest lace makers—all have been brought together in an harmonious whole for this Los Angeles home, which is the fitting center for a coterie of cultured and intellectual persons.

Attorney Says Unpaid Bills Behind Settlement.

The banner of defiance which has metaphorically flapped in the breeze from the residence of Mrs. Howard W. Squires, seemingly a particular challenge to her mother, Mrs. Clara M. Gilmore, and her brothers, Edward and Charles, has been lowered and stored in the lumber room.

The action brought by Mrs. Squires to break the will of her father, the late Edward W. Gilmore, of the Fairchild-Gilmore-Wilton Company, which threatened to disrupt what was left of the amity between daughter, mother and brothers, has been withdrawn.

It is understood that the case will be adjusted out of court, but, for fear that the other side will think that it is weakening, neither side will confess that there is a plan on foot to reach a settlement of the $200,000 estate.

The difference in the Gilmore family seems to center around a sum of about $40,000 which Mr. Gilmore loaned Howard Squires, husband of his only daughter, and which was invested in the Sheepranch mine in the northern portion of California.

The investment was lost and, when the will of Mr. Gilmore was filed, it was found that he had probably figured this $40,000 as having already been bequeathed to his daughter and her husband, and cut her off without a cent, with the proviso, however, that she could have the splended family residence at No. 2007 Ocean View avenue, this city, on the death of her mother.

Immediately, Mrs. Squires, who is an energetic woman, started on the war path. She filed a petition, which was demurred to, and then an amended pe-

The $25,000 gift from Carnegie was of Liberal Arts has steadily in-sed from about seventy-five stu-

ts during the year 1900-01, to 521 year, while the present year will w a total of over 600. The profesal colleges are in excellent condi-
, the development of the College of bringing its present enrollment to and making it the largest law school he West. The entire institution in its departments will show this year otal enrollment of about 1750 stu-
ts. Such a university must be oned one of the leading factors for ift in any community and thus kes a strong plea for public recogon and support.

IDEAL THE HIGHEST.

oreover the University of South-
California frankly intends to live to the name it bears. Its ideal is university ideal. It is not content be and remain a college. It has ady entered upon a university cain that it has made real advance-t in its several professional de-tments and has recently launched raduate department in Liberal Arts er the immediate direction of its duate council. In June, 1910, eight didates were awarded the degree
Master of Arts; this year there are rly double that number of candies, while the regular senior class
bers sixty-five members.
esides all this the university hopes
e able to announce to the public, he very near future, that it is fully pared and specifically authorized to mmend its graduates for the cov-
California High School teachers' ificate on the same terms as now allowed the State
versity at Berkeley and the Le-Stanford, Jr., University. To nd the educational department, er Dr. T. B. Stowell, has been ped, and the advanced and graduwork is being stimulated and ex-
ded. State recognition in the mat-of certification will prove a great not only to the University of

"For 17 Years I Was Nearly Blind

Most of the Time in a Dark Room With a Bonnet Over My Face. At the End of a Month My Eyes Were What I Considered Well.—Mrs. Putnam."

(Free Book—Free Advice)

We Show You in Our New 80-Page Cloth-Bound, Illustrated Book, How to to Treat Any Eye Trouble at Home.

This book will tell you what doctors rarely tell their patients, but what they ought to know. It tells you how to successfully treat any eye trouble right in your own home, without having to consult a doctor, and at small expense.

It contains 125 illustrations, and much valuable advice on the care of the eyes, simple home remedies, constitutional treatment, advise about exercise, etc., and may be worth to you the price of your precious sight and health.

No matter how long you have been afflicted, or how serious your case may be—whether cataracts, failing eyesight, optic nerve disease, sore or watery eyes, scums, or any other eye trouble, you are welcome to one of these valuable books and our advice free of charge.

Hundreds of men, women and children, besides Mrs. Putnam, suffering from all kinds of eye troubles, have sent us testimonial letters, that our treatments have cured them, and many of the names, with their pictures and testimonials, that they have been cured, will be found in the book we send you free.

We do not treat people who were born blind or who are so blind from any cause that they have no perception of light. Where there is light, however, there is hope.

If you are interested and want this cloth-bound Eye Book, write a description of your case the best way you can and we will send it to you and tell you how you can treat yourself at home and be sure of results.

OUTCAST WOMEN NOT TO BE FEARED.

SUFFRAGETTES NOT ALARMED BY FRAIL SISTERS' VOTES.

Campaign of Public Meetings Planned to Educate Men to Idea of Ballot by Fair Sex—Delusion Swept Aside That Underworld Will Exert Any Influence.

A campaign of public meetings to be held from one to eight times a week from now until the general election in 1912, was decided upon at the annual meeting of the Political Equality League, in the Walter P. Story building, yesterday afternoon.

It was agreed that this series of meetings shall be in charge of Mrs. Seward Simons of Pasadena. She will hold the first at the league rooms on the afternoon of the 14th inst. for the benefit of 600 members of the organization.

A meeting will be held by the College Woman's League in the same rooms Monday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, when Prof. Miller of the Polytechnic High School, will speak on "Suffrage Economics." Eight special invitations have been issued.

The idea of a long series of general meetings is that if the Legislature submits a constitutional suffrage amendment to the public, a great deal of work must be done to educate the male voter on the question. The suffragists say they feel that the men will vote for it at the general election, but they wish to bring all possible pressure to bear upon them to see that they do vote for it when the time comes.

At yesterday's meeting Mrs. McCan presented statistics with regard to the possible votes of outcast women in comparison to those of the respectable class; she also touched on the proportion of questionable women voters to the votes of questionable men.

Out of 500 cases tried by Judge Willis in this city in the last two years, only nine were women and but two of the latter were sent to State's prison. In 1908, 733 persons were convicted of felonies in California, and 724 of these were men. At San Quentin at the present time there are 1856 male prisoners and only twenty-eight women.

In the fiscal year of 1909-1910 in Los Angeles, 590 women were arrested against 16,635 men. Capt. Lehnhausen, who gave Mrs. McCan information, stated that exactly the same laws apply to men and women which proves that the women of this city are either very much better or very much more clever than the men.

While a census of the underworld of Los Angeles reveals the fact that this city harbors something more than 1300 women who are social outcasts, it is a fact, Mrs. McCan said, that these women belong to a floating population who would not be likely to comply with the conditions necessary to the registered voter, in order to legalize her franchise. Los Angeles has 3000 Slavonian, 2000 Greek and 1000 single American men who live in rooming houses of the poorer sort and who are voters.

The population of this city is almost evenly divided between men and women, there being about 2000 more men.

WATTS.

WATTS, Jan. 7.—Watts will have gas within sixty days, according to a statement made by the superintendent of construction of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation at the last session of the City Trustees.

During the past few months a committee composed of J. S. Lange, W. Choate and Peebles Shoaff has been working to secure gas from the Los Angeles concern or if that failed, to provide a municipal plant. It is due to the efforts of this committee that gas has at last been obtained.

The City Trustees have ordered two

"QUEEN QUALITY" commences the New Year with the biggest credit balance it has ever known. Thousands of women who had never before experienced the comfort and style of perfect footwear at MODERATE prices, were added last year to the already long list of satisfied "Queen Quality" shoe wearers. Over 6,000,000 pairs of "Queen Quality" shoes were manufactured and sold in 1910. It is, by far, the most popular woman's shoe in the world today. Its popularity lies in its general excellence and its moderate price. Such shoes have made the Baker stores famous for their Big Shoe Values and enabled us to close the year of 1910 with the greatest business gain in our history.

We expected great things in 1910 and our expectations have been more than realized. This realization is but an incentive to greater things in 1911. The opening of our third store in Los Angeles and our large Market street store in San Francisco in 1910 has added largely to our already tremendous volume of business and our buying strength is increased accordingly. With every increase in our buying power we are enabled to furnish our patrons substantial benefits in increased values. We gave Big Values in 1910 but we expect to give Bigger Values in 1911. Buy your shoes at the Baker stores and share in manifest advantages of our great buying power.

Russia Tans

Baker's Russia Tan boots furnish the finishing touches to any smart street costume. Aside from being the smartest styles in the city, you buy them at a saving of a dollar.

ON'T GO BACK.

The news dispatches announce that a ship- d of bridal couples is on the way from Seattle. ey have all bought return tickets back on the amer. But never you fear about the return tick- after Frank Wiggins meets those 300 bride- ooms on the wharf at Redondo Beach. Mr. Wig- s says they can preserve the return coupons as eet mementos of a blissful season.

ABY FOR A JOB.

Quickly following the rumor that a strong po- cal faction is plotting to restore King Manuel to throne, comes the report that Mlle. Gaby Deslys discovered that she just can't live without him d has returned to her deserted love. No one can y that Gaby is a lady of strong business in- cts. On the whole, wouldn't it be the part of dom for this mysterious political faction to start plot to put Gaby on the throne instead of Manuel? e could probably hold down the job.

OPING THE GOVERNOR.

Every two years, at about this season, it is the tom of the sagacious citizen to stop his subscrip- n to the funny papers and start in reading the w bills that have been filed in the State Legislature. e of the reformers in Sacramento has produced a sterly work of legal diction limiting the power the Governor to release prisoners from the peni- tiaries. The bill provides that the Governor ll not be permitted to reprieve in cases of mur- and other very serious offenses. Ordinarily, this uld seem to be a dangerous law; but the reform- certainly ought to know best if their Governor ds to have his hands tied.

E COTTON-GROWING INDUSTRY.

The Midwinter Number of The Times this year contain many brand-new features. One of them an article on "Cotton Growing in the Imperial lley." A year ago we didn't know much about Now we know that thousands of acres are being nted, and we are to have a new and important in- try for the Southwest. The article in the Mid- ter Times will contain the information that many ple are looking for.

housands of acres suitable for cotton growing awaiting cultivation up and down the Colorado er. The review of the industry as far as it has e, which will be found in the "Midwinter," will invaluable to prospective cotton growers.

AIN OR NO RAIN.

In the old days in California a dry season lled misfortune for the farmer. But it is very erent now. Then we had no systems of irriga- installed and no such auxiliary arrangements as now provided by artesian wells and pumping nts.

ertainly we need rain, and it would be a fine g for the Land of Heart's Desire if the water s were to souse the golden stretches that lie ween Siskiyou and San Diego to a fare-you-well. ut though it were not again to rain for a thou- d days, the husbandman will rejoice in plenteous vests. The blossom-as-the-rose idea has come he arid country to stay.

ORTHY OF HIS HIRE.

The laborer is worthy of his hire, as the say- is, yet there is a class of laborers in the vine- ds that we all seem to think we can work to a zle without thinking to ever pay them a cent.

e refer to our public speakers. California, and ecially Southern California, is blessed with a ber of eloquent men who are in great demand at quets and meetings of both a public and a semi- lic character, particularly at this season of the r. We think nothing of inviting these gentle- n to dine with us and to send them back home hout even so much as offering them their street fare. It is what is called a "fiddler's invitation." et us take the trouble to remember that this t anything like a square deal. When a lot of iness men or other kinds of men have a "blow- " and desire to be entertained by some gifted son who makes a business of public speaking, should bear in mind that the said person is en- d to pay for the service he renders.

DVISORY VOTING.

The popular vote for President of the United tes is purely advisory The persons chosen as sidential electors by the voters of the several tes are under a moral obligation only to vote for nominees of their party for President and Vice- sident. They have an absolute legal right to for whomsoever they choose. It has hap- ed more than once that the popular vote been for one man and the electoral vote for ther. In 1876 Tilden received 4,284,950 votes and es but 4,033,385, yet Hayes carried the Electo- College by a vote of 185 to 184 for Tilden, and therefore elected. In 1888 Cleveland had 5,538,- votes and Harrison had but 5,439,887, yet Harri- had 233 electoral votes while Cleveland had but and Harrison was elected. It has happened oc- onally in State elections that one party has car- the election for State officers and the other ty has carried the Legislature and elected the ted States Senator. There is no instance on rd of a Republican Legislature electing a Demo- to the Senate except in Oregon, and that was er a Senatorial district advisory law similar to , which law the Republicans of Oregon respected, which law the insurgents in this State, or some hem, propose not to respect—if they can help it.

E ART OF UNBENDING.

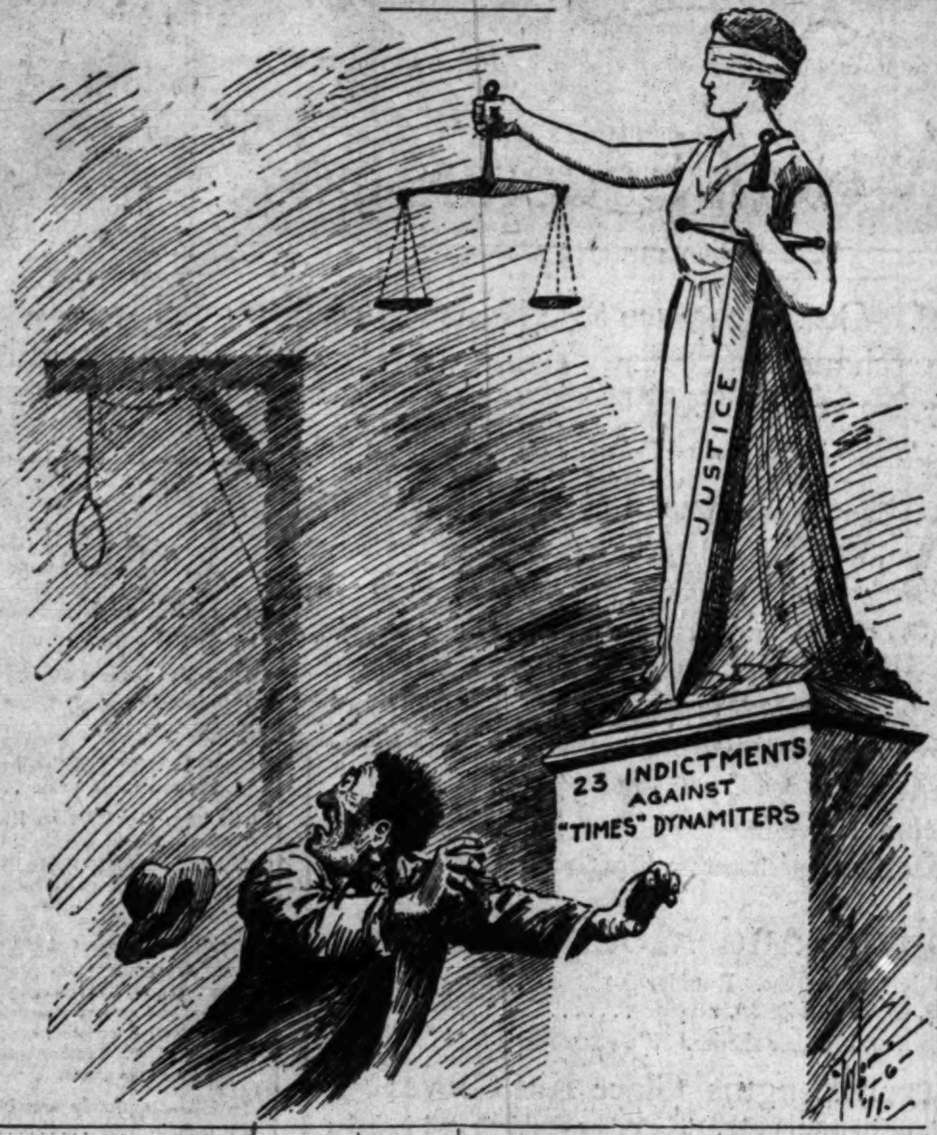
Many lessons for mankind may be learned the last successful Tournament of Roses, car- o so brilliant a conclusion in our sister city of adena. The educational value of the artistic long pageant, the simple charm of the modest school girls adorning the royal float, the subtle nce of flowers and poetry permeating the balmy ary atmosphere, all these make for the moral spiritual uplift of the community that devised, the spectators who witnessed, the matchless ng parade.

n the fun and frolic and foolish antics of the carnival, however, we should hardly expect ct lessons of any ethical value; it was, to all nces, merely a few hours given over to the d extravagance of grotesque imaginations. ehind the mask of the clown and the trappings jester some instructive features lay concealed, which somehow differentiate Californian Californian people from those of less fa- . The evening frolic showed very strik- leading business men in our Southland cities understand the graceful art of unbending; how they can throw themselves with all the abandon of a Gallic comedian into their assumed parts as funmakers, without losing the dignity imperative in their everyday vocations.

Now at the carnival in Nice or Venice or any European city liberty is sooner or later certain to degenerate into license; in the small, wee hours of the morning scenes take place that the yellowest journal would hardly care to portray; but the crowds in Pasadena at the evening revels, though they were allowed every liberty, and though the air was resonant with noise and laughter and unrestrained merriment, never exceeded the bonds of good-natured chaff or transgressed the laws of decency. Only one arrest was reported at police headquarters in a jollification of over 50,000 mixed holiday-makers.

May we not feel proud of our people in this beautiful land of perpetual roses?

The Wrath to Come.



CHRISTIANITY AND MATERIALISM.

The Christmas article in The Times has elicited some severe critical comments from a gentleman who evidently has a grouch against Christianity. He wields a bright, a facile and a pungent pen, he uses vitriol for ink, and he does very cleverly what never should have been done at all. His argument is that the teachings of Jesus have been a curse to the world—that Jesus borrowed his teachings from the maxims of Krishna—that there never was any such person as Jesus—and that there never was any such person as Krishna.

The argument resembles the defense of the man who was sued by a plaintiff who sought to recover damages caused by being bitten by the defendant's dog. The answer was that the man was never bitten, that the dog was an animal of a gentle disposition who would not bite anybody, and that the defendant had no dog. The same argument was the subject of a metaphysical poem, which has been erroneously attributed to Emerson—

"The Waddly bird sat on the prigo tree,
And this was his song: "Ah, me; ah, me;
There's no such thing as the prigo tree.
Ah, me; ah, me; it's too absurd,
But there's no such thing as the Waddly bird."

The correspondent indicts the Christian religion for the unjust and bloody deeds of some of its followers in the mediaeval ages. He harks back to the rusted and discarded racks of Torquemada, and endeavors to blow into life the ashes of the fire in which Servetus was roasted. These acts were never taught by the precepts, or inspired by the spirit of Christianity. They were abuses which fastened themselves upon it, and really, after three hundred years or more the statute of limitations ought to run against their recital, and against the claim that they are a part of latter-day Christianity.

Whether modern science and modern progress be the offspring of Christianity or not, they are its allies, its friends and its exponents today. The later generations have steadily toiled up the mountain heights seeking knowledge. Below them are the jungles out of which their fathers crawled. Above them tower the star-lit peaks which their children may reach. And, as they advance, there steps from out the wayside shadows the gloomy presence of a cold and pitiless philosophy.

It says, "Fatigue not yourself with trying to climb higher. There is no future. There is no Divine law. Faith is a folly. Hope is a delusion. Good and Evil are only words. The universe is only a charnel house of dead languages, dead faiths and dead gods. Go back to the bliss of ignorance. Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow you die."

Let those who will accept the creed of the Apostles of Annihilation, the Christians, whether orthodox or unorthodox, whether inside Christians or outside Christians, will continue to prefer the teachings of Jesus to the teachings of Huxley or Ingersoll. They will decline to register themselves as Intelligences unfit to survive the death of their bodies. They will prefer to believe in ceaseless and progressive life. They will prefer to believe that the Almighty has placed by every bedside of death a waiting cradle for the soul, and that death itself is but "that first breath which our souls draw when they enter life."

A materialistic philosopher who seeks to convert others to his belief is a mischief worker. He resembles the ruffian who kicks the crutches from under the arms of a cripple, and leaves him no support by which he might limp away from the storm. Materialism tends to paralyze the consciences and strangle the nobler impulses of men, and to banish them from the white light of the later centuries to grovel among the cave-dwellers of a prehistoric age.

Faith in a future existence, where a man shall reap what he has sown in earth life, is an armed guard whose arresting hands are laid upon the selfish, the savage and the criminal impulses of man, and from a more worldly and economic point of view civil society cannot [illegible] from the breast of the invisible policeman, and trust to protection of life, liberty and property to a creed of personal irresponsibility based upon a doctrine of personal annihilation.

CALIFORNIA TOP AND BOTTOM.

Side by side with the illustrious knocker whose pet pessimism was that "California had nothing but climate," we think of the other grouchy nuisance who always contended that "The bottom will fall out of California." Altogether they were a very numerous tribe and we were long and sorely afflicted with them.

But, glory be, we have seen the last of them. Their existence at this hour and in this day and generation were as impossible as the existence of a microbe in the sun.

You have only to take the wander trail up and down the golden length of California, as a member of The Times' staff did lately, to be made emphatically aware of the thrilling sense of the truth that California has only just begun both at the top and at the bottom. From off the inexhaustible soil of the State and from under it we have just begun to wring wealth and a prosperity that is bound to prove as constant and as lasting as the tides of the Sunset ocean.

We would not be human were we to fail to experience a sort of unsanctified joy in the confusion which has befallen the knockers who have visited our sacred soil from time to time for the sole purpose of taking a fall out of us, as it were. We frankly confess that we have nothing but jeers for them, and the more so as they come trailing back to participate in the gladness at which they mocked.

And, as we fling our jibes in the faces of these former outlanders, there is another class of people among us whose sins we cannot pass lightly by. They are those who, though Californians themselves, were of little faith. While they did not mock or knock, yet they preserved an air of cynicism which ill-became them and which is now a shadow sprung from their pathways into the substance of an accusing finger pointed at them solemnly to remind them of their own remissness.

Set foot now upon the shining trails that lead from San Diego to Sonoma—from the Harbor of the Sun to the Valley of the Seven Moons—yea, and far beyond into the great forests of Humboldt and the mountain slopes of Siskiyou, and you will discover hordes of men in California who builded their faith neither on the top nor the bottom of it, digging like mad into the ground both to plant seed for harvests and to uncover veins of gold. They are doing now as wise men the very thing that they would have considered themselves fools to have done twenty years ago, or even one year ago.

In the fertile valleys of California a few years ago there were merchants who felt a certain pity for the ranchers with whom they were doing business. Now those same merchants are falling all over themselves, as the saying is, to also own ranches. You go up into the San Joaquin Valley and every storekeeper you meet is a good deal more interested in the lands he has acquired, and is acquiring, than he is interested in his store.

Visit the old "diggings" of the '49 era and what do you find? You find men paying large sums of money to secure possession of mines that they could have had for nothing, or almost nothing, a short time ago. You find men taking stock in companies for the acquisition of water rights which these same stock buyers could have picked up for a song and for less than a song under their very noses during many years.

And that's the way it goes, and the way it will go from this time on. It simply means that, top and bottom, California is only beginning to show what it can produce in the way of wealth. The day of the big ranches in the big valleys is gone. We have entered upon the better day of the small farmer. The mineral resources of the State have scarcely been touched. There is no place like California. Get a little of it while the chance is still left.

January Sales

"Coaxing Women to Buy"

Read the leading article in the "SATURDAY EVENING POST" of January 7th under the title "Coaxing Women to Buy" and you will understand more about the Pease Policy and why it is successful.

The same low prices still prevail that have made this house famous.

At this time of year one hears of "25, 33 1-3 and 50 per cent. off" sales for "clearance," "stock reductions," etc., and we wonder how some merchants can still retain the musty, antiquated methods of bygone days and charge the people an enormous profit in December so as to give 50 per per cent. off in January. There are either charging the public too much in December or too little in January.

Every day is a sale day at Pease Brothers.
Every Pease price is a low price.
We give away no prizes, premiums or automobiles.
There is no element of lottery here.

Furniture, carpets, rugs and draperies in this store are marked with ONE PRICE, in plain figures, and that price is the lowest consistent with a fair margin of profit and stays on until the goods are sold.

We want you to see for yourself and compare our prices before buying elsewhere. We will be glad to show your our eight floors of dependable furniture and prove that we sell the highest quality for the lowest price in Los Angeles. We guarantee every piece of furniture we sell and our guarantee is a dependable one.

UNNEL TALK GETTING RIPE.

O PROPOSITIONS ABOUT READY FOR CITY COUNCIL.

ivals Lining Up for Battle of recedence in Passage of Ordi ance—ailway Influence Goes to econd Street—City Storehouse epartment May Be Established.

he City Council is likely to be red up in the near future by the sentation of two tunnel projects, proposing to bore through the hill t of Hill street, one at First and other at Second street.

he Board of Public Works, City En eer and members of the City Coun have all been consulted with refer to both, and there will be more less rivalry between the supporters each of the propositions, when they e reach the Council. They are not irely new, but have taken on fresh tivity, and there is a possibility that or the other may be presented to Council on Tuesday.

he promoters of the First street nel have put their preliminary rk in the hands of a strong commit composed of W. D. Gould, Silas se and D. K. Edwards and will push h vigor for a three-compartment nel, beginning at traffic-grade on adway and running to Fremont e, on the west side of the hill.

he promoters of the Second street have organized under the name the Second Street Tunnel and Im vement Association, with J. N. Met as manager, and will ask for a -compartment tunnel. According to manager's report, they are about dy to present their petition, as it is ned by upwards of 2000 business men property owners in the district nded by First and Fourth and Hill Main streets.

his tunnel would be about two cks shorter than the other, as it is posed to start it on the grade of street, and it finds its natural on the other side at Figueroa et, instead of Fremont avenue. It laimed that the approaches at both have been tied up to the proposi , and great stress is laid upon the t that R. D. Gillis of the Los Ange Pacific Railway, who recently be half owner of a valuable prop at the southeast corner of Second Hill streets, has authorized the ing of his property in favor of the cond street tunnel.

ome of the city officials would com themselves yesterday, but there l be plenty of opportunity for both s to be heard. When the petitions presented they will probably go to Committee on Streets and Boule ds, and it will take weeks to thresh the preliminaries.

STOREHOUSE ORDINANCE. READY FOR PRESENTATION.

he Supply Committee of the City ncil has the ordinance establish a city Storehouse Department all eshed out and will present it for sage on Tuesday. They are anx to have it passed, in order to work the details of the new system, be the completion of the City Hall ex which will be ready for occu cy in about two months. The ordi ce provides for the combination of work of the new Storehouse De tment and that of the present Sup Committee, without the creation of additional positions. If it passes, hur Baker, present Supply Clerk, assume the duties of storekeeper , instead of bills being approved by various departments of the city ernment, they will all be required go to the storekeeper and he will upon the details.

he principal benefit will be in a ncial way, as all standard supplies be secured in large lots and kept the storehouse, from whence they be taken on requisition, resulting doing away with much buying in ll quantities, and an equivalent ing of money. The system is the e as that followed by the Los An s Aqueduct Department.

Caught.

FIFTY HORSE-MULE THIEVES IN THE SHERIFF'S DRAGNET.

UNDER SHERIFF BRAIN has completed a summary of the arrests made during the last term of Sheriff Hammel. While the number is not astonishing, the character of the majority of the criminals brought to bay makes the record remarkable.

Two hundred and three persons were taken in custody on felony charges. About seventy-five of them were wanted by the authorities of other States.

In probably no county in the United States were so many horse thieves captured. Several of them were combinations of shrewdness and bloodthirstiness.

The records of this branch of the office, which is under the charge of Harry Wright, are almost as lurid as are the tales of the days when a rope and a straight sapling were the only remedies for "rustling."

Fifty men were arrested here in four years for having stolen horses and mules. Fifteen of them were wanted in sister States. Of the thirty-five brought to trial here, thirty were sent to the penitentiary.

Among the men who were taken in custody for this offense were James E. Gilroy, Girdine Horton, Jacob Holly, S. A. Jefferson, Robert Perry, Raymond Rutledge, J. D. Ward and William Westfall.

Gilroy worked a new game and consequently kept the officers guessing for some time. He stole between fifty and sixty horses. He never took any stock which was not the finest in the State. Most of the animals he "rustled" in the North.

Instead of selling the beasts, he shipped them to this city and hired them to contractors, getting about $25 a month for each team. He was making a neat income when he was arrested. He was traced through four mules he stole at the Mountain View Ranch.

Horton stole seventy-five head of stock. His depredations extended over several years. Holly worked the entire State. He brought his plunder in the North overland to this city and took the animals he stole here North. Jefferson "rustled" a carload of mules at one time. He left the State for two years and was arrested on his appearance here.

Perry has been given credit for being the "king of horse thieves." Refined, a composer of music and a resident of the Y. M. C. A., he operated for many months without being suspected. One of his tricks was to sell the horses he stole to retired ministers. He had driven behind twenty horses which belonged to other persons before he was sent to the penitentiary.

Rutledge drove seven horses here from Ventura. He had been in similar trouble before and is now serving a term of eight years.

Ward was a burglar. He had a habit of stealing rigs for the purpose of getting away after he had committed a robbery.

Westfall and accessories drove eighteen horses away from the Bixby ranch. In chasing him the Sheriff demonstrated for all time the necessity of having a good automobile at his command. He made a record run to Bishop and there took in custody the thief.

Men who have been charged with almost every offense in the criminal category have been run down by the Sheriff and his men. Some of them have been desperadoes, but none of them has made a record as interesting as the least of the horse thieves.

ASK GOVERNOR FOR RELIEF.

SUPERIOR JUDGES JOIN IN CALL FOR HELP.

Crowded Condition of the Calendar Makes It Appear Necessary to Have Assistance in the Dispatch of Business — Constitutional Amendment Provides for Emergency.

All of the Superior Court judges of Los Angeles county yesterday joined in a petition to the Governor, requesting that he assign some Superior judge of some other county for duty here, beginning the 20th inst. The session of this extra court will continue indefinitely, although not presided over by the same judge all the time. The reason for the request is that the crowded condition of the local court calendar makes it necessary for the sitting judges to have some help in the dispatch of the public business.

For the past year outside judges have worked in Los Angeles county at intervals, but there has always been some doubt as to the propriety of this, although they were never summoned except when some local judge was sick or away on his vacation. Last week Judge Covert of Hanford, sat in one of the departments several days, clearing up the calendars of Judges Monroe and Bordwell, who were otherwise engaged.

Under the provisions of a Constitutional amendment there is now no limit to the number of judges who are qualified to do business in any county, predicted of course upon the exigencies of the calendar, and it is understood that later another additional judge will be asked to preside in this county from the outside, quarters to be fitted up in the Bullard block, in the present Supreme Court rooms, formerly occupied by Judges Davis and Moss, about two years ago.

Additional help might have been secured from other judges, on the request of the local bench, but it was thought best to petition the Governor to that effect, so that the call might hav. the weight of official sanction.

PROBATION ASKED. YOUNG H R PLEADS.

Alvin C. Hamer, formerly a "live wire" in the local insurance field, was before Judge Willis yesterday on his petition for probation. The young man, who is but 19, pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery.

Hamer was brought down from Seattle to face the charge, that alleges that on September 8, 1910, he defrauded Mrs. M. McCuistion, the Equitable Savings Bank and the Bank of Southern California, of $35, by the worthless check route. He is a son of Joseph Hamer, principal of the Gates-street school, who within the past year has been compelled to take up about $[illegible]0 worth of [illegible] paper issued by the boy. The accused has been on bond since he was brought down from Seattle.

The testimony yesterday showed the same old story of trying to indulge a champagne appetite with a beer income. Hamer was addicted to wine, women and song, and was compelled to indulge in crooked financial transactions in order to make both ends meet. His father was on the stand in his behalf, and testified that he had sent the boy to the country in the hope that he might reform, but all to no purpose.

Judge Willis took the matter under advisement until next Friday, and meantime the record of Hamer will be more closely looked into. It is said there is another warrant out for his arrest for a trick similar to the one upon which he is now facing the court.

CHARGED WITH MURDER. DE VITA WOMAN DEFENDANT.

An information was filed in Judge McCormick's court yesterday against Angela Daria De Vita, the Spanish woman, who shot and killed Abele Bove as he was getting on a street car on Main street, November 21 last.

Joseph F. Sanford pleaded not guilty to a charge of failure to provide for his family, and his trial was set for the 20th inst.

James A. Culp, who pleaded guilty to burglary, was released on three years' probation.

Fortunato Llamas and Rosalio Garcia pleaded guilty to robbery. They will be sentenced Tuesday. Both have applied for probation.

Otto Wunderlich, charged with assault with a deadly weapon, pleaded guilty to simple assault. He will be up for sentence tomorrow.

William Jackson pleaded guilty to burglary. He will be before the court for sentence [illegible]

Frank Valanzuela pleaded not guilty to the allegation of burglary. The people of California will try to prove it February 14.

E. W. Calkins, who pleaded guilty to passing a worthless check, applied for probation. The matter will be disposed of the 20th inst.

TOO MANY WIVES. CHARGE AGAINST HENRY.

Victor C. Henry, the young Napoleon of finance, who is now facing charges of forgery and securing money under false pretenses, was in Judge Willis's court yesterday on an information alleging bigamy. The young man, a bit rumpled and unkempt, pleaded not guilty. His hearing was set for February 1.

W. T. Roberts pleaded guilty to failing to provide for his family. He will be before the court for judgment tomorrow morning.

W. H. Moores, facing a worthless check information, pleaded guilty. He will be sentenced Friday. Meantime an effort will be made to get him out on probation.

J. H. Morse pleaded guilty to forgery. He was put away at San Quentin for one year.

R. D. Estes, charged with embezzlement, pleaded guilty. He will face the court again Friday for sentence.

TRIAL OF BELL. NORTHERN JUDGE TO SIT.

The trial of Frank M. Bell, indicted for the killing of O. P. Widaman, July 23, will take place in Judge Willis's department, next week, but the presiding judge will be Judge George Cabaniss of San Francisco. Judge Willis will take charge of the docket of Judge Cabaniss in the Bay City during the hearing.

Before Judge Willis was elected to a place on the Superior Court bench he was Bell's attorney and, although Bell insisted that he try the charge against him, Judge Willis thought the proprieties suggested that some other judge hear the testimony, and the change was made.

COURTHOUSE NOTES. BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

ERRING MOTHER. An information was filed in Judge Wilbur's court yesterday against Mrs. Jennie S. P. Strong, on a charge of contributing to the dependency of her five minor children. The complaint was filed by the Humane Society, and the unfortunate woman, who is said to be addicted to the use of drugs, will have her hearing tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. Strong's husband is reported to be in Bakersfield.

INCORPORATIONS. Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday by the Caruthers Building Company, capital stock, $50,000, incorporators, George S. Caruthers, George B. Swell and A. R. Sanger, subscribed, $3; Country Homes Company, capital stock, $150,000, incorporators, Fred W. Eagen, Will C. Sheppard, Jr., Fred Wightman, E. J. Eagen and W. The Inferior Courts.

FOUND IT EASY TO GET MONEY.

YOUNG MARRIED WOMAN HELD FOR SUPERIOR COURT.

Admits Having Passed Worthless Checks in Stores—Says She Could Not Resist the Temptation to Have More Funds Than Her Husband Gave Her—Two Small Children.

Mrs. Anna Oster was held for trial in the Superior Court yesterday by Police Judge Rose on a charge of passing fictitious checks. Mrs. Oster remained very quiet during the preliminary examination and showed but slight interest when told she must stand trial. She is now out under $2000 bail.

Mrs. Oster was arrested the day before Christmas, and checks totaling about $210 are said to have been passed by her. The checks were all returned by the different banks marked worthless, and merchants in the downtown section and in the western suburbs were the losers.

Mrs. Oster had thirteen checks in her possession when taken into custody and she confessed to the police that she had planned to pass them in the afternoon.

In admitting that she passed the checks she made no effort whatever to excuse it. She said that she simply found it was an easy way to get money and could not resist the temptation to have more than her husband gave her. She admitted that she was not in need of anything and that her husband is able to provide her with all necessities.

Mrs. Oster is about 35 years old and has two small children.

GET OFF EASILY. WITNESSES WORKING MEN.

Because the complaining witnesses have left the city and are not within the jurisdiction of the Police Court, four picket cases were dismissed by Police Judge Williams yesterday morning. The cases are those of John Coyle, J. M. Chase, James Brown and A. Sonberg.

These cases have been pending several months. The men were released on bail a short time after being arrested. As the men who were approached by the pickets are hardworking men and quite inclined to earn their daily wage, they could not afford to await the calling of the cases.

The firms for which the men worked in building constructions moved their equipment and force to other cities several weeks ago to begin other construction work and the men followed their employers.

Game Expensive.

Sing Foy, a Chinaman charged with conducting a lottery, was fined $100 by Police Judge Frederickson yesterday morning. He paid the fine immediately and was released.

William Hammond, Frank Miller and G. W. Howard, charged with being in the gambling place where Foy was arrested, were fined $10 each for patronizing the lottery.

Pays Usual Amount.

G. I. Hamblin, charged with speeding, was fined $25, the usual amount, by Police Judge Williams yesterday morning in the University Police Court.

AG IN BUILDING OF RAILROADS.

NDER FIVE THOUSAND MILES IN PAST YEAR.

Los Angeles Corporation Ready to Construct Cross-Town Line. Southern Pacific Has Many Cars for Moving the Orange Crop. Santa Fe Change of Time.

Last year was a disappointing one in e matter of railway construction. fficial returns show that approxiately 4122 miles of new main line as built in the United States, as mpared with 3748 miles during 1909. he 1909 record was over 500 miles ore than for the preceding year, hich was the smallest since 1897. his construction does not include new cond, third or fourth sidings, and ectric lines.

Many of the larger railways have lded new mileage only on work arted the previous year, and with w exceptions no new work of imrtance was started during the year. any of the strongest railroads have duced construction to the minimum.

The longest single stretch of new ad built was a section of 160 miles the new cut-off between Texico, N. ., and Coleman, Tex. This cut-off s a total length of 210 miles and will completed in August, affording Los ngeles and the Pacific Coast a dict line to Galveston and New Orans over Santa Fe tracks. The San- Fe line between Cadiz and Parker, as completed during the year, givg Los Angeles a more direct line to hoenix. The Fullerton cut-off, ten iles lang, was also built.

In Mexico the Southern Pacific lded forty-one miles, has work unr way on thirty-three additional iles, and has located the line from pic to Magdalena.

Considerable progress was made aring the year in making permanent aprovements to roadbed to carry avier rolling stock, straightening ignment and reducing grades.

The amount of equipment ordered r railroads in 1910 was smaller than 1909 and comparatively small with e amount ordered on the average ring the last decade.

The Santa Fe ordered 1500 refrigerar cars, and 162 cars of various kinds r passenger service; and ninety locootives; the Southern Pacific ordered 66 freight cars of various kinds, 152 assengers, including self-propelling otor cars; and twenty-three locootives.

S. P.'S HEAVY TRAFIC.

In conjunction with the statement of L. Lomax that in two years the esent railway facilities of the southest will be unable to handle the busess of the country, and the statement that hree ransconinenal lines e waiting a change in legislative ndencies to get into the field H. V. latt, superintendent of the Southern acific lines, stated that during last ar there was an increase of about per cent. in the freight business of e local yards.

In the month of December 8000 more eight cars moved through Los Anles than during the same month a ar ago, while the demand for orge and other citrus fruit cars will much heavier this year than at any me before, both as per acreage unr cultivation and as a total of shipent.

In order to handle the increased busess the Southern Pacific has been rced to do 33 1-3 more construction ork during the past year than at any me in the past decade.

Ready to Build Across Town.

The alleged "war on the railroads" hich has been announced as a part the program of the Federated Improvement Associations will not be ught, for the simple reason that the ilroads and the association are orking in harmony for the building a cross-town line on the south de.

When the question of building this e first came up the Los Angeles ailway applied for a franchise on varado street.

This street is one of the best resince districts of the city and fa uch used by automobiles. For this ason objections were raised to buildg a car line on this street.

Chief Engineer Kuhrts of the Los ngeles Railway said yesterday: "All at we are waiting for is to have e Board of Public Utilities tell us here the line is needed. Then, as on as the franchise is advertised r sale, we will bid for it and build. "The city and the company are orking in harmony for the building this line, and as soon as Meyer ssner returns we will take the queson up and reach some definite setment as to the route which will best for the public and the comny."

Now by Way of Riverside.

An important change was announced the running of the overland limd on the Santa Fe yesterday. Benning January 15 the train will bn by way of Fullerton and Riverle instead of by way of Pasadena. e train will leave Los Angeles at 5 a.m., five minutes later than the esent leaving time. The schedule r the new service to San Diego s been completed. The new train ll leave at 3 p.m. and run to San iego by 6:30 p.m., more than a hour ster running time any of the three her passenger trains in the serv-. The opposite train will make the me time. The train now leaving at 15 p.m. will leave at 1:15 p.m.

New Line to Sugar Factory.

The Pacific Electric put in operaon yesterday a new line from Huntgton Beach to the Holly sugar facry, a distance of two an. one-half iles.

Have You a Valise Tag?

F. A. Wann, general traffic manager, d T. C. Peck, general passenger ent of the Salt Lake railroad, are ving away a New Year souvenir in e shape of a valise tag representing color and appearance a small orange.

Killing Two a Day.

According to a bulletin issued by the nnsylvania railroad, approximately persons a day have been killed e January 1, 1900, while trespassing the property of the company. The is 7906 persons killed and 7838 inas a result of trespassing. The in 1907 was 916, resulting in a n by the railroad company to the public to the dangers of ing. The co-operation of city ounty authorities was invited, and publicity was given to the efforts ompany was making to put an to this evil. As a result of this paign the number of trespassers on the road in 1908 was 743, a tion of 173, or more than eighteen has been a reduction

Nearly 1000 Pairs of Beautiful New Lace Curtains in a Remarkable Sale, Specially Priced ⅓ to ½ Below Regular Selling Values

—These curtains are all new, beautiful, fresh stock, secured within the past few weeks from one of the leading Philadelphia manufacturers. They are what are known in the trade as "Mill Odd Lots"—that is, small lots—two to nine pairs of a kind. These were secured at one-third and one-half their regular wholesale price. We shall offer them to our customers upon a proportionate basis of price-saving. Every housekeeper in the city who has, or contemplates a single curtain need within the next six months should make a point to take advantage of this sale. At the special prices, none will be sent on approval, and none will be exchanged. We advise you to purchase liberally, as equal values are hardly likely to be duplicated again within a long time.

was a man of and when he by the Pope to preach it is said that he with glowing hope and enthusiasm, to fight the Saracens in the East. The second crusade was a failure. Not more than a tenth of the throng which had gone forth so hopefully ever returned home, and Bernard died of a broken heart in 1153. Bernard of Clairvaux was a prolific writer of sermons, epistles, hymns and theological discussions.

The two other great medieval churchmen of the name were Bernard of Cluny and Saint Bernard of Mentone. Saint Bernard of Mentone, who was born in Savoy, France, in 923, is chiefly remembered because he founded the hospices in the pass of Great Saint Bernard, where even to this day, with the help of Saint Bernard dogs, the monks rescue and care for Alpine travelers. Bernard of Cluny, who was born of English parents in Brittany, in 1122, gained immortal fame through his long poem, which opens with the three wonderful hymns, "For Thee, O Dear, Dear Country," "The World Is Very Evil," and "Jerusalem the Golden." This poem contains some three thousand lines condemning the evils of the medieval church, and Bernard himself said that the writing of it was such a task that only divine inspiration enabled him to accomplish it.

Still another early bear-man of interest to Americans is Bjarni Herjulfson. He was a Norwegian Viking, according to an old Norse saga, and his father was an early settler of Iceland. Bjarni returned from the sea every second year to see his father. One year—the year 986—he found his father gone, and started to follow him to Greenland. But a storm and a strong current from the Arctic struck his ship and drove him southward. Finally he came in sight of a land covered with trees, but, knowing it could not be Greenland, he sailed away again.

This tree-covered land was America, it is supposed, and therefore Bjarni was the first European to see the new world. His accounts of the fertile land to the south of Greenland led to the discovery of America by Lief Ericson a few years later.

In more recent times the bear names have figured prominently among artists and writers. The first poet laureate of England, appointed by King Henry VII, was the blind Frenchman, Bernard Andre. Bernard de Fontenelle, born in 1657, a nephew of Corneille, was another Frenchman famous as a poet. Bernard Ingeman, the Danish poet and novelist, born in 1789, and Bjornsterne Bjornson—whose name signifies "Star-bear son-of-a-bear"—the great Norwegian poet, novelist, dramatist, statesman, editor and theater manager, are two other famous writers of the name.

Bernardo Luini, an Italian painter of the Lombard school, who died in 1536, and Bernardo Rossellino, a Florentine sculptor and architect, are two men of the name famous as artists.

Bernard Palissy the celebrated French potter and enameler, had perhaps the most romantic life of any of these bear men of the arts. He was born in 1510, the son of a poor workman in glass. His education was meager, as far as schooling was concerned, but he managed to gain a good knowledge of geometry, natural science, painting and drawing. Then he married and settled down as a portrait painter and land surveyor.

In 1553 he chanced to see a glazed cup which suggested to him the enamel work which he perfected. Until he did perfect this enamel he found no rest. For sixteen years he worked in poverty. He tried first to produce white enamel, and when he had succeeded in doing that, he tried for colors. His family went hungry and cold, but Palissy persevered. Finally he had to burn the chair he sat on, in order to keep from freezing. But in the end he succeeded in producing the most wonderful pottery of his age.

In spite of his seeming single-mindedness in his work for his pottery, he found time to gain a high place as a writer; he was one of the most advanced natural philosophers of the day; and he was one of the staunchest workers in the founding of the Calvinistic church in the part of France in which he lived.

He died in prison. Because of his religious beliefs, he was arrested in 1588 and thrown into the Bastile, where he died the next year.

A few men of the name have made their fame in warfare. One of them was the medieval hero, Bernardo del Carpio, the story of whose adventures against the Moors, knight errantry in France, and bootless struggle to free his aged father from imprisonment, forms the subject of many Spanish ballads and legends. Bernardo's most worthy successor, perhaps, was Bernardino Rivadavia, the Argentine statesman, who died in 1845, and who is sometimes called second only to Washington as the representative of a free people. Rivadavia inaugurated the independency of Uruguay, and became President of the Argentine confedera- Cordoba when he discovered the Yucatan in 1517, and with Cortez in his travels in Mexico.

HEAD OF MANY SECRETARIES HERE INSPECTING Y.W.C.A.

General Secretary of National Board Addresses the Territorial Body and Outlines Great Gathering at Minneapolis in April—Dainty Luncheon Given in Her Honor.

Miss Mabel Cratty of New York, general secretary of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., is paying her first visit to the Coast and is the guest of the local association for a few days.

Miss Cratty is the executive head of a staff of about eighty secretaries employed by the National Board, of which Miss Grace Dodge is president. She is here on a visit of inspection and addressed the Territorial Board yesterday morning at its regular session.

She gave a talk on the coming Biennial Convention, which will be held at Indianapolis next April, when Y. W. C. A. representatives from all over the United States will be present in the interests of the army of 215,000 women who are association members.

Several functions were given yesterday at association headquarters in honor of Miss Cratty. The Territorial Board entertained at a luncheon in the blue room at noon, when Mrs. O. Shepard Barnum presided. At the conclusion of the luncheon, toasts were responded to by Miss Cratty and Mrs. Z. D. Mathuss. The latter has just returned from a tour around the world and shared the honors with Miss Cratty. Mmes. Carl Johnson and Frank S. Wallace also spoke briefly.

The guests included Mmes. O. Shepard Barnum, chairman of the Territorial Committee; William Horace Day, M. A. English, S. S. Salisbury, George S. Bovard, F. A. Dewey, E. K. Edwards, C. A. Johnson, E. R. Smith, George Cooley, D. M. Welch, F. S. Wallace, Emma Parsons of Riverside, Leonora Smith of Long Beach, Misses Cora L. Tatham, Rose Smith, Caroline Patch, Verona Trowbridge, Helen Salisbury, Mayme Scott, Ellen M. Parker, Henrietta Freeman and Gail Lane, extension secretary-elect of Sacramento.

In the afternoon there was a tea and reception from 3 to 5 o'clock in the members' room of the association building, to which were invited members of all the Y. W. C. A. city boards and the intercollegiate faculty of Southern California, the Los Angeles City Board receiving with the Territorial Committee. There were present the presidents and secretaries of the associations at San Diego, Redlands, Riverside, Pasadena and Long Beach. Mmes. E. F. Hill and Homer Laughlin, Jr., presided at the tea tables, assisted by Misses Dorris Rhodes, Gladys Storey, Camilla Gamier and Henrietta Stone of the Girls' Collegiate School.

Miss Cratty will speak this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. vesper service. She leaves on Tuesday for the North.

A TENDER TRIBUTE.

The funeral of the late Mrs. J. A. Reaves, mother of Wesley Reaves, who lost his life in The Times disaster of October 1, occurred yesterday at the Boyle Heights Methodist church. Mrs. Reaves died on Thursday, of an aggravated malady, with which she had been seriously ill for a year or more. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. W. E. Tilroe, and a most touching feature was the ceremony of about fifty little girls from the department of the Sunday School over which Mrs. Reaves presided, who marched by the casket, each placing upon it a white carnation. Interment followed at Rosedale cemetery.

BARACA-PHILATHEA UNION.

The first meeting of the Baraca-Philathea City Union, since the consolidation of the two bodies, will be held on Monday evening, in the Baraca room at the Y. M. C. A. A large attendance is expected, and a special programme has been prepared, during which officers will be elected for the ensuing year.

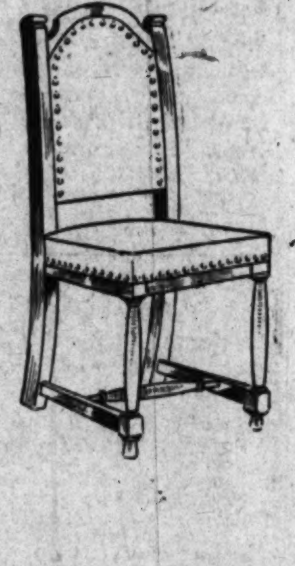
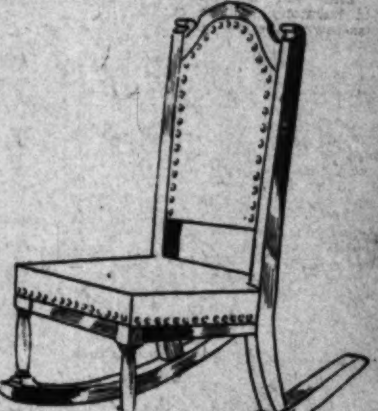
Flanders Furniture





And as part of the Mackie-Foley policy is to show always the latest furniture patterns, you will find here now, the best examples of these reproductions of the sturdy old Flemish styles. All of them solid quartered oak upholstered with dull green leather and fastened with oxidized copper nails. A style that has added grace and refinement to the earlier Flemish designs, and that is the most luxurious and artistic furniture yet evolved for the living room.

THE POLITICAL WATCHTOWER.

As no one else seems willing to own them, my impression is that the charter amendments to be voted on March 6, were written by the celebrated King of France who, with 50,000 men marched up the hill and then marched down again.

I had the assurance, when the charter revision committee was appointed, that all the defects in that "bug-house" document by which we are governed were about to be ironed out; and that, thenceforth, we should have a city constitution that would be to the world an object of wonder and admiration.

I perceive, however, that the mountainous intellects engaged in the task have brought forth a dwarf mouse.

Take, for instance, the long-winded provision relating to the new and important functions of the Public Utility Commission. Joke!

The authors of the charter amendments fulfilled their reckless determination to give the Utility Commission absolute power over rates by not giving them absolute power over rates.

One of the reasons given for the pressing necessity of changing the charter was a reduction in the number of elective officers.

"Too many offices on the ballot," cried the reformers in a terrible panic. "We must have fewer elective offices. Ruthlessly cut down the list."

So they have ruthlessly cut the list. That is to say they have cut off three. There are, at present, twenty-three elective officers; if the amendments pass there will be twenty. Saved!

The authors of the amendments seemed to be struck with a realization that perhaps the change from twenty-three to twenty wasn't as ferocious and sweeping as might be; so they arranged to have half of them elected at a time.

They are going to have the office-holders serve for four years instead of two; the Mayor, City Attorney, five Councilmen and three members of the Board of Education to be elected at the first election day; the Auditor, Assessor, four Councilmen, four members of the Board of Education two years hence.

The most important and thrilling provision in the amendments I have been able to discover is the one designed to save Uncle Aleck from getting writer's cramp.

Under the present organic law of the city, the Mayor spends about two-thirds of his time signing demands and putting his O.K. mark on claims against the city.

Although this does not seem to be of such staggering importance that an expensive special election is needed to adjust the difficulty, this provision is a good one. The present requirement that the Mayor shall use the majority of his time signing documents which in the nature of things he can have no possible knowledge of, is a foolishness.

I see they have also tinkered up the initiative, recall and referendum. I always imagined those holy and revered laws to be perfection. The reformers seem to have a vague feeling of dissatisfaction, however.

One of their remedies is certainly a corker.

Each time a sample ballot is sent out with the notification of a special election, it is to be accompanied by a call to arms sent at public expense.

For instance, when the referendum is invoked, the invokers and the protestants are each to be allowed to send out printed arguments, for and against. It is stoutly maintained by the charter revisionists that the city cannot be made to pay for the printing of the arguments; but the city must, in every case, pay for the postage stamps to mail them.

I have been given to understand that, in the past, Lissner's committees have roared a good deal about being obliged to pay so much postage on their campaign documents.

I congratulate the "little boss" on his ingenuity in finding so simple a way of doing politics at the public expense.

I note there are also some changes in the proportion of names required to be signed to initiative, recall and referendum petitions.

The referendum will require ten per cent. of the voters; the recall is reduced from 25 per cent. to 20 per cent.

Lissner has decided that there must be some better system for using the police and fire departments for a political machine.

Dishman, the best Chief of Police that Los Angeles ever had, was discharged because he wouldn't do politics. Galloway was guaranteed to be a "good dog" politically; but he couldn't deliver the goods. Wherefor is a charter amendment putting the power virtually into Lissner's hands direct.

The chiefs of police and fire departments are to be allowed to "hire and fire" the members of their forces as they like. They are limited of course by the eligible lists of the Civil Service Commission when they hire men. Any member of the force discharged by the Chief has the right to appeal to the Police Commission for an "invetsigation." Not a trial.

The commission will make a "private investigation" in the case of anyone who appeals from the Chief's order of dismissal.

In other words, if the Chief should get frisky and try to fire some one who is "right" with the administration, he can be reversed without explanations to the public.

There are various others changes in the commissions, cutting down their number from five to two.

The charter revisionists did one good job in raising salaries. The city attorney is to get $5000 instead of $3000; councilmen $2400 a year instead of $1200; clerk $3000 instead of $2400. Nearly every city official will experience a substantial "rise," if the charter amendments are adopted.

The amendments relating to the Public Utilities Commission is funny. The revisionists start out sternly to throw the whole power of raising rates into the hands of the Public Utilities Commission, taking it from the hands of the City Council where it reposes at present.

To this stern provision, however, the revisionists have added that any public service rate ruling may be repealed from the Utilities Commission to the City Council. As every such ruling will undoubtedly be appealed, the revisionists seem to have ultimately arrived just where they started.

Although they are rather ashamed of the rest of the amendments, the revisionists profess to put great store in the amendment relating to the department of public service which is supposed to protect the water and power rights of the Aqueduct and it supplant the Water Board. If the amendment does so protect them; then its fine stuff.

[illegible] say the revisionists uation. Next year, we intend to give Los Angeles the commission plan of government."

In other words, the reformers haven't had an election for several weeks; these amendments are permINDS that the famous 'Des Moines don't stand for anything; but will keep the boys amused until the commission plan is ready.

I understand that the Los Angeles reformers have made up their minds that the famous 'Des Moines Idea" is not sufficiently "advanced" for the use of this city. It appears that we are headed for the "Grand Junction Colorado Idea," that being the very latest and dippiest.

Meanwhile all factions appear to be on a still hunt for a Mayor of Los Angeles.

I understand that the Lissner people are looking somewhat severely at Alexander, they being under the impression that the old fox in the City Hall is a little more steadfast on the job of looking after the welfare of one G. Alexander than after that of Lissner.

George ducks the rule that it must be "All for Lissner and Lissner for himself."

Mr. W. C. Mushet will, in all human probability, be a candidate again, backed by the business men.

There is a movement for asking Gen. Chaffee to consent to become a candidate. Times of trouble and violence threaten the city and many voters of all factions feel that the chief executive should be some one like Gen. Chaffee who will do his duty without regard to political wire pulling. The general has not yet been consulted about it.

My information is that the Goo-Goos have not yet definitely selected their candidate.

They are anxious to find some one who will get the labor union vote which they need, without making it look "too raw."

Dr. John R. Haynes, as the inventor and manufacturer of the Recall and Referendum, has been much talked of; so has Stitt Wilson, the Socialist candidate for Governor.

The Democrats are trying, without much success, to agree upon some candidate. So far they have only discussed oft-mentioned politicans like Joe Call, Charles Wellborn and Tim Spellacy.

The proudest little Irishman in California is Officer Shannon (retired.)

His son has just been appointed a deputy in the office of the district attorney. It will be a matter of public satisfaction that "Shannon's boy" has turned out to be such a fine young fellow.

Officer Shannon is one of the famous characters of Los Angeles. He is the richest policeman in California.

Shannon came here forty years ago and got a job on the "force" as a matter of course. He invested the first savings in a little home in the suburbs of the city—on Broadway (then Fort street) between Third and Fourth. There his son was born and there Shannon owns a big office building that yields him an income big enough to support a private battleship.

He takes no pride in his office building, however. What Shannon is proud of is the fact that nobody ever bossed "Shannon's Point" at the Temple Junction as well as he did and the fact that his boy graduated with high honors from Ann Arbor Law College and is a deputy in Capt. Frederick's office.

Shannon says the boy will still retain his private office, as a member of the firm of Shannon and Meyers in the Broadway Central Building.

THE WATCHMAN.

POLITICAL DRIFT.

Congressman James A. Tawney of Minnesota, who was defeated at the late election, is in doubt as to what he will do after March 4. Before he went to Congress he was a member of a law firm at Winona, and he still retains that membership, but he does not think there is now enough business so that it would pay him to stay there. He says: "I have had no offers from the administration. I have never been offered a position on the Panama Canal, nor has it been suggested to me that I take a place in any of the departments in Washington. In fact, the only 'job' that has been offered to me since the elections last November was made by a friend of mine in Winona, who said he would pay me $1 a week to take care of his lawn."

State Senator Simmons of North Carolina says President Taft "will be renominated and re-elected in 1912 as surely as he lives. He is each day impressing himself on the consciousness of his countrymen in a way that has scarcely been equaled by any of his predecessors. The more his record is revealed and analyzed, the bigger the President looms up [illegible] ties that have won him the applause of right-thinking men of all political creeds, and because of this the chief magistracy will again be committed to his keeping."

Edward M. Shepard is reported as gaining a following in his candidacy for the U. S. Senate, to succeed Senator Depew of New York. Mayor Gaynor has come out in his favor, and has publicly given reasons why Shepard should be elected by the Legislature. Charles F. Murphy, the leader of the Tammany organization, is also favorable to his election.

There is a movement in Kansas political circles to push Gov. Stubbs for the Vice-Presidential nomination with Taft as the head of the ticket. For about a year, however, Gov. Stubbs has been the recognized leader of the "progressive" faction in Kansas, and the Vice-Presidential movement would require him to get back into line with the regular Republicans. There is fear that he will not consent to such a proposition, but will become a candidate for the Senate, seeking to become the successor of Senator Curtis.

Senator Hale has a remarkable home in Washington. It contains thirty-six rooms, every one of which possesses an open wood fireplace. Mrs. Hale's firewood comes from the Pine Tree State, and it is cut of that fragrant variety called the balsam pine, which brings joy to those within reach of its odor. The cutting of the firewood for Mrs. Hale is a ceremony, and balsam is carefully raised for the purpose. With that careful foresight which distinguished her father, the renowned Zach Chandler of Michigan, Mrs. Hale plants wherever a tree is cut.

Champ Clark's full name is James Beauchamp Clark, but when he went out in the world as James B. Clark, he found his letters were getting mixed up with those of another man of that name. So he dropped the James and became Beauchamp Clark, but did not like the way people pronounced his front name, and so put the pruning knife to it again and became plain Champ Clark. He is never referred to as Congressman Clark, as other members are, but always as Congressman Champ Clark.

Appointed Senator Lafayette Young of Des Moines, Iowa, is desirous of being regularly elected to the Senate, but has announced that he will not spend any money on his campaign. Of the things already forced upon his attention at Washington, he says: "It is well known that over 100 members of the present Congress were defeated for re-election this year. They are going home penniless to begin life anew. A vast majority of them are honest men. It can also be said that a majority of them have attempted to serve the people loyally.

"But these men have been rejected. They go home in poverty to take up their former work and they will find it a hard problem. Many of them are beyond middle life. They have spent all their time and money in politics. Their families feel the condition seriously.

"With such examples any sane man will conclude that, if he secured an office, it must be without expense."

R. G. McCroskey of Garfield, Wash., who is one of the "wheat kings" of his State, has made a good record as a member of the Washington Legislature, but he has no gubernatorial aspirations. "I had rather be known as the best farmer in Washington, than to be Governor of the State," he says.

Gen. Luke Wright of Tennessee, former Secretary of War and Governor-General of the Philippines, is expected to become a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Frazier.

Congressman Legore of South Carolina has a pretty comprehensive idea of the position of the Democratic majority, which he describes in the following picturesque manner:

"We Democrats are up against it in the matter of tariff legislation. We've got the tariff by the ears, holding fast with two hands. All we need to do is revise it; take the protection out of it; put it on a tariff for revenue basis. The country is waiting for us and just as sure as we let go with one hand the other one is going to be bitten, and bitten hard, and the Republicans will watch the performance with glee."

INVITES THE FATHERS.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Breed-street School met Thursday afternoon and after the programme an interesting report on the convention held in Denver was given by the secretary, Mrs. Williams. On Friday evening, the 27th inst., the association will hold a meeting to which the fathers are invited. An entertainment will be given by the school and refreshments served.

WRITER HELD UNDER BAIL.

Magazine Contributor Charged With Having Threatened to Kill His Wife. Hubbub in a School.

Frank W. Ellis, a magazine writer, who, the authorities say, is addicted to the frequent use of absinthe, was sent to the County Jail under heavy bail by Justice Summerfield yesterday to await a hearing on a charge of having threatened to kill his wife.

Beside having yielded to a mania to do injury to his spouse, Ellis is asserted to have created a reign of terror at the Los Angeles Business College a few days ago.

In the course of his ramblings about the city, he is alleged to have paid an uninvited visit to the school. While efforts were being made to induce him to leave, he made a motion as though he were reaching for a revolver and caused a wild scramble. Anything which looked as if it might turn a bullet, even though it would have yielded to a paper wad, was seized by the students and placed between them and the intruder.

Some of the more bold persons present screwed up their courage to the point of forcibly ejecting Ellis. Mrs. Ellis left her husband several months ago and this fact is believed to be partly responsible for his homage to Bacchus. According to the officers, he [illegible] issued, the bail was fixed at $1000. On account of his apparently irresponsible condition when he was arraigned, the magistrate raised the bond to $3000. He will be given an examination on the 13th inst.

MAY READ AS THEY RUN.

Patrons of Public Library Given Access to More Than Fifteen Thousand Volumes on the Shelves.

At the public library, persons may now read as they run. An open shelf department, which has been installed, gives the patrons access to more than 15,000 volumes. Changes made from week to week in the volumes in this department places the hundreds of thousands of books of the library at the intimate range of the reader. Instead of increasing the expense to the institution, this arrangement effects a saving of $600 a year.

Since accepting the duties of public librarian here, Purd B. Wright has made many notable changes in the local institution, but none of them has added so much to the comfort and convenience of library patrons as the creation of the open shelf department.

Wright will return the 15th inst. from Chicago, where he is attending a meeting of the Executive Board of the WANTS A CONVENTION HALL.

Visalia Would Acquire a Building of Great Capacity for Various Civic Purposes by Bond Issue.

VISALIA, Jan. 7.—One of the most important official acts of the present Board of Trustees of Visalia, was the agreement of that body last night, to call an election at which will be submitted the proposition of voting bonds to the amount of $40,000 with which to purchase a site and erect a public convention hall and fair pavilion. The Board of Trade has secured an option on a site centrally located comprising practically two acres, and proposes thereon to put up a building that will be a distinct credit to the city and which would accommodate several thousand people. It is declared that Visalia is badly in need of such a building, espcecially in view of the fact that there is a strong probability of the Tulare county citrus fair being held annually in this city. The election will be held within the next thirty days and it is thought that the bonds will carry by a large majority.

At the same election the voters of Visalia will decide upon two other matters of considerable local interest. Rupture Cured
Without Operation
No Charge if You Don't Get Relief

No longer any need for any one to drag through life in the clutches of rupture. For now any one—man, woman or child—can easily and quickly be freed from this affliction.

In times past, a surgical operation was the only known cure—and that has always been dangerous—result, permanent weakness or in death about as often as in recovery.

But now no one need remain ruptured because of dread of an operation. For an operation is no longer necessary. Science has at last come to your rescue with a safe, simple, inexpensive home cure.

This, Reader, is the wonder-working Cluthe Truss—a truss so remarkably beneficial that relief is immediate and cure begins at once.

You see this truss does something which no other truss or appliance in the world does—

It automatically gives a soothing, strengthening, healing massage treatment — a stimulating life-restoring massage which cures by strengthening the weakened abdominal muscles or ruptured parts—(thus overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture)—just as exercise restores strength to a weak arm.

The Cluthe Truss has cured thousands—among them people over 50, 60 and 70 years old—who have been ruptured from 20 to 50 years—cured them even after everything else, including operation, had done no good whatever.

The Cluthe Truss is the only self-adjusting truss in existence.

The support it gives is automatically regulated. This is how your rupture is held constantly in place until the cure is complete.

We guarantee that this truss will prevent all danger of protrusion — no matter how bad your condition. Wear the truss at our risk—if your rupture ever comes out, the truss won't cost you a cent.

This truss can't shift or slip—it is held in position by suction. It is as comfortable as your clothing—and the only truss without a belt, leg straps or springs.

We have published free cloth-bound book of advice—the most helpful book ever written on rupture.

It sums up all we have learned about rupture in forty years of experience.

It shows (in pictures) rupture in all its stages—shows how rupture gradually grows worse if not held constantly in place.

It shows why belt-and-leg strap and spring trusses usually fail to hold—and how, even if they do hold, it is folly to expect them to cure.

It explains how, unless the ruptured parts are strengthened (which can be done only by massage) real relief or cure is impossible.

It explains the dangers of operations.

It puts you on your guard against worthless trusses and treatments—against endangering your health—against throwing money away.

And it tells all about the Cluthe Truss—how little it costs—how we send it on guaranteed trial — how it won't cost you a single cent if it doesn't do you a world of good. And it tells how, by our simple system, we can fit you by mail, right in your own home, as perfectly as if you came to New York.

Book sent in plain, sealed envelope. Write for it today—don't put it off. When you read this book you will know how you can get immediate relief and quick cure without risking any more money.

Please use the coupon or simply say in a letter or postal, "Send me the book," and address us mentioning our Box number as below.

KNOTS IN ESTATE.

tition was filed and this also was demurred to, but a hearing was finally set for Tuesday of last week. Then Edwin A. Meserve, attorney for Mrs. Squires, arose in his place in court and filed notice that the contest would be abandoned, with the proviso that it would not obviate any future attempt to renew it. This was agreed to and the question is, what will the outcome be?

CUTS DAUGHTERS OUT.

Edward W. Gilmore died suddenly March 31, last, in his office, and left a widow and three children. His estate was valued at about $200,000, and it was left to Mrs. Gilmore for her use during her lifetime.

The family home on Ocean View avenue was to be given to Mrs. Howard W. Squires on the death of Mrs. Gilmore, and the rest of the estate was to be divided between the two brothers, the larger portion to go to the younger son.

Mrs. Squires was practically cut off without a cent until the death of her mother, and then she was only to get the family home, which, with its furniture, is said to be valued at about $25,000.

Then, for the first time, the flag of defiance was flung from the roof top of Mrs. Squires's home. She began suit and kept at it until she succeeded in tying up the estate so that no bills could be paid. Bills accumulated for various necessary things until it is said that about $7000 is now outstanding.

The family had a meeting just prior to the contest, and Mrs. Gilmore who, mother-like, sympathized with her daughter to a certain extent, decided to give the family home and all it contained to Mrs. Squires immediately, and not wait until after her death. There followed the notice of the contest, and the family conference broke up immediately. Mrs. Gilmore withdrew her tentative offer of the family home.

This further angered the belligerent Mrs. Squires and she pressed her suit closely, charging that undue influence had been brought to bear upon her father just prior to his death, which put her in a bad light in his eyes. Mrs. Gilmore, the mother, who has been in poor health for several years, left for the East last summer to visit her sister in Iowa. The news of the charges in the contest reached her there and, it is said, seriously affected her health.

Mrs. Gilmore returned to Los Angeles a few weeks ago and has been using her influence to have the contest settled. She is willing to do almost anything to bring about amity between her children.

Albert Crutcher, attorney for the estate, denies that there are any steps taken looking toward a settlement, but acknowledges that he made a proffer to Mrs. Squires some time ago which she refused on the grounds that it gave her no more than she was to receive under the will.

Mr. Crutcher declined to say what the offer was, but intimated that it was a matter of "give and take," meaning that the estate would give Mrs. Squires more than she was to receive under the will, but not as much as she demanded.

If Mrs. Squires was successful in her contest, she would receive between $60,000 and $75,000, but it is understood that she will be contented with a great deal less.

Attorney Meserve says the only basis for the contest being withdrawn was to enable the bills against the estate, which have been accumulating, to be paid. It is said that the laborers and other employees on the Fruitland ranch could not be paid, and that even Mrs. Gilmore, the mother, could not obtain a cent for living purposes.

Mr. Meserve denies that the case has been entirely dropped, and says that it may be resumed after the Baldwin will case is disposed of. He acknowledges, however, that there is a movement for a settlement outside of court which may take six weeks or two months to consummate.

The principals in the contest have maintained a discreet silence. They pretend great ignorance concerning any action. Mrs. Gilmore stated yesterday that she knew nothing concerning an attempted settlement or, in fact, anything about the case. She absolutely refused to discuss the matter, and intimated that it was nobody's business but their own.

Howard W. Squires, husband of the contesting daughter, stated last night at the New Maryton apartments that there was a settlement pending. He said that there was nothing to prohibit the contest being renewed in court, but that he thought everything would be amicably settled in the very near future, and his wife secure the portion of the $200,000 estate which she desired.

He denied the statement that $40,000 had been advanced or loaned him by Mr. Gilmore prior to his death, and that it had been lost in a mining venture. He said that any further information would have to come from his wife's attorney.

Why Work?

SMART FELLOW; SMART SCHEME.

TAKES WIDOW'S MONEY BY SIMPLE LITTLE DEVICE.

He Wills Her All of His Property Because He Loves Her and in Gratitude She Hands Him Her Cash When He Departs—Seeks His Arrest.

Declaring that she had been swindled out of $175 by a man who asserted he loved her so much that he was going to make her sole beneficiary in his will even if she wouldn't marry him, a woman who gave the name of Mrs. D. E. Price, living at No. 1033 West Eighth street, called at the office of the District Attorney yesterday morning and asked that a warrant be issued, charging her lover with obtaining money under false pretenses.

Deputy Dist.-Atty. Hill said that a complaint could not be issued, as it was not shown the man had induced her to give him the money. Mrs. Price left the office declaring her intention to communicate with an Arkansas woman, who had also met the amiable and loving man in question and had lost $4500 thereby.

The accused man is said to be Harry W. Young. Mrs. Price, a widow, admitted she doesn't know where Young is.

"I thought him a very nice man, but I didn't want to get married," she said. "He persisted, and finally I told him marrying him was entirely out of the question. He said he loved me just the same, and to prove it he would write his will in my favor. I let him do so, and he dated it January 1, 1911. He gave me his will, the proceeds of a $10,000 life insurance policy in one company and a $3000 policy in a fraternal organization. Then he said he had an interest in three city lots in an Arizona city and he gave those to me—in his will—and also five acres of real estate he said he owned in Helena, Mont.

"I had some money in the bank, so I drew out $175 and just gave it to him and he went away sad because I would not marry him.

"I tried to learn later where he had gone, but all I heard was that he had married a woman in Arkansas and

$3.50 Recipe Cures Weak Kidneys, Free

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining Swelling, Etc.

STOPS PAIN IN THE BLADDER, KIDNEYS AND BACK.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K552 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

Hard Fight.

WHITTIER TEAM TAKES TUMBLE.

PURITAN BASKET SHOOTERS AT LAST DOWN QUAKERS.

Boyden Hall, of U.S.C., Plays Star Game, Scoring Practically All of the Points Made by His Team. Home Quintette Is Beaten on Own Court for First Time.

The U.S.C. basketball team smashed all previous records and practically cinched the college basketball championship Friday night when it defeated the Whittier College five on its own court by the score of 23 to 19.

The game was one of the fastest and hardest fought contests that has been played in the South. Both teams had a great deal at stake and the university won by superior team work. Never before in the history of the basket game at the Quaker college has its team been defeated on the home court and only rarely has it suffered defeat at all.

A large crowd of both college and town enthusiasts filled the hall and the noise was almost deafening from start to finish. In vain the Quaker rooters implored the team to get down to work and keep the home record clean. The 'varsity was poorly supported so far as numbers were concerned, but the half dozen Methodist shouters who accompanied the quintette were almost a match for their opponents, so far as noise was concerned. The Whittier High School boys, who have very little love for the college so far as athletics are concerned, came to the rescue of the handful of visiting rooters.

Whittier started the game with a rush and had scored two baskets before the 'varsity seemed to get its feet. The Los Angeles boys soon began to pick up, however, and before ten minutes had elapsed, were playing circles around the "champs." Whittier proved much more acurate at goal shooting and was able to score nearly every try at the basket, so that the end of the first half found them in the lead, 14-8.

The famous girls' rooting squad had yelled itself hoarse, and the players seemed very much surprised that the 'varsity could have held them so closely. Several times they became so confused that a Whittier man would attempt to guard a player on his own side. They tried many long shots both in team work and at the basket, but were wild on most of these. To permit one of the Quaker sharp shooters to get within reasonable distance of the basket was almost sure to result in two points against the 'varsity.

The Wesley aggregation has always had a record for playing its best game in the last half, and the players went into the game in the second period with a "do or die" look. They had lost out the first half, after playing all-around their opponents, principally because of poor basket throwing and were determined to redeem themselves, in this feature of the game at least.

Within the first half minute of play the second half the Quakers scored a basket and every one conceded them the game. This goal seemed to arouse their opponents, however, and from that time on the Quaker team did not have a chance to win. Quickly the 'varsity ran up a score that tied the tally and at the closing period of the game they were having the ball in their territory nearly all of the time.

HALL IS BRILLIANT.

Boyden Hall, playing forward for the U.S.C. aggregation, was the star of the game. He made twenty-one of the twenty-three points for his team, scoring four field baskets and the remainder on fouls. Mills played the most consistent game for White's quintette, but was unable to get away from the fast U.S.C. guards, and the last half of the game made but one point for his team. Referee Torrey called the Whittier team several times for rough playing, and the winning score was largely due to the number of fouls called on them. Boyden Hall converted twelve of these fouls out of the twenty-three that were called.

The Whittier team has established a reputation for rough playing and the fight which it put into its style of game has been largely responsible for its long perfect record. The team was clearly outpointed in this contest, however, and the Quakers may congratulate themselves that their defeat was not more decisive than it was.

Both teams went into the game without their captains. Goodsell, of the university, has been taken out for the season on account of a bad knee. Sharpless, the Whittier captain, has been temporarily suspended from athletics on account of poor scholarship. It is likely that he will be playing before the end of the season.

It has always been conceded that any team defeating Whittier College on its own court would have no trouble in winning the Southern California championship and the university is rejoicing with as much enthusiasm as if it had the pennant cinched.

The line-up:

SPRING HAS SUCCEEDED WINTER

In a Breath, 1910 Garments Have Given Place to 1911 Spring Style Conceptions

The transformation is complete. Last week beheld our floors filled with winter styles. Now they are cleared for the city's first and greatest exhibit of new spring goods. It is a marked triumph in merchandising to be able to devote our efforts from January 1st almost entirely to supplying your Spring needs.

It is a feat that few stores in the entire country and that no other stores in the whole great West have succeeded in accomplishing. To transform an entire establishment from a headquarters for values in midwinter garments into a Spring style display is impossible to most concerns. But the New York Store's whole plan of merchandising consists of offering what is most advanced in style, of offering it first, of offering it at the lowest price.

And while we should have liked to allow winter suits and hats to occupy the most of our floor space for a few weeks longer, and to sell them for either cost or a little above cost, our system would not permit it.

"New styles before anybody else," was our watchword, and accordingly winter suits, gowns and hats were sold with no reference to their cost all last week and the week before. Our one object was to make room for these incoming designs. We lost money, lots of it, in order to obtain that room.

And certainly if styles for Spring are so radically different from those of 1910 that we can afford to lose heavily in order to be the first to show them, those same styles are worth an immediate investigation on your part.

And the New York Store is the ONLY establishment that is showing them.

And the New York Store is the ONLY establishment that is showing them.

Our Spring Suits at $25

have always been universally recognized as tremendous values. There is no particular class of garments on which we put as much thought, as much study, as on those which go upon our $25 racks. Styles of inferior merit you'll find quoted elsewhere at $28, $30 and $32.50.

It has long been our policy to feature this $25 line. Each succeeding season has seen greater values at that figure than the last one brought forth. And now we await your coming with our minds receptive for your exclamations of approval when you note the lines, the fabrics, the finish of these late arrivals.

We may add that never in our experience has the buying of Spring Suits been as heavy at this season, as we find it now.

Surely it were unwise to pay $25 for the midwinter styles which are being offered in many places when our stock at the same price gives you your choice of the best that the country's first designers have been able to conceive for Spring.

Here Are Strictly Man-Tailored Garments that yet own deft touches of color, an unexpected turn to a line here, or an uncommon degree of elegance in the trimmings used that immediately stamps them as having been designed by artists.

And they who conceived them were fully aware of the charm in a costume, of that which is beyond the ordinary.

So, while adhering rigidly to the general lines which New York, London, Vienna and other great style centers have decreed; they allowed their widely recognized good taste and their fertile brains full play in giving to every suit an amount of individuality that is ordinarily reserved for suits that sell for $50, $60 and more.

New Weaves Are Numerous

And among the most noteworthy we may mention the chain weave. This is a diagonal, extremely rough in appearance, yet devoid of any tendency to "pick up."

It is a durable, practical fabric, well adapted for hard usage, and decidedly out of the ordinary. Basket weaves seem to be still close to the crest of the wave of popularity and diagonal or plain French and English serges are shown in as many suits as usual. These in the cream.

In blues and blacks the same variety of fabrics awaits you here, and there are dozens of other shades, in each of which we have ready an absolutely complete line of new styles. Perhaps you'd find particularly interesting the stone grays, or the leather tans.

And certainly such smart black and white stripes and mixtures as these of ours are sure to be appealing. Also, you will be forced to admit the attractiveness of the just-created tapestry revers which beautify so many of the lighter toned suits.

These New Style Features
Are Particularly Worth Noting

The box coats, made extremely full in the suits for misses; slightly modified in women's sizes; man-tailored sleeves and shoulders.

And in the skirts two radical style innovations should receive your attention. The first is the apron skirt characterizing many of the suits. It gains its name from the simple, apron-like front, finished at the edge with one or two tucks. The second is the incorporation of two side clusters of kilts, giving greater freedom of movement in the narrow designs without sacrifice of the long, close-fitting, clean lines.

Advance Styles in Dainty Dresses

A world of the handsome new designs for which, literally, hundreds of California women have been waiting. Inexpensive adaptations of the later models conceived originally in the brains of the most fashionable women in New York society.

They have been put into execution by New York's first makers of smart costumes and they have surprised even the salespeople here in the store with their splendid variety, their lack of duplication, their richness of coloring, their excellence of material and their originality of trimming.

Empire and Princess Effects will be popular this season, as will also the lovely semi-princess models. And here are all of these newer designs in lingerie of sheerest quality, in soft-folding marquisettes, in dozens of other beautiful fabrics.

Trimmed with Bulgarian embroidery or with Antique lace, many of them; and many are simple almost to the point of severity, but possessing Lines with a capital "L." The skirts are narrow and are shorter than those of 1910, even the most elaborate afternoon frocks hanging quite clear of the floor.

And the Prices, $17.50, $23.50, $29.50 and $35.00; with a Full Assortment in Every Division lies very largely in the extreme beauty of the straws that have been employed in their making and in their perfect grace of line. The leaders of fashion have been unanimous in their demand for simplicity, particularly in the hats for early Spring wear, when weather conditions are not always propitious. And hence these supremely attractive weaves.

The Charm of These New Spring Hats

Hemp is much in vogue. It is not too expensive, it is durable to a degree, flexible, and it lends itself readily to the fancy weaving so essential to early 1911 styles. We show the best products in Tagal Hemp and in Hemp braids that the Eastern market affords.

Yedda straws among the extremely rough straws, lead easily, and the Pyroxaline braids bear the palm of popularity among the less flexible weaves. The conventional chip straws will be much worn, of course.

Rolio Brims

are a last minute adaptation to straw hats of the effect obtained in the smart little close-fitting sweater hoods of which you have seen so many this winter. And certainly there could have been evolved no prettier style for any woman who appreciates the charm of the snug-sitting hood. We have this Rolio-brim effect in all straws, with a particularly strong line in the black and white weaves. This same strongly contrasting color combination, by the way, is shown in larger shapes with colored facings. They are smart—extremely so.

Our Price Range on Trimmed Hats for Spring, Starts at $6.75

And complete lines of the very latest designs will be found at that price, at $7.50, at $10 and, of course, at higher prices.

LAYING PLANS FOR UNIVERSITY.

COMMITTEE AT WORK ON FAR-REACHING IDEA.

Will Urge Upon State Legislature the Importance of Providing the Great Southwest With Adequate Educational Advantages at Los Angeles.

Plans for securing a State university in Los Angeles are maturing rapidly and the matter will be brought before the State Legislature within a few weeks. The Finance and Publicity Committees held a meeting yesterday afternoon and took definite steps toward an energetic campaign for bringing a big school here.

The university movement has been working quietly so far, but the completion of its organization and the opening of offices at 209 International Bank Building have launched it as one of the big public enterprises of the city. With H. E. Huntington as chairman of the University Committee and Mark Keppel in active charge it has all the influential backing that could be desired.

One of the first objects of the committee will be to educate the public not only of Los Angeles but of the entire State of California, to regard the movement not as one of rivalry or aggrandisement, but of normal and logical progress. There is no desire to take anything from Berkeley or Stanford, but on the contrary a wish to strengthen the educational facilities of the Pacific Coast.

It is pointed out that there is not another part of the United States where so large a population as this of the Southwest is without a big university. A real university here would be supported by a territory with a radius of 1000 miles in every direction except north along the Coast. The people of Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico and Old Mexico are looking to Los Angeles as their business metropolis and their summer resort. It is believed they will demand that it became their educational center.

Los Angeles undoubtedly will demand a larger percentage of higher educational advantages to its population than almost any other city, because of its prosperity and culture. At the present time, according to William H. Knight, chairman of the Publicity Committee, it really offers less of these advantages than other cities.

Two schools in or near Los Angeles have ambitious plans. They are Occidental College and Throop Polytechnic Institute. The members of the University Committee will urge upon the State Legislature that if a big State educational institution of general character can be added, Los Angeles will be preparing to meet her future obligations along these lines as well as she is doing in regard to a water supply, a harbor and other commercial facilities.

BURDETTE AT THE BAT.

LI.

Saint Jackson, Jan. 15.

Dawns on the world next Sunday, the great big world, which is bounded on the north by the Dominion of Canada, save for one place where Alaska sticks through, on the east by the Atlantic Ocean, on the south by the Gulf of Mexico and the republic of Mexico, with an appendix called the Panama Canal, and on the west by the Pacific Ocean and the empire of Japan—dawns on the world, including the Democratic party, St. Jackson's day. Special mention is made of the Democratic party, because it is not always included in the affairs of the world, although recently it did manage to be listed "among those present," having come in on another fellow's invitation. There is no circus tent, however watched and tended, but some unguarded flap is there, where now and then some guest all unbefriended, attains safe entrance to the three-ringed fair.

Hence the unwonted spectacle, strange to human eyes, of the Democratic party sitting in the fauteuils of state, gaunt, hungry, eager, unaccustomed, rude in manner and speech, having on no wedding garment, and wearing underneath a flapping vest, capacious and empty as a mainsail in a calm, a chasm instead of a stomach, where erstwhile rested upon the edge of the Senatorial and the Congressional desk the balloon-like pod of the real statesman.

It has been—in some places it still remains, a time honored custom to observe the day which the present majority celebrates, with assemblies at the banquet board, half a dollar a bot—that is, plate, with after-dinner (pronounced post prandial) oratory, florid optimistic reminiscences of the glorious old times, the brave days of old, when to be a Democrat was greater than a king full, and pallid with pessimistic prophecies of the future, unless things should speedily change.

Temporarily they have changed, and that right speedily. There is yet a sort of feeling of dizziness in the air, following the trail of the road roller.

In an evil day of unwonted affluence, in those decadent days when Democratic statesmen, weakly yielding to the demoralizing influences of wealth and luxury which afflicted the world, (bounded as aforesaid) began to affect white vests, and with one noble exception, and he a Kansan in whom there was hardly any guile, became addicted to the wearing of half-hose (pronounced socks,) a Democratic statesman and near-president, a peerless and perennial candidate, sat down at a banquet with his near-peers at which Lucullan Saturnalia the cost was one—count them—one dollar per.

The price was paid, but the discipleship of Jacksonian ruggedness and Jeffersonian simplicity went on the reef with a crash that was heard half way across the land of Nebraska. And immediately afterward, the party of Jefferson and Jackson resumed its old-time Nebuchadnezzaring on a wire-grass range.

But it didn't die. It didn't grow fat, but corpulence is ever a sign of ill health. It grew gaunt as a greyhound, without developing the greyhound's speed. But it did develop the staying qualities of the wolf. It's hard to keep a party down that is down all the time. For if ever you move it to any action whatever, it must get up.

Unless it merely rolls over. Which sometimes it does. But even that is a symptom which indicates an intention of a desire to get up. And at any rate, it is evidence of life and hope, and ambition.

There will always be a Democratic party, so long as there are any common people in the world, as hereinbefore described by metes and bounds, so long as there is any other party, under any other name whatever, with what ever principles, there will be a Democratic party under the same old name, with the other kind of principles, and the same old hunger. Now and again it will get into office, and turn right round, and come right out again. Because when it gets into power, straightway it ceases to be Democratic, fills up the oceanic capacity of its vest, grows bald on the inside of its head, and is remanded by an indignant [illegible] cactus pasture, un-Burbanked, and to the uninviting but nutritious thistle range.

Being thus humbled, it rebuilds its broken altars to the name and memory of St. Jackson, who was so strenuous he couldn't spell it, long before the great Apostle of the Strenuous was born. It resumes its low living and high thinking. The plain food, the light stomach and the perfect digestion clarifies the over-gorged brain. It fasts all the time for a long time, and prays some of the time a part of the time. Then when the day comes around that its enemies enter against it in the race a candidate that has been training on sugar, tobacco, beef, timber and oil, the superiority of wire grass, bermuda and plantain as endurance foods is at once apparent.

Today, we all unite in honoring the memory of the patron saint of Democracy, the seventh President of the United States, Andrew Jackson the Only. American born, he was of the stock that makes splendid Americans—that mighty human amalgam of Scotch-Irish—his parents being of Carrickfergus. The gods rock the cradle of a baby born under such stars.

A man who can say 'Carrickfergus" with the maximum number of "r's," rightly placed and properly "burred," has already won the toss for the corner, he has got the pole, he has sent the other side to bat. Or words and phrases to that effect.

St. Jackson was so poor God couldn't help loving him. He was so ignorant that to the day of his death he never knew just where he was born in North or South Carolina, though it is generally believed to have been in Union county, North Carolina. But no man ever called him "Tar-heel" without immediately regretting it, and that before he had time to apologize. His bitter fight with poverty gave him time for only the meagerest schooling—almost no schooling. Taken prisoner when a soldier in the American army in 1781, he was treated with such cruelty that all his life he hated an Englishman and everything English with more bitterness than a dozen ordinary men could feel.

Also, his Celtic blood helped some.

When a young man, amid his rough surroundings and rude influences, he gambled, played cards, raced horses, and early learned to swear with a rapid fire fluency and dynamitic fury that set "our army in Flanders" back into the kindergarden class of "doar me," and "oh my" expletives. In his three races for the Presidency he defeated two great men—John Quincy Adams and the idolized Henry Clay. In his first race, he won out at the primaries, then called the general election, when he ran against John Quincy Adams, W. H. Crawford—who was W. H. Crawford, by the way? and Henry Clay, receiving a plurality of the popular vote, but not a majority. The election was thus thrown into the House of Representatives, which chose Adams, one of the minority candidates—a condition of affairs in which history has at later times threatened to repeat itself. As a soldier he won two decisive and important victories without the knowledge of interference of the War Department. Because the Spanish commandant at Pensacola had befriended the British, Gen. Jackson promptly and roughly seized Pensacola, reporting the matter to the department afterward. And he fought the battle of New Orleans after the nations had signed a treaty of peace. In time of war, one soldier like Jackson is worth a great many boards of strategy and civilian secretaries.

St. Jackson's faults were virile, as the faults of such a man must be. They were of his day. And they died with him. His virtues were a hundredfold greater than his faults. And they endure. And for them, and for those of his faults which came so near to being virtues under the circumstances which created them, he has been canonized by his party. And while we were not all of us invited by the metropolitans to be present at the ceremonies of beatification, yet we bear the Democratic consistory no ill will, and gladly burn this little Republican incense before the shrine of the very great and tolerably good Saint Jackson, the Democrat.

COSTS LITTLE TO KILL.

Captain Shows Receipts for Two Pounds Levied by Natives of the Carolinas for Shooting Mutineer.

Capt. Bob Wilson, who is passing a few days in oLs Angeles, before returning to his mining properties at Searchlight, was showing to friends yesterday a receipt for £2, which was the price levied upon him for shooting a mutineering sailor on a vessel in his command.

Capt. Wilson was in charge of a British liner and the man he killed was a member of his crew picked up from the Carolina Islands, in the South Seas. There is a rule among the natives of the Carolinas that if one of them kills another, the dead man's relatives may kill the survivor to the quarrel or one of his relatives or the survivor may pay the dead man's kinsman two pounds sterling.

When Capt. Wilson's ship arrived in port at the Islands, the British Consul came aboard and told him that while he hated to approach him about a personal matter and regretted to bother him over trivial details, some of the natives seemed to object to his having killed one of their number and, as the representative of the country to which Capt. Wilson belonged, he was obliged to go through the formality of asking him either to be shot or to pay $10.

After deliberating the time allotted him for a decision, Capt. Wilson decided to pay the $10, but insisted on having a receipt.

"You laugh at this," said Capt. Wilson, "but are conditions so vastly different among the natives here? It has not been a month since an Indian medicineman belonging to the Piutes rode his cow pony into Las Vegas, told all of his pale-faced friends good-bye, and bought enough beef for a farewell supper to his tribesmen. He had been elected to die by the men of his tribe and had been given forty-eight hours notice of his fate. He had failed to make it rain or to cure some sick Indian and, as a medicineman who was no longer of service, the only thing to do with him, according to the Indians' way of thinking, was to invite him to die.

The next morning after his farewell dinner party, he was found in the brush with a bullet in his heart The officers of Las Vegas are still endeavoring to find the braves who executed the strange sentence.

This Prescription Knocks Rheumatism

The only logical treatment for rheumatism is through the blood. A prescription, which has recently proved wonderfully effective in hospital work is the following. Any druggist has the ingredients or will quickly get them for you. Any one can mix them. "One ounce compound syrup of sarsaparilla; one ounce Toris compound; half pint first-class whiskey." These to be mixed and used in tablespoon doses before each meal and at bedtime. This cured thousands here last winter. It relieves immediately.

Prescription for Indigestion That Has Done Wonders in Hospital Work.

This is the formula that has created a furore in the medical profession on account of its remarkable effectiveness in the treatment of stomach troubles. It acts differently from anything else ever tried for this wide-spread ailment, almost immediately relieving distress after eating, sour stomach, belching, dizziness and headaches. If used for sufficient time it will cure the worst case of dyspepsia: "Two ounces essence of Pepsin; three ounces syrup of Ginger; one ounce Catandir compound. Mix and take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bed-time." Catandir always comes put up in ounce sealed packages. Any druggist should have it in stock by this time or he will quickly get it from his wholesale house. For best results mix the Pepsin and the Ginger, then let stand about an hour before adding the Catandir. It will be more convenient to get the ingredients from the druggist and mix them at home. Any one with stomach trouble should get this without delay.

DRUMMOND BOY WINS ANOTHER.

REPORTED TO HAVE RUN OFF WITH STENOGRAPHER.

Married December 8 Last, While Yet Legally Bound to Previous Wife, Son of Tobacco King Gets Name Connected With Runaway St. Louis Brunette.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The disappearance of Miss Agnes McClanahan from her boarding-house at No. 4057 Shenandoah avenue, caused her father, John McClanahan, to start from his home in Eureka Springs, Ark., for St. Louis Friday to investigate a report that she had been the recipient of attentions from Charles R. Drummond, son of the millionaire tobacco man.

Drummond, who was paroled at Clayton last Tuesday, after pleading guilty to a charge of bigamy in his midnight marriage to Miss Charlotte Vincent, has been attentive to Miss McClanahan for six months.

Drummond has been twice legally married and once divorced, and his third marriage, to Miss Vincent, took place the night of December 8, last, while he was still legally married to his second wife. He has pleaded that his second and third marriages took place while he was under some strange psychic influence.

WOOED WITH DIAMONDS.

Miss McClanahan is 22 years old, a brunette, and a stenographer for Louis Kastor, president of the H. W. Kastor & Sons Advertising Co. She had lived at the home of Mrs. M. Elliott, No. 4507A Shenandoah avenue, since her parents moved to Eureka Springs, Ark., early in 1910. Her father is freight auditor for the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad.

Drummond wooed Miss McClanahan as he wooed other girls, with diamonds. The largest of these he gave her was set in a ring and was worth several hundred dollars.

The acquaintance of the rich young man and the stenographer began about six months ago. At that time Drummond was, as he still is, the husband of the former Miss Charlotte Bente, daughter of a Lutheran minister. They had parted a few days after their marriage, which was January 25, last.

LANDLADY'S STORY.

Mrs. M. Elliott, Miss McClanahan's landlady, said last Friday afternoon that she had not seen the young woman since Thursday afternoon. Friends of the young woman wired to her father in Arkansas, telling him that she was believed to have left town with Drummond.

"He called on Agnes almost every evening," said Mrs. Elliott, "and soon he was trying to persuade her to elope with him. He admitted that he was legally bound to his second wife, but he said he was going to get a divorce from her and he urged Agnes not to keep him waiting on that account. He told her he would take her away and would marry her as soon as the divorce was secured.

"She refused repeatedly, but he kept after her and made her presents, besides making her all sorts of offers as to what he would do for her if she would go away with him."

It is reported here that Drummond and the girl are on their way to Pasadena, Cal., where Drummond's brother, Harrison I. Drummond, now lives.

TURNED DOWN AT THE EDDY TOMB.

GUARD REFUSES ADMISSION OF "PILGRIMS" PARTY.

Attempt of Boston Society to Visit Resting Place of Christian Science Leader's Body Following Commemorative Exercises at Charles Sumner's Grave.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Pilgrims, as they called themselves, visited the receiving tomb of Mrs. Baker G. Eddy in Rose Bay, Mount Auburn Cemetery, yesterday, and held converse with one of the guards inside the tomb, though they neither saw him nor the interior of the vault in which Mrs. Eddy's body lies.

The pilgrims, self-styled, who earlier had held commemorative exercises at the gravestone of Charles Sumner, in the cemetery, in recognition of the hundredth anniversary of his birth, went to Mrs. Eddy's tomb and the leaders knocked at the grated door.

Although there was a light shining through the transom, there was no response to the first knocking. Another knock and a sepulchral voice asked, "Who's there?"

One of the party said: "We are pilgrims; we have paid a visit to Charles Sumner's grave, and now have come to pay our respects to Mrs. Eddy. Is she there?"

"Her body is here," came back the answer.

"May we see her resting place?" said the spokesman for the visiting party.

"No," said the voice. "We cannot let you in, and we cannot open the door."

St. Louis's Picturesque State Senator Cites Election Board in Fight For Congressional Seat.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Thomas E. Kinney, St. Louis's picturesque Democratic boss and State Senator, known as "Snake," formally notified the State Election Board yesterday that January 13 it must produce the poll books, ballots and tally sheets of the Twelfth Missouri Congress District for inspection in his contest for the seat in Congress from that district, to which L. C. Dyer, former assistant Federal Attorney, was elected on the face of the returns.

Congress once refused a seat from the district to James Butler, theater owner and son of Ed Butler, St. Louis's notorious Democratic boss. The recount will not affect the vote on State-wide prohibition here, as separate ballots were cast on that question. The district comprises both the slums and Collection of Noted Pictures Go at New York Auction—Corot Landscape Brings Top Price.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mendelssohn Hall was only about three-fourths filled last evening for the first important picture auction of 1911, that of the collection of the late John H. Converse, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works of Philadelphia. The auction closed with a total receipts of $128,110 without ever a wait for a bid.

The top price was not a sensational one, $20,000 for the large Corot "Landscape by the Sea," which is not one of the painter's lyrics, but is an unusually comprehensive landscape for a Corot. It fell to R. H. Ritter of Philadelphia, who took, altogether, fourteen of Mr. Converse's canvases.

Defregger's "Arrival at the Ball," which at the first George Iseney sale fetched $10,000, fell at $6900 to W. L. Austin. It had been subject of some cabling from Europe, as German collectors are now acquiring works of this

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ANN ARBOR (Mich.) Jan. 6.—The marriage of Lulu Leismer, the Ann Arbor girl, who almost went to her death in a fall down an adanboned mining shaft in Ishpeming last May, was solemnized this morning to the man who was with her at the time of her sensational fall and who rescued her at the risk of his own life, Mr. Edwin Ellis White, who is the geologist of the Cleveland Cliffs Mining Company of Ishpeming.

The accident which befell Miss Leismer has always been shrouded in mystery. All that is known of it, is that she and Mr. White had taken the walk to discuss their relations, which were at that time strained. An hour afterward she was found 125 feet below, on the ragged rocks, almost every bone broken and her ankle bones spired by What Students Regard as Pernicious Ex-ple of American Colleges, Wilhelm Has Started to ake Boys Sober, Clean and Less Quarrelsome than Old, While He Is Against Breaking Windows.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

One of the Virtuous Princes.

August Wilhelm, the Kaiser's fourth son, who is boycotted by his fellow-students at Bonn, because he won't get drunk and break windows.

LIN, Dec. 27.—Kaiser Wilhelm s bent his back to the Herculean k of making the Fatherland's ts respectable. Kaiser Wil-s much angered by this in-nd spoke to the father of one ho is a palace official, asking ly why he had not taught his manners. The Radical news-anded that the students t to jail. But the time for that.

rtly after this occurrence Kaiser opened the anti-beer nd at the same time set to make his student sub-ctable all round. So far he small success. One reason is German student regards ility as a fraudulent Yankee [illegible] wooden nutmeg. Kaiser Wilhelm took his cue from America. Until late in life, he never quarreled with the innately abandoned character of the college "Bursch." He regarded the beer, the duels, the unsoaped faces, and the unsqueamish love-making as necessary parts of every gentlemen's training.

Then suddenly dawned the fatal day of German interest in American colleges. The Roosevelt Exchange-Professors began to tell unseemly, incredible yarns about the respectability of American students. The interested Kaiser asked numberless questions. The professors replied with legends about the saintly lives of young Americans with high inspirations and wrinkled brows who had not a drop of beer or duel-blood in their veins. Kaiser Wilhelm awoke to the fact that universities are not brewery annexes and have no inherent antagonism to razors and soap. From this inspiration—and backed by his pious consort Augusta—he conceived the play to reform the fatherland's twenty-one universities on American lines. That means, says the student, to rob them of their romance, picturesqueness, and hilarity. The luckless "Bursch" of the future is to be neatly clad, with clean finger nails, with patchless breeches, with a passion for sports, and an unshakeable affection for exiguous lemonade. And, of course, the predestined victim blenches at the prospect, and feels as frightened as his natural allies, the brewers of frothy Munich and amber Patzenhofer beer.

YOUNG OSCAR.

Next to America, it is the Kaiserin who is in the plot, and next to the Kaiserin it is her fifth son, Oscar. The Kaiserin does not accept the dictim of Emanuel Kant that "each sex should discipline its own," and she is horrified, so people say, at the vicious, window-breaking days of the lads of Heidelberg and Bonn. And Oscar also disapproves. Oscar is a son who would warm any mother's heart. Himself at Bonn, and a member of the tipsy Borussians, he resolutely set his pious face against excessive drink. He attended, they say, a "Kommers" of comrade corps men, and drank only half a litre of beer. A certain von Keim resented this uncomradelike abstinence by getting unusually drunk, and standing on his head, whereupon decent Oscar left the entertainment. In order to set a better example he formed a group of students of quite depraved respectability and treated them to temperance beverages. From this arose an ignoble organisation directed against all the traditional disreputabilities of student life—against beer, indiscriminate love-making, dirty faces, and the kindly, indispensable pawnshop. Bonn was wroth. Already it suspected Oscar because he was a royal prince and owned a razor; and now it showed its derision by singing an irreverent song with the refrain, "Oscar mein, Sohnlein, kein mehr bier!" Ostracised thus by all indecent society, Oscar went from bad to worse. When representing fellow students at an academic function, he counselled them "to fear God and lead soberer lives." The Borussians followed the advice by holding an uproarious "Kommers," slitting open one another's cheeks, and breaking half the windows in the town.

And the State Attorney when he prosecuted them took the cue from the Kaiser, and said: "Only in Germany do we witness such scandals. In America students are quite as lively and animated as ours, but they show their corps' pride in sport, and not in breaking the windows of maiden ladies." This remark only confirmed that America is responsible for the base attempt to make them sober. And this is a bad thing for America. For, perhaps when the reformed Borussian grows up, and becomes Imperial Chancellor, he will remember that it was the priggish Yankees who robbed him of his beery birthright; and he will seek a terrible vengeance at the cost of America.

Chinese Rivals in World's Trade.

In India, in China, and in Japan, we have been the guests who have enjoyed their hospitality, only to rise in the morning and say to our hosts: "You must not sit at the table with us." Believe me, this condition cannot endure. Politically we are in grave danger. Commercially, with their industry and their frugality, they are fast outstripping us. They have ceased buying flour from the Minneapolis mills, because they are grinding Indian and Manchurian wheat with Chinese labor at Woosing. A line of ships is running from the Yellow River to Seattle, bringing 72,000 tons a year of pig iron manufactured at Hankow and delivered, freight and duty added, cheaper than we can produce it. In Cawnpore, India, with American machinery they are making shoes so cheaply that the manufacturers of Lynn can no longer compete with them. The buttons and silks which we one time sent to Asia are now made in Japan and China.—[Melville D. Stone, in Christian Herald.

Recipe That Breaks a Cold in a Day and Cures Any Curable Cough.

"Mix half ounce of Concentrated Pine compound and two ounces of glycerine with half a pint of good whiskey; shake well and use in doses of one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bed time." Smaller doses to children according to age. Any one can mix this. But be sure to get only the genuine (Globe) Concentrated Pine. Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If the druggist does not have it he will quickly get it. Many mixtures are of large quantity and cheaper, but it is risky to experiment. This formula comes from a reliable doctor and is certain.

DREYFOGLE BILL'S OPINION OF BURROS.

Was Beaten in the Matrimonial Race and Is a Single Man Today Because of Those Beasts.

BY DREYFOGLE BILL.

It wus back in the early boom days that I courted a gal up in Goldfield. She warnt so very young an' inexperienced, bein' more of what they call er grass widder, but, golly, she wus a good looker, an' alone in the world ter sum extent, so when we got purty well acquainted an' I figgered it wouldn't be too much of er shock ter her system, I sez ter her, "How would it strike ye ter git married," says I, fer I was awfully in love with the gal. She kinder hesitated, an' I thot that I wus a goner, till finally she looked up, sorter timid, and sez, sez she, "Bill, I'd like ter git married, 'speshully ter you, but I ain't got any close." "I hadn't noticed that," sez I, "but here's a twenty," an I handed it ter her an' she took it kinder hesitatin' an' bashful, an' then she spoke more sweet and softly like, an' sed:

"Bill, the way prices is an' havin ter pay frate, I couldn't git no suitable weddin' outfit fer less'n five hundred dollars, an' it wouldn't be doin' proper onors ter you fer me ter appear in nothin' cheap. I want ter be married in pure white," she sez, "with er little dash uv color, for I ain't no mere young thing, an' pure white is only appropriate fer a first marriage."

Well, as luk would hav it, I had er wad uv koin, I had left fer safe keepin' with a bartender in one uv the leadin' saloons in Goldfield, an' knowin' it wus a matter uv onor, I sez ter my intended, "Tilly," sez I, "yer kin hav it, but when is ter be the happy okashun?"

When I give her the $500 she thanked me awfully, an' I giv her hand a hard squeeze, an' she sed: "Bill, yer the best feller in the world, an' I'm a goin' ter begin ter commence ter git ready fur the weddin', but on account uv my health I think we'd orter wait two years. But I won't place any restrikshuns upon yer, meanwhile, if yer'l jist pervide fer myself, an' widdered mother an' sister, an' five children."

Ter all uv this I agreed, 'ceptin' as ter the date fer the weddin'. "Two years," I sez, "is er long time when it kums ter watin' fer the objec ov yer effekshuns, an' supposin' I should di," sez I.

"Well, it would be an awful blo," sez she, "but I'd be resined ter it somehow, if it wus ter happen. Life is oncertin, as ther poet sez, an' if yer think there's any danger, yer'd better take out inshoorance, payable ter yer intended, an' pervide me with er will an' a power uv attorney ter settle an' see ter yer property. A man single an' onmarried is karless erbout money, an' it takes a woman ter manage, an' what wud bekum uv me if you wus ded," sez she, kind us solemn.

Well, we argued er good deal, havin' our first love quarrel, as I finally figgered it. But ther upshot was that I got my life inshoored, after bein' nearly talked ter death by ther inshoorance agents, an' they showed me how that after payin' my doos reglar fer twenty years er sich, I could git part of the money back without havin' ter die fer it, which didn't cut no figger in my case, fer whether I wus ded or aliv it wus all ter be paid to Tilly.

Then I had my wil made good an' solid, payin' a lawyer $25 fer the same, so as ter hav it kerrect, with all property, consistin' of minin' stocks an' claims an' sich other valuables ter go ter Tilly, my intended, in kase I wus ter shuffle off this mortal koil.

Everything seemed ter be purty satisfaktry ter the gal now, 'cept the handlin' an' promoshun uv mi minin' interests, for the which it required a pile of diggin' and promoshun an' sich, ter fetch the money, an' there bein' no one else as understood how ter keep up assessmnts on thr minin' stock an' make ther lokashuns pan out by hard diggin', my gal sez ter me one day, "Bill," sez she, "if yer'd go out ter Death Valley an' make er strike on the 'Lost Loco,' er any uv them rich claims yer got out there, I'll marry yer on the 13th day uv August, at hi noon."

It wus durin' the Fourth uv July celebrashun that she sed this. The boys were all celebratin' more'n common, uv course, an' I set 'em up several times, breakin' the good news ter several that I wus ter be married, an' they all kongratulated an' drunk "how" ter me an' mi intended at seven dollars per treat.

An' I sed to one Tom Biggins from Arizony, "Tom," I sez, "hav yer got any burrers fer sail?" He sed "I hav, Bill, I've got seven left out'n a bunch, sum fellers imported from Arizony, an' appointed me agent. Yer kin hav ther whol bunch fer prices dirt cheep, rangin' frum erbout $30 to $60, sez he, an' bein' as I'm yer fren, I'll take half down an' yer note for the balance in sixty days at 10 per cent. interest."

Wel, I figgered considerable, tryin' ter find a bargin an' I looked at all kinds uv burrers til I could see packs uv ther kritters every nite when I tried ter sleep. Most as owned burrers wus opposed ter part from sich, without cash in advance, rangin' up ter onreasonable prices, as they figgered they had me cinched. But I'm kinder klose in kalkalashun when it kums ter tradin' in burrers or mules, an' besides, I wanted ter leav all my spare money amountin' ter $1000, with ther gal. She says ter me, "Bill, if yer don't leave that money with me I'll think yer afraid ter trust me, an'" she uster sing a little song.

"Kud yer look into my heard, dear.
Yer wud kno I am only thine."

So I giv the gal ther $1000 an' took the bargain of Tom Biggins on them burrers.

I bid good-by ter the gal an' set sail frum Goldfield with them seven burrers, an' ther time I had gittin' out ter Tule Hole in Deth Valley wus hel, which as them noospaper fellers saz, lack uv space forbids us ter relate. The point I'm gittin' at is what the dam burrers did ter me a-comin' back.

It wus hot ernuff to make a feller crazy if he warnt of nacherally sound intellec. I could smel mi close a-scorchin' in the heat an' it warnt long til ther seat uv my trousers tore out as bein' no more substantial than er noospaper, an' I had ter drink water that wus almos bilin' an' the rattlesnakes an' hydrofobus skunks had it in fer me like pisen, an' a tradin' rat took most all my grub, leavin' ornery pieces uv rock as payment, which was the best that ther pore cuss knowed, an' I didn't bother him.

Fer weeks before leavin' Goldfield them burrers had bin living on the pickturees an' krimos uv candidates that was runnin' fer [illegible] fellers sed wus next ter kanibalism, an' when one uv them burrers kum ter eat up ther dinamite it giv him wind kolic. But I got erlong somehow, a-diggin' and a pannin' til I struck ther pay streak an' filled my packs on a lokashun called ther "Golden Fleece," an' figgerin' that I'd be solid with ther gal, I set out at nite ter git back ter Goldfield in doo time fer ther weddin', and I went erlong singin' till all them durn kyotes barked in a reglar korus.

I wus havin' hel with them burrers rite erlong, ter say nothin' ov rattlesnakes til I kum rite ter wher ther road crosser ther salt marsh in Deth Valley, an' there wouldent a durn one uv ther burrers cross, the cusses bein' afraid of mirin' their feet.

I wus riding er big mouse-kullered burrer with er white belly, an' ears like ther steerin' paddles uv a airship. I tried coaxin' him ter cross ther mudd, an' holdin' him bi ther rope I walked erhead ter sho him it wouldent ire nobody, but durned if he'd kum an inch an' jist rared and jerked bak until I finally sed ter him: "Dam yer sole, sez I, I'll teech yer how ter dif-[illegible] an' I hawled off an' hit him with er two-by-six scantlin' er piece uv lumber that happened ter be lyin' handy.

Wel, it never fazed the cuss, so fur as makin' him amendable ter reason, but he broke an' run down ther road with all ther other burrers a tearin' ther packs an' scattering hi-grade clear back ter Tule Hole, an' me a-follerin' on foot an' callin' "Wo, ther, yer lop-eared ediots," an' using all the coaxin' an' cussin' that kums nacheral under sich circumstances.

I wus four days ketchin' them burrers an' gitten anuther load uv hi-grade, the which had erbout exosted ther pay streek, an' when I got back ter that salt marsh I hog tied an' drug every durn burrer akross it, gittin' ther big burrer erkross fust, an' usin' him as a sort uv donkey engin ter draw ther uthers.

I got inter ther Borax Smith Deth Valley Farm fore days late an' it wus in two days uv ther time set fer matrimony, an' I knowed that I wus in fer it at "Hell's Canyon," comin' on ter ther deserts.

Wel, when I got ter "Hel's Canyon" [illegible] lyin' down, an ther nite before ther thirteen I fot an' rasseled like er wild man, tryin' ter keep them burrers on ther feet, an' ther big burrer got me down an' fot an' landed on me like er prize fiter, till I beat hel outer him with bolders, an' by main strength an' superior intellec I got him onter ther desert. I had him sorter docile by this time, but travelin' in ther dark them other burrers had busted ther packs an' lost mite near all ther hi-grade an' when I got in ter Goldfield, worn almos ter a shadder, it war the nite uv ther 13 uv August, an' rushin' over ter whar my gal stayed I found that she wus gone.

The place where my gal had bin was all empty an' vacant like an' er note left on ther table, sed that not havin' kept mi sakred promis I wus onworthy uv ther luv an' confidene uv er lady, an' further that mi intended, after havin' waited in vain fer mi comin' had finally given her hand an' effekshuns ter Tom Skinner, better known as "Faro Tom," an' departed that nite on ther weddin' tower in Kaliforny.

Fashions.

With all the aviation fashions in millinery which have been seen for a year or more, the real aviation hat when it appears, is without "aviation bows" or "aviation plumes" or decoration of any sort. The true aviation hat, as imported from England, is of leather, fitted snugly to the head and with a useful looking strap of leather around the brim, heavy ear laps, which completely cover and protect the ears, and a sort of folding brim, which may be pulled down to fully shield the face and neck.

Heavy thread and metal laces are pretty features of the winter hats designed to wear with dressy clothes.

Nowadays woman is reveling in "matched sets." By that is meant a turban, scarf and muff made to match.

Ecruse levant is the name given to that fine grain leather of high finish that is so popular for purse and bags.

There is nothing prettier or smarter than white fox for collars of evening wraps, especially for young women.

Long coats of water moire silk are made in Paris very tight-fitting, enveloping the wearer from head to foot.

A cluster of roses at one side is a girlish finish for a bandeau for the hair, made simply of soft tapestry brocade.

Scarfs are draped on the shoulders loosely or allowed to fall in the back as far as the elbow, the ends going under the arms.

The long sealskin coat now made with bold open revers requires a stole and muff to make it quite practical for cold weather.

The little round cap of heavy worsted that originated last summer in France has taken great hold. It is ideal for motoring.

Quite the latest toque is of pure white feathers, trimmed with a single small white bird or a cluster of white Marabout feathers.

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

[The Times freely publishes the views of correspondents without holding itself responsible for writers' opinions. Be brief, write plainly, state clearly. The space of 250 words, on the average, is sufficient for the point. Well-written letters are liable to be declined merely on account of their length.]

Plant Trees.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 7.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Southern California has an excellent climate, but unlike the Middle West and eastern States it has very little natural vegitation except a few live oaks or maybe sycamores that grow at the bottoms of arroyos, getting their water from sunken rivers or deep under-ground lakes.

The rainfall in Southern California is sufficient to supply moisture to an unlimited number of trees in the winter of rainy season, but the long drought of the summer and autumn would kill anything, but, possibly, the pepper or eucalyptus trees.

It has been proven by science that heavy vegetation draws rainfall, and if Southern California had as many trees to an equal area as the eastern part of our country, there is no doubt but what the rainfall here would be uniform the year round. A condition that would make the climate of the Southern Pacific Slope absolutely perfect and eliminate the expense and labor of irrigation. Therefore, the only way to enjoy this desired condition is to interest the Southern Californians, individually, in planting as much of their real estate as possible to large vegetation, such as maple, oak, poplar, and many other hardy eastern trees.

The time consumed in bringing about this condition may be of great length, but the result would be invaluable to the future generation.

AZUSA.

AZUSA, Jan. 7.—Concerning the distribution of prizes for out-of-town floats in the Pasadena floral parade the Azusa Chamber of Commerce has issued the following statement:

"From the several statements published under dates of January 4 and 5, there seems to have been a false impression spread abroad regarding the winner of the $150 cup in class A for the best float of all civic bodies outside of Pasadena and, feeling that the city of Azusa has not been given due credit, the directors of the Chamber of Commerce by a unanimous vote ask you to kindly give the public the true facts regarding same, viz:

The judges of the Tournament of Roses awarded Azusa the first prize of a $150 cup and a blue banner for the best float of civic bodies other than Pasadena, the red banner as second prize was awarded to Alhambra and the yellow banner as third prize to Covina.

"In recognition of the good showing made by the other cities in the parade the Executive Committee of the board of directors have voted to send to each of the cities making a handsome entry a $25 silver cup, with a $50 silver cup for Glendale.

"An official explanation was made this morning of the misunderstanding which gave rise to the report that Glendale's entry had the prize. The report of the judges was mislaid and, thinking that the civic entries had not been judged, and that the judges first appointed were not on the ground, Prof. Garnett Holmes, the well-known dramatic coach of Berkeley, was asked to make the decision. He decided that Glendale was worthy of the first prize. The original report was afterward found and must, of course, have precedence.

"By giving the facts as set forth above by the directors of the tournament, you will be given credit to whom it is due and will oblige

Piles Cured Quickly at Home.

Why Suffer Agony Any Longer When You Can Get a Quick, Sure Cure for Your Piles By Simply Sending Your Name and Address.

Trial Package Is Sent Absolutely Free, In Plain Wrapper to Everyone Who Writes.

Surgeons themselves consider a permanent cure of piles by a surgical operation as very doubtful, and resort to it only when the patient has become desperate from long continued pain and agony. But the operation itself is every bit as excruciating and nerve-racking as the disease. Besides, it is humiliating and expensive, and rarely a success.

The wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure makes an operation unnecessary. You cure yourself with perfect ease, in your own home, and for little expense. Pyramid Pile Cure gives you instant relief. It immediately heals all sores and ulcers, reduces congestion and inflammation, and takes away all pain, itching and irritation. Just a little of the treatment is usually sufficient to give a permanent cure.

Pyramid Pile Cure is prepared in the form of suppositories so they can be applied directly to the parts without inconvenience, or interrupting your work in any way.

We are sending a trial treatment free of charge, to every one who sends name and address. We do this to prove what we say about this wonderful remedy is true.

After you have tried the sample treatment, and you are satisfied, you can get a full regular-sized treatment of Pyramid Pile Cure at your druggist's for 50 cents. If he hasn't it, send us the money and we will send you the treatment at once, by mail, in plain sealed package.

Send your name and address at once for a trial of this marvelous quick, sure cure. Address Pyramid Drug Co., 285 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

never find it, but they are likely to stir up considerable trouble hunting for it.

Some one writes to me mentioning the wail printed in The Lancer some time ago about people who throw their wraps back over theater chairs.

"Why," he asks, "don't you get after the people who kick a fellow's hat under the orchestra chair and root him with their toes through the slats of the same?"

Such persons may consider themselves duly "got after."

Every time I go to the theater I seem to sit in front of some fellow who practices football punting on my derby.

Whenever an exciting part comes, I can hear his brogans landing terrific blows of emotion on my lid.

When the leading lady flings herself into the hero's arms, which they always do in the second act, my heart leaps—not from anything the leading lady said, but from a dreadful thump that I know means he has caved in the crown. At the end of the play I leave the theater sadly, with a battered, caved-in object that once was a hat.

I should think the management would either provide footballs for these lusty young persons who always sit behind you, or else make them take their shoes off at the entrance.

Let's Be Fair.

Some fool in Sacramento is trying to revive the gentle art of passing laws to bait the Jap.

In addition to the possibility of bringing on a war in which we would stand a fine chance of being thumped black and blue all over, these driveling laws are a mighty cruel injustice to a fine people.

Somebody gave the Jap a bad name some years ago and we have all accepted these facts as gospel because we never took the trouble to find out:

That the Jap is dishonest; that he works for starvation wages; that he has most of the other sins in the calendar, etc.

I have recently "woke up." These are not the facts. I find, for instance, that the most reliable photographer I ever saw, in the matter of keeping his promises, is my friend Dr. Takagi. In my various other dealings with Japanese business men they have always told me the literal truth—which is considerably more than I can say for their American collegues.

When the Japanese ships of war were here, it was a matter of amazement to me that sailors on shore leave could behave so. Honestly, a company of divinity students on the way to prayer meeting would be an indecent riot compared with the conduct and decorum of these little brown Jack Tars.

That their officers are secretly making maps of our defenses is true. That our officers are all through Japan making secret maps of their defenses is also true.

They always say that Jap workmen don't keep their bargains. I have not made many; but the Japs always kept their agreements to the letter. As to their comparative ability. Oo! la, la, la!

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home

Costs Little and Acts Quickly. Money Refunded If It Fails.

This recipe makes a pint of cough syrup and saves you about $2 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents' worth) in a pint bottle and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

Little Home Helps On How to Be Beautiful

BY MADAME MAREE.

FOR A ROSE-TONED COMPLEXION.

Beautiful complexions are ruined through excessive use of powder, whose minute particles clog pores, causing blackheads and pimply eruptions, while the delicate tissues are aggravated and a rough, blotchy, unhealthy condition follows. A reliable massage cream is essential to free the pores and skin's surface from impurities and to promote a healthy bloom—the hall mark of refined beauty. You can prepare a trustworthy massage cream at small cost, by dissolving three ounces of cerol in a pint of hot water, stirring until smooth and creamy. This gently massaged into the skin makes it soft and satiny, and gives cheeks a rosy glow.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Lulu: It is entirely wrong for you to lose your hair so rapidly, and you should attend to it without delay. Mix a half pint each of alcohol and water, and into this put one ounce beta-canthol. This simple recipe makes an inexpensive and excellent tonic, and massaging the hair roots frequently with it stops falling hair, and its continued use will promote a thick growth of long, glossy hair. Any druggist can supply beta-canthol.

Pixie: It is a rare pleasure to read a letter like yours, and I am glad my galiol recipe has given you a "sylph-like" form, as you say. You can make an excellent retiring cream at small cost, if you will get from your druggist two ounces of amarol and dissolve in a pint of hot water. After washing the skin thoroughly and drying well, apply this retiring cream and you will find in a short time you have a complexion no powder or rouge can imitate.

Dinx D.: If you are interested and really want a good recipe for shampooing, get some eggol at the drug store and try it. Using this twice a month for a while soon corrects the itchy, scaly condition of the scalp, making it vigorous and pliant and stops falling hair. An eggol shampoo is delightful to use, and is especially good for oiliness. With this use the beta-canthol tonic mentioned elsewhere in these columns.

Nancy: I know it is annoying to have fuzz on your cheek, and if you will get an ounce of delol at the drug store and mix some with water to make a thick paste and apply to the offending hairs, then after two or three minutes rub off and wash the skin, you will find the hairs gone. While delol is a trifle expensive, it is seldom necessary to use the second application to permanently remove hairs.

Fay: Underdevelopment is due to a starved condition of the delicate tissues, and until corrected, you cannot round out the figure. The only successful method known is the Vaucaire treatment. This feeds the underlying tissues, and as a natural result, the form becomes plump and symmetrical. You can easily prepare your own treatment if you dissolve one and a half cups sugar in water to make a pint and stir in an ounce of true galiol, which any druggist can supply. Take two teaspoonfuls before meals for awhile and you will be truly delighted at results.

attitude of the Fire Commission question of alleys is the cue present generation to wisely many another question affecting the future development of the city. The height restriction for downtown buildings for example could advantageously be settled for all time now. Account might also profitably be taken of the time when the close-in portion of Los Angeles will be built up solidly with apartment houses, with the end that the builders of these structures be legally required to make them safe and sanitary for the habitation of the metropolitan population of the future. It would be wise, too, to settle in advance the slum problem which will inevitably confront the city upon the completion of the Panama Canal, when a big proportion of the unwieldy European immigration will be deflected this way by Ellis Island. Now is the time to designate the areas which are to witness the future industrial advance of the city. This probably is the most important question of all and it must be met with wisdom and firmness if Los Angeles is to realize the industrial development which is its logical destiny.

Builders Demand Improvements.

The practical civic pride of the average citizen of Los Angeles is illustrated in the record-breaking expenditure authorized by the people during 1910 for public improvements. It is estimated that fully $3,500,000 was devoted in the past year to street improvements and sewer and drain work. Most of this outlay was instanced by the people themselves through petitions. The improvement has not been confined to any one section, but is in evidence throughout the city. A large sum is represented in the expenditure for modern streeting in new tracts laid out during the past twelve months. Under the direction of the city engineering department over thirty-five miles of streets have either been paved with asphalt, brick or macadam, or graded, graveled and oiled. At least eleven miles additional is now being laid with asphaltum, bringing the aggregate of street work completed or started during the year up to approximately forty-seven miles. Fifty-one miles of sewers was constructed during the same period. So insistent is the demand for the most up-to-date improvements that houses in tracts which do not boast the best modern facilities in the way of streeting, sewer connections and storm drains are coming to be a drug on the market. Even the tracts with the lightest restrictions as to building cost must possess the best of general improvements in order to attract buyers or builders.

Going Europe One Better.

A common sight along the magnificent highways of Europe is that of a patrol of the road engaged in repairing by hand a spot where speeding automobiles or the trundling carts of the peasants have worn the surfacing from the rock basis. The slightest abrasion is seized upon, each patrol having his own segment of roadway, for the maintenance of which he is held personally responsible and in the keeping of which he often devotes a lifetime. The result is that, whereas in America the best of roads are often allowed to deteriorate to the point where repair work on a wholesale scale is absolutely imperative, the European highway is ever at the best. The Highway Commission of Los Angeles county proposes, however, to go the celebrated European highway bureaus one better by installing a road patrol system equipped with motor trucks loaded with repair material and ever ready for service. It is the idea to assign one patrol with such a truck to every fifteen or twenty miles of highway. The commissioners declare that they have secured a newly invented surfacing material, the application of which will keep the entire good roads system constantly in a condition which will be the envy of the world and the delight of automobile drivers and other users of these perfect highways.

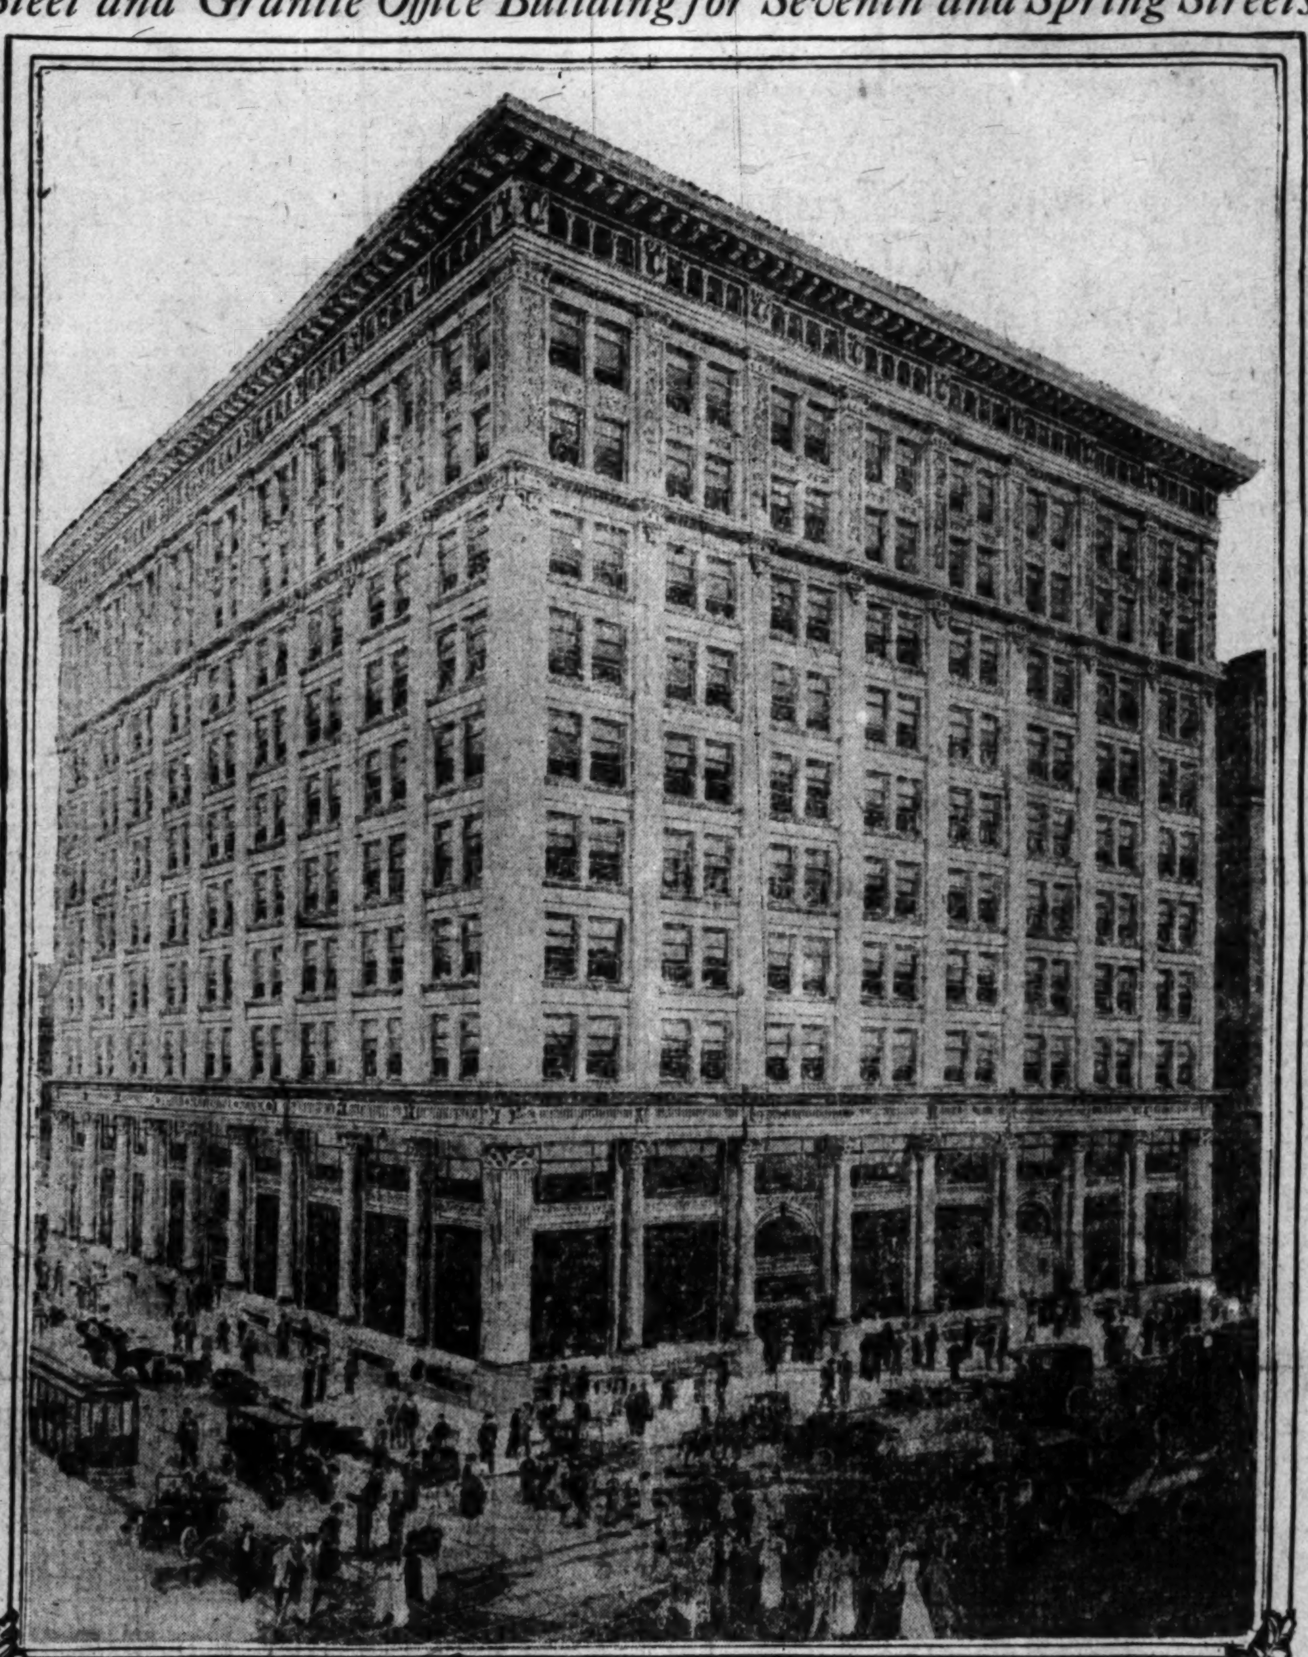
SALES AGGREGATE LARGE.

West Riverside Estate Agency Reports Transfers of Nearly Two Hundred Thousand Dollars in That Tract.

Sales aggregating in valuation $191,146 are reported by the general sales agency of the West Riverside estate as having been made since the opening of that tract last November. Of this business, $120,803 has not been previously reported, the following buyers being represented in the latter transfers: H. Gogin, $5087; W. W. McCready, $6612; E. M. Nadal, $14,112; Levi Chubbuck, $8562; A. H. Merrick, $10,212; W. S. Carson, $18,762; R. F. Smitzdorf, $11,337; Francis Line, $20,016; J. H. Johnson, $7737; M. T. P. Shermer, $17,362.

The West Riverside Estate comprises some 3500 acres situated on the main line of the Salt Lake, five miles west of Riverside. About 625 acres of the tract are in orchard. The owners are at present platting 1400 acres additional immediately adjacent to the present orchards, and this will soon be placed on the market.

Steel and Granite Office Building for Seventh and Spring Streets.



Monumental Million-Dollar Structure to be Erected by I. N. Van Nuys.

Plans for the building have been prepared by architects Morgan, Walls & Morgan. The entire first story of this immense eleven-story block is to be occupied by the First National Bank.

A Structural Marvel.

BIG VAN NUYS BLOCK UNDER WAY IN APRIL.

WITH the signing tomorrow of the final papers covering the leasing arrangement, the last step in the negotiations preliminary to the erection of the proposed Van Nuys building at the southwest corner of Spring and Seventh streets will have been completed. The project is one of the most significant in the history of the city, signalizing as it does the faith of the directors and stockholders of the First National Bank that the corner to be improved for the occupancy of that institution will soon be in the heart of the business section.

The building itself will be a monument to the Van Nuys family. Not only will it be without a superior in the city in point of structural and architectural quality, but it will take rank with the finest of the modern buildings in the West. Fronting 170 feet on Spring by 155 feet on Seventh, the block will provide in its eleven stories and basement, a poor area of approximately seven acres. Its cost will be close to $1,250,000.

The First National Bank will occupy most of the first story and basement of the block, its magnificent quarters having a frontage of ninety-six feet on Seventh by 170 feet on Spring. Provision has been made for a large store room between the main lobby entrance on Seventh and the Lankershim Hotel, which the Van Nuys building will adjoin on the east. The finish and appointments of the banking room will be absolutely unsurpassed in point of luxuriousness in any similar institution in the United States. The upper stories of the structure will be divided into offices.

The site to be improved has been in the possession of I. N. Van Nuys for many years and is one of the most valuable of the numerous property holdings of the Van Nuys family in the business section. The project to erect a mammoth business and office structure on the lot is not a new one, Mr. Van Nuys long having had in mind the eventual improvement of the property with a monumental building. The block proposed will in all probability be started about April 1, folowing the completion of working plans by the architects, Morgan, Walls & Morgan. The small buildings now occupying the site will be razed at one.

BANK NEEDS MORE ROOM.

"The First National has for a long time felt that a move southward would be a wise one," said J. M. Elliott, president of that institution, yesterday afternoon. "Our present quarters are business as we should like to carry it on. We have been at the present site for nine years, during which period our deposits have grown from $2,700,000 to $15,000,000, and we naturally find ourselves cramped today in a room which formerly served all our purposes.

"By some of our stockholders it was thought that going to Seventh would be moving a little too far south. Without exception these same men believe in the certain future advance of all the present business section, and our faith in the northern portion particularly is unshaken. What determined us upon the southward move was our recognition of the fact that Seventh street is destined logically to become the great crosstown business thoroughfare of Los Angeles. We feel that the ultimate position for a bank is on a corner where not only the principal north and south movement is to be found, but where the most extensive east and west traffic is eventually to be encountered as well. We do not believe we could have hit upon a better location than Seventh and Spring.

"As to the building itself," added Mr. Elliott, "the structure will be in every particular just what is to be expected from the Van Nuys family, a monumental building, first class in every respect, that will be a credit to Los Angeles and a landmark of the city's progress. We are confident that we will in the fall of 1912 enter the finest banking room in the West."

The First National is one of the oldest banks in Southern California, having been organized as a national bank in 1880, succeeding at that time the old Commercial Bank of Los Angeles, which was situated on North Main street, opposite Temple street. Mr. Elliott has been connected with the institution for thirty-eight years, having served as president since 1892.

The Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, the magnificent new eleven-story home of which is nearing completion at the northwest corner of Sixth and Spring, is owned by the same stockholders who own the First National. The former bank will soon boast one of the finest and largest safety vault departments in the world, and this will be utilized by both institutions.

The lease of the First National on the Van Nuys block covers a term of twenty-five years with provision for three extensions of five years each. The consideration, while not made public, is understood to be of record-breaking proportions and one which will establish a new valuation on property in the vicinity.

structural marvel and probably the finest ever planned by Morgan, Walls & Morgan, its architects, who were the designers of the magnificent W. P. Story block at the southeast corner of Sixth and Broadway, the twelve-story Kerckhoff block at Sixth and Main, the Eshman building and the $1,500,000 group of buildings erected by I. W. Hellman at Fourth and Main. It will contain eleven full stories, a basement and a sub-basement, the latter for the power and heating plants.

The building will be of class "A" construction with a skeleton steel frame, reinforced concrete floors, concrete fireproofing, suspended ceilings, and sand finished plaster throughout. The interior trim will be in mahogany. All the corridors will have marble floors and wainscoting. Seven elevators will be installed.

The exterior of the block will be handsomely faced in matt terra cotta, with polished granite base.

A PROMISING BEGINNING.

Building Permits of New Year Valued at Nearly Seventy Thousand Dollars a Day.

If the large aggregate of business transacted in the City Building Department in the first four days of the new year is to be accepted as an indication of what is to be expected in construction circles during 1911, Los Angeles is due for an even bigger building record this year than last. From Tuesday to Friday, inclusively, 204 permits were issued by the department, these for buildings to cost a total of $271,023.

This promising figure represents only ordinary construction activity, no single large item entering into the makeup of the statistics. Permits for new houses in the four days in question numbered eighty-seven and represented $179,155 worth of buildings.

With the permit for the eleven-story Chester block, which it is expected will be issued next week, the record for the month of January should be well over the $2,000,000 mark and far in excess of the corresponding month of any other year in the history of Los Angeles. In fact, it is altogether possible that the present month will attain a figure second only to the record total of April, 1910, which boasted in excess of $3,360,000.

The Angeles Mesa Land Company, owners of the Angeles Mesa tracts, have leased the quarters formerly occupied by E. A. Forrester & Sons, on the sixth floor of the Forrester building, No. 640 South Broadway. The company will conduct a general real estate business besides handling and promoting various subdivision properties formerly represented by E. A. Forrester & Sons. The most active development will be in Angeles Mesa.

$4000.

This typical bungalow is in a charming southwest district, being surrounded with pretty homes, almost as charming as itself. It is brand new; the hardwood floors extend all through the house, and every one of the seven rooms is fitted with the coziest and most modern ideas. There is a fine cement basement with furnace already installed; there is also a nifty hot water heater in the cabinet kitchen. We know of nothing to beat is for value, for beauty of line, and for solid worth. Terms $500 cash.

$5400.

A Wilshire district bungalow of eight rooms, never occupied, on a sixty-foot, east front lot, for this ridiculous price! Can you beat it? We know you cannot find its equal. The house is of that attractive, story-and-a-half type, with a wide cement veranda running entirely across the front and part way down the side. The interior arrangement is particularly good, with a large living-room, a library with French doors leading to the veranda, dainty breakfast room, four excellent bedrooms, an upstairs den, and other features too numerous to mention. Hardwood floors, furnace pipes, extra lavatory, etc., make this house a $6500 proposition. Very reasonable terms can be had if desired.

$6500.

In this large, eight-room residence we have a home to strike the fancy of any beauty-loving woman. It is of the charming Swiss chalet type, although full two-story; the low porches, porte cochere and arches of heavy beams add much to the general attractiveness of its lines. There is a large living-room with separate music room, slightly raised, an ideal arrangement for music lovers; also, the coziest and sunniest breakfast room we have seen. Hardwood floors, fine furnace and a complete sleeping balcony are necessary features; and the finish throughout is exceptionally artistic. Three bedrooms, one of which is about 15x28 feet with a dressing room large enough for a child's room, are unusually light and airy. Remember, this property must be sold. See us today.

Here is the greatest value in a nine-room residence that we have offered in many a day. It is located in the Wilshire district, near Western ave., and stands on a corner lot, 50x150.

Entering the house from a broad, cement veranda, on the first floor you find a large living-room, dining-room and library, which have oak floors and all popular built-in effects, finished in carefully selected slash-grain pine. The kitchen, breakfast room and servant's room are in white enamel. The second story has three splendid sleeping rooms with maple floors. Sunroom, sleeping porch and well appointed bathroom, all in white enamel. There is a cemented basement with furnace complete. All rooms are of good size and well lighted. Numerous other features combine to make this an exceptionally attractive property for the homeseeker.

Now get to our office without delay or you will be too late for the bargain here represented.

A modern eleven-room residence on large, east front lot on Kingsley Drive. Spacious living and dining-rooms are finished in selected quartered white oak with massively beamed ceilings, den in handsome mahogany, all beautifully and artistically decorated, with breakfast room, kitchen, maid's room and bath in white enamel. The four commodious bedrooms and sewing room on the second floor are very attractive in white enamel, and both walls and floors of the bathroom and shower are tiled. With hardwood floors throughout, enclosed sleeping porch, specially designed lighting fixtures, immense stone porch extending entirely across the front of the house, automatic heater, large garage and cement driveway, we are sure this house will meet with the approval of the most exacting, and we will take pleasure in showing it to you if you will phone us for an appointment.

This magnificent twelve-room house will be finished in about ten days. It is one of the best we have had listed in over a year.

The exterior is of stone, cement and frame, and has a very imposing appearance. The lower floor consists of a huge living-room, dining-room, library or reception room, finished in solid oak and mahogany, and a dainty breakfast room and perfect kitchen in white enamel. Also a large reception hall in selected mahogany, with massive stairway.

The second floor has four extra large bedrooms and a sleeping porch. There are two fully tiled bathrooms and a shower bath on this floor.

The third floor has a fine billiard or card room, two bathrooms and a good bathroom.

The walls of the first floor have been beautifully decorated by hand and the second-floor walls are tastefully papered. Furnace heat to every room, even those on the third floor. This house cannot be adequately described in an advertisement—it must be seen to be fully appreciated.

The workmanship is exceptionally good and the property is worth every dollar asked for it.

NEAR
WILSHIRE BLVD. $10,500.
$10,500

Aristocratic brownstone front and trimmings; wide cement porch and entrance finished in mahogany and beveled plate glass, entrance direct to a living-room which extends full width of house; the room is finished in genuine mahogany, the big open fireplace is set into a cosy alcove and has mahogany seats on either side with bookcases above them, handsome winding stairway in mahogany; the dining-room is paneled in beautifully grained oak to plate rail with fine tapestry above that; windows extend along all one side, and the center light is exceptionally beautiful; the den opens off the dining-room, and could be used as a breakfast room if desired, as it is very well lighted and has French doors to pergola; there are hardwood floors throughout house and duplex shades at every window; large butler's pantry and white enameled kitchen; four excellent bedrooms, closets fitted with built-in drawers; sleeping porch; fine bath with tile floor, porte cochere and cement drive to two-story garage which has rooms for servants upstairs.

WILSHIRE HOME—10 ROOMS.

$5750—A new 10-room residence within half block of the boulevard in the heart of the most expensive homes, the house is a dream of beauty. Handsome without and elegant comfort within. A finely-constructed house with five sleeping rooms including a very fine closed-in sleeping balcony and two baths. Elegant large living-room, library is a beauty, a breakfast or servant's room off kitchen. Best hardwood floors throughout; elegant lighting fixtures and solid brass hardware; rooms artistic and expensively decorated. Large stone and cement porch, basement and furnace, cement drive and garage; in fact, a most complete home, and the price only $5750.

CORNER HOME SACRIFICE.

$7750—A new modern 9-room house just completed, located on a large southwest corner, 75x150, in Wilshire district, south of the Boulevard. The architecture and style is very pleasing. There are hardwood floors throughout and good taste has been used in the decorating. Fixtures are handsome, 4 sleeping-rooms, high and plenty of closet room on second floor. Cement basement with furnace heat to all rooms.

WILSHIRE BUNGALOW.

$5500—An exquisite 7-room bungalow on high terraced lot in the beautiful Wilshire. Just finished, handsomely decorated walls, hardwood floors, either two or three bedrooms, as you like, cosy breakfast room, dining-room is very beautiful with French glass doors opening on to a large cement side porch. Still another porch across front and around on South side makes this the best bungalow in the Wilshire for the price. Easy terms if desired.

KINGSLEY DRIVE BUNGALOW.

$3750—6 rooms, east front, lot 40x174 to an alley, 3 bedrooms, all large, plenty of sunshine; this house is exceptionally well built, good fixtures, an attractive living and dining-room; the street is wide, located close to car line, and all surrounding homes are new and attractive, $1000 cash.

KINGSLEY DRIVE HOME.

$6250—7 rooms, east front, furnace, garage, fine lawn; lot 50x150; this home is located in the moderate priced north of Wilshire section and close to car line; it is modern in every detail; rooms are all large with an abundance of windows.

A KINGSLEY DRIVE RESIDENCE.

$7000—This residence has just been completed, on an east front lot, on a high elevation, commanding a fine view of the city and the mountains; there are nine spacious rooms, including a sun room, living-room, den, dining-room and kitchen on first floor, and four spacious chambers upstairs; plenty of windows, making it light and cheerful; good basement and furnace, new lawn and shrubbery; the design of this home is original, and differs from the stereotyped plan of the amateur builder; it is a bargain; it is located close to the new Ninth st. car line.

NO. 530 WESTERN AVENUE.

$11,000—This splendid property is one block from Wilshire blvd., and contains ten rooms, two baths, attic (automatic heater; gas furnace and double garage to suit purchaser.) At first sight the house gives a very favorable impression, with its wide cement porch and sandstone trimmings; the interior is a work of art; living-room, hall, staircase and den is furnished in genuine mahogany, and the dining-room is quartered oak; decorations on both floors are all hand work of the art noveau design, done by a well-known artist; not a scrap of paper in the house; electroliers are of special design, and of unusual value; chambers are large, with spacious closets and built-in cabinets; a commodious sun room connects with a bed chamber, making a convenient suite. Servants' chamber and bath on the first floor. Art glass windows, mirrors, bookcases and built-in features are so arranged as to produce a complete and artistic home. If you desire a property of this size you cannot duplicate this value in the Wilshire district.

FOR SALE—"WELL," SAID MOTHER, knitting in hand, "of all the new houses we saw, not one in my mind compared with 709 Irolo st., only one block from Wilshire and [illegible] one from the Ninth [illegible] line; it's the most homey, comfortable, best planned and nicest finished one we visited. Such a nice large living-room, such a cosy den, and didn't you notice how the floor, woodwork, paper and those beautiful art glass fixtures all harmonized in color, and all the woodwork so well rubbed down. Then think of two bathrooms and four large sleeping rooms, and one outside, and that corner breakfast room, wasn't that fine, and furnace and hot water any time. Then the price of $7500 for such a house, and that location, was a good bit lower than any 9 room house we saw that was as well built. No doubt if one paid a good bit of cash they could get some off of that. I should think one of you girls would want a house. What did that man say, he was there afterward? Well! it's an awful nice home. Yes, it's 709 Irola—709 IROLA ST."

IN THE TREND OF PROGRESS.

ON THE VENICE SHORT LINE.

THERE IS NO OTHER SPECIFIC SECTION IN THE whole Southwest today where the profit to be realized in a short a time will be as great as that derived by the purchasers who now invest their money in property along the VENICE SHORT LINE. Property on the line of the subway that is now being offered for sale can never again be purchased at such ridiculously low prices as are now prevailing, and it can be truthfully stated that in one year from now every piece of property we are now selling will be quoted at exactly twice the present price. It is hard for even the most optimistic person to realize what it will mean to be within 15 minutes of the heart of the city, to be able to enjoy all the pleasures of a country home and at the same time retain and have all the conveniences of the city.

ONLY—$1600—ONLY.
Large, beautiful 60x145-foot lot, all covered with large full-bearing walnut trees. Price includes 5-foot cement walk, graded and oiled roadway, etc. Right at the new Venice St. Marks boulevard. Your own terms.

Fine 52x145-foot lot, corner, right on the new Venice St. Marks boulevard; covered with large full-bearing walnut trees. Easy terms. This property will double in value within the next two years. Invest now and watch your money grow.

ONLY—$1000—ONLY.
Large 100x151½-foot lot, east front, cement walks and curbs, high ground, beautiful view and only 20 minutes out now; will soon be 15 minutes. Easy terms.

$1550.
A beautiful acre, 100x... feet, an easterly exposure on a wide boulevard close to car line; cool in summer, and a rare bargain at price asked. Terms easy.

$1550.
A fine acre, well located, 132½x181½ feet, elegant soil, high ground, beautiful view. Just the place for a rambling California bungalow.

AN ACRE CLOSE IN.
$10 CASH TAKES IT NOW.
Here is an acre that will appeal to the shrewd investor, to the long-headed chap who has real foresight. For it is a chance to anticipate Los Angeles' growth. This acre is at Somerset, only 20 minutes away by trolley. The soil is a real, rich, sandy loam, and abundant water is furnished free. You can go right onto this place and your garden and chickens and fruit trees will make you a nice living—or you can keep up your work in town, for the car service is excellent. You won't hold the property long before your investment doubles in value, for Los Angeles is going some; $10 cash takes it today and $10 monthly pays for it. Go see it. Excursions every hour daily and up to 2 p.m. Sundays.

FOR SALE—THIS LOCATION CAN'T BE beat, and as for price, that is out of the question; this is a modern 24-room house on Alvarado st., close to Westlake Park; lot 50x150 to alley; price $12,500, $4000 cash; another near Westlake Park; this is a corner just off W. 7th st., with 2 modern 10-room houses for $17,500, $5000 cash; another right up here on the hill, a few blocks from my office; a modern 16-room house, lot 47x165, price $14,000; would take a modern bungalow as part payment.
J. C. FLOYD, 215 Mason Operahouse.

FOR SALE—APARTMENT HOUSE, FIVE minutes' walk from First and Bdway., new building, market price $24,000; this property must be sold without consideration of loss; will sacrifice for $16,000 for cash buyer; lot alone worth the money $8000 cash, $8000 mortgage, will net 15 per cent., here is a chance for bargain hunters, no commission, no exchange. Address X, box 290, TIMES OFFICE.

FOR SALE—
We have one of the best apartment sites in Los Angeles, property is 75x175, located within 3 minutes of 5th and Spring, a small payment down will handle this, the rest at 6 per cent., will consider some exchange. If you are really interested in a bargain, income property and investment that you seldom run against, it will pay you to see us in regard to this proposition.

FOR SALE—FINE APARTMENT HOUSE site, close in. $50 foot under the market; half cash. CLOVERDALE, 112 Merchants Trust Bldg.

FOR SALE—
Business Property.

FOR SALE—NO AGENTS. THE BEST PROPosition you ever heard of. A net profit of $96,750 in 5 years on an investment of $15,750, and I can prove it.

The time has come and now is for you ladies and gentlemen who have money out at 6 and 8 per cent. to wake up.

If you don't know you can find out beyond a question of doubt that every foot of property between 3rd and 9th, Los Angeles and Olive sts., has advanced sufficient to pay more than 25 per cent. interest for the past 15 years. And because Los Angeles' greatness never was so assured as it is now. You know also that it would be contrary to all the powers in the universe if the property between 7th and 9th will not advance more in the future than it ever has. And right now is the time to buy; wait until the first flurry and all the desirable property will be withdrawn, and there are things in the air—yes, in the very atmosphere in Los Angeles today—that may cause this flurry any time.

I have exclusive sale and can deliver a $90,000 piece of partially improved property north of 9th st., paying 5 per cent., for $15,000 cash, balance 5 per cent.

Now then, pay your $15,000 cash, add $18,750 interest and $4500 for taxes, insurance and repairs. Total cost, $38,250. Now deduct income of $22,500, and you have net cost of $15,750. Now add 25 per cent on $90,000 for 5 years, $12,500, and deduct your $15,750, and you have your net profit of $96,750. Any banker in Los Angeles will tell you that millions have been made in this way. And he will tell you also that more money will be made in the same way in Los Angeles than ever has been made.

Now, you can never say again that you never had a chance to make money from the other fellow's money Because 5 years from now you can borrow enough money on this property to pay the mortgage and then have a $100,000 equity left to keep you traveling the balance of your life.

Address, with reference, M, BOX 189, TIMES OFFICE.

Because this is not a proposition to be peddled.

FOR SALE—

WE HAVE TWO PIECES OF PROPERTY IN THAT MUCHLY DESIRED SECTION EAST OF FIGUEROA, WEST OF BROADWAY, AND WITHIN A FEW FEET OF SEVENTH STREET, WHERE VALUES ARE INCREASING MORE RAPIDLY THAN IN ANY OTHER SECTION OF LOS ANGELES. IT IS NOT AN UNUSUAL THING FOR YOU TO READ GLOWING ACCOUNTS OF "SNAPS IN LOS ANGELES BUSINESS PROPERTY," BUT IN THIS PARTICULAR INSTANCE WE HAVE A PRICE ON THESE PROPERTIES THAT, IN OUR OPINION, IS A GENUINE SNAP. ONE PIECE IS $150 PER FRONT FOOT LESS THAN THE ADJOINING PROPERTY. THE PRICE ON THE OTHER PIECE IS $200 PER FRONT FOOT LESS THAN ANYTHING IN THE SAME BLOCK. HERE IS AN OPPORTUNITY NOT OFTEN PRESENTED IN THE CITY OF LOS ANGELES.

FIFTY FEET FRONTAGE.

Do you realize what that means?
Only $2250 per foot.

WITHOUT A QUESTION
the biggest Broadway bargain that has been offered for many months, and a bigger one than will ever be offered again.

BROADWAY
is the logical shopping street, as far south as Tenth, and as such will always be the highest income property and command the highest price of any street in the city.

MONUMENTAL BUILDINGS have been planned to be erected on Broadway in the near future, and some of the finest at present are only a block from the piece we are offering.

by ten years mortgage at five and half per cent. net.

Yes, you read it right, and we can deliver the goods if you get busy before our option expires.

WE TOLD YOU that the corner of Eighth and Broadway, at less than $5000 per foot, was the cheapest property on the street, and if you had any doubts as to the assertion, ask the present owners, who recently purchased it.

WE NOW TELL YOU that the property we are offering is without a doubt the best buy on Broadway.

MAKE US PROVE IT.

Alfalfa—Walnut and Orange Land.
Adjoining the town of Puente we have some choice acreage to offer, that is certainly inviting to the home seeker or investor.

Puente is 17 miles east of Los Angeles, on the main line of the Southern Pacific and Salt Lake roads, and the new boulevard to Los Angeles is complete at this point. The road is as hard and smooth as a city pavement and travel will always prove to be a "joy ride." Puente has several large stores, First National Bank, High and public schools and all other branches of trade. The climate is ideal all the year around. The soil is a deep fertile loam and produces enormous crops of alfalfa, corn, potatoes, vegetables of all kinds, oranges, walnuts, etc. We have already sold hundreds of acres in the vicinity. Go out and investigate. Water can be had at low cost. Don't miss this opportunity as the amount of land for sale is limited. Lots of 10 acres and up. Price $250 and $300 per acre. Terms one-third cash, balance in 3 years at 7 per cent. Unlimited certificate of title, by Title Guarantee and Trust Co.

DAMP LAND.
South of El Monte we have a limited amount of choice sub-irrigated or damp land that absolutely requires no irrigation to grow alfalfa, potatoes, celery, corn or any kind of vegetables or small fruit. Its wonderful land. Let us show the growing crops and you will be convinced. Lots of 10 acres or more. Price $290 to $300 per acre, one-third cash, balance 3 years at 7 per cent.

ORANGE LAND.
We have some choice unimproved orange land in the Covina district, only one mile from the city of Covina. Lots of 10 acres or more. Price $200 per acre, 1-3 cash, balance in 3 years at 7 per cent.

Unlimited certificates of title with each purchase.

NORTH EL MONTE WALNUT GROVE TRACT.
This beautiful subdivision consisting of mostly full-bearing walnut trees, is located about two miles north of El Monte, on the main road to Monrovia, and 5 miles from the city. The trees are in fine, thrifty condition and bear heavily. The soil is a sandy sediment loam of exceptional depth and fertility. The water right is all that could be desired, being suplied by a large pumping plant on the tract pumps 175 miner's inches, at bare cost of pumping.

We are going to sell this tract in lots of 5 acres and up. If you want an ideal home site, with a good income, this is just what you have been looking for. This property is in a neighborhood of high-class homes, and within easy reach of churches, high and public schools, electric and steam railroads.

Prices, $750 per acre and up.
Terms, one-third cash, balance 3 years, 7 per cent.

THINK OF IT!
We are selling land which we have recently subdivided in 10 acres or more, near Le Grand, Merced Co., Cal., on the following terms:
FIVE YEARS' TIME ON THE FULL PURCHASE PRICE
by paying one year's interest in advance. We only charge 5 per cent. interest per annum. Price of land only $100 PER ACRE
OR
You can pay $1 per acre cash and $1 each month per acre, with 5 per cent. interest on deferred payment. THINK OF IT. 100 MONTHS to pay for this land.
We also have 800 acres in the best part of Tulare county that we are selling on the same terms.
Any one familiar with California lands will tell you that Le Grand land is the very best in California, free from alkali or hardpan, with abundance of cheap water.
Also remember that this land will pay interest for grain and is ideal orange, fig, alfalfa, vines, or, in fact, anything can be raised on this land that will grow anywhere. Beautiful high school, and walking distance from station makes this an ideal place to live. This land ought to be worth $500 per acre by the time your last payment comes due.

FOR SALE—
HANDSOME INCOME PROPERTY.
TO THE INVESTOR who is looking for a CONSERVATIVE and SAFE investment in country property, not where claims are made for fabulous returns and where there may be some doubts as to any returns whatever; to the man who is willing to make a moderate rate of income, say 10 per cent. to 15 per cent., on the amount invested, but have that SECURE and INCREASING from year to year as the trees increase in size, we wish to submit this walnut grove, because walnuts do not require expert knowledge in the matter of care, require comparatively little irrigation, cultivation and fertilization, the product is not perishable, making it possible for the growers to govern the market, and the crop is as SURE AND CERTAIN as anything that grows out of doors.

READ THE FOLLOWING DESCRIPTION CAREFULLY:
80 acres solid to 14 YEAR OLD SOFT-SHELL WALNUTS, which have always had GOOD CARE and planted in soil and under climatic condition that CANNOT BE EXCELLED IN THE UNITED STATES. The grove is known to be the prize grove of the district and always LOADED WITH NUTS. Irrigation water is furnished by a large pumping plant at a very NOMINAL COST, and just when you want it. There is a NEARLY NEW MODERN HOUSE, has its own lighting plant, etc. Good barn and outbuildings. THE CROP SOLD LAST YEAR FOR $10,000 and will INCREASE from year to year. Owner will sell 20 acres or more without the improvements at $900 per acre and the 20 with the improvements at $1000 per acre, or the entire 80 acres at $74,000. THIS IS CERTAINLY A BARGAIN.

FOR SALE—STOCK AND ALFALFA RANCH.
Do you want to buy absolutely the best hog, cattle and alfalfa ranch in the State? Have you got $5000 or $10,000 real money or clear property representing that value? If so, I will give you the biggest bargain ever offered. Abundance of water, all fenced and cross-fenced with hog-tight wire; cement irrigating flumes, ranch buildings, hay sheds, implements, etc. One of the biggest revenue producers in the State.
I will sell 300 acres, or any portion, at $200 per acre, in full bearing. It will produce $50 per acre every year. If you want the whole ranch, will throw in $10,000 in pumping plant, tools and machinery.
You can pay the balance from the profits of the ranch. W. B. AMES, Owner, 718 Broadway Central Bldg., Los Angeles.

FOR SALE—
CENTRAL BRITISH COLUMBIA FARM LANDS, VERY CLOSE TO THE GROWING METROPOLIS OF FORT GEORGE. VERY CHEAP. LONG YEARLY PAYMENTS. Splendid climate; no extremes either summer or winter.

Level valley lands, open and parklike, large natural meadows, ready for the plow; soil rich; brown loam or silts, with clay sub-soil.

No irrigation necessary; rainfall 20 to 25 inches, coming during growing season; lakes and streams of pure water everywhere.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and other railways will soon be building right through our lands. 25,000 men will be employed building these railroads. Large profits and easy money for the farmer who has anything to sell, vegetables, wheat, oats, barley, hay and hardy fruits yield in abundance; splendid for dairying and cattle raising, with no dry season and plenty of natural pasture. This is the last new farming country in America to be open by the building of transcontinental railways, where no irrigation is required. THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY TO BUY A FINE FARM CHEAP, NOW BEFORE the railroads are running. This land is advancing in value very rapidly. We have fine lands along the railway as cheap as $10 per acre, other pieces within 5 miles of Fort George, not over $22 per acre in price. Very easy terms. Call and view our fine photographs and maps.

FOR SALE—
FAT FERTILE ACRES.
"What does the land grow?" That's what you ask, when you investigate any proposition. I invite every person of the "show me" class, who is looking for good land, to come to my office and see my exhibit of products. This exhibit will make you straighten up and take notice. You'll want to learn all about my Fresno Valley Lands, as soon as you see what they will grow. They are just South of Fresno, a few minutes ride by train. They are rich, with abundant, cheap ditch and pump water. They are perfect for alfalfa, for corn, tobacco, oranges, peaches, apricots, vegetables and berries—true all-purpose lands, so fertile that you can have a crop coming on almost every month of the year. A good town is right at the property, with schools, stores, telephones, free mail delivery, etc. Two stations on competing railroads right there. Looks like a nice place to live, doesn't it? You'll find it so when you investigate, and my Free Excursions are planned to give you this very opportunity. The land costs but $40 an acre up and $2.50 per acre cash will start you. Cut out this advertisement and bring it along with you. It is good for one of my handsomely illustrated booklets, free.

FOR SALE—
Before you invest in California investigate the northern end of Santa Clara county. Situated only 25 miles from San Francisco, on the Peninsula, and connected with the metropolis by both rail and water transportation facilities, this favored section affords numerous opportunities for the safe investment of capital in real estate, Manufacturing, and Mercantile lines. Here we offer you the two best investments in California today:

130 acres of gently rolling foothills, fronting on three county roads, also frontage on an electric railroad (station within three minutes walk.) This property has numerous oaks, overlooking the beautiful Santa Clara Valley and the San Francisco Bay. The tract is now ripe for subdivision and is offered for sale to close an estate. Must be sold as a whole; price $200 per acre; will sell for $500 an acre in subdivisions. Terms 40 per cent. cash.

A first class lumber yard, old established and doing a large and profitable business. Consists of a block of land, stock of lumber, saw mill, large dry shed, lime house, teams, wagons and complete equipment. Stock of lumber will be sold at invoice. Will take about $25,000 cash to handle this. Closest investigation invited.

Write us about real estate investments of any kind; Gentlemen's country homes, orchard investments, irrigated alfalfa lands, small improved places, etc.

SAN FERNANDO VALLEY.

If you keep posted at all,
You know about San Fernando Valley
And all the big things doing.

Here is an enormously fertile valley
Just at the gates of the city,
And in the hands of the most aggressive
And progressive men in So. California.

This section is in its infancy
And its future assured.

Investigate and you will find
San Fernando lands are selling
For $200 to $500 per acre,
At which price they are cheap.

Investigate everything offered
And you will realize how much
The following properties are underpriced

Your attention is particularly called
To the 80 acres near Chatsworth
For only $125 per acre.
It is positively the cheapest buy
In the entire San Fernando Valley
And I can make any man who buys it
A nice profit inside of 12 months.

OWENS RIVER LANDS—

FOR SALE—

If you are considering making a change of buying new farming land, it will cost you nothing and a very little time to investigate the Owens River Valley. This you owe to yourself. It is a valley unlike anything else in California. You cannot compare it with either the San Joaquin, Sacramento or Imperial Valleys. It is in a class by itself. The elevation of 4000 feet creates a climatic condition not found elsewhere in California. The summers are delightful. There is absolutely no fog. There are practically 300 days of sunshine. The winters are sufficiently cold to develop the wonderful big red winter apples that have brought such fortunes to the Oregon, Washington and Colorado farmers. Absolutely proven apple land in these Northern States sells for as high as $400 and $500 an acre. We are offering land that we firmly believe to be better. We mean by this that it will not produce any better apples, for that would be quite impossible; but the conditions under which they are grown are more ideal and with less of the uncertainties. There is probably no proven winter apple land on the entire Pacific Coast that is less liable to the spring frosts than is that portion of the Owens Valley which we are offering.

Apples will pay bigger returns than either oranges or lemons. In fact, there is nothing grown in the soil that will produce, in cash, what the varieties of red winter apples will. Besides this, the Owens Valley will surprise you beyond belief when you can see the samples of corn, potatoes, onions, timothy and alfalfa. The crops on these products are more than twice the amount raised on the ordinary California land. The water system which we are installing will be the finest in all California. Steel pipes under pressure, which will permit you having water in the house without the necessity of a domestic well. Call at this office or fill out the enclosed coupon and we will mail you a complete assortment of pictures, descriptions, etc.

FOR SALE—OWENS RIVER VALLEY BARGAINS.

850 acres, rich loam soil, adapted to alfalfa, grain and deciduous fruit; no waste land, 125 shares of water stock; all fenced; 7 miles from town of Bishop in Inyo County; ¾ of the place is in red top and timothy. A splendid piece of land and large enough to develop into an ideal general farm. We have a sacrifice price on this property at $25 per acre. Think of good California land with water, and well located at $25 per acre.

80 acres, dark, sandy loam soil, with 160 inches of water, which is more than the place can use. Land is level and very fertile—will grow anything. Only 4 miles from Bishop, the principal town of Owens River Valley. Price $3000.

We also can offer a bargain in a 25-acre place, with water stock, 6-room house, barn, chicken corrals, garden, 3 acres in alfalfa, close to town. Price $1500.

J. N. WILLIAMS & COMPANY,
202 I. W. Hellman Bldg.,
411 South Main.

FOR SALE—

800 acres, 4 miles from large town, at $60 an acre; 1500 inches of water in the best and cheapest ditch in Owens Valley; 400 acres alfalfa land; good meadow and pasture; a well-balanced combination to make a grand dairy and hog farm; this tract is situated in the heart of the choicest potato and alfalfa section of the valley, where 25 per cent. more alfalfa and larger yields and finer qualities of potatoes are produced than in any part of the county; the Southern Pacific railroad runs directly through the land; this is one of those unusual properties where the amount of water which goes with the land is twice the amount necessary, and the buyer will ultimately be able to dispose of sufficient water to pay for his whole land; this land will cut into eight 100-acre ranches, which will sell easily for $100 per acre this spring. It can be bought today for $15,000 cash, and have your own terms on the balance of $30,000. This is one of the best properties we have had to offer, and is a sure money maker for the man who can handle it.

COVINA GROVES.

We Will Not Handle Poor Groves.

These Are the Best Buys in the District.

What success our business in Covina has attained is due to our policy of working hard to secure agencies of better and cheaper groves than our competitors have, and advertise them by simple, unexaggerated description. This is the time to buy a grove. You not only see what the trees are producing, but you get the crop, which is from 15 per cent. to 20 per cent. of the purchase price.

STERLING GROVES AWAY BELOW INTRINSIC VALUE.

FIVE ACRES FOR $6000, $2000 CASH, balance at 7 per cent. As choice a little grove as you can find. Located in an absolutely frostless section, just above Covina. Trees half navels, half Valencias, 3 years old, every one in perfect condition. Fine water right, soil the best. This is a real snap.

TEN ACRES AWAY BELOW ACTUAL VALUE. Located in an absolutely frostless section, just north of Covina; all set to Valencias, 6 years old. Beautiful soil, full water right. One of the finest home sites in the valley. Trees are in the best of shape, with good crop for their age. We can deliver this property for $11,500, $4000 cash, balance 7 per cent. This property will be worth $20,000 inside of three years.

A FINE HOME PLACE, 7¾ ACRES, on principal boulevard; 5 acres navels, 14 years old; 2½ acres Valencias, 6 years old. Every tree in best of condition. Good crop which goes with the place. Full water right. Good cottage of 5 rooms and bath. Large barn and outbuildings. Yard is very nicely improved. We can deliver property for $13,500.

THE FINEST GROVE IN THE ENTIRE district. Ten acres, mostly navels, all full-bearing. Every tree on this property is in perfect condition and will bear the closest inspection, as grove has had the best of care. One of the best water rights in Southern California goes with the place. The crop on trees is estimated at $5000 and is also included with the property. Owner is non-resident and has given us a price on this property of $18,000, half cash.

A PROPERTY THAT YOU CANNOT AFford to overlook; 26 acres in one of the best locations in Covina, near car line. 16 acres full bearing, 10 acres one-year-old trees, all in fine condition and will bear the closest inspection! 30 shares of Covina water stock, giving it one of the best water rights in Southern California. Soil A-1. Estimated crop $8500, which goes with the place. We can deliver this property for $36,000, which is at least 20 per cent. below its actual value. Terms can be arranged.

SAN DIMAS REAL ESTATE CO.,
SAN DIMAS, CAL.

We offer you this week two magnificent citrus propositions.

First—Twenty acres, practically all Navels, in the well known Charter Oak district, facing on three main highways, near packing houses and public schools. This grove is in magnificent condition, splendid soil and plenty of good water. It is an ideal country home and at the same time a magnificent income proposition. Crop on trees now estimated at 9000 to 10,000 boxes, which goes with the grove.

Improvements—New modern 8-room bungalow, domestic water, large new barn and garage, magnificent oak trees. Here is a proposition that is worth investigating.

Price for the twenty acres, $40,000, one-third cash, balance easy terms. Or we can divide this grove into two ten-acre tracts, selling one ten without improvements and one ten with the house, barn and garage, at very attractive figures. A death in the family is the only reason for the owner selling this grove.

Second—Five acres, one-fourth mile from the town of San Dimas, crop on trees estimated at $2500, all navels. In magnificent condition; extra amount of stock with the best water company in the district. Fine building site and no better place on earth to live than San Dimas.

Price for a quick sale, $11,000.

$5000 cash will handle this. Some one will get this soon.

36 miles east of L. A. on Santa Fe main line, and on the Pacific Electric Railway now completed through this district.

THE CENTER OF A CHOICE ORANGE GROWING DISTRICT.

A COLLEGE TOWN AMID THE ORANGE GROVES.

10 ACRES—$15,500. Half navels and half Valencias, uniform and in splendid condition. Ideal and frostless location on main county boulevard. Double pipelines, good six-room house and large barn. Ample water. Either as a home place or for an investment, here is a property which has big possibilities.

10 ACRES—$17,000. All navels, a magnificent grove which has had the best of care, and is located just right, only a short distance northwest of Claremont on main macadamized road. What more could the investor wish for? Worth $2000 per acre.

11 ACRES—$20,000. Mostly navels with a few Valencias. There is nothing better than this. Large uniform trees, and simply loaded with fruit, 6000-box crop. In the peerless Upland district. Nice nine-room two-story house, large barn and outbuildings. Considering heavy crop, valuable improvements and choice location, this is certainly a snap.

10½ ACRES—$30,000. Mostly navels with few Valencias. A fine corner on beautiful Euclid ave., Upland, car line past the door. Four to five thousand boxes on the trees, which are in splendid condition. Nice two-story seven-room home, with fine large barn. A beautiful home-place and a bargain.

10 ACRES—$12,000. All navels. Here is the biggest snap in the Upland district. A fine corner, trees in splendid condition, have had best of care, and show a wonderful crop for trees of this age, over 2000 boxes now on. Close in. Don't fail to see this.

30 ACRES. 10 acres good vacant land, and 20 acres in orchard as follows: 10 acres 15-year-old navels, 5 acres 5-year-old navels, and 5 acres 5-year-old Valencias. Good nine-room home in excellent condition. Two-room house for hired help, and a good two-story barn. Easily accessible to Upland and a nice home-ranch with good improvements, lawn and ornamental trees. Younger trees in fine condition and have good crop, fair crop on older trees. Here is a snap. Mortgage $10,000, and can take city exchange up to $8000.

Now is the time to buy a grove while the big crops are still on the trees and included. Later on these groves will bring the same prices without the crops. Buy now and make this profit yours.

REMEMBER THIS: ORANGE GROWING IS A DISTINCT SCIENCE, DEPENDING FOR ITS SUCCESS UPON A THOROUGH KNOWLEDGE OF ATTENDANT RISKS.

California offers no other investment so profitable—IF the grove you buy has no handicaps. See to it that your grove has the possibilities it should have, and protect your own interests by purchasing through a reliable agent who is a practical orange grower.

FOR SALE—

A RARE BARGAIN.

Of all the orange groves which have been sold and offered for sale in the past few months in California, I venture to say that not one of them equaled in price, quality and location the one described below. It is a real genuine bargain, 10 acres of Washington navels, 12 years old, soil is perfect for citrus fruit culture, double water rights in a main canal furnishing an abundance of water at a nominal cost, the trees are in perfect condition and are heavy producers of strictly fancy fruit. The grove is located in the choicest residential section of Riverside, fronting on a beautiful paved avenue with all city improvements including a pure domestic water system, 12 minutes by electric car from Courthouse, the raw land without the trees will sell now for upwards of $1250 per acre for subdivision purposes and will continue to increase in value besides furnishing a splendid yearly revenue. The price is only $10,000; $5400 cash, balance terms. Look into this as it is a real bargain. S. D. MORRIS, 618 Grant Bldg., 4th and Broadway. A2982.

10-ACRE GROVE.
5 ACRES NAVELS.
5 ACRES VALENCIAS.
ALL FULL BEARING.

Of all the groves we have investigated this season this one is the best we have found, NOT ONLY on account of the great uniformity of the trees, or the wonderfully rich loam land, or the abundance of free water, BUT because it COMBINES ALL of these, as well as being BOTH navels and Valencias, located near one of the BEST towns within one hour's run from the city, the trees are perfectly uniform and FULL BEARING, with a splendid crop. THIS IS A FIRST-CLASS PROPERTY and WORTH THE MONEY. Terms.

THE KIGGENS LAND CO.,
610 Delta Bldg., 426 S. Spring st. F5745.

FOR SALE—UNDER FORCED SALE. AT 1-3 BELOW MARKET VALUE. ONE OF THE MOST PRODUCTIVE and BEST LOCATED ORANGE GROVES in Southern California.

Ten acres of Washington Navel trees, 10 years old and in splendid condition. Soil, water and climate ABSOLUTELY RIGHT ensuring a net annual income exceeding $3000.

Faces a beautiful paved avenue in the best residence section of one of our most attractive cities and has already at hand every city convenience including electric car line.

A grove of this age and character in this location can not be duplicated at $16,000, but for a quick sale we offer this property at $11,000, and we will carry up to $6000 under mortgage if desired.

FOR SALE—

A BEAUTIFUL

Navel orange grove of 10 acres, superbly situated within the corporate limits of the hustling, bustling, little city of Corona. The trees are 12 year old and are in fine condition, having been recently fertilized, pruned, fumigated and the land cross plowed. There is an abundance of water for both domestic and irrigating purposes. A 5-room house and some other improvements are on the place. The price is $9500 including the crop, which is away below what the grove is worth. A house and lot or good lots worth $3000 will be taken in part payment, balance cash. Now is the time to buy this grove and secure next season's bumper crop, and while it can be gotten at such a low price. S. D. MORRIS, 618 Grant Bldg. Fourth and Broadway. A2983.

FOR SALE—
IN THE FASHIONABLE
RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT OF WESTLAKE.

I HAVE BEEN FAVORED with instructions to sell one of the choicest and best furnished apartment-houses in this fashionable district. The apartments are divided into 2 and 3 rooms. The furniture and furnishings are absolutely new and have been selected with the greatest taste. The location is the best in Westlake and I can secure a ten years' lease for an approved purchaser. There is an assured income of $200 a month all the year round.

LUXURIOUSLY FURNISHED.

THE CHOICE OF THE WEST SIDE.

This is one of the best appointed and without doubt the best paying apartment-houses in its district. There are 65 rooms, private baths, steam heat and every modern convenience, including elevator. This is absolutely the lowest rental in Los Angeles, being less than $5 a room, and shows a net profit of $400 a month. This house is within easy walking distance and within a block of the car service. During the summer past it not only ran full, but had a "waiting list." I can submit this with every confidence and can make the terms easy to a reliable buyer. The lease is good and owner will consider some good trade. You should investigate this immediately.

THIS HOTEL CAN DEFY COMPETITION.

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE—In the busiest section of the city. Hotel of 120 rooms each with hot and cold running water and steam heat. The furniture is in excellent condition and will stand inspection. The present owner is retiring and will dispose of the business on the most advantageous terms. This is a grand opportunity for any one looking for a good bargain. I can get a lease of ten years and $12,000 or less will handle the transaction.

LONG LEASE—One of the best hotels in the center of the city. This house is well known as one of the best commercial houses in Los Angeles, and commands a steady connection. There are 60 rooms, well lighted and ventilated, with all the modern conveniences. There is a net income of about $500 a month which can be proved by an inspection of the accounts. I can place a good buyer here for $9000 and take a part in exchange. The hotel is free of incumbrances.

FOR LEASE UNFURNISHED—There is a great demand for this class of apartment-houses and this is one of the best in the city and will be ready for occupancy in a few days. The arrangements have been well carried out and all details have been carefully attended to. It is on a prominent corner and a good lease can be obtained. It contains 50 rooms divided into 2 and 3-room apartments. Terms are very moderate.

TO LEASE — New buildings suitable for apartment or rooming-houses. I have them all; I have one specially constructed for the requirements of the center of the city which will be ready for occupancy early in the month. They are all attractive propositions. Don't fail to see me if you want new buildings. I HAVE THEM ALL.

I LEASE and sell nothing but apartment-houses and hotels.

$350,000 BUSINESS PROPERTY.
To exchange.
I will exchange excellent business property in Chicago for Pacific Coast lands, timber or agricultural; California lands preferred. Any good property considered. This is an excellent opportunity to get a good income property at a very low price in exchange. The real value of my property based on income is $500,000 as it will bring in 5 per cent. and more on that valuation. My price is $350,000 and will trade subject to $150,000 mortgage. No objection to agents. Submit outline of what you have. Immediate action requested.
GEO. W. ELIASSEN, 969 Broadway, Oakland, California.

FOR EXCHANGE—
Twenty acres of 10-year-old lemons, close city; produced $8000 last year and good for $10,000 this year. Can be delivered for $25,000, and owner will consider portion in good exchange. There is nothing in city or country that will show better returns on investment than this. Also have 10 acres in 15-year-old lemons at Rialto on which owner will take part exchange.

Lemons will show better returns for next ten years than other citrus fruit, and even at $3000 per acre and up are not often offered for sale, so don't neglect above.

Also have a few good orange groves in various districts, on which part or all exchange can be taken. Drop in, we have had a long term of practical experience in citrus and know conditions thoroughly.

WANTED—
Well-secured loans
In amounts of $1000 to $25,000.

The man who uses borrowed money wants to obtain it at the LOWEST RATE OF INTEREST, and is entitled to prompt and efficient service.

You can borrow money on IMPROVED REAL ESTATE located in Los Angeles, Pasadena or Hollywood from THE JOHN M. C. MARBLE COMPANY AT LESS COST than you can get it elsewhere, as the company loans its OWN MONEY and charges NO COMMISSION.

We want desirable loans. Our rates are 6½ to 7 per cent. per annum for terms of three to five years.

THERE IS NO DELAY in borrowing from this company, as the MONEY IS ON HAND and READY AS SOON AS THE LOAN IS APPROVED.

You are saved annoyance. No prospective loaners are sent out to be shown through your property. The company's appraiser inspects the security and the loan is made on his approval.

Call at the office and let us know whether you will be in the market for money in the near future.

PRODUCING LEASE.
The Oil and Metals Leasing Company is organized under the laws of Arizona. Capital stock, one million shares, fully paid, and nonassessable. Principal leases, Gold Park district, Riverside county, California.

The Oil and Metals Leasing Company is organized for the purpose of leasing and working producing gold and silver mines and producing oil lands. We now have under five years' lease eight of the best mines in the Gold Park district. These mines are opened up and ore is ready to break down and mill. A new 50-ton custom mill is now under way and we will soon be milling ore. There is not a single promoter in this company. We are practical business and mining men—men who mine in the ground, and not in an office.

We never buy a mine, we never attempt to discover a mine; we simply lease what has proven to be a producing mine that we can work to a profit. We take absolutely no chance, and for this reason we will be paying dividends during the entire life of our charter, which is 25 years.

You may be discouraged with mining and you may be discouraged with oil; the reason is simply that you have invested in companies that have either misrepresented their condition to you, or have failed to open up property that will pay a profit on all outstanding stock. We will never be in that condition. This is a business company, conducted on the same plan that a mercantile company is conducted. A merchant would not open a store if there was no one to buy his goods, and he could not run a store if he had no customers. We cannot pay profit from a lease unless the ore or oil is in the ground to be mined or pumped, and as we take no chance it has to be there or we cannot lease. Is it not plain that you cannot lose, that there is no risk whatever? We have either got all the money from the sales of stock in the bank or else invested in the work on a mine that we know will pay a profit.

Do not overlook the fact that we are now working night and day. We want to increase our force, as we will soon have a mill at hand, then the mines will pay their own way as well as big net profits.

We are fully equipped, and have three complete camps under five years' lease. We have two complete assay offices, three boarding-houses, three bunk houses, two barns, one freight team and one light driving team, three blacksmith shops, three modern hoisting engines. We have air compressors and use machine drills.

The equipment we have under lease is worth $50,000. The property we have under lease has over $200,000 worth of development done on it. There is over a mile of underground workings, nearly 20 miles of good roads have been built.

We have leased the well-known Italia property, consisting of 19 claims. Samples of this rich ore, maps and complete information can be had at our office. We will sell a small amount of this stock at 10c per share. It will be worth par in less than six months.

BUT IT MAY MEAN
THE FOUNDATION
OF AN INDEPENDENT
FORTUNE FOR YOU.

La Ventura Oil Company, organized to operate a fifty-year lease, 160 acres, one-eighth royalty, perpetual pumping nights, option to buy, in the general oil belt of Ventura county, where a 50-barrel well of 25 gravity oil is worth $50,000 and will earn $50 a day, and furnish funds to sink additional wells.

AND HAS SINCE ACQUIRED
A forty-year lease, 160 acres, north-half of the north half sec. 14, T 28 S, R 27 E, Mount Diablo baseline and Meridian, about six miles north of Bakersfield, the derrick is now completed and is on the southeast corner of the land on a small hill, about 1200 feet above sea level; carpenters will soon be at work on the drilling rig, bunk and cook houses, then actual drilling will be commenced.

READ THIS
Part of report of Chas. S. Young to Board of Directors of La Ventura Oil Company, Jan. 4th, 1911.

"In the Shasta well, in the S.E. ¼ of sec. 28-27, William P. Todd, manager and principal owner of the Shasta Oil Co., says: We struck two well-defined bodies of oil, one at a depth of 730 feet, 10 feet of sand, also much lighter gravity than any in the Kern River field. It is my conviction that the main body of oil lies at a depth of 1600 feet under Sec. 14-28-27."

"Affidavits at the time of drilling the well are now on file in the county records of Kern county to the effect that oil was found by the Lincoln Oil Company in their well, located in the S.E. ¼ of the N.E. ¼, sec. 14-28-27.

"The foregoing facts are proof conclusive to the mind of any one familiar with conditions in the California oil fields, and especially so in the Kern River field, that sec. 14, T 28 S, R 27 E, is proven oil territory."

We have been telling you that La Ventura Oil stock was the best proposition on the market today, and the addition of this valuable lease means it EVEN BETTER.

Buy La Ventura Oil stock while you can buy it for ONLY ten cents per share and get in line for the next advance.

Send check for the number of shares you desire, send postal for report of "The Promised Land."

Buy at ten cents before drilling starts. A small purchase of this stock NOW may place you beyond want in the future.

WANTED—DO YOU WANT TO GO INTO A great big mining proposition, a developed property, over $250,000 equipment, FIVE miles of workings, immense reserves of ore, and plant practically ready for production.

We offer an inside proposition which will yield handsome interest immediately.

Mill operated very successfully, a good profit maker.

Look into this if you want high-class, immediately productive investment.

6 per cent. first mortgage bonds at an attractive figure for an investment of sufficient amount. Bonds offered at a figure which will yield better interest rate than you can secure by any other investment. Address F, box 400, TIMES OFFICE.

PREORGANIZATION STOCK.
We are offering preorganization stock in a company formed on a lease of 20 acres in the famous Section Six, Coalinga. This company has leased a well in oil, with drilling rigs, boilers and engines. The lease and equipment are worth $40,000. Our well can be put on the pump and should produce from 50 to 500 barrels daily. The Lucile, in same section, just brought in a new well of 600 barrels. The Silver Tip produced 20,000 barrels. We are spudding in a well within legal distance of that well.

We will sell a small block for preliminary work at only 4 cents.

"MEXICO IS PERHAPS THE FINEST territory in all the world excluding the hot lowlands by the Gulf, the climate is generally exquisite. The soil is surpassingly rich; the mineral resources inexhaustible and of the finest kind. This language seems like exaggeration, but it would be hard to exaggerate the excellence of Mexico in these respects." Wilson's Resources of Modern Countries, Vol. 2, page 217.

The Choix Consolidated Company owns outright a number of large bodies of these minerals, copper, gold and silver. The company has purchased a modern up-to-date smelting plant which is now being built to treat its rich ores. There is no better opportunity for investment than in this—one of the greatest aggregations of valuable mineral deposits in Mexico.

Returns from the ores treated in the company's own smelter, will begin, to come in very soon and as there are no debts to pay, the net profits will go into the treasury of the company for the benefit of all its stockholders. Careful, efficient management, high-grade ores and low cost of production assures large net profits.

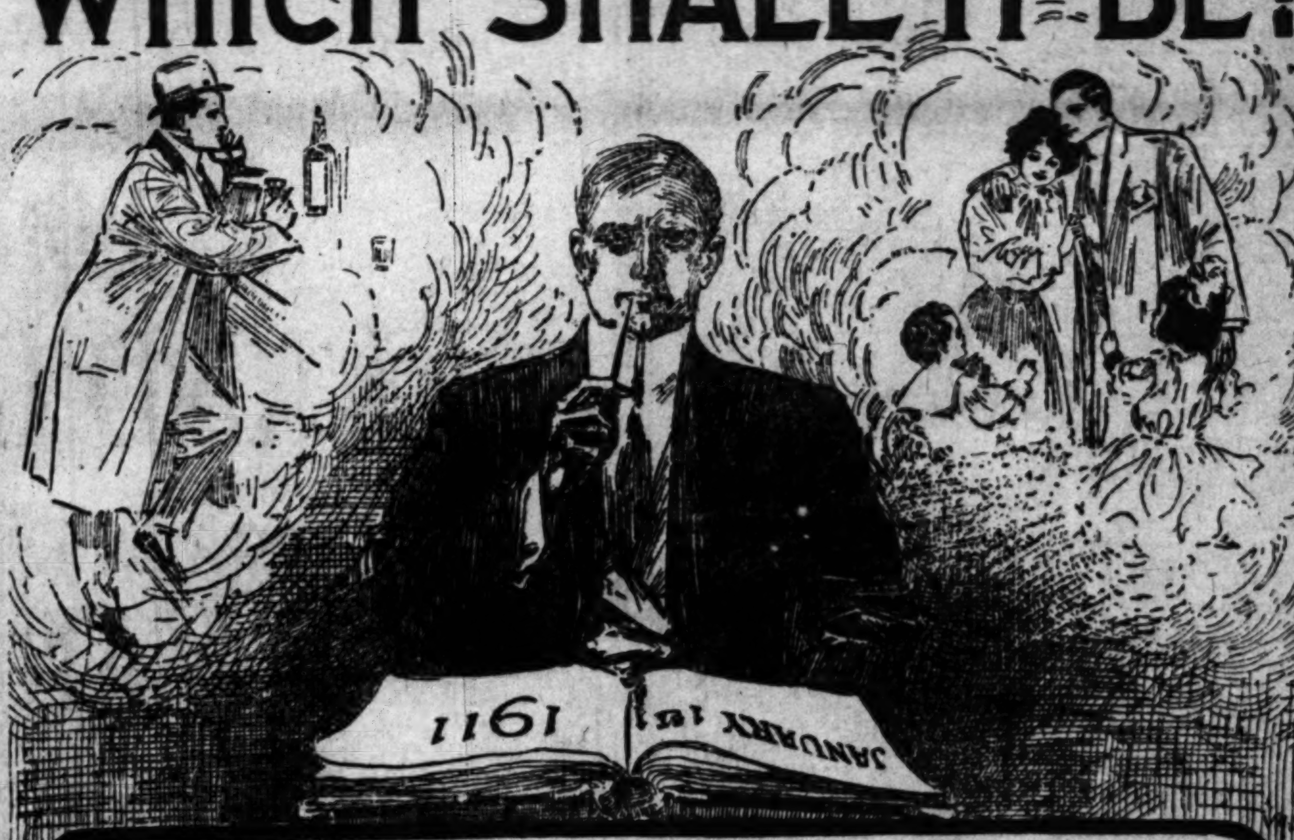
WHICH SHALL IT BE?



Now is the Time for You to Decide for Yourself, Which Shall It Be for 1911? Right Now, Think It Over Carefully. Isn't it best for You to take Care of Your Home, Health and Happiness?

It is not popularly considered an easy thing to quit drinking at most times of the year—not that the calendar has anything to do with it, but your boon companions and daily associates have. They have a way of keeping at you and insisting on your showing that you are just as good a fellow today as you were yesterday—and can hold just as much.

Each New Year's day all this is changed. It's the fashion then to get on the water wagon. Everybody is doing it, most of them with the emphatic assertion that they are going to stay on all the year. What, then, does New Year's Day really mean to the drinking man—to the man who has long realized the disadvantage and the handicap of this habit, but has never seemed to find just the right time for reversing the current of his life and taking a clean start? In this, as in any other business proposition, it is wise to find the lines of least resistance and follow them with your eyes wide open.

One week ago was New Year's Day. If you swore off drinking then it caused not even a ripple among your companions. They are used to it. For the time being it's the style. Your resolution will not be met by questioning, your determination will not be weakened by scorn or ridicule—if these things matter to you, and they do to most of us, you will simply be one of many thousands who climb onto the water wagon every New Year's Day—except for one thing—you will stay on.

How are you going to do this? How are you going to stay on the wagon? Simply by cleaning house, as every other business man and business concern does at this time of the year; by ridding your business life—and your home life—of this great cloud that has been a drawback to you for so many years. This will take you just three days of your time, spent in a quiet home.

When a man returns to his family after three days at the Gatlin Institute, it seems just the same to all of them as if he'd come back from a long, long journey. And he has. He's come back from the land of discouragement, disappointment and heartsick weariness of the tenacious handicap—back to the fireside full of happy welcome and red with the light of good cheer.

Gatlin Treatment

The "Easy Way" to Stop Drinking

We cure the drink habit by the simple and harmless process of eliminating the poison which alcohol leaves in the brain, bowels, stomach, kidneys, blood and nerves of man. This poison creates false tastes excites and overdevelops nerve cells, destroys nerve power and makes man wholly a prey to the demands of his overwrought nervous system.

We use no hypodermics or poisonous drugs of any kind.

The whole atmosphere of this institution is that of a home and not of a hospital. A visit of inspection will be a revelation to you.

Each patient is treated under contract to cure perfectly in three days. Any expression of dissatisfaction on leaving the institute with either the cure, the treatment or the management means that the fee paid will be immediately refunded.

The Gatlin Home Treatment is for those who cannot come to the institute for three days.

A Policeman Surprised.

Lieutenant Barney Kelleher of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Police Station, New York, exhibited a letter last night, declaring that it was the first of its kind he ever had received, and that the first time he ever had had returned to him the various small sums which from time to time he had loaned applicants at the police station. The letter, which was unsigned, read:

"To the Night Sergeant, East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Police Station: Dear Sir—Enclosed please find 25 cents I borrowed from you on Christmas. So wishing you a happy and prosperous New Year, buy a drink with the change."

Twenty-five cents was inclosed in the envelope. Kelleher said the borrower, a young man, had visited the station a few minutes after midnight Christmas morning and explained that he had used up all his money

SANTA MARIA, Jan. 4.—The the Los Alamos Petroleum with a party of Los Angeles ists, just closed and the over, marks a new and cant step in the affairs of yon. It is a most auspicious of the new year, and goes establishing unbounded faith new territory.

It was just a bit over three when John Doherty unfolded to two or three of his which they should buy over acres in Cat Canyon, known Rossi tract. At that time No. 1 well, less than a mile on the pump with a very duction and giving no sign gushing proclivities which lished later. Many of Doherty's among the operators hereabouts to dissuade him from his he was firm in his belief in tory and was not to be his purpose. So a rig was on the little forty-acre tract heavy drill commenced way into the earth. From time, whenever Cat Canyon mentioned by the "Old Field tors, there would be shrugs shoulders and muttered about "dam-phools." Then Palmer No. 1 awoke from its session on the pump, and the on the Blochman ranch with wealth-producing "Only a spurt of energy lated pool of oil," said the sagaciously. And the drill on the Rossi tract kept lessly pounding its way into Business Methods.

SCIENCE IS ECONOMY.

Millions Saved by the Administration.

President Hopes to Accomplish Much More.

Departments Are Getting Good Overhauling.

[Special to Philadelphia Press.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—Fifty millions is the immense total of savings of the people's money that has been effected by President Taft in one year of administration under his economies thus far put in operation. savings are promised each year during of his tenure of office. These have been made without impairing service in the executive departments, without stinting government and progress and without costing useful man his position.

The base of the President's plan is form in the efficiency of public; the prevention of duplication and effort; the economizing of and the conservation of mental physical strength. He is an ardent believer in the new science of business management.

IDEA AS CABINET MEMBER.

President got his idea as to possible savings of public money through introduction of modern business methods in the departments of the government while Secretary of War. A forward impulse was given his determination to have such methods by the statements of Senator made in the Senate, that good business methods in the conduct of government business public expenditures could be cut $300,000,000 a year. While the President has never subscribed to the estimate of Senator he was certain that great savings could be made and he issued his to that end.

Representative Walter I. Smith of one of the most influential members of the House Committee on Appropriations, told the House last Saturday that the President's economy had cut expenditures in the departments fully $50,000,000 in the last year. "The indications are," he continued, "that if the President's plans persevered in and lived up to strictly even greater savings can be made ally in future years. And there be no criticism of the impairment public service."

National economy is the President's He does not expect to be able to cut off great sums from any one department, but he does expect to save by through application of business in all the departments. He is pleased with what has been accomplished, and he expects to accomplish The work has just begun. Only department, the Treasury, has undergone a thorough overhauling. There eight other departments to receive similar treatment. When this work is through, the President will feel that he put his house in order.

EXPERTS STUDY METHODS.

A committee of Treasury officials, headed by Charles D. Norton, then Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, had charge of the overhauling and reorganization of the work in the Treasury Department. Mr. Norton is now private secretary to the President and has been placed in general charge of the work in other departments. Prof. Cleaveland, New York expert, is probing into the business methods in the departments. was selected by the President to study conditions and to report on ways which money could be saved in the transaction of departmental business. Cleaveland has submitted a number of preliminary reports to Mr. Norton. Congress gave the President $100,000 to make the investigation he desired, and there has been no criticism of the results thus far obtained.

When all the reports are in the hands of the President, and the experts have worked out their business science economy plan for each department, the President will order its adoption in each department. He will notify Congress what he has accomplished in the matter of savings of expenditures in departments with the money placed at his disposal, and give an outline of new business methods that have been installed.

Mr. Norton was selected to lead the work in the Treasury Department by Secretary MacVeagh, who was in full sympathy with the President's wishes views. Mr. Norton took as consultants the other Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury. He appointed committees made up of heads of bureaus which showed the greatest efficiency. These committees gave details of the organization and in their own bureaus divisions, investigated the work in bureaus and divisions, and made comparisons. Efficiency cards on each employee were sent to each chief for report on each employee under him, and employees received cards for report bureau chiefs and for suggestions simplification of work prevention duplication, better facilites and sanitary conditions.

These reports were digested by Mr. Norton and his assistants, expert advice was taken and reforms were instituted, resulting in the saving of labor, of time, of duplication, of money, with better conservation of health. There were many changes in the personnel of the several bureaus and divisions; chiefs were demoted and new heads appointed; tanrsfers of old employees to other departments were made, and some lost out from the government service, but they were not many.

OTHER DEPARTMENTS BUSY.

This scheme worked so well that President Taft instructed others of his Cabinet to adopt like methods of investigations in their respective departments. The committees selected under this order are now at work and their reports are being made to Mr. Norton and Prof. Cleaveland, by whom they are being studied in connection with facts gathered by Prof. Cleaveland in his independent investigations. The President went to his Cabinet members individually with instructions to reduce their estimates for expenditures in their departments to the lowest possible amount. The first result of this order was the cutting last year of $10,000,000 each in the Departments of War and Navy. The President disapproves the plan of department heads asking Congress for money in excess of the actual needs of the respective department, with the understanding that Congress will pare the estimates, but leave an increase over the sum given for the foregoing year, the increase to be used in extending the work of the department. By the President's instructions the departments now send to Congress estimates for the ensuing year for actual needs with recommendations to Congress for increased appropriations for

IDEA AS CABINET MEMBER.

President got his idea as to pos savings of public money through introduction of modern business in the departments of the gov while Secretary of War. A forward impulse was given his tion to have such methods by the statements of Senator made in the Senate, that good business methods in the of government business public could be cut $300,000,000 a While the President has never to the estimate of Senator , he was certain that great sav would be made and he issued his to that end.

TAFT'S HIGHEST AMBITION.

Results thus far obtained have convinced the President that the government can be run on lines of a well-conducted business establishment and he will not rest until he has it on that basis. He regards this matter of reforming the public service for greater economy and efficiency as one of the greatest possible achievements of his administration and he has enlisted the active sympathy and support of the employees of the departments in the work. Results of the reorganization in the Treasury Department convinced the employees there was no desire to get rid of old and faithful workers capable of doing the work assigned them. The departments are working in greater harmony and unison than ever before, suggestions are being offered freely and duplications, the most costly evil under the old system, are being done away with rapidly.

MONUMENTS MARK LUTHER'S TRAVELS.

Old Houses in Many German Cities Bear Inscription Relating Visits.

BY WILLIAM E. CURTIS,

Writing from Germany to the Minneapolis Journal.

The people of Oppenheim, a thrifty little town where he rested on his way to Worms, assert that Luther wrote his famous hymn, "Ein Feste Burg ist unser Gott," at that place. Other authorities claim that it was written at the castle of Coburg several years later. Still others believe that both claims have good foundation and can be reconciled on the theory that the original draft, made at Oppenheim, was revised and put in more perfect form of words and music at the castle of Coburg. A hotel, called the "Ritter," at which Luther lodged while at Oppenheim, is still standing and bears an appropriate inscription. The landlord will show you the room in which he slept and will explain how, "being left-handed, he opened the casement in a fashion that has since been imitated by everybody in the village."

At Pfiffigheim, a few miles distant from Oppenheim, is a decrepit old elm called the "Lutherbaum," which, according to tradition, was planted by the reformer while en route to Worms. The story goes that as he was riding along this road with his friends he noticed a peasant planting trees by the roadside. Stopping the cart, he said:

"Give me one of those saplings that I may place it in the earth! God grant that my doctrines may flourish like this tree."

A fine old house with a big bay window at the corner, supported upon a fluted column, claims to have been the lodging place of Luther at Pfiffigheim for several days, beginning with April 14, 1521, on his way to Worms. He tarried at Leipsic, Naumberg, Weimar, Erfurt and Gotha, traveling in a cart with leather curtains, and upon his arrival at Frankfort was taken ill. He wrote his wife from the city April 14, saying: "I have been ill and am so now to a degree I have never known before." The house bears an inscription, reading:

"In silentio et spe erit fortitudo vestra."

MONUMENTS FOR REFORMER.

Schmalkalden, a manufacturing town of about 10,000 inhabitants, about twenty-five miles from Eisenach, on the way to Coburg, was the meeting place of the "League of Schmalkalden," one of the first formal organizations of Protestants, in 1531. The "Gasthof of Krone," a tavern in which a covenant drawn up by Luther, Melanchton and other reformers, was signed in 1537, still stands, and bears a bronze tablet reciting this historical fact. There is a statue of Luther in the public square, a fountain is dedicated to him, and a monument to Karl Wilhelm, composer of the "Wacht am Rhein." He was a native of the place, born in 1815 and died in 1873.

A few miles farther on is Liebenstein, a beautifully situated health resort, with Chalybeate springs and several comfortable hotels. The waters are used both for bathing and drinking, and are said to be good for rheumatism and other diseases of the blood. The surroundings are romantic and attractive; the altitude of the place is about 1200 feet; it is surrounded by a dense forest of pines, through which roads and walks have been cut and pretty rest houses and cafes placed at frequent intervals. On a peak about 2000 feet above the hotels are extensive ruins of a fine old castle of the fourteenth century, called the Buggstein, which is reached by zigzag paths and drives.

The Schloss Altenstein, a summer residence of the duke of Saxe-Meiningen, stands on a rugged pinnacle of limestone about two miles farther through the woods, and the cliffs around it are filled with caves and grottos. There is a subterranean lake also, which has a mysterious interest for geologists.

KIDNAPED BY FRIEND.

Four miles from Altenstein by a good road, through a dense pine forest, is a monument erected in 1857 on the spot where Luther was kidnaped by order of his friend, the elector Frederick of Saxony, in May, 1521, while he was returning by this route to his home in Wittenburg. He was kept in these woods for several days by his captors, until the way was clear to convey him to the castle at Wartburg. A tree known as "Luther's Beech," under which he was captured, was destroyed by lightning in 1841, and the monument, an ornamental shaft of stone protected by an iron fence, was provided to mark the place.

Friedrichroda, the most fashionable summer resort in this part of the country, is on the direct road, five and a half miles from Waltershausen, which is its railway station. The ducal chateau of Reinhardsbrunn, surrounded by lovely meadows, was formerly a Benedictine monastery, and was converted into a residence for the Duke of Saxe-Weimar in 1827. In the rear of the chateau is one of the most magnificent groves of beech trees in the world. Some of them are said to be 500 years old.

About seven miles from the monument is the lovely town of Ruhla, another popular resort much frequented by the solid burghers of Central Germany. The two hotels are well kept, although they are not ostentatious. The food is abundant and beer flows incessantly. The seven or eight hundred inhabitants of Ruhla are engaged in the manufacture of wooden tobacco pipes from the roots, knots, gnarled branches and excrescences that grow on the trees in the forests. More than 20,000,000 of these pipes are turned out every year and are shipped to all parts of the world.

A short distance from Ruhla is the Grosse Inselfberg, the highest peak of the Thuringian mountains, which rises more than 3000 feet above the sea.

Not far from the village of Schmalkalden is the castle of Wilhelmburg, which dates back to the fifteenth century and is one of the best preserved of all the ancient fortresses in that part of Germany. It is surrounded by a beautiful garden and meadows in which a fine herd of Holstein cattle was grazing when we passed the place. Over the entrance is a German inscription, which, translated, reads as follows:

> Whoever passes through this door
> Should keep in mind for evermore
> That Jesus Christ our Lord was given
> To be an open door to heaven.

Under the inscription is a coat of arms bearing a lion with his paw resting upon a shield. It bears the date 1583.

The architecture in this part of Germany resembles that of Hildensheim and Nuremburg. The front walls are of timber joints filled in with masonry and covered with whitewashed plaster. There is a coat of arms over almost every door, which indicates that the burghers who erected these dwellings 300, 400 and 500 years ago, claimed descent from Saxon nobles and understood the art of heraldry. Window gardens decorate the front of every house, ivy, Virginia creeper and other climbing vines conceal the corners and embellish the towers, and there is a pretty garden in every dooryard. A tiny stream of water flows on both sides of nearly every street; ducks, geese and chickens are more numerous than children, and most of the teaming is done by oxen. You seldom see a horse.

INSCRIPTIONS MARK HOUSES.

Inscriptions are frequent upon the fronts of the houses, particularly hotels and inns. At Oberhof, one of the most charming of the summer resorts in the Thuringian forest, you can read the following couplet in artistic letters between the windows of the outside walls of an inn:

> "If you stop, you will be welcomed with hospitality;
> If you pass by, may God prosper your journey."

Over the entrance to a park much frequented by workingmen is this appropriate inscription:

> "No one should enter here unless he has done a day's work and has thus earned rest and refreshment."

Most of these resorts are patronized as after-cures by people who have been to Carlsbad, Marienbad and other spas. The air is so pure and full of ozone, the surroundings are so attractive, the walks are so enticing that every one who comes is stimulated to physical exertion and soon recovers the strength he had lost drinking the waters.

But all of the people you see are not loiterers. We met many grimy miners and stalwart woodsmen as we climbed over the hills and through the woods of Thuringia. There are several iron-mines in the neighborhood, and Schmalkalden has several furnaces where the ore is smelted and foundries where it is worked up into articles of hardware.

The owner of the "Sannerschehaus," in which Martin Luther lodged during the meetings of the Schmalkalden league, is owned by the proprietor of the largest mine, who takes great pride to showing the room where the great reformer slept and worked and the handsome drawing-room with a richly frescoed ceiling in which he held consultations with other members of the league.

Waltershausen, then an obscure village, is now a prosperous manufacturing town where shiploads of toys are made every year which are very largely exported to the United States.

When the Cow Rang the Bell.

A farmer named Jones, residing near Struthers, has a cow that announced the birth of a calf by ringing the dinner bell.

While the family was at breakfast a mysterious clanging was heard in the back yard. An investigation disclosed the fact that the cow was responsible. With the rope in her mouth she was pulling away for dear life. Jones chased the cow away, but she returned and commenced ringing the bell again. When at last Jones followed her into the barnyard Bossie led him to where a fine calf was found. The cow and her offspring were taken into the barn and given warm quarters.

Jones says the cow had seen the bell rung to call farm hands from the field, and decided that she could get proper attention by doing the same thing.

"Don't tell me animals don't reason," says Jones.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

An Old Bellboy.

A tourist arrived at a hotel near the Grand Central Station yesterday, and when the bellboy, in answer to the clerk's call, stepped forward to take the hand baggage to the room assigned to the new arrival the latter looked quizzically at the "boy" and said: "You look enough like the boy who took up things for me here twenty-five years ago to be his brother." The servant smiled and said: "You are nearly right, sir, because I'm the man who waited on you then." On further questioning he said: "I was one of the old boys at that time, and pretty soon it'll be thirty-six years since I've been bellboy in this house," and Edward Saunders, probably the oldest bellboy in years of service in the country, marched proudly away with the bags and umbrellas.—[New York Sun

Reminded of His Wife.

"It must have been frightful," said Mrs. Bossim to her husband, who was in the earthquake. "Tell me what was your first thought when you awakened in your room at the hotel and heard the alarm."

"My first thought was of you," answered Mr. Bossim.

"How noble!"

"Yes. First thing I knew a vase off the mantel caught me in the ear; then a chair whirled in my direction, and when I jumped to the middle of the room four or five books and a framed picture struck me all at once."

Even after saying that, he affected to wonder what made her son angry for the remainder of the evening.—[Mack's National Monthly.

HIGH FINANCIAL ADVENTURES OF SIR JOHN KYNNERSLEY.

BY A. C. FOX-DAVIES.

VI—How Sir John Dealt in Tobacco.

SIR JOHN could never quite be certain how it was the idea came to strike him; but, in thinking it over afterwards, he supposed the real source of origin lay in the many newspaper anticipations of the Parliamentary budget and the conjectures which were then flooding the press.

The great drawback, in his own mind, was that, scheme how he would, he did not, and could not, see how he could plunder with it, Koodoorian, the money-lender who had plundered him. Confederates the baronet had never had. He always hoped for, and looked forward to, the time when, as Sir John Kynnersley, a wealthy baronet, he would seek rank and station, and the public recognition of it, to which he knew himself to be of birth entitled. And, when that time came, he meant to have no little fly in the ointment of his enjoyment by the knowledge that his reputation was at the mercy of others.

Without a confederate, he despaired of ever bleeding Koodoorian in this particular way, because the execution of this particular scheme demanded a personal interview, and he doubted his ability again to meet Koodoorian face to face and pass unrecognized. The scheme, moreover, was a thing no sane man would ever put into writing. To do so was to court suspicion. And yet the whole thing was so very plausible, and Koodoorian was the very man to fall before its patent attractions. The baronet finally abandoned the idea of fleecing Koodoorian "this journey," though he did so with reluctance, and donning silk hat, frock coat, and an eye-glass, he started out one morning on a round of visits in the city.

. . . .

"I'm afraid I'm very busy, Mr.—Mr. —er"—and he glanced at the card—"Wilson, and can only spare you a few moments. What is it you wish to see me about?" said a stout, florid person, as the baronet was ushered into the private office of Mr. Wolff, the managing director of Messrs. Trout and Goostein, the well-known firm with half a hundred tobacco stores in every large town.

"Mr. Wolff, I presume?"

"Yes, yes. What can I do for you? As I said, I've only a few minutes at liberty."

"Well, then, I'll call again some other time. You evidently don't know in the least to whom you are talking. I'm not accustomed to be spoken to in that manner. I came to do you a service, which I imagined might be appreciated. Evidently I was mistaken, though it would make a difference of many thousands of pounds to your firm."

"My dear sir, I didn't in the least know; you must pardon my not recognizing you at first" (he didn't even then.) "James," he said to the clerk who answered his bell, "just give orders in the outer office that I am engaged for the present, and cannot see anybody, and kindly see yourself that I am not disturbed while this gentleman is here. Now then, sir," he added, turning to the baronet, "I am quite at your service."

"Well, I hardly know how to begin, Mr. Wolff. Can I absolutely rely on your discretion, and also upon your honor not to divulge our conversation?"

"Absolutely, Mr. Wilson."

"Well, at the last general meeting of your company, you, as chairman, made some remarks as to the speculative buying of tobacco shortly before the announcement of the Budget, and it seemed to me that an authentic hint from a well-informed quarter might be of considerable value to your firm."

"I can assure you it would, Mr. Wilson; but that seems to me to be almost the only government information which is not purchasable. Er—I presume, from what you said, that you are a shareholder?" (The baronet bowed; he held a couple of £1 shares, which he had bought a few days previously, anticipating the inquiry.) "Well, I don't mind admitting to you, Mr. Wilson, that on past occasions we have left no stone unturned in our attempts to get at the information, but I confess we have quite failed. My own impression is that the officials whom one can usually bribe don't themselves know; for our experience is that what is known is generally purchasable."

"I quite agree with you, Mr. Wolff. Tried the office of the Chancellor of the Exchequer?"

"Yes, and we've bid pretty high in that quarter; so high, in fact, that we came to the conclusion that, even in that office, it isn't known beforehand. Of course, they all try the high-falutin game of pious rectitude; but then, it's so easy for them all to do that when none of them know."

"I've no doubt there is a great deal of truth in what you say, and, as a shareholder in your company, I must really congratulate you on the great efforts you make to advance the interests of your firm. I'm sure it's very disinterested of you, Mr. Wolff. Of course, some people might object to that sort of thing, but in these days of business competition we all have to, haven't we, Mr. Wolff? And it's the early bird with the first information, isn't it?"

"I must say you express my sentiments very admirably, Mr. Wilson. Are you a business man? If not, you are a loss to the city of London. Have you heard anything that you think can be depended upon? I'm quite prepared to make it well worth your while."

"Well, what do you put the figure at?"

"Ah! To a gentleman, I suppose, we must make it guineas. For really authentic information, shall we say a douceur of one hundred guineas?"

Without comment, the baronet arose from the table, picked up his hat and gloves, and bowed as he moved to the door.

"Stop, sir. Did I make a mistake? Let's discuss the matter."

"My price is £5000—you needn't bother about the guineas. But I'm not disposed to discuss. It's worth that to you, and you can take it or leave it. If you don't take it, there are plenty of others who will; but if you do intend to take it, you must say so pretty quickly."

"Please sit down, Mr. Wilson. Now then, to be perfectly frank, the information is worth that to me, if it is undoubtedly authentic and unimpeachable, but I must be satisfied on that point beyond all doubt; as, to make it worth my while to pay on that basis I must deal in big sums and risk a good deal of money. How do you propose to satisfy me?"

"I thought you said you recognized me. Look here, you've got a Whitaker's Almanac on the table. Turn up the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Got it?"

"Yes. What then?"

"Look at the name of his private secretary."

Wolff immediately referred to the book, which he then carefully put into place.

"I don't think I need to say any more. I'm quite prepared to pay the price you mention. How will you have it? Check?"

"Oh, dear, no. Gold, please. And I may say at once, I cannot sign any receipt. There must be nothing in writing, for if anything comes out, I shall deny point-blank that I've ever [illegible] ty years of unblemished reputation and good service to my credit."

"It will be very awkward for me with my auditors, having no receipt to show for such a large payment."

"Why not make a deal yourself, and then sell at a slight advance to the company—enough to cover the £5000?"

"I'm afraid my private means would hardly run to the necessary figures. If you will allow me to take one other person into my confidence, I could easily manage as you suggest."

"Who would it be?"

"A Mr. Koodoorian. He and I have had some number of financial dealings."

The baronet hesitated, and then asked tentatively—

"Would he take your word?"

"I think so."

"And keep his mouth shut? I don't know him—but I've made a good many inquiries about you, and I'm content to trust you. Could I trust him?"

"I am quite willing to make myself responsible for him. Of course, Mr. Wilson, it's as much to our interest to keep quiet as it is to yours that we should do so."

The baronet stood and thought for a moment.

"Very well. I'm willing you should tell Mr. Koodoorian, but I will not see him. I must deal solely with you. I can't have two witnesses to swear me down. My safety depends upon my word against yours. But is he the Mr. Koodoorian, the banker?"

"Yes, that is the man."

"Well, my price for the tobacco information is £5000 paid now—if your friend likes to pay another £5000, I can tell him of another little item in the Budget which will affect him personally. What he and you can make over tobacco is child's play to what he can make over the other deal."

Mr. Wolff signed a check, which a clerk took to the office to cash, returning shortly with gold to the value of £5000. This was handed over.

"Thanks. The information is simply this: The whole of the duty on tea is going to be abolished, but the duty on all tobacco is going to be doubled, and the duty on manufactured cigarettes and cigars is to be trebled. The new duties will come into force from and after the Saturday preceding the adoption of the Budget. Now, you can make your own arrangements."

"How about the other item for Mr. Koodoorian? Will you come here again?"

"No, I don't want your clerks to recognize me. When could you see him?"

"He's dining with me this evening."

"H'm!" and the baronet paused.

"I will send a district messenger boy to you tomorrow, here at 3:30. You will give that boy notes for £5000. If he is satisfied, he will give you a piece of paper with certain numbers on, in pairs. Get a copy of 'Chambers' Distionary.' The first number will be the page; the second number, the word on that page. You can copy that piece of paper, but you must return it to the messenger boy."

With that the interview closed. In the course of the day, Sir John had sold the tobacco details to three other firms, in two places and increased duty on tea proved a financial asset to him, and four whisky firms swallowed a bait he had devised for them. In no instance did he reach such figures as he had negotiated with Mr. Wolff, but altogether he collected £8000, which with the £5000 from Wolff made £13,000. He had never expected that anything like this amount would have been obtainable, and having banked his gold in the various accounts and aliases that he had on former occasions created, he finally turned his steps westward, having obtained that sum by the expenditure of three and six-pence, the cost of an engraved card plate and fifty cards he dropped over Westminster Bridge.

He himself thought Koodoorian would be too shrewd to pay £5000 on so little security, but on the chance that he might have risen to the bait, he made on the following day all the necessary preparations. As Mr. Wolff sat in his office, a messenger boy was shown in. A bundle of bank notes was passed to him, which the boy carefully counted and placed in an inner pocket. He then handed a slip of paper to Mr. Wolff. The figures upon it were:

227	19
143	34
[illegible]	3
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
419	1
217	45
192	27
81	30
479	31

Carefully copying the figures, he rang for a clerk, and called them over with him. Then, returning the slip to the boy, who at once left, Wolff and Koodoorian sat down with the dictionary, and slowly translated the message.

"New—duty—diamond—50—per cent.—ad valorem—rebatement—half—from colonial—source."

Koodoorian sat in his chair amazed. "Whew!" and he whsitled.

"Is it worth the £5000 to you?" said the other man.

"Yes, if it's true."

"Is it?"

"My dear man; I'll buy every diamond there is for sale in Great Britain, and I'll buy shares in every genuine diamond mine in South Africa."

And he did.

. . . .

Budget night came and went. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a brilliant speech, announced a slight reduction in the tobacco duties, a slight one on tea, and never once alluded to diamonds.

To say that Wolff and Koodoorian were half demented is to put the matter mildly. It took them months of anxious worry and strenuous business to get rid of their huge purchases of tobacco, diamonds and diamond shares without incurring an alarming sacrifice, and even that accomplished they were nevertheless £10,000 to the bad.

It was about a week after budget night, that Wolff ran straight into the arms of Sir John Kynnersley. Recognizing him at once, he sputtered out:

"Mr. Wilson, I've got to have an understanding with you—you damned scoundrel."

"Scoundrel yourself; but if you want to talk, let's talk. There are a few things I want to say to you, my friend. A four-wheeler's the safest place to talk in, in a London crowd."

Selecting a particularl decrepit one, Sir John told the man to drive, and pushed Wolff into the vehicle. Spluttering with rage, the latter demanded an immediate explanation of what he termed a barefaced swindle, and the immediate return of the £10,000.

"Listen to me," said the baronet. "I gave you in confidence, certain information which would have been worth a lot to you if you had kept faith with me and not been so damnation greedy. Now, not only did you take tobacco out of bond yourself to a perfectly ridiculous amount, but you told other people about your knowledge—bragged of it, didn't you?"

The other kept silence.

"Didn't you, now?" thundered Sir John.

Hesitatingly Wolff admitted he had told one or two of his friends—advised them to do a small deal in tobacco, as he put it, though he strenuously denied doing more.

"Oh, put it how you like. What I told you for yourself, through your doing became almost public knowledge. I'll tell you what the result has been. In the last fortnight of the financial [illegible] the kingdom in the next eighteen months, and all through your chuckle-headed loquacity. Do you see what that means? That during the next financial year there won't be a pound of tobacco that will pay duty. The fortnight's payments on the old scale gave the Chancellor a surplus, so he dropped his proposed diamond duty, which wasn't popular in the Cabinet because it smacked of preference. At the very last minute, consequently—it was the very night before budget day—in the light of those payments the Chancellor recast his whole budget, and so you two people lost both ways. If you'd been content just to make your £50,000 or £60,000 apiece it would have been as I said; but you were so damned greedy you try to make half a million each, with the result that you have made nothing. And serve you both right."

The baronet, opening the door of the cab, got out, leaving Mr. Wolff to chew the cud of reflection and chagrin. Never doubting what he had been told—he had also read some of it in the papers—he decided that perhaps after all it was his own fault.

TIZ-For Sore Feet

Tired, Aching, Swollen, Smelly, Sweaty Feet? Corns, Callouses or Bunions? Use TIZ. It's Sure, Quick and Certain.

You Will Enjoy Using TIZ. The Most Pleasant Remedy You Ever Tried and Moreover It Works.

At last here is instant relief and a lasting permanent remedy for sore feet. No more tired feet. No more aching feet. No more swollen, bad smelling, sweaty feet. No more corns. No more bunions. No more callouses, no matter what ails your feet or what under the sun you've tried without getting relief, just use TIZ.

TIZ is totally unlike anything else for the purpose you ever heard of. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleanses them out and keeps them clean. It works right off. You will feel better the very first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists at 25 cents per box or direct if you wish from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill. Recommended and sold by The Owl Drug Co.'s Stores.

MONEYED MAN IS EASY MARK.

CHARGES FIANCEE WITH EMBEZZLING CASH FROM ESTATE.

Bakersfield Woman Is Credited With Separating San Pedro Man from Large Wad in an Alleged Hotel Venture—Complaint Issued for Her Arrest.

A complaint alleging the embezzlement of $1275 from the estate of Suzan Spilker, of San Pedro, was yesterday sworn to by Justice Henry Stieglitz of the harbor front, against Mrs. Julia Keenan, fiancee of Henry Spilker, the administrator of the above estate. Mrs. Keenan, it is asserted, obtained the money December 22 from the Title Insurance and Trust Company, and immediately left for her home in Bakersfield.

The alleged embezzlement was discovered yesterday morning by Justice Stieglitz, attorney for the estate. Deputy Dist.-Atty. Ralph Graham issued the complaint which was filed in Justice Summerfield's court, and the Bakersfield police authorities requested to place Mrs. Keenan under arrest before she could make her escape.

According to Stieglitz, Mrs. Keenan several months ago opened a small hotel in Bakersfield, and it is said procured the money for the venture from Spilker. Stieglitz alleges that since Mrs. Keenan became acquainted with Spilker she has obtained over $5000 of his deceased wife's estate.

The Spilker estate in San Pedro is valued at $30,000. The bulk of it is in business property. The estate was created by Thomas Peters, first husband of the late Mrs. Spilker, a contractor and old resident of San Pedro. He was killed about five years ago when a wall of sand fell upon him. Over two years ago Mrs. Peters married Spilker. She lived scarcely a year

Immediately after being appointed administrator of his wife's estate, Spilker obtained an automobile, and enjoyed himself. One night about four months ago, while being driven from Redondo to San Pedro with four companions, the auto turned turtle. The chauffeur, a Pasadena man, was pinioned under the wreckage and killed. Shortly after that Spilker financed the hotel in Bakersfield for Mrs. Keenan.

TO LOOK LIKE FAIRYLAND.

Contract for Decorating Interior of Alexandria Annex, Let Yesterday, Calls for Many Beautiful Features.

The contract for the interior decoration of the Alexandria Annex was let yesterday to J. F. Sturdy of Chicago at a totol price of about $150,000.

When the details of the scheme are wrought out the interior of the new structure will represent a veritable fairyland. The great dining salon, which extends entirely across one end, will be finished in deep-toned mahogany, and instead of a cold mosaic floor it will be richly carpeted. The entire salon will follow the Italian Renaissance with wall paneling and tapestries depicting events of Diana's hunt. One of the principal schemes to be installed will be that of lighting. It will be a duplicate affair. One plan calls for a diffusion of light throughout the room of any color or tint desired. The lights will not strike out [illegible] part of the room at one time. Off the main dining salon will be a conservatory approximately fifty-six feet square, which will be a wonderland of flowers in keeping with the tone effects of the main room. There will be a wonderously beautiful electric fountain in the center of the room.

The ball-room, which extends entirely across the front of the new structure, will be after the French Renaissance and French grey and Du Barry pink will be the dominating color schemes. At each end will be large oil paintings flanked by art windows. The windows and doors will be draped in two-toned Du Barry pink satin and damask. The entire scheme of the ball-room is such as to form the best background for the rich gowns of the guests. Just off the ball-room will be an assembly room which will accord in every idea with the larger ball-room. The woodwork of the ball and assembly rooms will be finished in white enamel.

There are two schemes for decorating the addition to the Grill. The choice of which one will be accepted has not as yet been made. The contract calls for completion November 1 of this year. Parkinson and Bergstrom, the contracting architects, supervised the entire decoration scheme.

Clergyman's Son Cured of Tuberculosis

To neglect a cold, bronchitis, lung trouble or Consumption is dangerous. We all know how prone people are to deny they have Consumption. It is a flattering disease, and the sufferer is filled with bright hopes of improvement. Call Consumption by its own dread name—and then—take Eckman's Alterative, because it is effective in Tuberculosis. No one need doubt about it—there is plenty of evidence from live witnesses. Investigate the following:

Amenia, N. Y.

Gentlemen: "Prior to February, 1908, I was located in Rochester, N. Y., suffering with La Grippe, which developed into Tuberculosis. My physician gave me one month to live. I was having terrible night sweats and mid-day chills and losing flesh rapidly, having gone from 155 to 135 lbs. I coughed and raised continually and became so weak that walking a few feet exhausted me. On my return home, my regular physician gave me litle encouragement. My father, who is a clergyman, heard of Eckman's Alterative and induced me to take it. The night sweats and chills disappeared, my cough became easier and gradually diminished and in a few days I developed an appetite, the first in months. I am now in perfect health, back to 155 lbs. I feel certain that I owe my life to Eckman's Alterative."

(Signed) E. H. COWLES.

Gentlemen: "I cannot find words to express my appreciation of what your remedy has done for my son. It changed despair into hope within two weeks after he began taking it, and without any doubt in my mind, it saved his life.

I wish to add my indorsement to every word of his testimonial.

(Signed) REV. J. J. COWLES,
Pastor Presbyterian Church.

ALTAR OF APHRODITE.

Has Been Definitely Located in Cyprus and a Great Number of Censers and Vessels Found.

The altar of Aphrodite in Cyprus, mentioned by Homer, has been definitely located and examined by German excavators, says the Berlin correspondent of the Washington Star. The hero of the discovery, Dr. Ohnefalsch-Richter, describes the achievement in a letter to the journal Globus, writing from Kuklia, in Cyprus.

A clew was first given to the exact locality by the discovery of inscriptions in syllable characters. These inscriptions were discovered at Nantidi, five kilometers southeast of Kuklia. The decipherer, Prof. Richard Meister, declared them to be very old Paphian inscriptions, telling of the worshiping of Aphrodite under different epithets, such as "The Unconquerable" and "The Goddess Who Sends the Spring," and speaking also of a very ancient altar of Aphrodite in the neighborhood. In the rock here, half under and half above ground, were discovered a number of chambers, with a great number of censers and vessels still filled with ashes and coals. All round and on the vessels were traces of burning. From the rock chambers stretches a great field of ruins, with smaller ruin-fields adjoining.

A Precious Set of Crystal.

Mrs. MacVeagh, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, is the proud possessor of a precious set of crystal that belonged to Charles I, the martyred King of England. I CAN CURE YOU OF RHEUMATISM

This photograph truthfully shows its terrible effects. You, who have suffered the tortures, can easily imagine the racking pains I must have endured—but today I enjoy perfect health and devote my life to curing others.

Rheumatism was hereditary in my family, and when only a youth, it became chronic with me. Later my joints were so distorted that I was nearly helpless. I tried medicine of every description, even 125 bottles of one remedy—but nothing did more than to give me a little temporary relief. I tried doctors and specialists by the score with no better results. My joints continued to swell to enormous size, but my mind remained active and I finally resolved to make a thorough study of the disease and see what persistent experiments would do.

At last, after I had spent $20,000 and had suffered untold agony for thirty-six years, I discovered a remedy which permanently cured me, and home David's joy was blackened by the announcement that his father had fallen from the mow of the barn to his death. David went into the house. His mother sat stunned by the bedside. He knelt down beside her. She clasped her arms about his neck and bent her head upon his shoulder, but she did not cry; she could not, nor had she, even yet, when she and David drove back from the hillside graveyard to the desolate cabin. Two or three of the good women-folk of the valley had remained to prepare such cheer as they might, and one of them was Ruth Wirtman. Mrs. Grayson, giving way to their kindly urging, consented to lie down and rest a while; but for her there was no rest, and presently she crept out, unnoticed, to sit alone upon the porch, where she could look across at the gleaming headstones upon the hillside and see that new, yellow mound which was to be her beacon from now until her own release should come.

With eyes that burned because there had come no tears to quench their aching, she sat, still numbed, still unawakened to the weary days that were yet to be lived through. Presently she became aware of a voice that came out to her through the open window, and the voice was that of her son.

"The happiest hour of my life has come and gone forever, Ruth," David was saying. "That hour was when I came back from the postoffice with that offer, and, with it as my fortune, asked you to be my wife. The offer is still open, but I must answer it tonight. I am going to refuse it."

There came no answer to this, but presently her son said, in a voice filled with emotion, "My girl!" And the woman on the porch knew that Ruth had crept into the shelter of his arms to comfort him.

"There is only one thing for me to do," he went on presently. "I must take up father's place, as he took the place of his father before him. I must dig into these barren fields as he digged, and never let mother know how bitter is the sacrifice that I must make."

There ensued another silence, and then the gentle voice of Ruth answered:

"I'll wait, dear."

Wait! That one word opened at last, for the woman on the porch, the floodgate of her tears. She, too, had loved, even though of a race that stifled tender speech, even though oppressed by proverty, vene though held in by an environment which admitted no raptures. When the first paroxysm of her grief had passed, she raised her head and gazed around upon the encompassing hills. Away across yonder, its disintegrating chimney showing above the tops of the sparse trees that struggled for existence about it, was the home where she was born; strangers occupied it now. There, on that other hillside, rested, sleeping, all her kin. She could almost pick them out from where she sat, this and that and the other crumbled head-piece that marked one by one all that she had known and loved and lost; and now had come that other lonely mound to bind her for the rest of her life to this spot.

She could not go away to leave them friendless in that inhospitable earth. They were hers. She might pass her declining years within sight of that consecrated earth to which she herself must finally be borne to lie beside her husband. There was no spot on earth so dear to her. The roots of her being had sunk deep, deep into this soil; and to pull them up now and transplant them would be for her to wither and die. She must not, could not, would not think of leaving it.

Presently she arose with a strange peace upon her. As she moved forward ward her face came into the light of the sun, which threw into sharp relief the shadows round the same firm jaw and stern lips and open, fearless eyes that had descended to her son. Turning, she went quietly into the house and came upon David, where he stood caressing with his broad hand the head that rested upon his shoulder.

"David, my boy, and you, my daughter," she said, and her clear, even voice gave no hint of the stern cost, "I've been thinking, after all that's happened here, that this place is a mighty sorowful one to me, and I wish you could go away off somewheres and take me with you."

SIAMESE KING'S BATH.

Ceremonial That Preceded His Coronation Was Fixed by the Astrologers of the Court.

The Brahmin astrologers at the court of Bangkok, having calculated that 9 hours, 33 minutes, 56 seconds a.m., on November 11, was the most propitious time for Maha Vajiravudh, the new King of Siam, to take the ceremonial bath preceding his ascending the throne, and that the latter event must take place at 1 hour, 9 minutes, 45 seconds p.m., on the same day, eerything was arranged accordingly, says a London dispatch in the New York Sun. An eyewitness gives the following account of the ceremony:

"In the early morning the King, clad from head to foot in white, attended a series of Buddhist services, which were conducted in various halls of the palace, and at about 9:15 a.m. was borne by State palanquin to the Amarindr Vinitchai (literally, Hall of Judgment of Indra,) in which all the royal Princes and ministers of state were assembled.

"Here the King, alighting from his palanquin, lighted some candles, after which he retired for a few minutes into a species of dressing-room, from which he emerged and took his seat upon an octagonal dais, the faces of which were square to the principal points of the compass.

"His Majesty first faced the southeast, after which the whole was enclosed with curtains, and after a Brahmin had uttered an invocation the water was turned on in shower bath fashion. This was done eight times, the King facing in a different direction each time.

"Suddenly there came a blast of unearthly music from a body of priests performing on conch shells; three very ancient and ornate bronze cannon in the palace courtyard were each fired twenty-one times, and this gave the signal to the batteries of artillery outside the palace walls and the ships of the fleet assembled in the river to fire salutes of 121 guns.

"At the same time the priests in all the temples of the city beat bells and gongs with wooden mallets, while bands everywhere struck up the national anthem.

"In the meantime the King had retired to the dressing apartment previously mentioned and put on the royal robes, consisting for the most part of magnificent gold brocade. Here His Majesty received at the hands of the chief Brahmin the nine storied white umbrella indicative of royal rank, the gold plate or leaf engraved with his titles and other articles of regalia, including the crown, scepter and sword.

"After some further Brahminical ceremonies the King placed the crown on his head and ascended the throne in the main hall of audience. The throne was on a dais under a nine-storied canopy and screened by a pair of great curtains of gold tissue.

"At the appointed time, 1 hour, 9 minutes, 53 seconds, p.m., the chief of the Brahmins gave a signal and the curtains were drawn apart, disclosing His Majesty sitting in state. All the assembly rose and made obeisance three times and His Royal Highness, Prince Devawongse, the King's uncle, and Minister of Foreign Affairs, proceeded to read an address of homage and congratulation to the new sovereign on behalf of the nobles and people, promising loyalty and fealty.

"At the close of the address, which was lengthy and filled with flights of Oriental fancy, His Majesty replied. He then sat down on the throne and the curtains in front of the royal dais were closed.

Didn't Want Any Publicity.

The seven-year-old daughter of a prominent suburban resident is, the neighbors say, a precocious youngster; at all events, she knows the ways of the world.

Her mother had occasion to punish her one day last week for a particularly mischievous prank, and after she had talked it over very solemnly sent the little girl up to her room.

An hour later the mother went upstairs. The child was sitting complacently on the window seat, looking out at the other children.

"Well, little girl," the mother began, "did you tell God all about how naughty you'd been?"

The youngster shook her head, emphatically. "Guess I didn't," she gurgled; "why, it'd be all over heaven in no time."—[Philadelphia Times.

MONROVIA

Most Picturesque Of All Suburbs

Costs less to live

Costs less to rent

Costs less to buy

You Get Everything Desirable you get anywhere—you also get the finest "all-the-year-round" climate in Southern California—pure, heathful mountain water—magnificent view—perfect drainage—fine soil—

You Don't Get Fogs—mud—raw winds—saloons—smoke—dust—noise—

A Community of Homes That Will Welcome You

Just the right distance away, joined to Los Angeles business district by the finest trolley system in all Southern California is Monrovia—an active, solid, beautiful residence suburb where you will be welcome and enjoy the sense of "feeling right at home."

Monrovia is separated from Los Angeles by a little greater distance than some suburbs but this is deemed an advantage as in similar conditions in the East—a distance cut short by rapid transportation yet a safe barrier to the encroachment of factories.

"Work in Los Angeles"—"Live in Monrovia." The combination will result in a degree of health and enjoyment that will increase your appreciation of Southern California.

Monrovia, itself, offers many opportunities along certain lines of enterprise. No place in California is so ripe for a first-class hotel. Apart from the large patronage assured, the right man could count on substantial financial assistance.

Monrovia's rapid growth will assure you that its desirability as a residential place should be investigated.

7 % Investments

Good as Gold

$6,000.00 Divided Into 4 Securities Of $1,500.00 Each

For 1 per cent., reducing the 7 per cent. to 6 per cent. net per annum, payable semi-annually, the guarantee of ONE corporation "that has no multitudinous guarantees before this one" will be furnished. But the 7 per cent. investment referred to is really good enough in itself, the direct security being improved real estate is ample for all practical business purposes. You should accordingly investigate.

The Simple 7% Investment

Simple investments are safe investments for savings—the simpler the better. Guarantees do not help such, they only confuse, mislead and perhaps destroy. The best security is Government bonds; the next best is real estate, improved or unimproved, when proper precautions are observed. Of course, GOLD is always good but it does not earn—just stands still.

Investors seeking a more profitable and an equally safe investment being founded on lands and homes are referred to the shares of Mutual Investment Corporation which pay an average of 10 per cent. per annum with a full share in the profits which go to increase the value. These shares are $1.40 each, and may be obtained on terms of 10 per cent. down or 5 per cent. monthly, or all cash; and at this price there are only

25,000 Shares Offered

These shares will likely be sold before many weeks expire and then the price

Goes to $1.50

a value that is more than justified by the intrinsic worth of the Corporation's assets.

"Mutual Investor" and "The Right Way" truthfully tell you more and are free to those who call or write.

YOU ARE GROWING YOUNGER MOTHER

BANISH THOSE GRAY HAIRS!

Kill the Dandruff Germs—Stop Hair Falling

Thousands of mothers are looking younger. Their gray hairs are gone. The natural color has come back, and with it a new growth of soft, glossy, luxuriant hair. Why should you look old before your time, when you can look years younger by using

WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

Dandruff Cured

Three applications removed all the dandruff and left my scalp clean, white and smooth.

It is Positively Guaranteed to Restore Faded and Gray Hair to Natural Color

If other "so-called" Restorers have failed, don't give up hope, but give WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY a trial. You run no risk. If it is not exactly as represented, your money will be refunded.

PROFIT BY OTHERS' EXPERIENCE

Gray Hair Restored

My hair was getting quite gray and falling out rapidly and I was troubled with a terrible itching of the scalp. My head was full of dandruff, which fell upon my clothes and kept me continually brushing it off. While on a visit to Rochester I heard of your Sage and Sulphur for the hair. I got a bottle and used it. A few applications relieved the itching, my hair stopped falling out and gradually came back to its natural color. It is now a nice dark brown color, soft, glossy and pliable. Several of my friends want to use it, and I want to know what you will charge me for six bottles of it.

MISS E. A. ROSS,
Sharon, Mercer Co., Pa.

Grew Hair on a Bald Head

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is fairly covered and keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE.

Market on the Closing Day of the Week Proves to Be the Best One. Getting Back Into Form.

The market on the Exchange Saturday was the best of the week, and in going over the list of bids for the past five days, prices show a steady growth and the market looks as if it would get back to its usual trading in the near future, as more shares are changing hands and the market broadening every day.

Union was the feature of the day, showing a gain of one-half point in the days trading with very good sales. Mexican Common and the rest of the Mexicans were firm, Mexican Common holding firm at 35. Consolidated Midway was a little weaker and California Midway was also weaker but closed stronger.

In the Industrials the only stocks sought after were Home of San Diego and Home Preferred. The balance of the list was quiet. Bank stocks were firm and steady and the bonds showed several new changes in price. There were more bids in the bond list than have been shown for some time. Riverside Light and Power bonds were removed from the list, owing to the fact that there is only one of these bonds out.

General Eastern.

FINANCES HURT WHEAT MARKET.

UNFAVORABLE EASTERN NEWS STARTS UNLOADING.

Fractional Advance Over Preceding Night Scored by Fine Cereal, However—Corn Shows Gain of Shade and Provisions Range Between Loss and Increase.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Unfavorable financial news from the East, led to some unloading today in the wheat pit here, and the market closed ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher than last night. An advance of a shade to ⅛ was the final record for corn; oats were up ⅛@¼@⅜, and provisions showed a decline of 10 to 7½ advance. The range for May wheat was from 99⅝ to 1.00½, with the last quotation ⅛@¼ down, at 1.00⅛@1.00¼. May corn ranged between 49⅛ to 49⅞, and closed ⅛ up at 49⅜. The cash market was steady. No. 2 yellow closed at 46⅞@47. High and low prices for May oats were 34⅜ to 34⅝, with the close ⅛ to ¼ up, at 34⅝. Realizing on profits in provisions checked a rising tendency ascribed to advanced quotations for hogs. In the end pork was 7½ higher than last night; lard gained 2½ to 5, and ribs varied from 10 down to 7½ up.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour, firm at recent advance. No. 2 rye, 81½@82; feed or mixing barley, 64@75; fair to choice malting, 80@90; flax seed, No. 1 southwestern, 2.46; No. 1 northwestern, 2.50; timothy seed, 10.00; clover, 15.00; mess pork, per bbl., 20.25@20.37½; lard, per 100 lbs., 10.67½; short ribs, sides, (loose) 10.52½@20.75; short clear sides, (boxed) 10.75@ 11.00.

New York Cotton Market.

[Special service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, 113 West Fourth st., Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Speculation in cotton for the week has improved slightly, but prices have continued to show a declining tendency. From the highest at the opening week to the lowest a decline of about 30 points having occurred in active options. This was caused by a growing feeling in trade that the crop will reach a total of 12,000,000 bales, which at the present rate of spinners takings, would have the largest surplus at the close of the season on record. Domestic trade in cotton goods has remained quiet and it is believed the high cost of living, together with the present high price of raw cotton, must operate to bring about a curtailment of production and must inevitably affect the consumption in this country. We see no reason to change our views as to ultimately lower prices.

Logan & Bryan's letter says: "The Liverpool market was better than expected this morning, with 15,000 bales sold, which is an abnormally large amount for Saturday. The week-end statistics show the American visible to be about 500,000 larger than on this same date last year, but the invisible supply seems to have reached the top of the hill and showed a decrease during the past seven days of 3700 bales. It must be remembered in the eight months to come before another crop moves, that we were last in a period of famine, the mills were compelled to close, and that this famine has not been relieved can easily be shown by the following figures. The amount in sight to date is 8,577,000, against 7,335,000 for the same date last year. If the subsequent receipts or amount brought into sight merely equals that of last year, it will give us a crop of about 1,240,000 larger than last year, or about 11,555,000, which size crop seems conservatively large. Any excess of supply, therefore, over last year, must come out of the visible supply, and that excess is only 430,000, or one and a half weeks' more supply than what we last year knew to be a famine. These figures apply only to American cotton. If the cotton grown in other countries was also included, it would make the argument still more bullish, as the visible supply or other growths now stand 60,000 smaller than last year, and if what they say of foreign crops proves true, it will decrease faster than it decreased last year. It is very evident that, despite all that has been said of the dry goods situation in America is showing a perceptible improvement and Europe has been willing to admit that they are enjoying the best trade in their entire history in cloths and yarns. Under these conditions there is no argument against cotton except its prices, and its price only frightens those who know nothing else except price and who do not know the conditions. Prices are only relative and the very fact that there is no intensified speculative interest in the market is assurance that the only sellers of cotton for the next eight months will be those who first own the cotton."

OIL SITUATION
From An Investment Standpoint

Demand for Crude Oil is increasing daily. The low prices of last year we believe are a thing of the past. Better prices and cash payments for oil will greatly increase the investment demand for the better class of oil stocks.

All good oil stocks are now on the bottom and selling much too low. Some of them may be purchased now to net extraordinary returns, and there are a few which we confidently recommend upon application.

The best Investment that we know of among the companies not yet producing is Midway Union.

We give herewith the production surrounding Midway Union 50 acres in Section 28, 32-24.

Nearest production. Standard Oil in Section 20, 1-2 mile to the Northwest, originally reported at 300 barrels daily (1 well.)

Standard Oil in Section 30, 1 mile to West, has 5 wells reported as producing 25,000 barrels daily.

Standard Oil Company are also drilling four wells west of Midway Union in Section 28, 32-24, being the only other company operating in the same section as the Midway Union.

American Oilfields in Section 32, approximately 1 mile to the southwest of Midway Union, originally reported 20,000 barrels daily.

Lake View in fractional section 30, approximately 1 1-2 miles to the southeast, originally reported at 60,000 barrels daily. Estimated production first 9 months of its life, 6,000,000 barrels.

The drilling of Midway Union Well No. 1 is now being pushed to the utmost. Present depth 1958 feet.

We advise the purchase of the shares so as to secure advantage of the advance which should follow the bringing in of the product that we have good reason to expect with confidence.

of Los Angeles and San Francisco, have purchased, after careful investigation, and sold for investors, approximately $100,000,000.00 of Municipal, Railroad and Corporation Bonds. On this enormous volume of investment securities, no loss whatever, of principal or interest, has been sustained by any holder. This, we believe, is a record not excelled by any banking or investment house in the United States.

STOCKS ADVANCE; TRADE IMPROVES.

PROMINENT ISSUES PARTICIPATE IN SWELL.

Substantial Movement, Most Active of Week, Sees Failure of Trust Company—Colder Weather Stimulates Jobbing—Bank Clearings Indicate Marked Falling Off.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—In spite of the closing of a local trust company, or maybe because of it, today's stock market was the most active and strongest of the week. All the prominent issues participated in the advance, which, for the most part, was substantial, with special strength in the coalers. The suspension of the Carnegie Trust Company occasioned no surprise in banking circles, where its more or less precarious condition had been a matter of common knowledge for some time. While exact facts are not yet available, it will probably be found that today's episode harks back to the panic of 1907. Other news of the day was of the usual week-end variety, including reports from the commercial agencies and country-wide clearings. Trade in mercantile lines has found much stimulus in the West and Southwest by reason of the colder weather, and jobbers were quoted as feeling optimistic on the general outlook. Total bank clearings were less by 11 per cent. than the same week last year, this city showing a decrease of more than 40 per cent. Such centers as Chicago, New Orleans and Baltimore all reported a marked falling off, while St. Louis, alone, of the larger cities, showed an increase, though very slight. An unusual feature for a Saturday was the smart rise in foreign demand, sterling exchange advancing to 4.86.10 on buying of bills by local bankers. The bank statement was more favorable than all forecasts with its huge actual loan decrease of $22,632,000 and cash gain in excess of $16,000,000. Loans of the non-member banks and trust companies also showed a gratifying decrease. Government bonds were unchanged on the week's call. Total sales, today, par value, $2,963,000.

New York Curb Stocks.

[Special Service to The Times, by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 113 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The curb market closed steady with Chino and Inspiration the only features. There was considerable trading in Ray Consolidated at 18 3-8. As a whole at the close the market looked better.

The Boston market was stagnant, only a few issues being quoted. Indiana was strong on favorable developments at the property. Lake sold up to 35. The following were the closing bid and asked quotations:

Boston Copper Market.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building.]

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—The market today consisted in evening up of contracts and the bidding up of a few specialties by the local traders. Lake, Isle Royale and North Butte were noticeably strong. A better demand was also evident in Atlantic and Indiana. The Calumet and Hecla consolidation is still the subject of considerable talk, but it looks as if the plans would be carried out practically as outlined in the circulars. Murder.

KANSAN KILLED OVER OIL LEASE.

SHOT BY BUSINESS RIVAL IN FIT OF ANGER.

Long-Standing Dispute Over Valuable Property Culminates in Tragedy—Slain and Slayer Close to Three-Score-and-Ten Years Mark and of Wealthy Families.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CANEY (Kan.) Jan. 7.—Al O. Truskett, who shot and killed J. D. S. Neely, a prominent oil man in the Palace Hotel here this morning, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace William Lynn late today on a charge of murder in the first degree. He was released on $25,000 bond. He will be given a preliminary hearing next Monday.

Both Truskett and Neely were wealthy, the latter being president of the Lima Trust Company, the Wichita Pipe Line Company and several other oil concerns. Enmity arose between them some time ago because of a lease to valuable oil lands near Caney which both men claimed.

Truskett met Neely in the lobby of the hotel and the two went into an isolated room. A moment later two shots were heard. Neely was dead when picked up. Truskett at once surrendered.

In a statement to officers shortly after the shooting, Truskett said he fired in self-defense.

At the Coroner's inquest late today it developed that Mr. Neely was not armed. The jury found that he had "come to his death by a gunshot wound at the hands of A. O. Truskett."

Truskett's is one of the oldest and wealthiest families in the city. The lease, which led to the litigation was to a tract of oil land four miles south of this city. Robert F. Goodman, a minor Indian, who owned the land, leased it several years to Hugh Bronson, an oil man, who disposed of it later to Winkler, Anerfield & Hicks, a local oil firm, for $400. Truskett paid this firm $9100 for the lease.

Shortly afterward the Wichita Pipe Line Company claimed the lease of the tract, saying it had come into possession of it through a lease by Goodman to Fred C. Losser and Herbert Scott, who were interested in the Wichita company. The company asserted the leasing to Truskett had been illegal.

Owen Owen of Caney, a nephew of Senator Owen of Oklahoma, traveled with the Indian boy, Goodman, from the time the rival claims arose until the boy became of age, September 24 last. It was said Owen was in the employ of the Wichita company. On the date Goodman became of age, the Wichita company began action in the land. Litigation has been in progress ever since.

Truskett asserted that the pipe line company used undue influence on Goodman, spirited him away, and finally bought the lease from him for $5000.

VIOLINIST GETS LIFE CONTRACT.

Elopes With Private Accompanist, Step-Daughter of Rear Admiral Adolph Marix, U.S.N., Retired.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Nikolai Sokoloff, the Russian violinist, pupil of Ysaye and protege of wealthy residents of New York and Boston, has signed a contract for life with his private accompanist, Miss Lydia Filkins, daughter of Grace Filkins, the actress, and stepdaughter of Rear-Admiral Adolph Marix, U.S.N., retired.

In the Marriage Bureau of the City Hall yesterday one of the city fathers, whose name has not been ascertained, made the agreement between the pair effectual, and they hurried to Hartford, Conn., on a honeymoon.

The first Admiral Marix and his wife knew of the elopement was when a newspaper reporter inquired of them what they thought about it. They would not say.

ELECTION CONTEST SETTLED.

Former Sheriff of Placer County Loses Out in Favor of Newly-Elected Official—Interesting Case.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SUSANVILLE (Cal.) Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The election contest brought by former Sheriff C. E. Emerson against A. C. Hunsinger, heard in the Superior Court here before Judge J. E. Prewett of Placer county, was decided yesterday in favor of Hunsinger. Emerson contested the election on the ground that there was illegal voting in three precincts of the county.

In his decision, Judge Prewett determined that Hunsinger's majority outside of the three precincts would be seven and if the three precincts were thrown out he would still be elected. The court did not determine whether the voting was illegal.

Before the hearing of the contest, Emerson left town, giving instructions to his deputies to hold the office and jail. Hunsinger, with three deputies, marched on the jail, sawed their way ... Emerson's men, learning of this, rallied to the jail, but, beholding the determined look in the face of Hunsinger and his deputies, turned their steps back to town.

GIRLS STOLEN FROM JAIL.

Four Chicago Men Involved in Prison Delivery Face Charges of Far More Serious Nature in Connection.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two girls, fugitive inmates of the State Home for Delinquent Girls at Geneva, who had been arrested and held in jail at West Chicago, were forcibly taken from the jail by four young men who broke into the bastile, and were found yesterday in a railroad switchman's tower at Winfield. One of the men is under arrest and warrants have been issued for the other three on serious charges in addition to that of aiding in the jail delivery.

Harry Folk, who was the night towerman at Winfield, employed by the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, is charged with being the ring leader in the battering down of the jail door and cell with a crow bar.

The girls were found almost unconscious in the tower. The victims, who had made a sensational escape from the institution, said that they did not know any of the men who aided them in their escape from jail.

FIRE LOSSES SHOW INCREASE.

Nearly $250,000,000 Goes Up in Smoke in United States and Canada During Year Just at an End.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

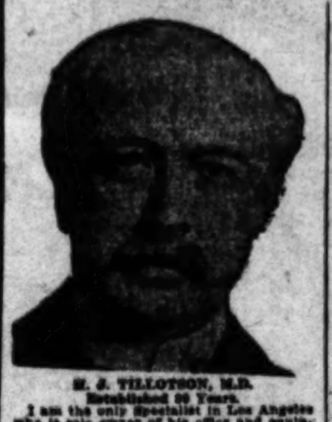
CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Statistics made public here show that losses by fire in the United States and Canada in 1910 amounted to $234,470,350, or over $30,000,000 more than the losses in 1909. December losses were exceptionally heavy, aggregating $21,523,000.

There were thirty-six fires during the year which caused a damage of $500,000 or more, and in ten years the loss exceeded $1,000,000 each. In only two preceding years have the fire losses been heavier than in 1910, one being the year of the Chicago fire, the other of the San Francisco.

Federal officials agree that the majority of these losses are preventable.

In spite of the increasing losses, it is said that the average rate of fire insurance shows a reduction in 1910 ...

CURED IN FIVE DAYS
Hernia, Piles, Fistula and Varicose Veins



H. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.
Established 20 Years.

I am the only Specialist in Los Angeles who is sole owner of his office and equipment, who does not advertise a fictitious name and photograph. I publish my true photograph, correct name, personally conduct my office. I am the longest established, most successful and reliable, as medical credentials and press records prove. Imitation of my copyrighted announcement is an evidence that I am a bona fide Specialist. I make this statement that you will know you consult a Specialist, who sees and treats patients personally. I possess skill and experience acquired in such a way that no other can share, and should not be classed with medical companies. Experience is the safe standard by which judgment may be valued, and it is unwise and expensive to embrace the statements of medical companies. It is impossible for a medical company to attend college. Companies have no diploma or license to practice medicine in California or any other State. Medical companies usually are named after a doctor. A portrait, whose personality and identity are indefinite, is selected and published as the legitimate specialist of the office. Hired substitutes, ordinary doctors with questionable ability give consultation, examination and treatment.

A thorough investigation should be made by every ailing person as to the specialist he consults. Duty and destiny to self and those who depend upon you demand the best medical attention. I have the ability and can give you this service. I have always charged a very reasonable fee, so that my services may be obtained by any man who sincerely desires to be cured. I make no misleading statements or unbusinesslike propositions; neither do I desire to be particularly independent, and I would like to have you for a patient, if you will come to me on a strictly professional basis, and the inducements that I offer, which are my ability and thirty years' successful experience. Time-saving treatment and guarantee of cure of certain diseases.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TO COMMENCE TREATMENT. Many patients have no confidence in their doctor, because he demands pay before a cure has been effected, and there are many who have been misinformed about their condition, or through unsuccessful treatment have become skeptical and think there is no cure for them. I want an opportunity to treat such cases. It makes no difference about the financial part, as I accept pay for my services as benefits are derived, when I am satisfied the patient is reliable. Health is capital at interest. I will prove my ability to cure you before asking pay for my services.

WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

Dr. Tillotson's written guarantee means a cure or no pay for services. I guarantee to cure certain diseases or refund every dollar you have paid me for my services. My services cost you nothing unless I cure your Varicose Veins, Hernia, Piles, Fissures, Ulcerations, or any disease I guarantee to cure. My terms are reasonable and no more than you are willing and able to pay.

Many Cases Cured Permanently in One Treatment. Most Time-Saving. Most Natural. Most Safe. No Detention from Occupation, Family or Home. A Radical and Permanent Cure. I Will Give $500 to Any Charity as a Guarantee That Every Statement in This Announcement is True.

I cure rapidly, painlessly and at small expense. Cured Patients are My Testimonials, however, I do not make patient's Names Merchandise by publishing them. I will give conclusive evidence of my merit which is obtained and maintained by ability. I invite you to come to my office; I will explain my treatment for Hernia, Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins, Pelvic, Nervous, Blood, Kidney, Bladder and Rectal Diseases. I will give you free a physical examination; if necessary a microscopical and chemical analysis of secretions to determine existing pathological and bacteriological conditions. Every person should take advantage of this opportunity to learn their true condition. Certainty of cure is what you want.

Varicose Veins

In the cure of Varicose Veins, Rupture and Associate Diseases of the Pelvic Region, I am successful in bringing to bear the curative power of Nature's forces in such a manner as to supplant the old-time, wide-open surgical operations. Once it required several weeks to cure these conditions and the method which some still use is such as to endanger the life of the patient and require a long period of convalescence. Now an absolute cure can be accomplished in a few days and with perfect safety.

TRUSSES SELDOM CURE RUPTURE.

Disregard for existing Hernias has cost many lives. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous to life, because of the increased liability to strangulation. I am aware that a great deal of fraud has been practiced on the public in connection with the alleged cure of Rupture, and when I say positively that I cure Rupture to stay cured, I do not expect any one to accept my statement without investigation of my professional work. My claim to your confidence is based on absolute facts, accomplished results. A personal consultation, I will make a free examination and can explain every detail of your Hernia and demonstrate to you the curative value of the method I have discovered. I invite the careful investigation of any person who sincerely desires to be cured. I cure Rupture, in selected cases, with perfect safety, and entail no suffering and do not detain you from occupation under Written Guarantee. Many cases cured to stay cured by one treatment.

PILES, FISTULA, RECTAL DISEASES.

These diseases are very common; most frequently found in persons of middle, or advanced age; are exceedingly annoying, often very painful and sometimes very dangerous and frequently unfit one for pleasure or occupation. My treatment and success are the result of years of experience; my treatment is kindly applied. I cure Piles without cutting. Some cases are cured by one or more treatments. If I do not cure your Piles, Fistula and other Rectal Diseases, my treatment does not cost you anything. [illegible] I guarantee a cure of Piles, Fistula, Fissure, Ulcers and all curable Rectal Diseases.

LIFE'S BLOOD STREAM.

The great clearinghouse of a person's body is the blood stream. Your blood cells are your bank account. Your only defense against disease is by and through blood corpuscles. My blood-making, blood-purifying remedies have been tried and proven. My blood-cell remedies nourish, strengthen and increase the blood cells and nourish the nerve centers. I want to prove to you at my expense that my blood-making, blood-purifying remedies give power to weak brains and life to nerve centers.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES.

With these diseases you may have more complications than are presented by any other diseased organs. By my searching illumination of the bladder I determine accurately the diseases and by my microscopical examination and urinalysis I make sure of the condition of the kidneys, thus laying foundations for scientific treatment.

Residence of Dr. Hugh K. Walker,

South Flower street, a birthday gift from Mrs. Mary J. Rankin, a wealthy parishioner of Immanuel Presbyterian Church.

Friendship's Token.

TWELVE THOUSAND DOLLAR HOME IS GIFT TO POPULAR PASTOR.

PROBABLY the most costly birthday gift of the season, and one most highly appreciated, was that received by Dr. Hugh K. Walker, pastor of Immanuel Presbyterian Church. Its value is approximately $12,000, and consists of the handsome residence on South Flower street, which Dr. Walker and his family have occupied during the thirteen years of their residence in this city.

The gift was so quietly made, and with such an utter lack of ostentation, that it has just leaked out.

The donor is Mrs Mary J. Rankin, a wealthy member of Immanuel Church, who has been noted for the generous gifts she has made to the work of the church, many years past. One of her largest donations was that of $120,000, when the addition was built to the church, for the accommodation of the growing Sunday-school, and every worthy cause has appealed to her and brought a generous response.

Mrs. Rankin is an invalid, eighty-two years of age, and it has been her desire to do good with her means while she yet lives.

Dr Walker was forty-nine years of age on December 5, and on that day he and Mrs. Walker were invited to dine with Mrs. Rankin. At the close of the dinner, the dessert came in the form of a deed for the Flower-street house. The recipients were well nigh overpowered by the goodness of their hostess.

It was developed, in the course of conversation, that Mrs. Rankin has carried the proposed gift in her will eleven years, but when she heard of the proximity of Dr. Walker's birthday, it set her thinking. Why not gratify herself and see with her own eyes the joy of her friends?

She forthwith erased the clause from her will and executed a deed for the property, conveying it to Dr. Walker, and planned the dinner for its delivery.

Mrs. Rankin is one of the original members of Immanuel Church. She contributed to its building, under the late Dr. W. J. Chichester, but her desire has always been to keep her benevolences as secret as possible, and hence little public attention has been attracted to them. Her friends are unwilling to let this very unusual gift to her pastor, pass unnoticed.

Dr. Walker has served Immanuel church just one-half of his entire ministry. The greater part of the other half having been with the leading Presbyterian church of Baltimore, which he left to come to Los Angeles. He found here about 600 members, at that time, but the membership is now approaching 3000. The congregation is the largest of that denomination on the Pacific Coast and in its benevolences is one of the leaders in the United States.

Greatest Increase.

LOS ANGELES BEATS ALL OTHER CITIES IN BUILDING ACTIVITY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The building activity in Los Angeles during 1910 was the marvel of the country. According to statistics compiled by the American Contractor that city led all others in the United States with an increase of sixty-six per cent. The nearest competitor to the Southern California metropolis was Columbus, O., with a gain for forty-two per cent. San Francisco showed a slump of seventy-one per cent while Oakland gained thirty per cent. Seattle was among the cities showing a decrease.

Fifty-four representative cities of the United States, according to the compilation, show a decline in the aggregate of seven per cent. for the year 1910, as compared with 1909. This calculation, if taken as a basis for the building operations for the entire country, says the Contractor, "makes a better showing than was expected."

In Los Angeles during 1910 the cost of buildings erected was $21,684,100, while in 1909 it amounted to only $13,260,703. The figures in detail follow:

ARCHITECTURAL EXHIBIT LARGE.

Outlook Is Bright for Coming Building Show.

Promoters Expect to Surpass Last Year's Marks.

Vast Variety of Designs by Local Architects.

Formal invitations to attend the opening of the Second Annual Convention of the Architectural League of the Pacific Coast under the auspices of the Los Angeles Architectural Club on the evening of January 12 have been issued to 2500 persons. The exhibit, which will be thrown open to the public next Friday, will be held on the seventh floor of the Forrester building.

The exhibit is largely inspired by the great interest which was shown by 26,000 or more visitors to the first exhibition of the league, which was held last year, and every indication is that it will be attended with even greater success this year. Concrete assurance of support which have been received by the promoters of the affair made them justifiably optimistic as to the outlook for a record-breaker in the line of exhibits.

One of the principal points in which the forthcoming exhibition will vary from that of last year will be in the loci of the contributors. While those of 1910 were very largely architects, draughtsmen and engineers from the great architectural centers of the East, the 1911 exhibit will feature chiefly the work of local men. An abundance of such material of the very highest order is in sight and those who were in attendance last year will be given an ample opportunity to judge and compare the best work of the East with that of the great Southwest, home of some of the most beautiful buildings in the world.

GREAT VARIETY.

In character and variety the exhibit is expected to surpass even that of last year. There will be hundreds of perspectives, photographs, wash-drawings and working plans. Every phase of the architectural art will be represented by the efforts of masters in it. The variety of designs to be represented is almost literally endless. Studies of all kinds, from the classic to the most modern expression of building ideas, will be given equal prominence. Civic improvement schemes, public buildings, churches, schools, office buildings, towering business blocks, ornate designs in park entrances and public fountains, apartment hotels—these are only a part of the long list to be included in the wall displays. Every possible variation of residence types, from the characteristic California bungalow to the hundred-thousand-dollar palace, will be included.

A special feature is to be made of the materials of use in the creation of the artistic. Among these are included brick, tile, terra cotta, marble artificial stone, ornamental iron work, lighting fixtures, furniture, tapestries, stained glass, fine porcelains, and so on.

An added spur to the production of the most creditable exhibit possible is felt because of the fact that it will be visited by the American Institute of Architects in a body. The annual convention of that organization will be in session in San Francisco during the coming week and the Los Angeles exhibit is held out to the attending members as one of the attractions of their first convention trip to the Coast.

The prizes for the annual competitions offered by the Architectural Club for the best designs for announcement posters of the exhibition and of the Year Book were awarded yesterday. Geoffrey G. Holt received the first prize for the poster design, James Frederick Rudy receiving second and Robert W. Cassidy, third.

Mr. Rudy carried off first honors for the Year Book covers, Mr. Holt getting second and Harold Bryant Cody, third.

APARTMENTS ARE SOLD.

The H. Jerome Toy Hotel Brokerage Company reports the sale this week of the lease and furniture of the Silverton apartments, located on the northwest corner of Sixteenth and Hill streets, to Mrs. L. M. Ballau, formerly manager of the Pickwick apartments, for a consideration of $8000. The purchase was made from Mrs. E. F. Vaid. This company also reports the sale of the lease and furniture of the Strand apartments, located on the strand at Long Beach, to E. S. Colvin of Buffalo, N. Y., for a consideration of $2000. The purchase was made from Mrs. Ada Butters, the owner of the property.

Of The Midwinter Number of The Times

Over Sixty Pages of Illustrations in Bright Colors, Portraying the Sunshine, the Joy, the Business, the Prosperity of "Happy Land."

THE fascinating story of Los Angeles and the sunny Southwest can be told in picture as in no other way. The Midwinter Number of The Times can do it as no other newspaper annual can. Why? Because it is carefully and deliberately printed on fine paper from electrotyped plates and bound in book or magazine form. It is more like a book of six handsome volumes than a newspaper. The illustrations are made from photographs carefully etched by superior workmen, the best The Times ever succeeded in employing for this purpose. There is solid satisfaction in contemplating pictures of this high order, so adequately setting forth the beauties, the industries, the uniqueness and the charm of Southern California and the Southwest, and in sending them out to friends all over the world.

It is astonishing how much variety and comprehensiveness are packed into the large and choice illustrations of these six magazine volumes. The Times will here enumerate some of the themes:

1.—"The Skyline of Los Angeles," showing the tall buildings and soaring steel skeletons of the newest construction—a workman perched on one of the dizzy frames. In colors.

2.—"A Nymph of the Sunset Sea." Beautiful girl bather breaking through a first page of glittering breakers on a surf-board, with arms outstretched in greeting. In colors.

3.—"At the Headwaters." A mountain canyon scene, with irrigating ditch and busy irrigator, full of life and sparkle and illustrating the sources of our water supply. In colors.

4.—"Tributary to Los Angeles." A well-photographed and colored view of the bustling throng crowding one of our city railroad stations on a busy day. Vivid and graphic.

5.—"Where the Gold Comes From." A full page photograph of a pay streak in one of our neighboring gold mines, with miners at work. In colors. Realistic and glowing.

6.—"Nature in a Wild Western Mood." A beautiful colored photograph of some of the most prodigal floral growths of Southern California.

7.—"Destiny. Los Angeles of the Future. From the Mountains to the Sea." A two-page creation by Arthur B. Dodge, setting forth the Los Angeles of the future with her mountain homes and crowded docks at the harbor, with the smokestacks of a thousand factories. In colors. True to life.

8.—Great Irrigation Projects. A double page picture in colors of the tremendous works being carried out by Uncle Sam in the Southwest. Strong and convincing. From actual photographs.

9.—Summer Amusements of the Beach Resorts. A birdseye view, double page, of the crowded and festive devices of the Midsummer Pikes. Will invite thousands to come next summer. In colors.

10.—"The Golden Horn of Plenty"—A double-page picture in gorgeous colors showing the sources of Los Angeles' prosperity, how the city draws from the prosperity of every section of the Southwest.

11.—King Oil. Striking photographs from the fields of gushers, Californa's oil wells, the most famous in the world. Two pages in colors.

12.—Outdoor Life in the Southland in Midwinter. A double page group of photographs, reflecting the outdoor picnics, garden parties and al fresco dinners held in Southern California in midwinter, while blizzards are howling through the East. In colors.

14.—Notable Buildings of Los Angeles. Most modern achievements in construction.

15.—Newest Buildings Planned for Los Angeles. Right down to date.

16.—One of the Year's Biggest Undertakings. Photographs of great electrical plant at Long Beach.

17.—Scenes in the Smaller Cities of Southern California.

18.—The Visit of A. Mark to the Seaside Resorts, with Miss Hortense Gwendolyn McFadden Brown—you will laugh at this cartoon by Gale.

19.—Telling Cartoons on the Los Angeles Census Figures, by Gale and Taylor that will bring out the facts and cause "laughter to burst his sides," so to speak.

20.—The Expansion of the Great Municipal Harbor at San Pedro. Pictures of the harvests, pictures of the fruit packers, pictures of the gardens and orchards, pictures of the stirring scenes on Broadway, pictures of the great aqueduct, pictures of the bean fields, pictures of Arizona, pictures of the cattle ranches—and a score of others which it would be tedious to enumerate.

This is just to give the reader some concepton of the extent and attractiveness of the art work in the Mdwinter Number. Were there not one line of text, these illustrations would be worth the price.

spark was flashed from the key on the hill Maine went down wrecked, twisted, sunk in the of the bay and the life was choked out of so who had devoted themselves to the services country, sentiment became cemented in the "Remember," the nation from the headlands and woods of the old "Pine Tree" State whose name the ship bore to the shores of the Pacific, and then American intervention in Cuba could not be prevented by any means less powerful than an act of divine Providence. The fate of Spain in the western hemisphere was sealed by that foolish, fateful flash. Had that electric key not been touched Spain might still be in possession of Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. The very thing the outrage was intended to prevent, that outrage made necessary and sure. The proclamation of war followed almost at once. North and South vied in patriotism to avenge the death of so many brave men and to wash in human blood the stain attempted to be attached to the flag. Joe Wheeler and Theodore Roosevelt fought almost side by side in the just war thus put upon us, and for the first time after the great Civil War between the States the Union was again cemented in the bonds of fraternal blood freely shed in behalf of the common country dear to all Americans.

It is a decade since the ship went down in Havana Harbor. In spite of the cry, "Remember the Maine," time has pretty well done its usual work in healing over the scars of war, in mollifying the angry feelings of men. The American people are busy about other things. The suns of new days are rising upon us bringing new opportunities and new duties. America is too great and prosperous for its people to be resentful, to treasure animosities and cherish hates. Spain is forgiven and cordial relations are being cultivated with the people of that ancient land, and the fools and slow of mind who sank the Maine are lost in an oblivion profound and dark. We are writing these words of reminiscence not for the sake of the sad and terrible event which gave them birth. We are as willing as other Americans to turn our backs upon the past, forget the act which all the intelligent and decent people of Spain condemned and deplored.

But there is an index finger here which points humanity to an important fact. Those who perpetrated that outrage on the ship that flew the flag were not the first nor the last members of the human race who tried to settle a controversy by unlawful and foolish violence. They were not the first to whom the inquiry might properly be directed, "Fools, and slow of comprehension, when will ye understand?" Nor were they the last to whom this inquiry might well be applied. Here in Los Angeles there existed a controversy for twenty years between a section of the wage-earning classes and the wage payers. The latter were right in their stand, the former wrong. The contention of the wage payers was not for selfish ends, that of the other side was. The employers of labor were standing for more wage earners than the employees who kept up the conflict. Employers carried on their side of the contest strictly within the limits of just laws and fought according to the rules of fair play. Their cause was just and prevailed in every clash precipitated by the unwise, law-defying leaders of the other side. Made desperate by disappointment and defeat, the fools and slow of mind whose hearts were as bad as those of the Spaniards who exploded the mine under the Maine, these California dastards who are incapable of understanding, resorted to the same cruel, foolish, futile, unlawful and unjust tactics that their fellow-criminals in Havana used. With one terrible explosion they destroyed property that cost to put in place more than $1,000,000, and which cost as much more to replace. But that was a mere nothing compared to the other features of the outrage. The sinking of the ship entailed a loss of a few million dollars on the people of the United States. The destruction of the lives of the crew was a loss that all the wealth of Spain could not repay. The wrecking of The Times plant involved a large pecuniary loss on the company, but that was not worth second thought had that been all. Had the cruel criminals who placed the dynamite selected a time when the building was not occupied by human beings the shock to the world would have been small compared to that felt when the word was flashed to all corners of the world that more than a score of lives had been sacrificed to gratify the unjustifiable resentment, the diabolical hate of a gang of fiends in human form.

Here is where the foolishness of this dastardly act quite matches its horror. As the sinking of the ship did not go a step toward crippling the power of the United States, so the wrecking of the plant did not impoverish the owners. The crew of the Maine were in no sense responsible for the policy of the United States. As little were the mechanics and reporters of The Times responsible for the policy of the paper. The death of the sailors was a monstrous outrage that stirred the blood of hot resentment in the hearts of men in all parts of the world. The death of a score heads of families in The Times building is a cruelty which marks as fiendish every man who had a hand in it and as much so every one who upholds the deed by a word, a whisper or a sign.

The foolish leaders of labor organizations, slow of comprehension, devoid of just conceptions, unable to comprehend the humanity, sense of justice and sympathy of normal men, have in all countries for fifty years done many things which compromise their cause, and set the hearts of just and of sensible men against them. Not in the whole history of industrial strife was there ever an act committed which has done more to set the world against the cause of unionism than this awful outrage in Los Angeles on the morning of the first day of October, 1910.

The destruction of the Maine made the war with Spain as sure as it was necessary. That foolish act perpetrated by men who could not understand human sentiment cost Spain all her foreign possessions. The destruction of The Times building is the death knell of unionism under the misleading of the criminally-inclined, shallow, inhuman men whom the better elements of these organizations have permitted, against the better judgment and better sense of the majority, to gain control. From this on it means a radical change of front on the part of the unions, the deposition of the men who have had control, and a firm grasp of law and order, of fair play and regard for human rights and human sentiments, or the extirpation root and branch from American life of labor organizations.

Sermons in Song.

Heaven.

BY WILBUR D. NESBIT.

> The true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.—[John I, 9.

"What do you think that heaven may be?"
The hearer answered with a smile:
"A place where folk like you and me
May hear sweet music all the while;
Where roses bloom and birds will sing
And silver streams plash in the shade,
With naught but joy in everything—
Of these, I know, is heaven made."

"What do you think that heaven may be?"
The mother answered: "'Tis a land
Where all mine own may be with me
And where, too, I may understand
The longings of the little hearts
And find my happiness complete
In soothing with a mother's arts
The weary little hands and feet."

"What do you think that heaven may be?"
The old man answered with a sigh:
"A cot beneath a spreading tree
That towers ever green and high
And never weariness nor strife
But just a comfort calm and blest
Such as we may not have in life—
A folding of the hands in rest."

What do you think that heaven may be?
Why, it would be of little worth
Were it not given us to see
Some promise of it here on earth;
If through the moments and the years
We could not bring its radiant glow
To light our smiles and dry the tears
Of all the weary folk we know.

A STRANGE FAMILY.

The following experience, says a writer in the January Strand, I have recently had may be of interest to your readers. I have two fantail pigeons, both male birds, and I noticed one day that they built a nest and then were sitting on it alternately, as if they were going to hatch eggs. It struck me that it might be a good idea to put an egg of my bantams into the nest to compensate the pigeons for the trouble they had taken in building it. Apparently they appreciated my doing so, as from that time they never left the nest for about three weeks, when, to my great surprise, I found a little chicken peeping from the pigeon's nest. It was touching to see how the pigeons tried to feed the chicken by opening their beaks, like pigeons do, and inviting the youngster to help himself to the contents of their crops, which, of course, it refused to do, because it is a chicken and not a pigeon. The pigeons are very fond of the little one, and take it under their wings to keep it warm whenever it wants it, exactly as a hen treats her chickens.

THE WOMEN OF BRITTANY.

To the casual observer the Bretonne is not attractive or even supremely interesting. As a femme de chambre she is clumsy, slovenly, and rough of speech, lacking the graces and neatness of her Parisian sister. She shuffles about in felt slippers, her voluminous black skirts catch in everything, and if she waits at the table d'hote her method of handling cutlery is strongly calculated to sever one's jugular vein. She has no regularity in her work, and at the hour that she ought to be making beds she is probably sitting on the public staircase nursing her baby. She is generally married and, conversely, often ten years younger than you take her to be. To English eyes she is rarely beautiful. Her hair is strained tightly under her cap, her cheeks have seldom any delicacy of tint, and her figure and motions are ungainly and awkward.—[Wide World.

The Farms of Palestine. By Frank G. Carpenter.

STOCK AND GRAIN.

HOW THEY RAISE THEM IN THE LAND OF MILK AND HONEY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ZAMMARIN (Mount Carmel, Palestine.)—I give you today some bits of Palestine out of doors. Within the past few weeks I have kept away from the cities and towns, and have watched the shepherds and farmers. I have seen the real Palestine, with the same sky, the same rocks and hills and the same carpet of wild flowers that were here in the days of our Lord. I have talked with the farmers in the fields, have ridden side by side with the modern Balaam as he climbed the hills on his ass, and have even put my hand to the plows, such as were used in the times of the scriptures, and with a goad have pricked on the bullocks and donkeys as they turned up the sod.

The Land of the Farmer.

The Palestine of the Bible was a land of the farmer. The children of Israel and their leaders were reared or worked on the farm. Abraham had numerous sheep and so had Isaac and Jacob. Saul was the son of old Farmer Kish, and he was hunting his father's asses when he was met by Samuel, the prophet, who gave him a kingdom. David was watching the sheep when Farmer Jesse, his father, sent him to the battle, where, with his sling, he killed the mighty Goliath, and in time became Saul's successor. Lot was one of the richest farmers the Jordan Valley has known, and as for Job, who lived in old Uz, he was the bonanza cattle man of his time, owning 7000 sheep, 3000 camels, 500 yoke of oxen, 500 she asses and a very large household. It was in one farm village, Bethlehem, that our Savior was born, and in another farming settlement, Nazareth, that He grew to manhood. A great part of His life was spent in going about among the shepherds and farmers, and in His preaching the most of the examples and parables relate to things of the soil.

The Sheep of the Holy Land.

The most common sight out of doors in the Holy Land is the sheep. They are everywhere. You find them on the rich plains where the Philistines lived; they feed among the rocks on the slopes of the Judean mountains, and spot the wilderness all the way down to Jericho. They graze on every part of Samaria and Galilee, and almost everywhere on the plain of Esdraelon. They are always watched over by shepherds, and are often driven to new feeding grounds. The greater part of this country is mountainous. Limestone rocks cover the soil, which is so thin that if you could pare it off for a depth of eight inches there would be nothing but stone. It is different in the plains and the valleys, but the hills are terraces of rock covered with boulders and sprinkled here and there with patches of earth. The conditions, however, are such that the least bit of soil will grow luxuriant grass, and the sheep seem to grow fat on the stones.

I remember some flocks I saw on my way to the Jordan. They were heavy-wooled animals, with tails of fat hanging down like aprons behind them. The most of them weighed 200 pounds, and the average was fatter and finer than the best sheep of America. Some were white-wooled and some brown, and others had brown heads and white bodies. I have tasted the mutton. It is excellent, and is the best meat to be had at the hotels.

Among the Shepherds.

The shepherds are about the same all over Palestine. They are kindly-eyed men with fair faces, bronzed by the sun. They stay out all day on the hills with the sheep, driving them into the villages at night. Each shepherd has his staff and his scrip, a little bag of dried skin. He uses a sling as David did, and stones his sheep to keep them from straying. The strings of the slings are of goat hair, and the pad for the stone is of the same material, often made with a slit in the middle, so that when a stone is put in the sling fits close like a bag. Such things are now used in stone fights between the boys of the villages, who practice to see who can throw the farthest.

The wool of these sheep is especially fine. It brings a higher price than that of Damascus, and something like a million dollars' worth of it is exported a year. The shearing is done by hand, and much of the wool is sold unwashed. Some is washed after shearing, the work being done by women who receive less than a shilling a day.

Nearly every flock of sheep has its goats. They are usually black and can be picked out at a great distance. Some of the goats produce excellent milk, and the best as much as three quarts a day.

In the Sheepfolds.

There is a great deal in the Bible about the sheepfolds. These are common in Palestine. In the villages there are often corrals and sometimes caves in the hills. The village folds are closed at night, and the shepherds keep the keys. Those of the mountains are usually open and the sheep go in and out as they will.

One of the most important duties of the shepherd is to water the flock. He does this at streams or wells. At the wells the women draw the water for the sheep as they did in the days of the scriptures. They use bags of goatskin untanned. The skins are taken almost whole from the goats, and the legs

All the grain must be thrashed at the village, and put up there in stacks of eight, each stack being of the same size.

When this is done the tax gatherer selects the stack which he will take for the taxes, and this is threshed out by itself, the farmer being required to deliver the grain as the collector directs. He may have to carry it to Jerusalem, Jaffa or Nablous, and in this way make it so costly that the farmer will be glad to sell him the grain at his price or to keep it at home.

In addition to such taxes there is the salt tax, by which every one in Palestine must use and pay for so much salt a year, the salt being a government monopoly. There is a head tax of $2 on every male meber of the community. This begins with babyhood and lasts until death, and there are other taxes upon land, as well as upon imports and everything that man eats, drinks and wears.

In a Jewish Colony.

If the Holy Land could be freed from taxation and the farmers allowed fair play, there is no doubt but that the land would produce many times what it does now. Its possibilities can be seen in the various colonies which have been established by the Jews and the Germans in the different parts of Palestine. Take for instance Zammarin on the southwest slope of Mount Carmel, where these notes are written. The place is about five hours' rire from Haifa, and a day's journey by carriage from Nablous. The town is owned by a Jewish colony which has a large tract of land given it by Baron Edward Rothschild of Paris. The land is high above the sea at the northern end of the plain of Sharon, so situated that it commands a view of that plain at the east and of the Mediterranean Sea at the west. The country about is covered with chunks of limestone of all shapes and sizes, the bedrock cropping out in ledges with small tracts of arable land here and there.

The Jews have taken this land, and have cleared it by picking off the loose rocks, and they are making it bloom like a garden. They have some quite large fields on top of Mount Carmel, which are now covered with wheat. They are raising luxuriant crops of oats and beans, and have vineyards as thrifty as those of south France or the Rhine. They have olive orchards which would be a credit to any part of Italy; and English walnut trees which bear like those of Southern California. They are raising fine cattle, which they graze on the hills in the daytime and bring in at night. The milk is excellent, and the meat as tender and sweet as the corn-fed beef of Chicago. I am told that the land produces abundantly and that the colony does well.

A German Town in the Holy Land.

The town of Zammarin is far different from those of other parts of Palestine. Its houses are of German architecture, and many of its people speak German. It has a German hotel run by an American Jew and planned upon Jewish lines. Outside the door of my room is fastened a tube of olive wood, containing the Ten Commandments, and similar tubes are to be found at every door of the hotel, and also on the doors of every house in the town. The Jews kiss these tubes as they go in and out.

Zammarin has sidewalks, and there is a water tower, filled by machinery, which gives water to every house. There is a synagogue, which is well attended, and a town hall, where the colonial officials meet and govern themselves as far as they can under the laws of the Sultan.

Indeed, the colony is a little republic with a president and other officials elected by its members. It settles its own disputes, and makes assessments for special taxes for such things as schools and village improvements. When the colony was started it was supported by Rothschild. Later on it was turned over to th Anglo-Israelite Colonization Society, founded by Baron Hirsch. It was then supported from Europe, but this did not work, and it is now running itself. Every family works for itse and has its own property. As a result the people are becoming independent. The standard of self-respect has risen, and all seem to be prospering.

BEAUTY OF THE ANDALUSIAN PLAINS.

To traverse the great plains of Andalusia is not only to travel through an exceedingly interesting and characteristic part of Spain, but to receive an impression—at least from a distance—of the American prairies as they formerly were. For miles and miles on either side of the Guadalquivir (which, for all its romantic name, is a very muddy stream) the country stretches away into a faint blue haze of distant hills, with the foreground and middle distance full of herds of horses, mules, and cattle, feeding slowly or lying at ease in the long grass and low, gorse-like scrub. The wide and lengthy tracts of grass country, the immense herds, and the mounted cowboys combine to present an aspect which seems to belong much more to America than to Europe. On closer inspection, of course, this illusion is dispelled. For example, the horses, instead of having ordinary foals at foot, have mule foals; and interspersed among the horses and cattle are herds of mules, with occasionally a few donkeys. Moreover, near the alquerias, or farms, will be seen droves of pigs of a dull red color, flocks of goats, and, in some places, merino sheep.

Spain, especially on these plains, is a country of magnificent sunsets. Words fail absolutely to describe the glories of the evening sky. Silent and statuesque against the distant glow one sees silhouetted, perhaps, a mounted herdsman—a brooding figure, motionless and grim—or, on the river's bank, a black bull standing dark against the roseate sky. Again, in the moonlight, one may descry the faint and dusky forms of feeding cattle, the moonlight now and again catching on a gleaming horn. The silence, broken by the faint lowing of distant kine or the weird cry of some night bird, gives an enhanced beauty to a wonderful scene not easily forgotten.—[Wide World.

Mr. Cannister.

STORY OF AN INCIDENT IN BARGAIN-HUNTING IN BOSTON.

By Virginia Whitmore.

HONEY'S is usually a cool store; a dignified store. Today it was neither. In from the city streets on four sides swept the scorching, dust-laden air, and with it, since early morning, had come an unending stream of heated, jostling, ill-tempered women—all bargain-hunting Boston it seemed. It was the time of "summer mark-downs;" Honey's things were always "standard." Yet the sales had been comparatively few.

Mr. Cannister reviewed his day with gloom. The long hours of pulling down, opening out, expatiating upon the merits of divers dress goods had profited him—or Honey's—little. He was very tired. He sighed. "I guess I'm gettin' on," he confessed to himself.

For fifteen years Mr. Cannister had ministered to the wants of many customers at Honey's dress-goods counter. Everybody liked the gentle, courteous, dignified little man; and he liked his life—usually. But today he felt very tired, "sorter oldish," decidedly lonely.

At last his weary eyes lighted up, his jaded spirits revived somewhat. A new customer was approaching.

She was crisp and cool (yes, salad-like,) and had quite evidently taken a run up to town for a day's shopping—from some pleasant North Shore summer resort, probably. She was very refreshing in any event, most refreshing as a contrast to the sloppily-dressed, elbowing yet hesitant Type who had pervaded and profaned (as Mr. Cannister might say if he could talk like that) the sanctuary of Honey's genteel emporium, on that ill-gotten day. And she knew her mind.

For fifteen minutes Mr. Cannister agreed heartfeltedly that that now WAS "an elegant piece of goods; "well, there IS somethin' natty. There's CLASS to that." "Y's'm, now THAT'S swell." At the end of the quarter hour he had sold a pattern off of each of six bolts; expensive goods, too.

"And I am going to have them sent to my dressmaker. Here is her address," the lady concluded. She handed him a card. "Oh," she added quickly, "DO let me see that stunning green stuff up there!" There was no response, and she turned in surprise. Mr. Cannister had not heard her; he was studying the card in his hand.

"I—I beg pardon," he recovered himself with a start. "That green? Y's'm." But although the green was a particular favorite of his upon the charms of which he was wont to expand he showed it to her in silence, still deeply preoccupied.

"I'll take twelve yards," she said, after a moment's examination, "and you may send it with the rest."

"Twelve yards," repeated Mr. Cannister, "y's'm." And he started measuring.

Presently he stopped and leaned across the counter toward her. He was evidently laboring under a great excitement; his pleasant, pale-blue eyes shone behind his spectacles.

"MY name's Cannister, too," he said, a bit hoarsely.

The lady swung slowly about on the revolving stool and looked at him.

"What did you say?" she asked.

"I say MY name's Cannister, too."

She looked bewildered.

He held the card she had given him close to his eyes.

"Oh," she said when she saw it; and bit her lip.

"Mrs.—Annie—Cannister," he read slowly. "Dressmaking. Number 4000 Joy street." He laid the card down. "Mrs. Annie Cannister," he repeated, gazing into space, "and she spells it with two ens!" He started measuring the cloth again. "Four, five—I can't git over it—seven—eight—it come so SUDdin—ni-ine, ten—there's jest ten and a half yards in this piece—we'll call it ten.

"You see," he continued, folding up the goods, "there was three brothers come to America——"

The lady sat listening in fascinated attention to the history of departed Cannisters, most detail being given to their departures. Several times she had attempted to speak, but Mr. Cannister had given her no chance.

"And so when mother passed away, I was left without kith or kin. I thought so, I mean. But now I got this cousin," he continued blithely, "I know she's a cousin. There ain't any other Cannisters that I've ever heard of—an' spellin' it with two ens, too!"

"But Mr. Cannister——" she managed.

"Well, now I see!" he exclaimed at once. "Don't that beat all? Of course—it's her husband! She ain't a widder, is she?" he broke off, anxiously.

"No, but——"

"Well, now that's good. I believe I'd most rather HAVE a man cousin. Let's see—this is Wednesday. I'll go up there Sunday——" and still dreaming of the happy family gathering, Mr. Cannister mechanically removed the change from the cash cylinder and turned to hand it to the lady, but she was gone.

On the following Sunday when Mr. Cannister mounted the steps of No. 4000 Joy street his gentle heart was beating fast with a pleasurable anticipation. The house was not prepossessing externally; the Cannisters had never been good business men, he reflected. But now perhaps HE could be of service to Annie and her husband—ladies often asked him if he knew of a good dressmaker. Perhaps he——

The door was suddenly opened by a burly negro.

"Does Mr. Cannister live here?" chirped the little man.

"My name's Cannister," the negro replied.

Sketches From Spanish America. By George W. Burton.

A DAY IN MEXICO CITY.

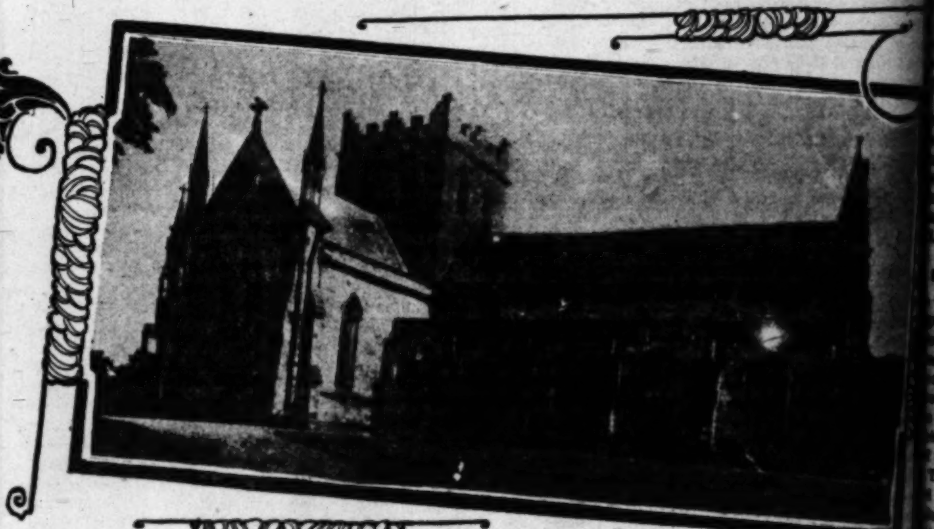
AMONG THE EVIDENCES OF A FORMER GREAT CIVILIZATION.

From a Staff Correspondent.

OF course as a matter of fact we were three days in the city of the Montezumas. We had planned to be there ten days, but owing to the shipwreck of the boat at Mazatlan and our having to retrace our steps by way of Nogales and El Paso, we had only from Sunday night to Thursday morning in the old capital of the Aztec civilization. But while in the city three full days there was so much business to be done that we had only about twelve hours to devote to sightseeing. These hours were distributed over the three days, but we shall compress the time into a single day in order to show persons pressed for time as we were what may be done between an early breakfast and a late dinner.

So here we are in this most ancient city in America, one of the oldest in the world. For Mexico was a city when Europeans first came to the New World, a large city, the capital of an empire, with wealth, art and industries, and, more than that, with a history and civilization far older and prouder than that of the people who took it captive, older and prouder than any in Europe at that time, if not the oldest and proudest in the world. The destruction of most of the Indian records by the mistaken zeal of the first white men into whose hands they fell robs us of definite information as to the probable age of the Mexican civilization found here by the Spanish conquistadores. Still enough escaped the hands of the vandals to give us hints.

Fusiliers' monument, Armagh



Protestant Cathedral, Armagh

Those who have exhausted to the utmost all the remaining records that exist naturally differ in their guesses. There are some of those whose opinion merits most credence who think the Indians of Mexico were possessed of a high degree of civilization, of great wealth, of arts both fine and useful, before David was King of Israel, and that there were poets here who sang national hymns that rival in their sublimity the Psalms, and historians as graphic and concise as those who have left us the Chronicles of the Hebrew people. When Greek civilization was only struggling to find expression in painting, sculpture and literature, the Mexican Indians had found expression for their civilization in all these forms. Centuries earlier than even the fabulous date of the founding of Rome, Mexico was a city almost as proud as Rome in her prime. When the Etruscans on the other side of the Tiber were learning to produce that pottery which is still the wonder of the world, these Indians had carried the ceramic art to a very high degree of perfection. Yes, it is thought probable that Mexico was a city of note, inhabited by a prosperous, intelligent people with arts already developed and with industries of no mean order as long ago as the tenth century before the Christian era. This antedates the siege of Troy by a couple of centuries and the founding of Rome by a greater stretch of time. To match this in age we must go back to Egypt for a parallel or to the cities on the Euphrates.

Noble Chapultepec.

The castle of Chapultepec may well challenge comparison with any spot on earth. Here on this oblong mound that rises abruptly on all sides from the flat plain so densely clothed in fine woods the Montezumas held sway as proud as any Babylonian despot, or as any emperor of the Middle Ages. Before the time of this Aztec dynasty we can only conjecture what building crowned the height, what manner of ruler here held his court, and what manner of life was lived here. Then followed the sway of imperial Spain, when its viceroys rivaled but hardly surpassed in the pomp of gold and silver, of finely-wrought fabrics for hangings and for dazzling array of courtiers the not-barbaric splendors of the Indians who preceded them. For three centuries and more these viceregal courts made brave show to equal those of Madrid and did not fail. Then came Mexican independence of the mother country which celebrated its centenary last September. But under Iturbide and Santa Anna, under empire or republic, still the tropical splendor and wealth held their place on the hill at Chapultepec and in the City of Mexico.

In the interim came Napoleon III with his conspiracy to make Mexico an appanage of France with the ill-fated Austrian Grand Duke Maximilian and poor Princess Carlotta of Belgium as pawns in his desperate game. French markets were able, aided by French luxury and display, to dazzle the eyes of the people of Mexico, and perhaps not since the days of the richest of the Indian monarchs were the hill of Chapultepec and the City of Mexico the scenes of more extravagance, luxury and display than in the few short years of French occupation. Benito Juarez upheld the cause of his country against great odds and well as ever patriot fought for his native land. Our Civil War ended and William H. Seward, Mr. Lincoln's Secretary of State, wrote a note as polite as diplomat ever penned but as firm as statesman ever dispatched, and the Monroe doctrine was asserted in it. In the meantime, Mr. Lincoln, that true lover of human liberty, had written a word of cheer to Gen. Juarez as he lay with his little army across the Rio Grande. As one looks on the hill where Maximilian made his last stand at Queretaro and where he suffered death at the hands of a court-martial, and here in the City of Mexico, the capital of a free people, the prosperous metropolis of a new nation reared on the ruins of all that went before, the American cannot but feel proud that his country did so much for our neighbors. We did think of these things as we went about the beautiful city and took in all its beauty, all its grace and all its prosperity. It made all we saw and learned doubly impressive and interesting.

Location and Topography.

The City of Mexico lies, as the school geography tells us, between the nineteenth and twentieth degrees of north latitude, therefore well within the tropics, as I have written before, 1226 miles south of El Paso and almost midway of the narrow continent between the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific Ocean. But there is nothing of tropical feature in the city or its surroundings. Why? Because the city lies more than 8000 feet above sea level and the whole country for miles is on this high plateau. To the north and west the tableland stretches for many miles, to the east one has to pass Puebla, half-way to Vera Cruz, before the level is much lower, and southward the distance is farther before low levels are met. The mountains near the city rise to much greater heights, culminating in truly alpine heights, with perpetual snow on their heads while semi-tropic verdure flourishes on their lower levels. Our days there were in mid-October. My fondness for Los Angeles and the equable climate of Southern California is well known. I have never passed a time in any place where climatic conditions so exactly met my tastes as in Mexico City. The New England poet went into ecstasy about the perfection of "a day in June." No June day anywhere ever came nearer absolute perfection than these we spent in Mexico. All we met, natives and foreigners who knew Mexico, those who could not live elsewhere and those who would gladly get away, all testified to the fact that these days so perfect in their splendor, so pure of air, so bright of sky, so soft of tone, were just in all respects typical of Mexican days such as may be looked for any month in the year, and such as make up most of all the days. I was forced to admit that if I could not live in Los Angeles I would seek Mexico as a climati refuge.

A Tour of the City.

We began our tour of the city immediately early breakfast under the guidance of our la the hotel we had found a few hundred yards a the depot. The visit was to the market, w found all the products of Mexico on sale by some of them in early from the country. T was typical. Cosmopolitan Switzerland

LIFE AS IT IS SEEN NEAR LAKE LEMON.

By Edna P. Halloran.

IF variety is the spice of life, then Switzerland indeed lives. Nowhere, I think, within the space of forty-five miles, can one find greater variety than along the shores of Lake Lemon, from cosmopolitan Geneva down to sleepy Villeneuve. Nowhere are the old and the new, the native and the foreign thrown in more striking contrast. That small Paris, Montreux, scintillates a stone's throw from Veytaux, which suns itself on the mountainside, content with the simple life of three centuries ago. Its one narrow turning street twisting uphill, is crowded with old stone houses. Over many doors are cut dates 1661, 1720, 1778, and the old regime continues, untouched by the modernness of Montreux and Territet.

The people of this enterprising little country have cleverly met the demands of the fashionable crowd of tourists who invade them all the year round. They have built magnificent hotels and pensions, smart shops and pretty tearooms; they have made mountain climbing esay by the funiculaire; they have made boating on the lake delightful. The old barque with slant sails has given place to the swifter launch; rowboats with striped awnings and cushions fly the flag of every nation. The bronzed boatman sizes you up and pays you the compliment of putting your flag at the bow. In short, the Swiss have made their beautiful country attractive to the most fastidious traveler, but back of the alluring wares they offer in the way of most elaborate modern conveniences, they have strictly kept their own simple mode of living and their ancient customs.

What is more quaint, more picturesque, than the harvesting in autumn? Often of an evening we walked on the country roads among the vineyards. The sunset light touched lake and mountain, on every terraced slope the peasants were gathering and pressing the grapes; their laughing and singing echoed clearly through the stillness, and the red handkerchiefs knotted on the women's heads made a bit of color here and there; the men were bent double by the heavy "hottes" they carried on their backs. Every one was at work from the oldest to the youngest, for it is considered an omen of good luck if the entire family, from the grandfather down to the youngest babe, participate in the gathering and pressing of the grapes.

After seeing the making of the wine, you fancy you will never care to taste any again. The dirty hands that handle the grapes, the discolored "hottes" they are pressed in by a dirty man and dirtier ladle, are bad enough. But when you see the mass of pulp and juice left standing at the roadside for a week or more in big uncovered vats exposed to the dust and swarms of flies, and dabbled in by all the ragged gamins who happen along, it is disgusting. And you don't feel entirely reassured that it all comes out in the firmentation, as the simple peasants hasten to tell you.

Switzerland is more beautiful than ever in the autumn. The wooded mountains rising abruptly from the lakeshore are strongly colored in bright reds and yellows and deep browns. The orchards are laden with apples, chrysanthemums bloom in gorgeous profusion in every garden, and the vigne de Canada has turned crimson on the walls. And the sunsets! They are exquisite beyond description! Besides the marvelous beauty of it, there is a something, I can't tell what, that gives one a feeling of perfect peace and rest in this country. A quieting hand seems to be over everything.

A Sunday in the middle of October is the day of national thanksgiving, when the Swiss return thanks for the good harvest. The churches are decorated according to the season, apples, grapes and vegetables of all kinds being used in place of flowers to adorn the interiors. During the long prayers of gratitude the air is apt to resemble that of the market place. In the afternoon a brass band goes about playing in front of the different churches, and all the world and his wife follow it until dark. So the day ends in cheerful goodfellowship.

All this rustic simplicity exists within sight and hearing of Montreux, Territet and Clarens, where thousands of foreigners, speaking every tongue, vie with one another in dress and jewels and fashion, where a famous casino amuses those who care for it, and where there are many other kinds of diversion for those of more quiet tastes. The stone quay running for several miles along the lake is one of the gayest of promenades. Comfortable benches under the clipped plantains which border it, invite one to loiter and watch the throng of idlers, to feed the swans clamoring at the low wall, or to wait for the boat coming down from Geneva and stopping at Lausanne and the smaller towns. They are gay little affairs, these lake steamers, with their bright awnings and stringed orchestra, and/on holidays and afternoons are crowded with school girls from many pensionnats. An ever-changing throng, the people meet, mingle and separate, Germans, Frenchmen, Italians, Russians, Americans, and many Englishmen, for the resident population is half British.

Of all the towns along the lake, Vevey, linked by trolley to Montreux, is undoubtedly the most Old World, in spite of the 6000 English who live there the year round and the crowd of other nationalities who are transient. Vevey has kept her narrow, crooked streets with flagged pavings and little byways, her old Place with its fountain, her slow-going barques. In a nook sheltered by a breakwater, the peasant women beat and dip the family linen in the cold waters of the lake; the fishermen draw in their seines and stretch them on racks to dry; shabby little children play in the streets and on the quay.

In the center of town is a big square cleared and called La Place du Marche. Here on Tuesday mornings the country people for miles about flock and bring their wares. It is very picturesque, crowded with stalls, where one can find absolutely anything. Near the entrance are banked flowers of every kind—flaming chrysanthemums, delicate roses, modest cyclamen—everything, rivaling the flower markets at Aix-les-Bains in variety. There is stand after stand heaped with every kind of fruit and vegetable, and each husky peasant woman assures you that her wares are the best to be found in the Marche today. Next there is piled enough cheese, butter and eggs for a regiment. Every housewife in town is here, her market basket on her arm, haggling over the price of a slice of cheese, or a kilo of butter. Voices rise in a shrill jargon, Madame leaves the stall and the butter with an offended air. The market woman repents of her former price and calls Madame back. As usual, Madame gets the best end of the bargain.

In the midst of a veritable medley of eatables are tables displaying dry goods and ribbons; old women will urge you to buy kitchen aprons and cotton dresses, and failing that will offer you ancient pewter ware, candlesticks, plates, spoons, vases anything you wish and tres bon marche.

It is an interesting scene, full of color and movement, and usually results in your carrying back to your pension a lot of trash you bought for the fun of buying and then have no idea what to do with. However, you have had a delightful morning, a good object lesson in French and German, and a splendid opportunity of seeing at close range the various types of every nationality that go to make up the cosmopolitan whole of Switzerland.

THE WONDERS OF BIRD FLIGHTS.

"On the horizon," says Prof. Drzewiecki, "in tropical countries there often appears a small black point visible only to the practised eye. The point increases in size as it approaches. It is the sailing bird par excellence, the vulture, returning to its hollow in the rock a dozen miles away. A glider, who sails magnificently upon its outstretched wings, without a beat, without the slightest deviation from its perfectly straight track, it thus traverses the space from one horizon to the other, again becomes an imperceptible point, and disappears, leaving the spectator marveling at the simplicity with which nature solves a problem of mechanics which appeared impossible to man."

When one observes a sea eagle perched upon a lofty cliff, it may be remarked that in order to quit its eyrie it waits until a gust of wind arises, then it lets itself fall forward with extended wings, gives a beat or two as it turns, brings itself to face the wind, and thus mounts without a wing-beat hundreds of yards high. What is the secret of this feat?

Leonardo da Vinci had penetrated the mystery even in the fifteenth century. "Birds of passage," he wrote, "rise against the wind, which thus supports them." In fact, a gliding bird so sets its wings that the air currents make an angle with their plane. The wind thus sustains its weight and gives it at the same time a forward movement. If its force is stronger than is necessary to obtain these two effects, it produces a third effect—the bird mounts into space without a wing-beat. If the air suddenly became calm the bird would fall, but the fall would be astonishingly slow. Prof. Drzewiecki has calculated that a gliding bird, at a height of 1200 yards, at the moment when it commences to descend with motionless wings, can, by setting them at the most favorable angle, touch the ground at a horizontal distance of about fifteen miles! If the wind fails, large birds can always, with a few wing-beats, attain an altitude where they will find a wind which will permit them to continue their journey "on the glide."

The gusts and eddies of the wind are, of course, great disturbers of flight, and few birds attempt to struggle with a tempest. Even the strongest flyers have not, from this point of view, so much boldness as they generally get credit for. Thus, the Stormy Petrel is so named, not because it braves the storm, but because, as soon as a storm threatens, it will often seek for refuge on a ship's rigging, and thus foretell the tempest. And if the albatros loves the stormy waves it is only because it frequently alights upon the water, where it often sleeps securely to the rocking of the billows.—[Hachet-Souplet, in Strand.

THE WEDDING-CAKE PAGODA.

At Mingun, on the right bank of the Irrawaddy River, about five miles from Mandalay, in Burma, there stands a peculiar pagoda known as the Wedding-Cake Pagoda. It was built in the early part of the nineteenth century, and is in thoroughly good preservation, only a few of the images inside having been broken. The extreme heights to the top of the minaret is eighty feet, and the circumference about 600 feet. The pagoda stands back from the river some 300 feet, and is hidden from it by a grove of teak trees. Close to it is the famous Mingun Bell.—[Wide World.

SOME KOREAN SUPERSTITIONS.

The wildest superstitions are rife among the natives of Korea, says a writer in the January Wide World Magazine. Everything is ascribed to the good or evil influences of invisible spirits, whom they strive to propitiate by incessant petty sacrifices. The serpent is revered as sacred, and fed as a domestic pet. Marriage is a question of etiquette, and is arranged by the parents. A live goose is given as a betrothal gift, as a symbol of fidelity and long life. Filial piety is cultivated to a remarkable degree, a son considering it his duty to follow his father to prison or exile. Sacrifices of pigs, sheep, and goats are offered to the firmament, to which they pray for rain or fair weather and the removal of plague and misfortunes.

Postal Purification.

UNCLE SAM AS CENSOR OF MAILS AND MORALS.

By Edward R. Padgett.

WITHIN the massive walls of the Postoffice Department at Washington sits Uncle Sam with his weather eye wide open for those who transgress his postal laws. From his point of vantage he searches out the individuals or firms that mail prospectuses of fake mines, oil stocks that lure with promises of colossal dividends, lottery schemes so veiled that they seem not to be what they are, and anything and everything of an obscene or vulgar nature.

As the censor of public mails and morals he strives to protect the pocket-books of his citizens from "get-rich-quick" schemers and their minds and homes from questionable literature spread broadcast among them by unscrupulous publishers. And he accomplishes his purpose simply by refusing to let them peddle their wares through the mails. More than that, to show that he means what he says, he fines and imprisons them for so doing.

If a band of sharpers discover a hole in the ground, form themselves into a "company" with a high-sounding name and mail neatly-printed pamphlets, telling just why you should invest every cent you can beg or borrow in their wonderful "mine," rest assured your Uncle Sam will eventually run them to earth and show that there is nothing in their "mine" but hole.

Or if a perverted publisher or his agent mails a book, a post card or a picture that may be classed as immoral, the long arm of the government reaches out and stops him, incidentally inflicting a fine of not more than $5000 or imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both.

Hitchcock After Schemers.

When Postmaster-General Hitchcock swooped down on a nest of fake promoters and "get-rich-quick" concerns in New York City several weeks ago, he bore with him as the authority for his action the allegation that the accused were making fraudulent use of the mails. On that ground, he further declared, Uncle Sam will drive from the country every wild-cat scheme to separate gullible investors from their money and that investigations and prosecutions will proceed with all possible vigor until the swindling of the public through the use of the mails is brought to an end. Like the ancient Grecian philosopher who declared he could move the whole world if given a place to stand on, the postal chief hopes to move the world of bogus promoters because he has a place to stand on—their using of the United States mails to defraud.

But the Postmaster-General does not intend to simply stand still on that point of leverage, as was more or less the custom in the past. The old method was to deny the use of the mails to a firm caught transacting illegal business. It failed to produce results, for the firm simply moved its offices elsewhere and began the same business again under another name. The new method is to clap the offenders into jail and prosecute them before the courts, and the penalty for fraudulent use of the mails is a fine of not more than $1000 or imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both.

Before an individual or a concern can be arrested on such a charge, evidence on which to base the accusation must be obtained. The securing of this evidence is a stupendous and intricate task. From the office of the Postmaster-General in the huge Postoffice Department building at Washington, D. C., the wires and lines for the detection of the criminals branch out all over the country like threads from the center of a spider's web.

In all parts of the country the department has its inspectors to the number of 355, whose regular duty is to inspect all postoffices and rural free delivery routes in the United States. Their special duty is to proceed against promoters of fake and lottery schemes. In addition, there are the 200 special agents and detectives of the Department of Justice, under the supervision of Attorney-General Wickersham.

Department Notified.

Upon these inspectors the Postoffice Department relies principally for its evidence. They investigate all cases in which it is alleged that the mails are being used to defraud and report what facts they find to Washington. If the facts presented by the inspectors establish a prima facie case of fraud the person or concern involved is notified of the pendency and nature of the charges and given opportunity to appear the assistant Attorney-General, R. P. Goodw make answer to the charge. If upon the concl the hearing this official is of the opinion that a order should be issued, he reports the case to the master-General, who takes prompt action in the

He must have tangible evidence. is not confined to the consideration of simply le dence or such technical evidence as would be in a court of law. Any relevant circumstance a direct or indirect hearing upon the question can be considered.

Promptness of action is the desideratum. If is delayed any considerable time—as is genera case in a judicial proceeding—the fraudulent the mails are able to consummate their sche fore interference occurs. A fraud order is issu the individual or concern accused is debarred fr ther use of the mails. Postmaster-General Hit has gone even further in the securing of summ tion by clapping the offenders into jail and the ting the courts take their customary leisure in d the official guilt or innocence of the parties acc

Since the fraud-order law has been in existence 3000 orders have been issued by the department, but some thirty of them has the correctness of the partment's ruling been questioned. In many of instances the objection was only as to the constitu ality of the law and not as to the findings of the ment on the merits of the cases. Moreover, in tically all of these cases the department has been sustained by the courts. In no instance has its ion been reversed on the facts involved.

Collecting the Evidence.

The securing of evidence by an inspector is a delicate task. Pitted against him are some of brainiest rogues in the country. The inspectors selves are men who possess extreme business and a lawyer's knowledge of the law. Every known to ordinary detective work is at their tips. They scan closely the advertisements of mail-order concerns and promotion schemes, and subscribe themselves in order to secure Pleasant Graves, who says a church raffle is a lottery.

R. L. Maddox, wh investigates frau methods of censor

If it is a lottery being promulgated through the mails they secure a ticket. If mining or oil stocks or real estate propositions are being advertised with the earmarks of "get-rich-quick" methods, the mine, the oil wells or the real estate sites are visited and subjected to expert investigations.

Upon evidence satisfactory to the Postmaster-General that an individual or concern is making fraudulent use of the mails he instructs the postmasters at any postoffice at which registered letters arrive, directed to the suspect, to return the letters to the postmaster at the office at which they were originally mailed, with the word "Fraudulent" plainly written or stamped upon the outside. These postmasters, in turn, return the letters to the writers, under the usual regulations prescribed. But the postmaster has not the authority to open a letter not addressed to himself. Furthermore, the Postmaster-General may forbid the payment by any postmaster to the suspected individual or concern of any postal-money order drawn to his or to its order, and may provide by regulation for the return to the remitters of the sums named in the money order.

Just as the method of dealing with fraudulent mail matter is clarity itself, so, to the other extreme, is the debarring of obscene matter—especially a novel—a most subtle proceeding with much splitting of hairs and needle-point decisions. Especially is it difficult to determine just who are the government employees who decide what publications are unfit to be handled by Uncle Sam in his mails. A standard must be set, but who sets it and what is it? At the Postoffice Department, naturally, but just which particular individual or individuals of the many employed there?

A reporter with an abnormally developed bump of curiosity anent this subject recently visited the Postoffice Department and found employees almost as ignorant of the identity of the press censor as the curious on the outside. From various interviews it was finally learned that "frequently matter goes up to the assistant Attorney-General, R. P. Goodwin."

Court of Last Resort.

His eyes twinkled, and he held up his hands in mock horror when taxed with reading books and magazines thought too salacious for conveyance through the mails. He averred that if it were known he perused the "smart" publications, confiscated and placed in Uncle Sam's varied library for such works, he would be ashamed to go forth into the world again.

"Then you do read them?"

"Why, I—you see," as if he had discovered some way out, "only those publications about which there is any doubt come to me. I am the court of last resort, as it were. So long as a book shows plainly that it belongs to the indecent class it is discarded without appeal to this office for an opinion. But when it is so well written or subtly handled that one man might be of one idea concerning it, and a second of another, it is submitted to us, and we decide—according to the law."

He confessed guiltily that he did pass upon "Three Weeks." So evidently this was thought doubtful, or it would never have gone through the local postmaster's hands, those of the dead-letter office readers, the superintendent's division and up to the place of the final word.

"But I rarely more than glance at these books," he insisted. "The man you want to see is the real reader. He has been at it for more than thirty years. He reads them all and he can tell you all about it."

And he called a messenger to conduct the writer to where Mr. James R. Ash—the man who has kept the mail atmosphere of this country pure for more than a quarter of a century—sat at his desk. When informed that the assistant Attorney-General had laid upon him the crime of reading all the pernicious stories of the times, his face took on an expression of blank surprise. Torn between loyalty and indignation, he compromised on a gasp, and admitted that he did read all the books that came to him.

Reads as Government Wills.

"Did you pass on 'Three Weeks?'" was asked, suggestively.

"I rather think we all passed on that book," he replied, laughingly. "There was so much talk about it, and one critic condemned and another upheld, and it was rather above the stupidly-written books you know, so it went along. The gentleman you have just interviewed read that one, I know."

"And did you think it so terrible?"

He is a diplomat.

"I do not think when I read such books," he replied. "I am acting as an agent for the government, and I construe as it would have me do according to the standards set here.

"The lawyers and the courts and Congress set that standard. The Attorney-General usually decides any knotty point, but we keep within the prescribed laws. It isn't what I or some other man might think; it is only that we are permitted certain range of judgment within the laws, just as a magistrate has a choice of sending prisoners accused of the same offense to jail for anywhere from a week to thirty days. It all depends on the circumstances."

Prodded mentally to recall some of the most ultra modern books he has read recently, Mr. Ash pleaded guilty to "The Yoke," "Five Nights" and "Life's Shop Window," all of which, he said, were debarred from the mails.

After having been sampled and found unpleasing to the taste, the copies of the debarred books are sent up to the library on the top floor of the building for cataloguing. Uncle Sam has a whole roomful of them, but he guards the door jealously.

Not every book is taken from the mails because it is improper, however. Often it stirs up dangerous public sentiment. An official who refused to be quoted said that "If somebody had had the forethought to expel 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' there might not have been any Civil War." Volumes about which there is uncertainty, tractiveness of the art work in the Midwinter Number. Were there not one line of text, these illustrations would be worth the price.

if it is a lottery being promulgated through the mails they secure a ticket. If mining or oil stocks or real estate propositions are being advertised with the earmarks of "get-rich-quick" methods, the mine, the oil wells or the real estate sites are visited and subjected to expert investigations.

Upon evidence satisfactory to the Postmaster-General that an individual or concern is making fraudulent use of the mails he instructs the postmasters at any postoffice at which registered letters arrive, directed to the suspect, to return the letters to the postmaster at the office at which they were originally mailed, with the word "Fraudulent" plainly written or stamped upon the outside. These postmasters, in turn, return the letters to the writers, under the usual regulations prescribed. But the postmaster has not the authority to open a letter not addressed to himself. Furthermore, the Postmaster-General may forbid the payment by any postmaster to the suspected individual or concern of any postal money order drawn to his or to its order, and may provide by regulation for the return to the remitters of the sums named in the money order.

Just as the method of dealing with fraudulent mail matter is clarity itself, so, to the other extreme, is the debarring of obscene matter—especially a novel—a most subtle proceeding with much splitting of hairs and needle-point decisions. Especially is it difficult to determine just who are the government employees who decide what publications are unfit to be handled by Uncle Sam in his mails. A standard must be set, but who sets it and what is it? At the Postoffice Department, naturally, but just which particular individual or individuals of the many employed there?

A reporter with an abnormally developed bump of curiosity anent this subject recently visited the Postoffice Department and found employees almost as ignorant of the identity of the press censor as the curious on the outside. From various interviews it was finally learned that "frequently matter goes up to the assistant Attorney-General, R. P. Goodwin."

After having been sampled and found unpleasing to the taste, the copies of the debarred books are sent up to the library on the top floor of the building for cataloguing. Uncle Sam has a whole roomful of them, but he guards the door jealously.

Not every book is taken from the mails because it is improper, however. Often it stirs up dangerous public sentiment. An official who refused to be quoted said that "if somebody had had the forethought to expel 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' there might not have been any Civil War." Volumes about which there is uncertainty, Mr. Ash explained, pass in turn through all the many divisions, until, if need be, the Attorney-General takes it up.

Maybe it is a foreign story with a reputation for ultra-smartness abroad, but considered rather too spicy for every-day American reading. It goes through the various channels until it comes to this same Mr. Ash, whose mind must be pure indeed to have come through undefiled after thirty years of such labor.

Summer-Resort Madness.

He explained it by alluding to a bank cashier who handles money until it comes to have no more significance to him than, in the vernacular, so much "kale." Incidentally, Mr. Ash deplores the tendency during the past ten years toward an immorality as displayed in the presumably better class of books.

"Before that," he explained, "stories were trashy or maudlingly sentimental in nature and were at once recognized as such, because only the cheaper grade of American authors wrote them. But now books by clever writers, with much of real merit in them, cause us no end of trouble."

Mr. James R. Young, superintendent of the postoffice, seemed especially concerned with the subject of improper post cards. He declared that people away at the summer resorts seem to temporarily forget their sense of fitness of things and mail cards that would greatly mortify the recipients even if it did them no harm.

"They mean no real harm," he explained, "but such a card would often place the receiver in a very embarrassing position. People are not allowed to dun on post cards, either. We have twelve men in the dead-letter office to whom such objectionable matter is sent. These men merely read and destroy all day long. Often a man ignorant of the law writes a postal saying what he will do if he is not paid money by a certain date. This constitutes a threat, and is not mailable. The postmaster of the office where it was mailed sends it here, or destroys it if he is certain of its nature. When such a threat of libel is received in a sealed letter and sent on to the postoffice by the victim, every effort is made to locate and deal with the guilty one."

There is a bureau of identification connected with this section, where records are kept of arrests made by the postal inspectors. Recently this staff has been far more busy than ever before, as the new penal code, enacted by Congress at the last session, greatly widens the scope of matter prohibited in the mails.

Foreigners Worst Offenders.

Mrs. Georgia Lee, chief clerk to the chief inspector, who used to handle such cases, said:

"The average American citizen has but slight knowledge of what is proper and what improper for mailing," she said. "The department has learned to be very careful in arresting presumable offenders without more definite proof than the word of a complainant. There have been cases where a person having a grudge against another deliberately mailed a postal to himself containing malicious language and signed with the name of his enemy, knowing that it would be sent to Washington and the supposed author of it investigated.

Another division of the corps that handles improper books and cards is the foreign registry section. Mr. R. L. Baines is chief of this division, and in it are men capable of translating matter seized at the customshouse and forwarded to them to determine its eligibility for the mails. R. L. Maddox, assistant to the superintendent of foreign mails, who has been in the government service since he was 21 years old, goes abroad every summer to keep in touch with foreign methods.

Mrs. E. F. Melville, who has for years handled the post cards sent in from abroad, declared that nothing mailed by Americans compares in questionableness with cards and magazines sent in from France and Italy.

"They resort to every sort of subterfuge to get them delivered in this country," she explained. "They even cut the leaves of Bibles and insert their post cards between them. Invisible ink, backward writing, everything imaginable is resorted to to get them through. But the inspectors in New York are lynx-eyed and rarely does anything escape them."

Real Art Debarred.

When asked who decided on what is art and what vulgarity in foreign pictures, Mrs. Melville admitted reluctantly that very often reproductions of some world-famous statues which art students reproduce everywhere are confiscated and sent into the dead-letter office.

"I hate to destroy them," she said, "but it has to be done. Still, we have some license allowed us, and as things now stand we can more frequently restore such works of art to their intended owners than under the regime of a high official who might class everything nude as naked."

Numerous queries among the many readers of such matter elicited the information that most of the libelous, defamatory and indecent postals mailed in this country come via the rural free delivery. It is not the city-bred chap who thus defies United States mail pouches, but the country lad. Perhaps the town youngster has a more wholesame dread of the law.

And it is also to the rural fireside that many magazines are going when removed from the mails by the lottery division, of which Mr. Pleasant Graves has partial charge. Under a recent ruling guessing contests are considered lotteries.

Many magazines intended for country subscribers are filled with such inducements, and they are being rapidly weeded out by the Postoffice Department. There is no objection to guessing contests, but prizes may not be offered. Mr. Graves intimates that even a circular issued by a church and mailed for the purpose of notifying its members that a raffle is to be held for charity is a lottery, and the pastor may find himself in an unpleasant situation.

He was asked to define the exact meaning of a lottery, and replied:

"Any contest in which there is a chance, but also an uncertainty, of winning a prize, is a lottery. Any drawing for which prizes are given, any sort of guessing contest, from 'How old is Ann?' to the possible population of the United States, as well as a raffle where turkeys, knit afghans or pianos are offered as prizes, or even a church 'euchre,' advertised through the mails as giving the players a chance to win a prize, come under the heading of lotteries in the postoffice catalogue, and are treated as such."

The Fraud Division.

Separate from this division is the one dealing with frauds. A very wide construction is also placed on the definition of this term by the United States attorneys, who interpret the laws for the Postoffice Department. J. A. Nash, who is assistant to the assistant Attorney-General, R. P. Goodwin, was asked to explain the various reasons for extracting letters, pamphlets and even books from the mails on the grounds of fraud, and declared that various mining schemes discovered to be fraudulent, and any enterprise which upon investigation is discovered to have no real business backing, but is merely run to "coax in suckers," are classified as frauds, and dealt with accordingly.

A postmaster who is suspicious of numerous letters being mailed from his office by some such concern notifies the department, and an investigation is made. But most often somebody who has been "done" lodges a complaint there against the dishonest concern. This goes to the chief inspector, and then on to the office of Mr. Goodwin, or that of Paul Keyser, senior assistant attorney, or Mr. Neiss, junior assistant attorney.

More than once an apparently attractive little book, presumably a love story, has turned out to be a very clever effort to introduce some imaginative mining stock, or to interest readers in the fiction so that they will guess how the story ends—thereby winning a prize or losing the money they paid for the publication.

A scheme recently pounced upon by the department dealt with a plan so perfectly philanthropic that the wonder is Uncle Sam had the heart to do as he did with it. A certain jewelry firm announced that it would enable every one to possess a $20 gold watch at small cost. Each would-be owner was to subscribe $1 a month. From the number of "members" a number would be drawn at random each month, its human tally to receive the watch. This was faithfully done, and the timepieces proved to be really worth $20. But Uncle Sam decided that, because some one person had to get left at each drawing and to receive his watch only after having paid the full price for it, the concern was violating the fraud order.

GAELIC REVIVAL.

Perhaps the most important work of the Gaelic League in Ireland is the effort now being made by its leaders, Dr. Douglas Hyde, Father Michael O. Hickey and others, to nationalize the educational system. The common schools for several generations have helped to kill the spirit of nationality in the children. The text-books in history, geography and other subjects were compiled by men whose anti-Irish feelings were their best asset in gaining the support of the so-called National Board of Education. Irish history was banned and a thoroughly English atmosphere pervaded everything.

In spite of many obstacles the league has accomplished much in the way of reform. More than 3000 of the schools now teach the Irish language, the colleges that were either indifferent or antagonistic have gradually fallen into line and a great victory has been won in having the Irish language made an essential for matriculation in the New National University, after a bitter fight, which was only successful when the great mass of the thinking people became aroused and uniting behind the Gaelic leaguers defeated the enemies of an Irish Ireland.

While extraordinary progress has been made in the attempt to Irishize the schools and colleges, the work is not yet finished. An immense amount remains to be done, and the Gaelic League must receive the united support of the people of Irish extraction in the United States both morally and materially so that West Britonism may be killed forever. The envoys who are now here explaining to the American public the philosophy of real nationalism, Father Michael O'Flanagan and Mr. Fionan MacColum, are stirring the people into activity, and it is the hope of every well wisher of the cause that the Celtic element, realizing the paramount importance of the Irish revival, will liberally finance it for the continuance of the educational reform movement, as the future of the national language depends on the advance made in the present generation.—[Edward Dwyer, New York Sun.

THE OBSOLETE FAMILY BIBLE.

A Philadelphia publishing house that makes a specialty of the sacred book says the family Bible trade is languishing, says a writer in Success Magazine. The Bible continues to be the best seller, but it is no longer the immense volume that stood on the parlor center table, and contained marvelous steel engravings of the Tower of Babel and the fall of Nineveh and had room for all theZ family records. The thing now is a thin paper student edition with flexible covers, concordances and notes and all suited to the overcoat pocket. It hasn't room for any family history, but it can be introduced into a stingy city flat without crowding the family.

The passing of the family Bible is significant of an interesting change in the keeping of vital statistics. Records of births, deaths and marriages have ceased to be a family and become a State function. It is done better and more completely than in the old days, and the records are more useful to the public. That fact need not prevent our dropping a tear at the passing of an old cherished institution.

The Ghostly Resolution.

THAT New Year Resolution—
He nailed it up so high,
The angels must have read it
'Way yonder, in the sky.

For when the Night came on the town
He sure heard wings a-flutterin' down
And a voice that chilled him, seemed to say:
"Why did you smack your mouth today?"

That New Year Resolution—
He bore it, in the night,
Up to the ghostly garret,
To hide it out o' sight.

But he seemed to hear strange footsteps sound,
And phantom-forms were fluttering 'round,
And a voice that chilled the garret gray:
"Why did you smack your mouth today?"

That New Year Resolution—
He cast it in the flame,
But in red-sprinkled ashes
The Fire traced his name!

And the Phantoms made the Fire say:
"You smacked your mouth three times today!"
Till he cried: "You've sampled that fine brand never,
Or you'd all be smacking your mouths forever!"

Mister Would Stop to Listen.

"ONCE on a time," said Brother Dickey, "when it wuz de New Year, an' new roads wuz bein' cut fer de journey o'life, an' de sun an' de moon an' stars wuz admirin' de way de ol' worl' had pulled through de long twelve months, without stoppin' ter brag, de worl' took a notion dat he'd listen ter what folks had ter say 'bout him, an' ef dey rickernized de work he'd been doin' fer 'em since de fust o' Creation.

You see de ol 'worl' needed some 'couragement fer ter keep up de lick, an' a good word in season is ez helpful ter a worl' ez what it is ter de toilin' people in it. So, de ol' worl' say ter hisse'f, he did:

"'I'll listen all day, an' I'll listen all night, an' see what de verdick o' de jury is.' So he set in ter listen.

"Another man up an' said a worl' what didn't have trees 'nuff ter keep de lumber trust happy wuz so nigh a failure it ought to be 'shamed ter look de sun in de face befo' br'akfas', an' it wuz no use fer it ter try ter throw off on de moon.

"Then de meat trust said it wuz a worl' wid so little stock for eatin' purposes it would have ter raise de price ag'in, in self-defense.

"Then, 'long come de office-seekers, sayin' dat it wuz a mighty po' worl' what didn't have offices 'nuff ter go 'roun', whilst de statesmen in Congress all said it wuz too small a worl' fer 'em ter show off in.

"And then come de big rich people, sayin' dat it wuz de only worl' dey had ever owned what give so little satisfaction, an' ef it didn't hurry an' take in de moon, dey'd have nuthin' mo' ter fence in!

"An' so it went. Fum de highest ter de lowest it wuz a word an' a blow fer de po' ol' worl'! Even de cheap weather prophets laid blame on it fer sendin' blizzards w'en dey prophesied a hot time, an' sez ef dat wuzn't 'nuff ter fill its measure o' trouble ter de runnin'-over rim, it heered de wimmen what wants ter be President an' Congressman say dat it never would be de right sort of a worl' ontel dey had de runnin' of it—seein' dat de men had made sich a failure at it sence de time ol' Adam tol' Miss Eve he wuz de boss.

"I tell you, at all dem complaints, de ears o' de ol' worl' wuz burnin' him fer sho'! An' he wuz mighty sorry dat he lost good time playin' de eavesdrapper, an' ef it hadn't 'a' been winter, he'd 'a' sho' axed de sun ter blaze an' burn some o' dem people befo' der time!

"But des 'bout de time de ol' worl' wuz de maddest he heered a feller in a raggedy coat shoutin' 'Hallelula!' an' it did de ol' worl' so much good dat he fair rolled roun' an' roun' wid de laffin' enjoyment of it! MACHINE FOR PREDICTING TIDES.

Today the United States government leads all co tries in the world in tidal forecasts with a recently vented machine, says the January Popular Mechan Magazine in an illustrated article. Formerly this w required the employment of sixty-five computers two or three days to figure out a year's forecast tides for a given place. Now, one man sits down to machine, all hung with wheels and pulleys, turns crank and grinds out a tide table for any point which the machine has been adjusted. The mach was made by two officials of the survey. Its per tion was not reached until after fourteen years of work and study, and it cost the government, in th and material, the sum of $15,000

The time of setting the machine for predicting a including checking, is from two to four hours; that predicting and recording the high and low waters fo station for one year, from ten to fourteen hours. Th machine can be adjusted, and a whole year's predic as to what the tides will be at a given point can be corded and tabulated in half a day by one man. Th are but four such tide-predicting machines in t world.

COMMERCIAL UTILITY OF THE AEROPLANE

The daily press, and even some technical journ have worked themselves into quite a glow over flight on November 7, in a Wright machine, from D ton to Columbus, in which was made the first delive of merchandise in an aeroplane. The distance is si five miles, and was covered in sixty-seven minutes. T package weighed 100 pounds and contained silk va at $800. We must confess that silk sounds better t soap, even though less essential, and presume it fitting that the first delivery via the air route sho be something more esthetic than groceries. Howev the feat is more scientific than practical, for we not expect our ordinary household wants are going be supplied by airships. It is within bounds that a carrier of official documents, legal papers, an em gency supply for a surgeon or doctor at some rem place, or even the doctor himself, the aeroplane m be the one barrier between a life and death. But f years to come when the cook, halted in her work, te phones for a yeast cake, "right-away," the bread rai will continue to travel in, at best, a motor wagon, an more likely, crushed in the pocket of the grocer's sm boy. It may be cruel to thus disillusionize the fan but we feel impelled to tell the truth.—[H. H. Winds in Popular Mechanics.

A DELIGHTFUL CRUISE IN UNFREQUENTED EASTERN OREGON.

By William L. Finley.*

IF one glances at a map of the United States as w did, he will find that a part of Idaho, Nevada, North ern California and the whole southeastern Orego country is the largest tract of land within our border untraversed by railroads. On the maps this region is sort of a blank. A few lakes, streams and mountains ar scattered here and there, but half of them are not in th right location. The ordinary map of today is about a indefinite and inadequate concerning southeaster Oregon, as if we should consult a map of New Yor published over 200 years ago. A man may think he ca get a good idea of a country by rolling over it in a Pull man, but to know what the land is made of, you hav to go slower. The way to get first-hand informatio is to take one's time, travel leisurely and camp throug the country.

It was a matter of about $100 expense to remove th entire top of our automobile and build a new body t the machine. This was constructed so it looked a goo deal like a modern prairie schooner. In the body o the machine on each side were built two long lockers on the top of which fitted two cushioned seats in omnibus fashion. The cushion in the front seat was taken out each night and fitted in between the two side seats so the whole made a very good sleeping place. The top and sides of the machine were canvas, and the latter could be rolled up or let down. At the back end of each long locker was a fifteen-gallon cask for gasoline; on the running boards on each side we carried a ten-gallon cask; as well as a tool chest and cupboard. With the rear tank, this enabled us to take seventy-five gallons of fuel. In addition, two fifty-five-gallon casks were freighted into the country by way of Vale for future use.

The back end of the machine dropped down and furnished a very good standing lunch counter. We carried a complete camping outfit. With a small gasoline torch and a cooking frame, we could get a very good meal in the machine in case of wet weather. The machine solved the problem of a good comfortable sleeping place with a cover over our heads for rainy weather. We could make or break camp in short order and cover a good deal more ground in a day than with the old-style prairie schooner.

A Mountain Barrier.

The eastern and western parts of Oregon are like two different States, separated by the barrier of the Cascade Range. It is very difficult to cross these mountains in the early spring, so we shipped our machine by boat up the Columbia River to The Dalles and set out south.

I had often tried to picture in my own mind the looks of this country that has been called "our last frontier." Is it really a desert waste, or is it a country of undeveloped resources? At the government Land Office at Burns they told me they had the records of 11,000,000 acres of vacant land. Here are 30,000 acres at the Lakeview land office, that have just been thrown open to entry. A great deal of land to the north of Lake county is open to settlement under the 320-acre dry-farming act. But a man doesn't want land unless it is good for something.

As soon as we set out southward from The Dalles, we began to get a good idea of the country. The country itself might pass for Iowa or any other central State, except that instead of the fields spread out in a level stretch, they are rolled up and down into wavy hills stretching on and on. These hills were originally covered with sage brush, and at first glance I thought they would be rocky and of poor soil. Not so; the soil is black and rich. Most of these hills are under cultivation. Wheat is the crop of Wasco county.

The next morning I went over to a near-by farmhouse, where I saw a genial-hearted rancher working in the garden. I hitched my leg over his fence and we were soon discussing crops.

"This is the first rain we have had for almost two months, and it's worth more than a million dollars to our wheat corp," he said. I thought that was merely an extravagant expression, but after we had traveled through the rolling country for a day, and seen hills piling upon hills, across big and little valleys and stretching on and on, most of them carpeted green with growing crops, I understood these were not extravagant words. Winter wheat was over a foot high and thick, and spring wheat was well sprouted, but both had reached the stage where moisture was a necessity.

Plenty of Wheat There.

"If you think this is not the land for wheat, you ought to come during the harvest season when our big combines are cutting, threshing and sacking," he continued. "We are producing 15,000,000 bushels of wheat a year, and that amount will be doubled if ever this vast region to the south is opened up by a railroad. Perhaps you do not know that Portland is the second wheat-shipping port in the United States; she ranks next to New York, this year shipping approximately $10,000,000 worth."

As we passed out of the wheat belt, and drew away further from the railroad, crops changed from wheat to alfalfa. The rancher can no longer afford to make the long haul to the railroad, so he has to feed his produce into sheep and cattle and drive them out once or twice a year. Here is a land of immense ranches, large areas that have not been cleared of sage brush, and fertile valleys that are used for nothing but pasture.

The day after the rain, the sun rose in a clear sky. To lighten the load up some of the slippery hills, I set out ahead. On the top of a maple tree that grew at the

A DELIGHTFUL CRUISE IN UNFREQUENTED EASTERN OREGON.

By William L. Finley.*

IF one glances at a map of the United States as we did, he will find that a part of Idaho, Nevada, Northern California and the whole southeastern Oregon country is the largest tract of land within our borders untraversed by railroads. On the maps this region is a sort of a blank. A few lakes, streams and mountains are scattered here and there, but half of them are not in the right location. The ordinary map of today is about as indefinite and inadequate concerning southeastern Oregon, as if we should consult a map of New York published over 200 years ago. A man may think he can get a good idea of a country by rolling over it in a Pullman, but to know what the land is made of, you have to go slower. The way to get first-hand information is to take one's time, travel leisurely and camp through the country.

It was a matter of about $100 expense to remove the entire top of our automobile and build a new body to the machine. This was constructed so it looked a good deal like a modern prairie schooner. In the body of the machine on each side were built two long lockers on the top of which fitted two cushioned seats in omnibus fashion. The cushion in the front seat was taken out each night and fitted in between the two side seats so the whole made a very good sleeping place. The top and sides of the machine were canvas, and the latter could be rolled up or let down. At the back end of each long locker was a fifteen-gallon cask for gasoline; on the running boards on each side we carried a ten-gallon cask, as well as a tool chest and cupboard. With the rear tank, this enabled us to take seventy-five gallons of fuel. In addition, two fifty-five-gallon casks were freighted into the country by way of Vale for future use.

The back end of the machine dropped down and furnished a very good standing lunch counter. We carried a complete camping outfit. With a small gasoline torch and a cooking frame, we could get a very good meal in the machine in case of wet weather. The machine solved the problem of a good comfortable sleeping place with a cover over our heads for rainy weather. We could make or break camp in short order and cover a good deal more ground in a day than with the old-style prairie schooner.

A Mountain Barrier.

The eastern and western parts of Oregon are like two different States, separated by the barrier of the Cascade Range. It is very difficult to cross these mountains in the early spring, so we shipped our machine by boat up the Columbia River to The Dalles and set out south.

I had often tried to picture in my own mind the looks of this country that has been called "our last frontier." Is it really a desert waste, or is it a country of undeveloped resources? At the government Land Office at Burns they told me they had the records of 11,000,000 acres of vacant land. Here are 30,000 acres at the Lakeview land office, that have just been thrown open to entry. A great deal of land to the north of Lake county is open to settlement under the 320-acre dry-farming act. But a man doesn't want land unless it is good for something.

As soon as we set out southward from The Dalles, we began to get a good idea of the country. The country itself might pass for Iowa or any other central State, except that instead of the fields spread out in a level stretch, they are rolled up and down into wavy hills stretching on and on. These hills were originally covered with sage brush, and at first glance I thought they would be rocky and of poor soil. Not so; the soil is black and rich. Most of these hills are under cultivation. Wheat is the crop of Wasco county.

The next morning I went over to a near-by farmhouse, where I saw a genial-hearted rancher working in the garden. I hitched my leg over his fence and we were soon discussing crops.

"This is the first rain we have had for almost two months, and it's worth more than a million dollars to our wheat corp," he said. I thought that was merely an extravagant expression, but after we had traveled through the rolling country for a day, and seen hills piling upon hills, across big and little valleys and stretching on and on, most of them carpeted green with growing crops, I understood these were not extravagant words. Winter wheat was over a foot high and thick, and spring wheat was well sprouted, but both had reached the stage where moisture was a necessity.

Plenty of Wheat There.

"If you think this is not the land for wheat, you ought to come during the harvest season when our big combines are cutting, threshing and sacking," he continued. "We are producing 15,000,000 bushels of wheat a year, and that amount will be doubled if ever this vast region to the south is opened up by a railroad. Perhaps you do not know that Portland is the second wheat-shipping port in the United States; she ranks next to New York, this year shipping approximately $10,000,000 worth."

As we passed out of the wheat belt, and drew away farther from the railroad, crops changed from wheat to alfalfa. The rancher can no longer afford to make the long haul to the railroad, so he has to feed his produce to sheep and cattle and drive them out once or twice a year. Here is a land of immense ranches, large areas that have not been cleared of sage brush, and fertile valleys that are used for nothing but pasture.

The day after the rain, the sun rose in a clear sky. To lighten the load up some of the slippery hills, I set out ahead. On the top of a maple tree that grew at the roadside, a meadow lark scattered its full rich notes out over the field, another sang from the fence and another from a telegraph pole, till the chorus rang out over the fields and up and down the hills.

A little beyond and at the side of the road, I saw a burrowing owl sitting at the entrance of his home. He bowed to me several times as I came nearer and then deserted his nest when I got within fifteen feet. At the entrance of his burrow, I found half a tubful of fur and small bones, the remains of many a banquet of mice and squirrels.

Among the animals of the region, the porcupine is a resident of the thorn thickets up and down the canyons. At noon the next day, I found one up a juniper tree. He had such a battery of spear points in his tail that he baffled all our attempts to get him down.

That evening after we had finished supper, the fire had died down and we were about ready for bed, when a half-grown skunk walked into our midst. He ambled up and took a sniff at the frying pan. My companion reached for a stick of wood, but on second thought his better judgment checked his haste. I slipped on my shoes and went a little closer. When I got within about six feet, the gentle pussy began stamping his front feet and, swinging around rather recklessly. I shouted "Skat! Shoo!" at him and started to wave my hand, when I beheld another pussy about twice at large, in the background. And at her tail came another youngster. It looked to me as if they had the drop on us, and I was ready to surrender.

The Harmless Skunk.

A skunk is a harmless little beast, often misunderstood and maligned. The trouble is, most people do not know how to handle a skunk. If he is suspended by his tail he is entirely harmless. All you have to do is not to scare him or get him excited, and then at the right moment grasp him by the bushy tail and swing him quickly in the air. As long as his feet do not touch terra firma, the skunk's only weapons, his scent glands, are powerless, so you can carry him or put him where you wish.

All this I had learned from John Burroughs, whose authority as a naturalist few will dispute. Yet in the face of this, I had to argue for half an hour to get my companion to try the trick. The telling argument came from the fact that he had two suits of clothes, and I had but one. When the young skunk was lifted out from among our dishes, he behaved in a very gentlemanly manner, much to my disgust.

I shall never forget our long early-morning run out of Shaniko. We set out before daylight to get ahead of a line of freight wagons. We drove for about twenty miles along a high ridge country, rocky and barren, with the wind driving straight from the snows of the high Cascades. There are several snow-capped mountains that looked but a short distance away, Mt. Hood, Mt. Jefferson, and the Three Sisters. I never endured a more biting cold that seemed to eat right into a man's vitals. We needed the thickest clothing. Yet after a drive of about three hours, we suddenly descended into a warm little valley. And we were soon preparing breakfast in our shirt sleeves with the air as mild as one could wish. In three hours, the change seemed like going from the Arctic Circle to the equator.

About eighty miles southeast of The Dalles, we came to the edge of the canyon of the Des Chutes River. From the high lookout we could look far across the rolling hills of the surrounding country. It was a seven-mile run winding down the mountain side to the Sherar's Bridge. It was a hard, rocky, three-mile pull up the other side to the level country beyond.

For many years this country has awaited the coming of a railroad. "Wait till Eastern Oregon builds up," said the railroad men, and she did wait for many years. A short time ago the owners of two transcontinental systems suddenly changed tactics. The Hill interests decided that eastern Oregon was too big a prize to keep under cover. The Harriman people suddenly became enthusiastic. As a result, two great railroads were stumbling over each other and fighting tooth and nail to lay their tracks up the Des Chutes Canyon into central Oregon.

Railroad Activity.

In this day of co-operation and enterprise, a dispute of this kind is generally settled by the arrangement of tracking privileges on one line for both roads. Not so in this case. A productive territory as big as the State of New York is too large a bone of contention. As many as 10,000 men have been at work at one time here in this canyon where two big rivals are paralleling each other for more than a hundred miles. During the past summer the presidents of both of these systems made long trips in order to see this country. By the first of February, 1911, the Oregon Trunk Railway, which is an enterprise of the Hill people, will have 115 miles of track in usage running up the Des Chutes Canyon to the plains of central Oregon. The prairie schooners are now on their last trek in the van of the railroad. The stage driver is taking his last stand against the automobile, a machine which he hates as an ordinary woman does a rattlesnake. The cowboy will soon be displaced by the plowboy.

As we journeyed on south from the Des Chutes, we passed a great deal of high ridge land that is rocky and good for nothing in particular except grazing. Yet here and there one comes to the edge of the rim rock where the land breaks away into small valleys that are very fertile, and well watered.

We pulled up in front of the store at Hay Creek Ranch. Two young men wearing sombreros and chaps greeted us.

"Workin' for the railroad?"

"Surveyin' or lookin' for land?"

"Are you with the government?"

These and half a dozen other questions were fired at me almost before I was out of the machine. It was so all along the line from The Dalles to Burns. Central Oregon is still in chaps and spurs, but these were not backwoods farmers, or ignorant cowboys. Many of them are well-educated men of means. They like the life on the range. They have land that will produce record crops and roll up the bank account if a railroad will only build within hauling distance.

A Great Ranch.

The holdings of the Baldwin Sheep and Land Company in the Hay Creek Valley are typical of a large eastern Oregon ranch. In 1873, Dr. Baldwin, who was an artist in wool and mutton, hunted the whole western country for a good place to produce prize winners. He selected Hay Creek and shipped a fine band of registered Spanish Merinos to the railroad terminus and then trailed them across the Blue Mountains for a thousand miles. The object was to produce a grade of sheep that were hardy, meaty and woolly. This has been accomplished in the Baldwin sheep, which is perhaps the highest type of wool and mutton animal. It is the combination of the best blood in the Merino, Delaine and Rambouillet types. It is a sheep that shears about twelve pounds of wool from a mature ewe weighing 125 pounds, or about twenty-five pounds of wool from a mature ram weighing 200 pounds.

The day we reached Hay Creek they had finished shearing about 30,000 sheep in eighteen days, from which they secured about 300,000 pounds of wool. This is but a small part of what the great flocks produced that range far and wide from the Cascades east over the sage-brush slopes and fertile valleys of eastern Oregon. Last year the wool crop for the State was 20,450,000 pounds. But the reign of cattle and sheep kings is nearing its close, for the big Hay Creek Ranch, like many others of eastern Oregon, is to be cut up and sold anent the coming of the railroad.

The pleasure in a thousand-mile trip through eastern Oregon is in taking one's time to see the country. As a rule we had good roads. Where there was nothing to see, we steamed along rapidly, or where there was any object, we cut out into sage brush. We always had good camps with plenty of water. Two days on Crooked River and two more along in the forest reserve were among the most enjoyable of the trip.

If one gets the idea, as I did, that all of Oregon's best timber is in the Cascades and Coast Range Mountains, he will be surprised to see the splendid pine forests further east, especially in the Blue Mountains. Here on the long slopes and the adjoining ranges, the new railway lines will seek their first important tonnage. The whole eastern slope of the Cascades affords one of the largest bodies of timber in the United States. But of the 3,000,000,000 feet of standing timber which the Forest Bureau credits to the State of Oregon, or about one-sixth of the supply in the United States, a good portion of this falls in the eastern half of the State. The annual cut of about 600,000,000 feet valued at about $5,500,000, will be enlarged by the addition of eastern Oregon to the railroad map.

When we traveled up the Des Chutes River and some of its tributaries, I came to the conclusion that the two big railroad systems did not have their eyes open to the hauling of timber, live stock, grain and minerals alone. Irrigation projects under way will mean increased production, but the latent power along the streams to be veloped is a factor of more importance. According to a government expert along the Des Chutes drainage area alone at the minimum stage of the water the enormous amount of 1,115,000 horse power can be developed. This river drains over 9000 square miles, is 224 miles long and in that distance drops 4840 feet.

The real region of our quest was the extensive lake country that stretches for 200 miles along the southern Oregon border and which is known as the greatest breeding and feeding ground in the United States for all kinds of wild fowl. At the eastern end of this series of lakes are Malheur and Harney. Because of the extensive wild-fowl nurseries on these lakes, President Roosevelt set aside this area on August 18, 1908, as a wild-bird reservation and placed it in the care of the Department of Agriculture. This and the Klamath Lake Reservation, which was established August 8 of the same year, are the two largest and most important government reservations in the United States set aside solely for the protection of wild birds.

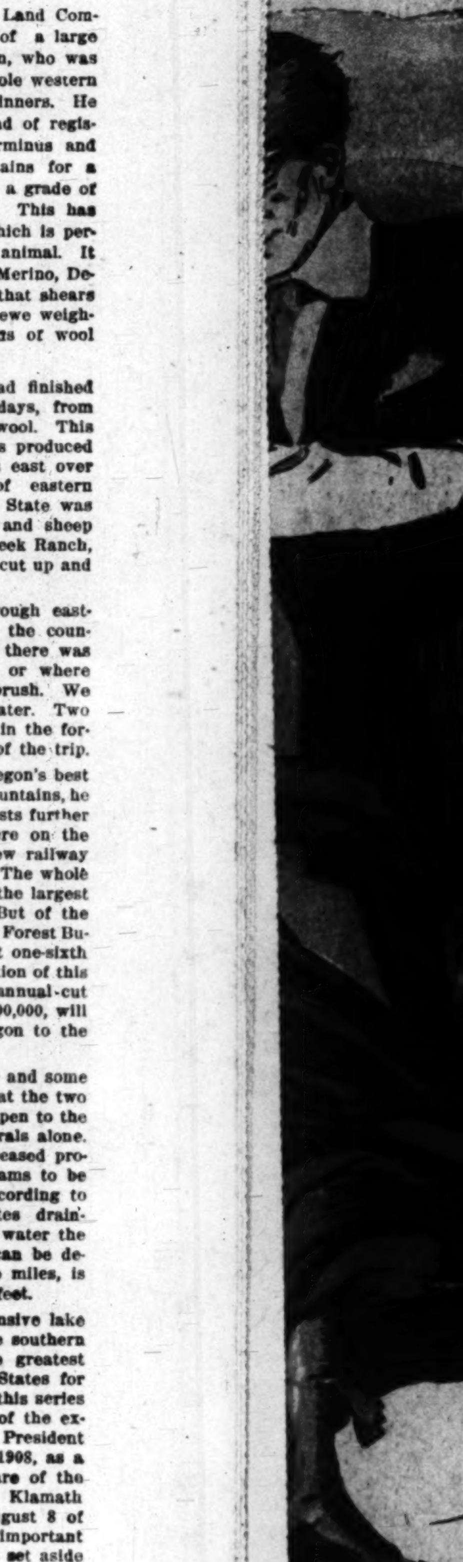
A Valley Unrolled.

When we reached Harney Valley we found a broad, fertile dip between the Blue Mountains on the north and the Stein range on the south. Extending out from the hills on the west side of the valley is a high headland called Wright's Point that cuts like the prow of a huge ocean liner into the heart of the valley. When we reached the top of this ridge, the whole valley rolled out before us. Off to the south lay the marshes of the Malheur. The wide wastes were silent in the summer sun, hazy, far-away, mysterious.

Malheur Lake is twenty-five miles south of Burns, and much to our chagrin we found for a change that the road was paved in places with loose sand about a foot deep. Here was where the machine balked. We had no shovels to dig out the sand down to hardpan, but with two ten-pound lard buckets, my companion, who is a mechanical genius in some ways, constructed a sort of a rotary snow plow, so that by stooping and scooping and heaving long enough and hard enough, the sand was removed and the machine pulled through.

On the south side of Malheur several long arms of water leave the tules and curve in for half a mile. As we approached the first of these, across the opposite side, we saw amazing sights; cattle twice the size of giraffes were grazing on the flats. As we went on, their legs lengthened and finally separated, leaving their bodies floating in the air.

"Perhaps feeding in this area of rich swamp grass has developed a peculiar strain of cattle, as Nature has



And as the Widow grew more cold his ardor g

Until, just as the twilight fell, upon the ice h developed her cranes to wade in and forage where the water is deep," I suggested.

Most striking of all, far out on the shallows were the white sails of half a dozen boats bearing down against the breeze. But it was merely an illusion. At nearer sight and when not distorted by the intervening mirror of the water the cattle assumed normal size and the ships turned into white pelicans.

From a distance the marshes of the Malheur are deceptive. The ocean tells nothing of a thousand hidden wonders; so the marsh. The charm is in the untrodden stretches. A plan is on foot for the government to drain some of the great marsh areas of southern Oregon and make rich agricultural lands. The plain yields to the plow, the forest to the ax; but I hope the unmeasured extent of tules will defy civilization to the end.

On the south side of the lake at the site of the historical old Sod House, a large spring rises at the base of a gravelly hill and winds out through the meadow lands. For a mile it meanders along till it comes to the main part of the tule marsh—thousands of floating islands between which flow narrow channels that are endless in their windings. The main body of the lake is still a mile beyond the place where the Spring Branch enters the tule jungle. The tules grow from eight to twelve feet high, so that when one enters the mass, he has no landmarks, unless perchance he can read signs in the heavens above.

We launched our folding canvas boat and set out anxiously to get the lay of the land and see some of the birds. We were soon lost in the serpentine meanderings among the tules. After we reached the main body of the lake water fowl of various kinds became thicker and thicker. It was in the midst of the breeding season. In half an hour, about one part of the lake, I counted over 1500 Canada geese, most of which were young birds. In one colony were over 500 white pelicans nesting. Several other colonies were almost as large. Near by were other colonies of gulls, blue herons, cormorants and grebes. It was the sight of a lifetime as we approached nearer and saw the flocks rise till the whole sky was moving and swinging around and around with the circling bird multitude.

Among the Tules.

We shoved the nose of the boat into the tule mass that covered the water like an immense haycock. As I crawled over the bow, and stepped on the springy mass, the footing seemed safe. By throwing myself forward and gathering under me an armful of buoyant tules, I made my way for twenty feet. Suddenly I struck a weak place in the tule floor that let me drop into the muck beyond my middle. With the aid of an oar that was thrown me, I struggled back to the boat. The rails ran lightly through the jungle, blue herons stood fishing in the marginal water, the red wings and tule wrens clung to the swaying stems, muskrats paddled with tails waving contentedly to and fro. These were all at home, but Nature has surely done her best to make the tule swamp unfit for man.

Southwest from the Malheur country we found the lakes and wide tule marshes equally populated with wild fowl. When we reached the Klamath country we pitched camp the first night at the mouth of Los River. Toward evening the ducks began coming in from the lake in little and big bands and settled down for the night among the reedy bogs where the water was shallow. At dusk we lay listening to the rush of wings as the night comers flocked in. A faint whir increased to a loud swish as the band passed. From out on the water came the light flappings as flock after flock settled for the night.

Next morning I found a mallard's nest containing eight eggs within twenty feet of where we had camped. A further search revealed three nests of the pin-tail duck, and six of the cinnamon teal within fifty yards of our fire.

It is worth a long trip to fish in the Klamath, the Williamson and other fine streams of the Cascade range. By midsummer the roads through the mountains were in good condition. We crossed the mountains by way of Crater Lake. Here is the shell of an old volcano, the center of which at some dim time in the past has sunk about 2000 feet. One might spend a week looking down into this natural caldron from the rim and studying color effects which are always different. One needs even a longer time through the fertile valleys of the Rogue River and the Umpqua, where the lure of the apple and the pear is drawing many a man from the office to the orchard.

After all I thought as we swung down the long hills into the Willamette Valley after circling the State, here is the real heart of the whole Oregon country. Here is the McKenzie, the Santiam, the Molalla and the Clackamas all dropping from the Cascades into the Willamette and furnishing cheap and unlimited power. Here is Portland, the center of a big diversified farming community, the market for products, the forwarder of freight. Commerce like water seeks the line of least resistance. The force that rolls the waters of the Columbia past her doors is bringing in heavy-laden trains down grade from Montana, Idaho, eastern Washington and all Oregon.

Two months and 2000 miles is a good long summer's cruise, but in no other way can one get a real insight into this great undeveloped Oregon country.

The Town of Armagh.

PROUD OLD CITY OF THE IRISH KINGS AND OF ST. PATRICK.

By Beatrix Collinson.

THE skies are dark; the air is chill; yet, though it is December, over here in Ireland the grass is still green. One may give a sigh for the sunshine of California, but the next moment one remembers that to each land its own glories. To this Green Isle, St. Patrick is a glory never forgotten, and in Armagh are mementoes of him everywhere, even in the name of one of my dog friends, an Irish terrier called Paddy!

Armagh is a proud old city since the days of Irish kings, whose residence may be traced, even now, a few miles east. It is still important as Ireland's primatial city, an importance which it owes to St. Patrick himself. Situated on the Callan, in the county of Armagh, about forty miles from Belfast and eighty-one miles from Dublin, it numbers about 8000 inhabitants.

From the window where I sit I can look out on the Mall, a pretty park, but when St. Patrick was here it was a small lake in which the apostle to the Irish baptized his converts. Upon the hill above, he built a little stone church, after the fashion of those days, without mortar. Rich offerings were laid upon its altar, for the famous sept of Ulad numbered among its warriors many a convert to the sweet gospel of love which the good saint proclaimed in silver tones. Sailing along the eastern coast were the Danes in their light scallops. Bent on plunder, they entered Carlingford Lough, left their boats where Warrenpoint now is, crossed the country for about thirty miles as the crow flies, leaving desolation behind them; then, swooping down upon St. Patrick's Church, they robbed its altar, burned the little edifice, and, quickly retracing their steps, put off again in their narrow boats. Three times they came thus, but at last suffered a defeat that ended their raids here.

Now on the site of those three churches stands St. Patrick's Cathedral, Protestant, and Brian Boru sleeps peacefully in its shadow. On the opposite hill is St. Patrick's Cathedral, Roman Catholic, a noble Gothic structure, imposing within and without. At the base of its high altar is a replica of Leonardo Da Vinci's "Last Supper," cut in the exquisite Carrara marble of which the altar is composed.

If St. Patrick were to stand now on College Hill, whence he would get a fine view of these two cathedrals named in his honor, might he not ask: "Why two? I preached but one religion of love and peace."

In the Palace Demense are two holy wells, one for St. Patrick, the other for the well-beloved St. Bridget—St. Brigid—the beautiful, who, so that naught might lure her from her work for God, prayed that her wondrous beauty would be taken from her. These holy wells are efficacious in the cure of many ills, and many a pilgrim drinks of their holy waters. Not far from them is an old Kissing Gate, beneath the arch of which, if a man catch a maid, he has the right to kiss her—and the gossips do say there are more pilgrims to the shrine of the Kissing Gate than to the holy wells!

Down in the Mall, where Patrick preached peace, are trophies of war. Here one may see a cannon redolent of the horrors of the Crimean War; across the walk from it a monument to those members of the Royal Irish Fusileers who fell in the more recent South African War. At one end of this Mall is the jail; at the other, the Courthouse; and Paddy today patronizes both! So you might suppose that the preaching of Patrick had been in vain. Not so; wait till you have seen a kindly Irish face light up and wish you "the top o' the mornin'," and you will know that the core of every Irish heart is love.

THE SPEECH THAT WAS NEVER DELIVERED.

When the Hepburn rate bill was under consideration in the Senate four years ago, Senator Crane learned that Piles of Washington, a new member, was about to make a speech for it, and he didn't wish him to. He took Piles aside and whispered:

"You know Senator Flint pretty well, don't you?"

"I do," replied Piles.

"Well, I hear he is about to make a speech. He is a new man and he mustn't do it. We new Senators must stand together. We are not expected to talk, and if we do, what we say is ignored and we are looked upon as jokes. By all means, see that Flint saves his face."

Piles turned scarlet. He promised to see Flint—and he kept that speech to himself.—[Success.

THE HUSKY DOGS OF LABRADOR.

All along the coast at every Eskimo encampment and about the cabins of the liveyeres are numbers of husky dogs. In winter these animals pull the sledges and form the sole means of travel or communication from settlement to settlement. During the summer they are not fed by their owners, but are left to seek their sustenance as best they can. Hence the hungry brutes range the land near the coast and add to the problems of Labrador, as they permit no creature to live that they can pull down. If a horse were to be turned out to grass overnight, only its bare bones would be found in the morning. Even to human beings they are sometimes dangerous when night begins to fall, and on occasion, when hard driven by hunger, they have been known to attack children in the day. Considering they are hardly ever fed in the summer, one only wonders that there are not more ill deeds to set to their account.—[Wide World.

THE RESTORATION OF THE CAMPANILE.

In the city of Venice, a while ago, a tower which had no other material use than as a lookout for a fire watchman fell suddenly in ruins, and the world, being thrones have fallen in Europe, and the world, being better off, did not care, says Franklin Clarkin in Success Magazine. But the echoes of these stones of Venice struck upon the hearts of all Christendom and made pulses skip a throb. Of course, it was not because there are not more efficient methods of fire alarm. Whatever the utility of this one, it belonged to Venice. Its delight to the eye, its power to win "the best of the senses" made it one of the treasures of the world. So, forthwith, gifts of money were hastened to Venice that she might not delay to restore this pile as it had anciently stood.

GLASS THAT WILL NOT BREAK.

Baccarat, France, has the honor of producing the first glass that is unbreakable. The new process has been successfully applied to the manufacture of lamp chimneys for use in coal mines containing much fire damp. The glassmakers of Baccarat have also succeeded in increasing the elasticity of the glass. This they accomplish by adding magnesia and oxide to the ordinary crystal glass.—[Success.

Bride Who Became Boss.

THE STORY OF MRS. BOB A SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS WOMAN.

By Richard Spillane.

FEW men want their women folk in business. It is bad enough for girls who must support themselves or for women who are thrown upon their own resources, but for a bride to enter the field, that seems to be beyond the limit.

Mr. Drew, ordinarily one of the most good-natured and even-tempered of men, showed evidence of something approaching anger when his wife, despite his flat-footed declaration that her suggestion was absurd, persisted in her pleading to be permitted to seek an office position of some sort in the great world of downtown.

She gave nearly every reason but the true one as to why she wanted to go to work. She went into detail as to how lonesome it was for her during the day. They had been married only two months. She never had been in New York until she came here a bride. The little flat they rented far uptown was charming, but to so vigorous a young person as Mrs. Drew it did not give enough household employment to keep her busy more than two hours. A few experiences with gossipy and borrowing neighbors made her suspicious. She had been born and brought up in a small town and was a bit strait-laced in her ideas. The big city seemed a dreadfully dreary place to her in the long hours Bob was downtown. Idleness was punishment to her.

She needed something to keep her mind and her hands employed. It mattered little to her if she got only a few dollars pay a week if she could feel she was accomplishing something, and if she did not have to sit at home and count the hours until Bob came home.

Mr. Drew assured her that she soon would change her view. Every young woman who came from the country to the city had the same attack of nostalgia, he laughingly declared, but soon recovered and came to love city life. He advised her to go out more, to go to a matinee once or twice a week, look around the shops, visit some of the museums, and before she knew it she not only would find her time fully occupied, but would be keenly interested. Besides he would bring more of his friends home to dinner and would see that she had more companionship. It would not be long before she had a new circle of friends and would be forgetting the country. Bob was so bright and cheery and drew such a pleasant picture that he was quite satisfied with the outlook, and when he patted her cheek and proposed a musical comedy and a bite in one of the Broadway restaurants later to brighten her up he considered the matter settled.

But he did not know Mrs. Bob so well as he thought he did. She had put her case cleverly, but she had not touched the principal reason for her desire for employment. It was all very well for Bob to say he would be ashamed if not disgraced to have his wife a business woman. It was all very well for him to point out that he made from $50 to $75 a week, and it would simply be scandalous for a man earning so much to permit his bride to work. That weighed very little with her in her calm analysis of the situation. She loved her husband and considered him one of the best of men, but that did not blind her to his one great weakness. Twice he had been unable to go to the office. The second time the manager had been up to see him, and, although he spoke in a low voice, she could not help hearing the veiled warning. She understood now why Bob rarely held a position long. He made friends rapidly—lots of them, too many of them. He was bright, clever and able, but too congenial for his own good. His employers liked him, but wished he would let liquor alone.

Mrs. Bob thought the whole matter out. She was not a weepy person, and she was not of the scoldy kind. It was a bitter discovery to make, but after calm reflection she thought she saw her way clear. Possibly if she got employment where her husband worked he would do better. If he had to accompany her home each evening he would not be out so late with his companions. She might, without his knowledge, wean him away from his weakness. She was a patient woman, was Mrs. Bob. She realized that as the matter stood at the moment her husband would not permit her entering the business realm. Later something—the depression following overindulgence or the danger of losing his position—might win his consent.

Seemingly she accepted his refusal in good part, and the theaters and the shops saw more of her than before, and they interested her as they interest all women, but all the while she held to her purpose. She had a lot of pride, and she had one memory that was unpleasant to her. That was of one of her schoolgirl friends who had married and come to the city and had to return to her parents in a few years. There would be nothing of that sort with her, she determined.

It was a month or six weeks after she had broached the business idea to her husband that he lapsed again. She was as helpful and sympathetic as usual, but made no reference to her pet idea. She did, however, stop the theater trips and the shopping visits and she professed when he questioned her about it to have tired of going out so much. Bob thought she was getting over her homesickness and becoming more contented with city life. Maybe the shock was all the greater to him on that account when, the next time he had to remain home, she informed him she was resolved on getting some employment. He argued as before, but his arguments carried less weight this time, and a man

But he did not know Mrs. Bob so well as he thought he did. She had put her case cleverly, but she had not touched the principal reason for her desire for employment. It was all very well for Bob to say he would be ashamed if not disgraced to have his wife a business woman. His employers liked him, but wished he would let liquor alone.

Mrs. Bob thought the whole matter out. She was not a weepy person, and she was not of the scoldy kind. It was a bitter discovery to make, but after calm reflection she thought she saw her way clear. Possibly if she got employment where her husband worked he would do better. If he had to accompany her home each evening he would not be out so late with his companions. She might, without his knowledge, wean him away from his weakness. She was a patient woman, was Mrs. Bob. She realized that as the matter stood at the moment her husband would not permit her entering the business realm. Later something—the depression following overindulgence or the danger of losing his position—might win his consent.

Seemingly she accepted his refusal in good part, and the theaters and the shops saw more of her than before, and they interested her as they interest all women, but all the while she held to her purpose. She had a lot of pride, and she had one memory that was unpleasant to her. That was of one of her schoolgirl friends who had married and come to the city and had to return to her parents in a few years. There would be nothing of that sort with her, she determined.

It was a month or six weeks after she had broached the business idea to her husband that he lapsed again. He was as helpful and sympathetic as usual, but made no reference to her pet idea. She did, however, stop the theater trips and the shopping visits and she professed when he questioned her about it to have tired of going out so much. Bob thought she was getting over her homesickness and becoming more contented with city life. Maybe the shock was all the greater to him on that account when, the next time he had to remain home, she informed him she was resolved on getting some employment. He argued as before, but his arguments carried less weight this time, and a man situated as he was at the time, remorseful and repentent, has not the moral force back of him that he usually possesses.

Maybe the manager of the office had a fuller realization of what actuated her in applying for work than she knew. He was a kind and good man, and he told her she might start the next day. It was a multiform printing concern, and a lot of women were employed as operators. Her husband was a salesman of the machine. For a week, while she was learning to be an operator, she got no pay. Then she started at a very modest wage.

Mr. Bob was displeased. It hurt him to see his wife putting herself on a level with the general run of workers, but gradually his resentment lessened and he even felt a glow of pleasure one day when he heard some one praise his wife for the work she was doing. And Mrs. Bob deserved praise. She was well educated and quick witted, and, in addition, was painstakingly neat and accurate. According to her code, no work was done unless it was well done. She did not believe in erasures or interlineations. Every letter, every word, every line, every sentence, every paragaph, every sheet had to be as perfect as human hand and machine could make it. Within six weeks of her advent into the office every job that required care and skill was given to her. The manager, while seeming to notice nothing, noticed everything. When Mrs. Bob asked for an increase from $5 to $7 a week he rubbed his bald head, frowned, and said he did not like to do it, but if Mrs. Bob would not pester him with requests for increased pay, as all the others did, he would make a compact with her; he would give her $10 a week. Mrs. Bob was charmed. So was the manager.

Mrs. Bob was happy—happier than she had been since coming to New York. Mr. Bob was good—that is, comparatively speaking. Her scheme was working, and she had the joy that comes from the reward of honest labor. She was feeling a confidence and reliance in herself she never had known before. This would have been delightful had it continued, but one day there was trouble. One of the salesmen, a hot-headed, bulldozing, but usually successful man, took it upon himself to order her to prepare some samples for him. She did not like him, and he did not like her. She ignored his request, and he, in sudden rage, began to abuse her. Her husband arrived just then. The next minute the office was in an uproar. The two men had fought and the bulldozer had been thrashed.

The manager called Mrs. Bob into his sanctum that evening and told her he was going to do something of which he was not proud, but which, he believed, would be to the best interest of all concerned.

"I'm going to ask you to leave," he said. "Do not for an instant think I do not appreciate that brute deserved a licking, but he as a salesman is worth more to me than you are as an operator. Your husband and he will get along all right. Men manage those things all right. There will be no further friction between them.

"But what I called you in for particularly was this: I want to suggest that you go in business for yourself. I'm going to talk plainly to you, not as an employer, but as a sincere friend. You should work for yourself, not for me or for any one else. You are an excellent business woman, if I am a good judge, and I think I am. You are the best multiform operator we ever had. Don't blush; I'm simply stating a fact.

"You should go out and hire an office. You can get one for $10 or $12 a month. It may take you a month before you get your first bit of work, but once you get customers you'll hold them. I'll let you have a second-hand machine that is in first-class condition. If you make a success you can buy it. If you do not succeed you can return it. What do you say?"

The next day Mrs. Bob had a cubby hole of an office in one of the skyscrapers and her name and business were on the door. The machine had been delivered within an hour of her getting the office key. When she looked at the lettering on the door she alternately felt proud and fearful. Then she got to listening to the sounds along the corridor. As persons stopped and read the sign she was all a-flutter, wondering if they were going to enter. It was three days before a customer appeared. Mrs. Bob almost had lost heart by that time. Her hand trembled when she began the work, but it did not tremble long. When she finished the job was perfect. She went over it with the most rigid scrutiny. She had resolved that no bit of work ever should leave her office that was not perfection. She should, at least, have a reputation for excellence of workmanship.

The man who got that first job was pleased until he got the bill. Then he frowned. "Madam!" he asked. "Isn't this pretty steep?"

"It is the price for the best of work, the only kind I do," was the reply.

The man grumbled and said he never paid so much before. Then he paid the bill.

In the first month Mrs. Bob made expenses and a little more. In the second month she did much better. One of her patrons this month was the man who gave the first bit of work to her.

"I had a lot of printing done in another establishment," he said, "but they made so many errors and turned out so poor a job that I came back here."

Later, when the man expressed satisfaction over the way she handled his second order and declared he would give all his work to her if she lowered her price, she told him her rate was based on the best of service and she believed it was fair.

Customers came and customers went, but her business grew steadily. Every sheet that left her office was scrutinized first. No error could get by her. Occasionally clients left her to have their work done by those who charged less. Every one came back in due season.

Within four months of renting the office she had to engage an assistant. She tried twenty girls before she accepted the one. Next month she had to have another assistant. The work was beginning to come to her so fast that she had to work nights occasionally. She was getting a reputation for doing the highest class of work in her line.

Before the year was out, Mrs. Bob had to move. She could not get a suite of rooms to suit her in the old building, and, besides, she wanted to be nearer the center from which some big orders were coming—Wall street.

One day she got a small order from the greatest bank in America. It got the same attention as other business. Evidently it was satisfactory, for more work followed it. Without solicitation business also came to her from the office of the master of finance, the man who has merged more railroads, more steel mills, more factories and industries generally than any other ten men in the world. Somehow the big men got to know that this woman who did such excellent work was thorough in one other department of business; that she took pains to guard the secrets of her office; that any work intrusted to her would be safeguarded. The great bank gets out each quarter for select distribution a report from its trusted agents the world over as to the state of trade in each and every section of the globe. Incidentally this report contains the most authentic and most authoritative information regarding politics and other developments likely to have a bearing on money or commerce. For years this report was published by a concern of international prominence. One day the great bank sent the copy for this elaborate report to Mrs. Bob. Since then she has printed the report each quarter.

Two years and a half after renting her cubby-hole of an office, Mrs. Bob had twenty operators working. The selection and drilling of these operators was her hardest task. None but the most careful, the most accurate and most trustworthy would suit her. She paid the highest wage known to her particular field and exacted the highest class of work. It got so that the fact that a person had worked for Mrs. Bob was taken by others as a diploma.

As Mrs. Bob climbed the ladder of success, Mr. Bob remained stationary, or dropped back a rung. He departed from the multiform concern to try another specialty line and then drifted from that to another and then to another. He was the same kindly, cheery, delightful Bob as of old and he had come to be intensely proud of his clever wife, even if he sometimes wished she was not in business. He was conscious of his own failings, and did not spare himself in self-denunciation when he fell from grace, but his wife never had an unkind word for him and never was more devoted than when he was downcast.

Mr. Bob was having reason for being downcast. He was finding it difficult to get work, or at least work that brought a good return. He had lost caste, for he was not considered dependable. Two weeks of idleness that were made unpleasant by refusals of work in lines he formerly would not have considered for a moment brought him to a bitter realization of his position. Scarcity of money, too, embarrassed him. His wife had plenty, but he was too proud to borrow from her.

One evening after dinner he told her he was going to take the first job that was offered to him. He was becoming distracted, he said, by the long-continued idleness.

"Bob," said Mrs. Bob, "if I were you I wouldn't take any job that keeps you outside. Your trouble is due to your good nature. You should give up the selling field. There is too much conviviality connected with it. You ought to try to get office work."

Bob never had done anything but sell stuff, but he knew what his wife said was true.

"I'll look for an office job," he said, "and if you hear of anything try to fix it for me. Don't worry. I won't give you cause to regret it."

The next night Mrs. Bob was quite excited when she met her husband.

"I know of a job you have a chance of getting, Bob," she said. "I'll know positively in the morning."

"Good!" exclaimed Bob. "What time will you know?"

"By 10, I think."

"All right; I'll be at your office at 10."

Bob was there at 10.

"What did you hear?" he asked.

"It's all right," she answered. "You can have it. The business is young, but it's growing, and there's a good chance for the right man. You can get $50 a week to start on, but the boss is mighty strict."

"That's all right," said Bob joyfully. "I'll make good. What concern is it?"

"Right here," she answered, with a little break in her voice. "That's your desk, Bob."

THE TREASURE SEEKER.

The land of the lotus,
Of rubies and sapphires,
The land of the Golden Hind,
The land of lost treasures,
The home of sweet pleasures,
Are all of them his:
To find.

He sails at the day dawn,
And sails through the night,
His clouds always silver lined.
For the gold cached in fear,
By the bold buccaneer,
Is all of it his:
To find.

On, on he sails,
Past island and cape,
Through summer and winter wind
His hair white with years,
Eyes oft dimmed with tears,
But the world still is his:
To find.

The Thread of Destiny.

HOW IT LED TO A GRAVE IN A LONELY GULCH.

By Rose L. Ellerbe.

OLD "Howdy John" sat in the shadow of a ghost tree, his red bandana bound low over his forehead and his duck shirt hanging loose over his sun-hardened breast. He was gazing out across the desert. He had spent the greater part of his existence in gazing just so out over the barrenness which to him was full of life and meaning. Now, over the dust-clogged track which stretched between the distant railway station and the Golden Belt mining camp, Howdy John saw a figure moving toward him. His rusty eyes, with their hairless, pleated lids, were yet keen as hawk's eyes. While the man was still far away, the Indian saw that the swinging gait was that of a young man, full of hope, that the buoyant upstandingness of the figure betokened confident expectancy. John's old face lightened with a grim smile as he noted this. In the years he had seen so many men start out into the desert with that same blithe confidence, and come back—if they came back at all—bent and parched and shriveled of body, and turned of mind from hopefulness to death-in-life determination of wresting the desert secrets from their lair.

When the approaching man noticed the old Indian sitting motionless under the tree, he hesitated, then he turned and stepped boldly toward the tree.

"How do you do," he began sociably, pausing in the thin edge of the thin shade.

Old John looked up and the folds in his corrugated cheeks deepened while a glint of amusement shone in his eyes as they rested on the new khaki suit, miner's boots, cowboy sombrero and holstered revolver.

"How you do," he responded indifferently, and again turned his eyes to the western horizon. After a silence in which the young fellow eased his pack and wiped his brow, John asked without interest: "Where you go?"

The new-comer hesitated, plainly debating in his mind the right of this old Indian—a vagrant of the desert—to question him; out the need of speech conquered him. He answered:

"Ol' Dad Mountains—they're over yonder?" and he pointed to the dimmed outlines rising far to the east.

Howdy John nodded.

"And Gold Belt camp—this is the road?

Again the Indian gave a wordless assent.

The youth turned and scanned the sage-dotted expanse. "I swan!" he cried, "it looks further from here than it did back on the rise yonder! How far is it?"

After a critically reflective look at his questioner, Howdy John said dryly: "You get there tomorrow—mebbe——"

"Tomorrow!" The boy laughed lightly, with the sureness of youth and ignorance—vast, unfathomable ignorance of the desert—upon him. "I'll get there tonight!" He stooped to lift his knapsack. "And how far to 'Ol' Dad?'"

"Two days, mebbe three—four—six," came the reply.

Again the hearty boyish laugh rang out. "Why, I'll get there tomorrow, sure," he asserted. "I can see 'em plain from here."

Howdy John, with a wisdom that would have come hard in a white man, refrained from a smile. "You not walked on desert road before," he stated.

"No—and it's a blamed hot, dry road! But I'll get there," the boy repeated confidently.

The old man nodded then as the tenderfoot turned toyard the trail, he spoke gravely: "No moon tonight—you go lost 'fore you get to Gold Belt—you camp here."

"Why," Nathan Petty paused, "I could see the tents plain away back yonder. It can't be so very far." Incredulity verging on suspicion was in the tone.

"You go lost," the Indian repeated laconically and without looking around. As the boy's troubled glance ran about the scant shade of the ghost tree, John added: "Water down there," indicating a depression a few yards beyond, "bed—all 'round." He waved a hand at the billowing sand about their feet.

Nathan walked across to the edge of the little gulch and looked down upon a water hole fringed with reeds. He took a long draught from his canteen, then stumbled down the shifting bank, refilled the canteen and washed his face.

"'Taint more than wetness," he grumbled as he tasted it; "nobody'd call it water back East."

Returning to the tree, he studied the sun, now swinging low over the western edge of the world, and peered again through the blue haze of distance to the east. A sense of the intense loneliness of the desert made him feel suddenly that the companionship of this short-tongued old Indian was better than a night alone in this unknown darkness. He threw himself down upon the sand and gazed with the Indian out over the plain.

Presently he turned away and drew from his shirt a small leather sack. From it he took a folded paper and spread the faded, time-worn sheet tenderly upon the sand. Dropping his chin into his hands, he studied the sheet long and carefully.

"Where you get map?" his companion asked suddenly, as the boy folded it and replaced it.

The lad looked up with a half start full of suspicion. This worn map was, at present, the most important and the most sacred thing in the world to him.

"Oh," he spoke with attempted indifference, "it just come to me."

At dawn the Indian shook the lad from the deep, undreaming sleep of youth. "Cool now," he said, as Nathan sat up in the bewilderment of awakening to unwonted surroundings.

It was afternoon, and the khaki clothes were stained with sweat and sticky with dust, and the fair skin a fiery red, when Nathan stopped before a gleaming white tent house, in front of which two old men sat, whittling splinters from the plank and dying them brown with squirts of tobacco juice.

"Well," Len Haskins remarked as his eyes traveled over the outfitting, "ye're jest out from the East, I see."

The young fellow flushed a yet deeper red as he admitted: "Yes, I got in yesterday. I'm going out to Ol' Dad Mountains. They told me that they was there ahead——"

"That's Ol' Dad Mountings, all right," Jim Peters nodded.

"Guess I can get there tonight," the boy observed cheerfully.

"Well"—Haskins spat a chip into the dust—"you won't get there tonight 'less them new boots o' yourn is forty leaguers."

"What you want to strike them mountings fur, kid?" Peters asked pityingly. "There's no water an' no gold there."

"That's all right," was the rejoinder, "but how far is it, anyway?"

"It's a powerful distance fer a tenderfoot this kin' o' weather," Len answered promptly.

Nathan looked out into the shimmering waves of heat that swayed visibly over the grayish-green sweep, beyond which the rugged outlines of the hills stood cut sharply.

"Is it more than ten miles?" he questioned.

"Nigher forty," Peters responded conclusively.

"You'd better stay here tonight and take a fresh start in the morning," Haskins advised.

The boy hesitated, and Peters broke out: "What in thunder do you expect to find out there, young man? That ground has been gone over hundreds of times, an' nobody never found nothin' there worth the powder to blow it out."

"An' not one man in fifty ever strikes that spring," Haskins warned. "'F ye don't hit it—with that canteen—ye'll never git back here alive. That's sure as shooting!'"

Some of the brightness fell off the boy's face. His eyes ran over the white tents, the flowing water of the ditch, the tender green of young eucalyptus trees and garden.

"God!—them's beans!" he ejaculated. "I never calculated anything like that'd grow out here on the desert."

"Water, son, water," Haskins spoke. "You can do anything with water, in this country."

"And you can't do nothing but kick the bucket, without it," added his confrere.

But Petty's eyes were again fixed upon his goal. "I guess I'd better mosey right along," he decided; "I'm in some of a hurry." And with freshly-filled canteen and a fresh loaf of bread in his knapsack, he started on.

"Well, what do you make o' that?" Haskins commented, as the echo of a cheery whistle came back to the old prospectors.

"Poor cuss! He's got one o' them fool maps an' a lost gold mine in his bunnet—that's what," asserted Peters.

"'Twa'n't jest right to let the poor devil go on, alone—but we couldn't 'a' held him back with a ten-mule team. 'Tain't none o' our lookout, anyway;" and Len savagely baptized a fresh chip.

Nathan Petty, only stopping now and then to wipe the stinging alkali dust from his blistering face, plodded on through the yielding sand of a trail that finally vanished altogether. After that, he kept his eyes fixed on the forbidding ruggedness that seemed to steadily recede as he moved toward it. When it grew too dark to see the mountains, he lay down in the sand and was soon lost in the sleep of the wearied but untroubled. The howling of coyotes, the rustling of lizards, even the slow drag of a rattlesnake, did not rouse him.

Every contour of the black pile ahead stood out sharp in the deep shadows and high lights of morning. The boy again studied his map and re-read a worn letter. He felt then that he could almost put his hand upon the spring described and marked on these papers, and just beyond it lay his gold mine—the golconda that should make him and his mother and the girl he loved, rich for life.

He set forward blithely. On and on, over ridges and through gulches, in each one of which he looked confidently for the spot marked with a cross and labeled "Water." "Water!" His canteen was almost empty; his mouth and throat were parched, when he found himself retracing his own footsteps of the morning and knew that he had traveled all day without advancing. Worse—his faith in the map and description that had seemed to him so clear and simple, was gone. In his wanderings he had seen dozens of "twin peaks," hundreds of "jagged black rocks;" he had crossed "washes" and "ridges;" clambered up stiff rises, and waded through red-hot sinks, all under a sun that burned and blazed into his brain.

That night he tossed away the empty canteen, with a curse, and scooped out a grave-like hollow in a water course, in the hope of finding a trace of coolness or moisture. While his fevered body tossed and turned, he heard the coyotes as their long howls and short, barking laughs greeted the late-rising moon. He lay in torment, and knew that unless the morning revealed the secret of the spring, death was ahead of him—horrible, torturing death, alone in this cursed waste. His thoughts went back in new-born understanding to the unknown father who had perished, perhaps in search for this very spring. In the terror of that memory and of his thirst-tortured body, the boy wept and prayed aloud for help. He saw the faces of his mother and of the girl, and he saw visions of the cool, green pastures and blossoming apple orchards of Vermont.

At the first gleam of light, he started on again, hoping blindly that he might untangle the desert maze and find the spring. The thirst for gold had gone out of him clean. He wondered dully at the craze that had led him across a continent—it seemed now so stupid, so damnably stupid.

Once more he tipped the empty canteen, in a vain attempt to drain a single drop from it. Then he tossed it beside the tasteless food, crushed it into shapeless tin with his foot, and went on. By noon his lips were swollen and cracked, his tongue coated with sun-baked blood, his hands torn and mangled from his maddened digging in the furnace-heated sand for a trace of water. Then came delirium. All craving for water suddenly ceased. Water surrounded him—ponds, lakes, oceans of water were about him. He tore off his garments and threw himself into the sand; he rolled, he laughed, he played with the dribbling sand—now rippling water. The bliss of madness was upon him. Nature, in mercy, limits human capacity for suffering. Still at peace, the boy at last pulled some branches of sage brush together and lay down—in the shadow of overhanging leafy branches, beside a gently flowing river—to sleep.

That same day Howdy John rode into Gold Belt mining camp.

"You see boy—go to Ol' Dad?" he inquired. And when Haskins, with a sober face, nodded assent, the Indian asked: "Boy no come back?"

"No," Jim Peters spoke. "We warned that young tenderfoot—we tol' him the chances was big that he'd never lit back alive, but—he was gold-bit; he went on out——"

For two days the old Indian on his tough little pony plowed over desert trails. When he at last caught sight of buzzards, circling over a gulch, he knew that his search was ended. He found the naked, sun-parched body under the broken stalks of sage brush. With a stoical face he bent over and examined it carefully.

From the little leather bag, still tied about the neck, he drew the faded papers. He sat down near and studied the map, with significant nods and murmurs. The written words meant nothing to him; but he knew the lines, the cross for the spring and the circle for the gold mine. His own fingers had helped to trace those marks. He looked again at the blackened face and saw, now, the likeness to that other man he had found lying stiff and distorted, here in this very gulch twenty years before.

After a while Howdy John crossed over a ridge and followed along its curve until he found a high gray boulder, marked by the dim outline of a sand-worn cross. He looked at it a moment, then turned back and climbed to the top of the ridge. Looking to the west, he saw the dust of a wagon, headed his way. He placed himself where he could defraud the buzzards of their prey, and waited patiently.

Few words were spoken when Haskins and Peters reached the spot. Howdy John took a shovel and led the way to the rock which bore the cross. There a hollow grave was scooped out. After the body of the boy had been lowered into it, the men stood for a moment in reverent silence. Then the Indian took the cigarette from his lips and lit the crumpled paper in his hand. The ashes settled gently on the lifeless breast, as the map that had lured to death was consumed.

The white men departed; but Howdy John stayed behind. With his knife he outlined a rude cross beside the first one. Kneeling in the hot sun, he began steadily chipping the hard granite away. The cross was the white man's medicine. Perhaps in some way known to spirits it might form a link between the grim-visaged father and the bonny-faced boy who had been led by the thread of destiny to this lonely gulch—to lie side by side in desert graves.

WALL-STREET SUPERSTITION.

Professional stock traders have been reading the signs wrong. Almost all the speculators are superstitious fellows, who believe in charms and amulets. In their pockets they carry lucky coins, a rabbit's foot, a horse chestnut, or something of the kind. One Wall-street man, much envied by his companions, has a short piece of a hangman's rope to conjure with. Many of the customers in the offices are even more credulous than the professional traders in their belief in signs and omens.

There is a deep-seated tradition that Tuesday is "low day" in a "bull market," and "high day" in a "bear market." Some persons speculate on "systems," and others employ "charts." Once they exploited a machine in Wall street known as a "market register." It was about as effective in helping anybody to win at stock exchange peculation as it is to rub up against a hunchback for luck just before you bet on a horse race. —[Munsey's Magazine.

THE GRAND CANYON.

Three features of the canyon strike one at once: its unparalleled magnitude, its architectural forms and suggestions, and its opulence of color effects—a chasm nearly a mile deep and from ten to twenty miles wide, in which Niagara would be only as a picture upon your walls, in which the pyramids, seen from the rim, would appear only like large tents, and in which the largest building upon the earth would dwindle to insignificant proportions.—[John Burroughs, in Century.

A GUIDE TO OPERA.

Bang, thump, and crash, with a roll of the drum—
That's the motif announcing the hero will come;
Ting-a-ling-ting, and an arpeggio—
The heroine's on for a walk with her beau;
Two minor chords, with the clarinet's shriek—
The public is sure there is vengeance to wreak;
Umpty-dump, umpty-dump, down in the bass—
The villain is seeking the hero's disgrace;
Tweedledy, tweedledy, two or three times—
Here reference is made to most hideous crimes;
Crashes cacophonous stunning the brain—
The hero's in danger, that's perfectly plain;
Toot, toot! The cornet rings out on the air—
He triumphs and seizes his foe by the hair;
Mush, mush played slow and repeated ad fin.—
The hero is kissing the fair heroine!

A Coast Range Lucretia.

STORY OF A FEUD, SOME POISON AND A KISS.

By Edith Wagner.

IT was Friday—a day consecrated in country schools to the terrible joy of "speaking pieces." The schoolhouse, perched on a slope of the Coast Range, gave to the young man riding by, mounted on a big bay, the effect of having sat down tired from a toilsome climb. He looked curiously at the little squatting schoolhouse; as he passed a song floated out—truculent, assertive—to the accompaniment of a gasping cottage organ: "Paddle Your Own Canoe," shrieked the children in Apache yells.

The rider grinned as he thought:

"If the teacher's a girl, I'll bet she's praying this minute for some one to paddle hers!" and he rode on, up the county road—coiled like a whip lash on the mountain's breast—on up to Howland's ranch—Howlands, who were accused of homestead frauds.

He was an unusual figure for the California mountains, in riding breeches and coat, high collar and an English crop. It wasn't likely he would get a warm welcome from the Howlands, raw-boned Tennessee mountaineers, who brought from the Cumberlands—together with the long-barreled rifle, the corn-cob pipe, the blood feuds—a contempt for the "b'iled" shirt and the wearer thereof.

The teacher, who was playing the wheezy organ, was thinking of those same Howlands—something was wrong, this was "speaking day," and but one Howland present: an unfriendly old person in a slat sunbonnet with her snuff stick at a defiant angle between her tobacco-stained lips; and also there appeared an unaccustomed austerity in the few others gathered to hear their offspring recite. The speeches were long and tedious, and little Minnie Howland had "stood on the bridge at midnight" so long, trying to recover her memory, that it was late when the teacher mounted her horse to go to her boarding-place. The half-dozen or so adoring boys, who usually accompanied her, lassoing each other and "cutting up" on their lively broncos, were not in sight—another disquieting fact.

"If I ever teach a country school again, I'll take care to find a popular family to board with," said the teacher to herself, as she put her pretty gray mare at a ditch; the little mare flew over like a bird and scrambled up the opposite hill, for she was not following the road, but had taken a roundabout way for the sake of the ride. There was a glorious view spread before her as she topped the divide, and she reined in her mare. Frances Terry was a tall, handsome girl, with merry black eyes and wonderful braids of rich, brown hair. She was 19, and looked younger, so fresh her skin and so sweet the curves of her cheek.

As she gazed at the golden path the sun had thrown across the Pacific, heaving slowly in its "flowing purple," she was a little sad, as youth is apt to be when it stops to think. The pines and the live oaks clustered darkly in the gulches below, the late afternoon air, with its hint of fall coolness, brought out the scents, pungent and bitter-sweet, of sage, manzanita and homely tarweed.

Suddenly she touched the gray mare with her spur as she recalled that the Mattocks had gone to town; the browbeating old father; the timid, deaf mother, with her long ear-trumpet; the two "boys," Joe and Bob, both over 30; Carrie and Emma, red-cheeked gigglers, all crowded in the spring wagon. They had told her in the morning, before they drove off, that if they were late, Buddy, the youngest "boy," who was hunting lost calves in Tirabuzon Canyon, would "git" supper; and not to expect them till after dark as the days were getting short.

Frances, as she rode over the ridge, looked anxiously, but saw no smoke curling upward from the large, square, white house set in a tiny valley with mountains all about.

When she got closer, and saw a big bay horse tied to the palings in front, her vague uneasiness passed and she thought that perhaps Buddy was gossiping with a passing stockman; but it was no stockman, with rubble of unkempt beard, who rose from the low doorsill to assist her to alight; it was he of the riding breeches and the crop. He was of another world, with a sophisticated, easy manner, a flashing smile, and a cool, gray, appraising eye. "A Juno!" was what the gray eyes said, and so plainly that Frances flushed.

She stood, in her long, old-fashioned habit, embarrassed and puzzled. Country etiquette demanded that he be invited in, of course, to eat supper and stay all night. Where was Buddy? Well, to all appearances Buddy was meanly derelict, and she must ask the stranger to put up his own horse and incidentally hers. She explained that the family would soon be back from town, and that Buddy would undoubtedly come riding home in time to "git supper." Meanwhile night was advancing, so she told the stranger, after he had put up the horses, that it would be best for them to light the fires and the lamps, start supper and otherwise make things easy for the recreant Buddy.

"Sure thing," agreed the stranger cheerfully; "only too happy to be of assistance." He removed his riding coat and turned up his cuffs. Frances had taken off her habit and put on a check apron of Emma's that covered her from neck to heel. Mr. Ronalds, as he told her was his name, carried in the wood and struggled with the kindling alone; but together they solved the mystery of the kitchen stove and fanned the blaze in the dining-room fireplace.

They were filling lamps. Mr. Ronalds was holding a square five-gallon can of kerosene aloft directing a thin stream into a funnel held by Miss Terry, kneeling by the lamp. They were on the kitchen porch—it was very domestic.

"Don't you think filling lamps a loathsome stunt?" she asked, lifting her heavy lashes to him.

"It would be all of that, if one did it alone, but it's not so loathsome with the right kind of company."

"Please don't put down the can," she said equably, as she screwed on the burner with capable white fingers.

"Not another!" he said in dismay.

"Yes, I am hunting up all the lamps in the house. You see, in a way I feel that you are my guest, and I must keep you amused until the Mattocks come."

"By Jove!" he complained as he lifted the heavy can, "but doesn't this give one an appalling glimpse into the life of a farmer's wife."

"Don't discourage me," she said demurely, "for that is probably my doom."

Mr. Ronalds put the can down firmly. "I've struck. All the poetry in lamp filling has vanished. You a farmer's wife!"

He took the lamp from her hand and held the door open for her to pass with a charmingly courteous manner, very pleasant to a girl hungry for just such attentions. They were delighted, when they went in, to find the fires going briskly—quite by themselves. The stranger opened cans of baked beans and corn and tomatoes, sliced the bacon, and was simply indefatigable when it came to putting wood into the stove. Finally he subsided astride a kitchen chair with his arms across the back, to watch Frances at her first essay in biscuit making. At a rather late stage of the proceedings she remembered the baking powder, and with floury hands began a search that ended—after she had mounted a chair—in an obscure corner of the cupboard. Frances was disconcerted to find that the can contained but a small spoonful of the powder, instead of the "heaping two" insisted on by the directions printed on the wrapper.

"I am afraid they will be heavy," she said as she put the pan into the oven."

"Let us fix our minds on them," he said frivolously, "and THINK them light."

But they were woefully undeveloped and flat, when they were at last removed from the oven; however, Frances was so famished that if she had not felt a little on her dignity with the stranger, she would have taken one and munched it as she was running in and out of the dining-room showing Mr. Ronalds how to arrange the table. She contented herself with throwing a couple of them to Dick, the hungry, brown shepherd dog, who stood in the doorway wistfully asking with his eyes for them. Dick gulped them at a mouthful and waited, wagging his tail for more with a dog's trustfulness. It was lots of fun dishing up the food, and the two pranced back and forth, Frances's eyes growing brighter and her cheeks pinker. As they were about to sit down to the table, she ran to her room, slipped off the big check apron, and came out bearing two little pink button-roses that had been blooming in her window; one she tucked in the brown braids wound round her head; the other she shyly offered the stranger. Mr. Ronalds had a rather complacent expression as he drew the little rose through the elastic loop on his riding coat.

"Why, we're all flossed up for dinner," he said, smiling at her. "Tell me," he continued, as he deftly served her at the table, "why you insist on being a farmer's wife?"

"You would know," laughed Frances, "if you could see the farmer who is a suitor for my hand—'Grandpap' Bates. I think he has grandsons older than I. He hasn't a tooth!"

"I am more in darkness than ever. He is not pretty nor not pleasant. His only qualification seems to be that he can't bite. Is it wealth that tempts you?"

"Oh, no, not riches. He is simply such a dreadful old man I want to marry him so I can get well enough acquainted to poison him!" said Miss Terry angrily.

Mr. Ronalds shook his head banteringly at the biscuits. "I don't believe I'll tackle those. Life is sweet. And you might try your 'prentice hand on me. A sort of trying it on the dog, as it were."

At that moment came a sudden loud thump at the opposite door, followed by agonizing yelps. Ronalds hastened to open the door. Into the room shot Dick, snapping and yelping. Through the room, into the kitchen and outdoors again the poor beast fled, trying to escape the pain.

"I gave him some biscuits," gasped Frances. "Do you think they poisoned him?"

"A second Lucretia Borgia," laughed Ronalds, but he quickly composed his face as he saw the girl's distress.

The dinner was forgotten—they heated lard and held poor frenzied Dick, pouring the lard down, but to no purpose.

"Poor, poor old Dick!" sobbed Frances. "Do you think it was my fault? Could it have been the baking powder?"

He did not dare make any ill-timed references to "Grandpap," but listened with a grave and sympathetic countenance while she wept and wondered over Dick's death.

It was nearly 10 o'clock when they again sat down to the table, the leaden biscuits had been carefully placed on a high shelf; but all the sparkle and gaiety had died out of the little dinner, so it was a relief when Mr. Ronalds drew their chairs in front of the fire on the brick hearth; as they sat quietly talking he tried once more to tease her and, beginning a sentence, "Lucretia——" was warned into silence by a flash from her black eyes.

"Well," she said coldly, "you were about to make some humorous remark——"

He was quite humble—for him. "I've changed my mind; it does not seem so humorous as it did."

It was deathly quiet outside. Frances, who kept straining her ears to hear some sound of Buddy, opened the door; the light from the room threw a golden oblong into the blackness of the night: a cicada shrilling in the wheat stubble and a frog making a lonesome croak now and then only served to emphasize the profound stillness.

"It seems a million miles from Broadway," lamented Mr. Ronalds.

"I am a New Yorker, too," she boasted, "but I daresay I wouldn't know the town. I was only 9 when I left; and nearly all the big skyscrapers have gone up since I was there.

"My father died in New York, and after his death my mother brought me to San Francisco, where an uncle of hers had offered her a home. She didn't know the conditions, and tried for several years to live in his house, but she could not——" A painful red flooded Frances's face. "He had no regard for us, and among the—er—er—those who are now suing his estate was one whose insults finally drove us from his house. What a hard time we had! Then, at his death, all the notoriety, and in a measure the disgrace—for after all, he was a near relation!" and she mentioned a name familiar to any reader of the newspapers.

Ronalds looked at her in surprise. "What are you doing here? If the suit is decided in your favor, you are a very rich young lady. And if there is safety in numbers, surely, with the swarm of contesting widows——"

"Oh, don't," she entreated, "it makes me so ashamed. I never read the papers any more. There won't be much money left after the dozens of lawyers are satisfied; and now that my dear mother is gone, if the money comes it will come too late."

She sat in a low chair on one side of the hearth, the firelight throwing a rosy glow over her white forehead and gilding the massive braids of wood-brown hair. As Mr. Ronalds, idly smoking a cigarette, rested in the big hickory arm chair, sacred to the head of the house, his long legs stretched to the blaze, he watched the girl in growing wonder. Not one hint of embarrassment or fear, nothing to show that she thought it unusual for a girl to be shut up in an isolated ranch house, late at night alone with a strange young man. It was with a disturbing sense of responsibility that he looked at his watch. It was 12 o'clock. He jumped to his feet. "I think we must face the fact that the Mattocks have probably been detained in town; and as for Buddy—is he a little boy?"

"Buddy is old enough to vote," she answered dryly. She had risen, and he saw with disquiet the dawn of fear in her eyes. But he had mistaken her indomitable spirit; the fear was not for herself. "Something must have happened to Buddy; he might have fallen over the grade," she cried in alarm. "The road down the canyon is like a corkscrew—indeed, that is what Tirabuzon means—a corkscrew. I am afraid for the others, too; they never came this late before."

She was the picture of anxiety, and yet he felt none of it was for herself. Earlier in the evening he had learned from her that the nearest neighbors—the Vogels—were three miles away. "I won't arouse her self-consciousness," he thought. "It is impossible to leave her here alone, and I haven't the nerve to suggest that she take refuge with a neighbor at this hour. Well, one comfort, country folk aren't long on chaperons."

During his reflections she had taken from the mantel one out of the row of brass candlesticks, and lighting it, offered it to him. "I'll wait up a short while; maybe one of the Mattocks will come. Shall I show you a room, for you must be tired?"

"Not until we fasten the doors and windows," he reminded her.

He had gauged her correctly; the suggestion gave her no uneasiness. She went with him willingly and held the candle while he shot rusty bolts and turned unused keys. That done, he went to the room she indicated. And Frances sat waiting before the coals on the hearth for a few minutes. Finally she, too, went to her room. She was sitting on the floor pensively unlacing her shoes and thinking of poor Dick, when she heard a cautious rap at her door. She got to her feet, and in spite of her high courage she could hardly command her voice to ask what was wanted.

"I hope I have not alarmed you"—it was Mr. Ronalds, of course—"but from my side of the house I can hear shots and hoofbeats. It may be the Mattocks. However, there's no sense in taking any chances. Please put out your light and come here. I have opened a window a crack, and I want you to listen."

"Here" meant the parlor. She slipped out, and kneeling by the window, listened intently. She could hear the peculiar pattering sound made by a number of hard-ridden horses, and could also hear vague, far-off shouting. They closed the window and tiptoed into the dining-room, where the coals gave a faint glow that was a relief after the pitch darkness. The noise and shots came clearer. It seemed the intruders were coming down the private road toward the house.

"It's the Howlands," she whispered. He was listening to another whisper—in his blood.

"Are you afraid?" he asked in a low voice, putting his hand gently on her shoulder.

"Not of the Howlands," she answered saucily, shrugging his hand away.

Just then with clatter of bridle and jangle of spur, a crowd of horsemen swept up to the front door, then wheeling, came, a howling band, to the dining-room door.

"Hi, thar, Tom Mattocks, yo' ole fox, come outen yo' hole, o' yo'll git smoked outen thar!"

"That's Newt Howland. He has shot seventeen people. He was one of the leaders of a feud in Tennessee," whispered Frances. "Mr Mattocks has all the settlers, except the Vogel family, against him, as he sides with the government about the homesteads."

"I know," he whispered back. "I came from Washington to investigate these frauds. I was doing it to pass the time. Never dreamed I'd have the good luck to hit a shindy like this."

Growing Perfume Plants.

THE GOVERNMENT EXPERIMENTING WITH NEW ONES.

By a Special Contributor.

THE culture of perfumery plants is being tried by the Department of Agriculture on its experimental farm at Arlington, across the Potomac from the city of Washington, the idea in view being not only to ascertain how successfully the well-recognized species, such as the geranium and lavender, can be grown in this country, but also to find out how far it may be practicable to utilize various native wild plants as producers of perfumes.

It is believed that not a few of our native wild plants would yield perfumes of high commercial value, if cultivated. At the present time, unfortunately, our output of volatile oils useful for such purposes is surprisingly small. Indeed, our production of such oils for any kind of employment is restricted almost wholly to spearmint and peppermint, which are grown and distilled on a considerable scale, the latter chiefly in Michigan.

Hosts of wild aromatic plants are found growing in all sections of the country, and many of them possess exceedingly fine fragrance, while many, on the other hand, have odors less attractive, but suggestive of usefulness. In most cases these odorous plants are capable of producing oils of value not only in the perfumery trade, but also in the arts and for medicinal purposes. It is suggested by the Department of Agriculture that a systematic canvas should be made of the flora of the United States, with a view to picking out wild plants that possess an aroma—which plants may thereupon be subjected to experimental distillation. In this way many new and important volatile oils would doubtless be discovered.

Discussing this subject in a special bulletin soon to be issued, the department says that certain sections of the United States seem well adapted to the growth of the Bulgarian rose, which produces (by distillation) the rose oil, or "attar of roses," of commerce. It is further believed by the experts that the culture of other roses useful for perfumery purposes might be successfully pursued in some portions of the South, where conditions of climate are specially favorable. Labor in that part of the country is cheap—a point of importance in this connection, inasmuch as the petals gathered for distillation must be plucked by hand.

Lavender, now grown extensively in the semi-mountainous districts of France, and in England also, for its oil, might be cultivated with equal advantage in our own country. Likewise the rose geranium, a plant of exquisite odor, grown and distilled in France, Spain, and Algiers. Its volatile oil, almost indispensable in the perfumery industry, resides in the leaves, its flowers being almost odorless. Experiments in the distillation of this plant are already being made by the Department of Agriculture.

The department is of opinion that rosemary, thyme, sweet basil, summer savory, and sweet marjoram, as well as other plants of a similar character native to Mediterranean countries, and yielding oil of excellent fragrance for perfumers and makers of toilet preparations, could, with proper care and perseverance, be produced to advantage in the United States.

The distillation of oils from such seeds as caraway, anise, fennel, and corinder, which are so universally used for flavoring and scenting purposes, has been carried on successfully in southern Europe for a great many years. These seeds have been introduced into the United States, and grown in small quantities, principally for household use. It would be an easy matter to produce them on a more extensive scale for the distillation of their fragrant oils—especially in the North Central States, where climate and soil are suitable. The seeds are coarsely ground before being distilled by steam.

Small quantities of citrus oils are produced in California from orange and lemon peels, but the industry has obtained slight attention compared with what it ought to receive, in view of the fact that the market demand for these oils is very constant and the price reasonably high. The distillation of waste or unsalable lemons would yield a volatile oil of lemon of high quality and readily marketable. It is further suggested that lemon-tree prunings produce, by distillation, an oil of an extremely high flavor, which should prove valuable.

The use of volatile oils in flavoring and in the manufacture of flavoring extracts is very extensive. It is restricted, however, to a comparatively small number of oils, principal among which are lemon, orange, wintergreen, peppermint, and others of this type. The only kind of volatile oil that we export in any considerable quantity is that of the peppermint. Of peppermint oil distilled mostly in Michigan and New York, we send abroad about 140,000 pounds annually, valued at $350,000.

A wild plant that yields a volatile oil of much value is the sassafras tree, which is found all the way from Florida to New England. Sassafras oil was one of the first volatile oils distilled in America, and at the present time it is produced on quite a large scale in half a dozen States. It is obtained principally from the root bark, which is first ground and then subjected to ordinary steam distillation.

Among other wild aromatic plants that furnish valuable oils are the wintergreen and sweet birch. The two are not botanically related, yet, curiously enough, both produce the same kind of oil—the sweet birch from its bark, and the shrubby wintergreen from its leaves and twigs. Wild bergamot and horse mint, which grow wild in the north-central portion of the United States, from Pennsylvania to Minnesota, yield volatile oils that are most useful for their antiseptic properties. And not to be forgotten is the small herb known as pennyroyal, the oil of which, distilled chiefly in Ohio and North Carolina, finds extensive employment in medicine.

We import about $2,750,000 worth of volatile oils of all kinds annually. But this estimate does not include imports of alcoholic perfumery, embracing toilet and cologne waters, which amount to nearly half a million dollars' worth per annum. The perfumery products come chiefly from France, where the art of compounding them—usually they are blends of odors made by combining several oils in various proportions—has been scientifically developed.

Although volatile oils find many uses in medicine, the greatest demand for them comes from makers of perfumes and perfumery products and of flavors. As a result of scientific research in perfume chemistry, not only has a large field of commercial activity been developed, but scientific knowledge itself has been much extended. In view of the increasing importance of this class of products to American trade, it seems highly advisable that steps be taken to investigate the possibilities of our own country in the way of perfume production.

Such volatile oils exist in the tissues of plants in the form of minute globules, which are sometimes so conspicuous as to be seen without the aid of a magnifying glass. If a leaf of the peppermint, especially at the time of blossoming, be closely examined, tiny glistening particles of oil will be discerned. In like manner, close scrutiny of the peel of a lemon or orange will disclose to view small circular oil glands just beneath the outer skin. The presence of these oil glands helps to give to a lemon or orange its characteristic roughened appearance.

Oil of geranium is derived from three well-known species of the plant, one of which is the common "rose geranium" of our gardens. These geraniums are grown for the perfume market on an immense scale in Southern Europe, the plants being harvested a little before the opening of the flowers, when the lemon-like odor they at first possess gives place to the odor of the rose. To get the oil, the entire plant is put into the ELECTRIC LIGHTS ON FARMS.

WITH THEM KANSAS FARMERS EO THEIR MORNING CHORES.

[Topeka Correspondence New York Sun:] Within ten years electricity will light a majority of the farm homes and country schools and churches of the State, it is predicted. Farm homes lighted with electricity are now numbered by hundreds.

With the general use of the gasoline engine this has been made possible. Electric light and power companies in several of the cities are also making plans by which they can supply farmers with current from their trunk lines. A notable case of this sort is found at Manhattan, where the power for electric generation is furnished by a dam on the Big Blue River, four miles from the city.

The current generated is used for electric lighting and street-car purposes in the city of Manhattan, and farmers living near the trunk line are using it in their residences, barns and feed lots. In the early morning hours when the farmers feed and care for their stock and do the milking, electric lights are found to be very useful.

In a rich farming community ten miles north of Atchison the farmers have decided to have an electric-light plant of their own. They will build a small power-house where current will be generated and from which it will be carried into their homes. Fifteen families will share in this modern system of light.

Several farmers living ten miles west of Atchison have small dynamos on their farms providing electric light for their homes, barns and dairy buildings. Recently the town of Troy, forty miles north of Atchison, contracted for light from the Atchison plant. A trunk line wire was stretched between the two places, and now twenty-five farmers along the route are connecting their homes with this trunk line.

Far out in western Kansas the farmers are using electricity for lighting their homes. Near Garden City, which a few years ago was in the center of the great American desert, there are farms where all the buildings are made of cement concrete and each is lighted with electricity generated by a gasoline engine on the place.

The early pioneer way of living and the modern system are blended on one farm. A farmer is still living in a sod house built a quarter of a century ago. He is constructing a new and up-to-date home in which he has installed a gasoline engine with which to generate electricity for lighting. He will not move out of the old sod house until March next because of its warmth and comfort in winter, but he is enjoying electric lights in that primitive dwelling. It is believed this is the only instance in which a sod house has been lighted by electricity.

In the natural-gas regions of southeastern Kansas the electric light is cheaper than gas.

Years ago when the electric telegraph was a new thing and a mystery to the masses, there came trouble one Saturday night in the Bank of England. The business of the day had closed, and the balance was not right. There was a deficit of just one hundred pounds. It was not the money, but the error, that must be found. For the officials and clerks there could be no sleep until the mystery had been cleared up. All that night, and all Sunday, a force of men were busy. The money was surely gone from the vaults, but no one could discover whence.

On the following morning a clerk suggested that the mistake might have occurred in packing, for the West Indies, some boxes of specie that had been sent to Southampton for shipment. His chief acted on the suggestion. Here was an opportunity to test the power of the telegraph—lightning against steam, and steam with forty-eight hours the start. Very soon the telegraph asked a man in Southampton: "Has the ship [illegible] sailed?"

The answer came back: "Just weighing anchor."

"Stop her in the Queen's name," flashed back the telegraph. "She is stopped," was returned.

"Have on deck certain boxes" (marks given,) "weigh them carefully, and let me know the result," telegraphed the chief.

This order was obeyed, and one box was found to be somewhere about one pound and ten ounces heavier than its mates—just the weight of the missing sovereigns. "All right. Let the ship go!" was the next [illegible].

The West India house was debited with the one hundred pounds, and the Bank of England was at peace again.—[Harper's Weekly.

The Fool.

TELLS HOW HE CAME INTO HIS KINGDOM AT LAST.

By Edgar White.

CONTAGION had stamped his face with a mournful malediction, while nature had given him a heart, warm and loving as that of a good woman. These conflicts happen, at which unpitying destiny draws her drapery about her and turns her back. So the man who might have been a king must play the fool. The Queen mocked him. The courtiers belabored him. Thus he earned his wage.

At one part of the play, when the Queen, in merry jest, would hide from her regal husband, the fool bent his broad back upon which she placed her dainty feet and ascended the bough of a tree. Then she smiled and let him kiss her hand for his reward. It wasn't much, but it made the Fool, who didn't get a great deal out of life, very happy. For he loved the Queen, both on and off the stage. Of course she didn't know, and if she had known, it would only have made her sorry. She had so many lovers in the troupe, but the King was edging them all away. He was a tall, manly fellow, just like the pictures of those real kings you see, with jeweled headpieces. His face was soft and fair, and his ways were graceful, like a prince of the blood. "King Hal" tuey called him, and all loved him.

The fool was the butt of all the show people. Whether abaft the footlights, big and unwieldy, grotesquely dressed, wearing his painted grin, or at the hotel, or on the journey, it was all the same; their treatment of him did not differ. He was always the man in cap and bells. They said nature had built him for the part, even as it had "King Hal" for his.

I said "all" the show people. That was a mistake. There was an exception. Away from the tinsel kingdom, Queen Estner never gibed the Fool. She of all the rest saw beyond the pitted face into a heart of tenderness. It may be that was why he loved her so, seeing fairer worth than her patrician beauty. Could these two souls have spoken, angel hands would have twined a benediction o'er them, but they were behind inexorable battlements that held them wide apart.

The thing happened in a small town in southern Iowa. Just where the fault lay none seemed to know, for next day all who might be responsible were so busy laying it on somebody else that Portia herself could not have unraveled the tangled skein. Anyhow, along toward 3 in the morning the sleepy night clerk at the hotel was awakened by the crackling of flames overhead, and when he ran up to the first floor he found the corridors full of smoke. He aroused the people as best he could and then sent an alarm for the volunteer fire company. The building burned faster than the firemen responded. The show people and other guests rushed out, half-dressed and much frightened over their narrow escapes. By this time a great crowd was in front, yelling and much excited. Looking up at a window in the fourth story they beheld a woman who had not come out with the rest. And from all the windows below her pillars of smoke and fire were belching fiercely.

The lady left behind was the Queen, who occupied an apartment by herself. She ran her hand over her eyes, as she looked up and down, scanning for a way of escape.

No ladder in town would reach her, and no one thought of netting. The Fool, as soon as he saw her, walked briskly to "King Hal."

"Come," he said; "there's just a chance."

He took the King's arm and led him rapidly through the crowd to a small door in the rear of the hotel, which he opened. Smoke rolled out in a cloud, and the fierce cracking of timbers could be heard as the flames roared about the wooden floors and rafters.

"These are the servants' steps," explained the Fool, now alert and indomitable; "they go clear up to the fourth floor. There we'll make a try to get to the front. Come!"

"King Hal" followed a few steps upward, and faltered. His face was ashy, like a man about to swoon.

"We can't make it," he muttered; "we'll only die."

The heat was fearful.

The Fool sprang down to his side.

"Then you must stay here," he cried hoarsely. "If I get back alive, it will be best for you to be here—understand?"

A feeble assent came from the King's trembling lips, as he hurriedly staggered back to the bottom of the stairs.

The Fool pressed on upward, the light of a great hope in his fine, dark eyes, the only thing the malady had left him. A few more burns or scars mattered not. The hot air swept against him as he ran up, never halting; hotter and hotter came the dreadful breath as he reached the top landing and waited a moment to decide his course. Through a cross hallway rushed a volume of smoke, carrying on its wings burning sparks. He shut his eyes, pulled his felt cap low and dashed through this and into the main corridor, groping his way through the inferno, now blistering his hands and face. It was but a guess as to which room the Queen was in. He dared not open his mouth to call, lest he stifle. All sense of sound left him, and he began to fear he'd fall before he reached her. It was barely possible to distinguish a door from the wall, so thick was the smoke. As he groped along, he stumbled and fell heavily. A door flew open, and he was in her room, the smoke sweeping in behind him. The Queen was kneeling at her bed, where she had fainted. But the Fool knew what to do. He took his large handkerchief, hurriedly soaked it in the water pitcher and bound it about the upper part of her face and head. If they got through her beautiful hair and eyes would be safe. Then he picked up his burden and retraced his steps. With the contact of her supple body new life came into him, and it seemed a small matter to dash back through the smoke and flames to the small winding stairs through whence he came. These stairs were burning now, but it was the only chance. A rope might have helped matters, but there was none. So, as swiftly as he dared, he began going down the narrow steps, holding her dress tightly about her and watching closely for sparks. He couldn't see, but he felt with his feet, testing each stair. The heat penetrated his thick shoes, as he was walking on live coals. He held the Queen close, for his body might be some protection to her through the miserable little stairway, now hot as a chimney.

"My God! Have you got her?"

The exclamation told the Fool he was at the end of his perilous journey. Till then he had been unable to keep count of the flights he had descended. All he knew was that they seemed never-ending.

"King Hal," who had not earned the right, forbore to touch her until a sharp command from the Fool brought him to his senses.

"Lend a hand, for God's sake!" he said. "I'm about gone."

Then the King took hold, and calling others to him, they carried the Queen across the street to a dwelling. The Fool slunk out of sight to nurse his burns and bruises. Those who responded to "King Hal's" command told of the daring rescue and made of the King a hero. They hadn't noticed the blackened form that slunk away in the gloom.

The kingdom moved eastward, bringing those of the realm nearer home. Things went along much the same, all the men and women of the court taking it as a settled edict that the King and Queen would be united in holy wedlock before the disbandment for the season. Once or twice the manager had hinted to the King that it might be a pleasant feature, and certainly it would swell the box receipts that night, if the ceremony could be performed on the stage. At this an eager look would come into the eyes of the King, to be followed by a puzzling expression that might indicate anything.

The day before the show was to make its last jump on the home stretch, the Queen sent for the Fool. She greeted him at the door with a friendly little hand, and bade him take a seat. He awkwardly fondled his great slouch hat, his eyes traveling everywhere but toward hers.

"Joe," she said, as she sank into a chair, and rested her chin on her hand, "I never heard of you telling a story in your life.

"Thank you."

"The night of the fire in the Iowa hotel, Joe, some one saved my life."

"Yes—King Hal."

"Joe, I love that man."

"King Hal?"

"The man who came to my rescue."

"I understand—you love King Hal."

"Joe!"

"Yes."

"Look here."

The Queen hastily arose and went to her trunk. In a moment she returned, holding out a large handkerchief, and pointing to the initials thereon. He turned pale, dropped his hat and moved his chair back. She came close, still holding the accusing handkerchief before him.

"I—I—I didn't know—I—I forgot"—then suddenly awakening to the import of her words—"Oh, you said—you said——"

He held out two great paws, and her little hands were buried in them.

"I said, Joe," she whispered, "that I loved the brave man who did this for me."

HOMELAND.

Over the hills, where the setting sun sinks low in the golden west;
Over the hills, where the gray clouds fall, to cover the earth's warm breast;
Over the hills where the shadows lie, deep purple and amethyst,
To melt in the vale as the moon sails by, in her mantle of silvery mist;

Over the hills where the echo lurks, to mock at the trav'ler's cry,
Where deep in cranny, and nook and gulch, the snows
of a dead past lie;
Over the hills, where the eagle buids a nest for his chosen mate,
With none to question his sovereign sway o'er the eyrie desolate;

Over the hills which tower aloft, like sentinels in my dreams,
To beckon and knock at my heart's closed door, till ever to me it seems
That my feet must follow the winding way, o'er chasm, and rock and peak,
Till I reach, far, far on the other side the haven they bid me seek;

Over the hills, where men are men, and the blood runs
red and strong,
Where a friend's a friend, not a day, a week, but friend for a whole life long;
Where a word once passed is as good as gold, and stands till eternity;
Where men are brothers—and God is Love—oh, that is the place for me!

CLEVER DETECTIVE WORK OF A NEWSPAPER POLICE REPORTER.

By a Special Correspondent.

WHEN the office fire alarm sounded twice in fifteen minutes, it meant news, and Fellows, who was the cub before I came, was sent out to report the place, owners, insurance, loss and, if any, the casualties; but when a third alarm was turned in on the heels of the second, it savored of crime, and therefore, De Toy, the police reporter, was instantly relieved of routine duties until the matter should be investigated. "And," added the city editor, glancing at me, "you may as well take Billy along—if you want him."

De Toy grinned, but signalled for me to come on. That, save that on the car he reached into my raincoat pocket and fished out my sack of Bull Durham—which he failed to return—was his last intimation of being aware of my existence till we reached out first stopping place.

We found the Chief of Police already at work—if staring with evident disgust at a smouldering ash heap may be termed work.

"Hello, Mac," sang out De Toy, "looking for firebugs? I'll bet you ten that the Argus beats you to it."

"Humph!" grunted the official good-naturedly, "bet you five."

"You're getting cheap, Mac," jeered De Toy with the assurance of old acquaintance; "it's an open secret that I can't live on my pay, and if I can't win your money, what's going to keep me out of the poorhouse?"

Mac laughed. "Well, I'll bet you five more that it's hobos. They've been cleaning house up in 'Frisco, and the country's full of them."

De Toy looked thoughtfully at the leaden sky, turned up the collar of his mackintosh against the light, warm shower which, an hour before, had begun falling as if in justification of the weather bureau's prophecy. "Go you," he answered, "on the general theory that you're a bad guesser," and without further banter each began to look over the ground. "See what you can see, Billy," directed De Toy; "you never can tell what may turn up."

The building had been a long, ramshackle warehouse, disused, save as a place of storage for old junk. The body and roof were completely burned; only a few charred boards of the lower walls still remained upright; and strewn among the heaps of ashes iron barrel hoops, tangles of bed springs, old harvester wheels and the like were visible. The weeds and grass had been burned away for a space of ten or fifteen feet, and through this cleared space we searched for clews. At the end of twenty minutes, De Toy encountered the smudged and perspiring chief.

"Well, Mac, what have you found?"

"Nothing. What does a man expect to find of a piece of candle and a bit of waste that's been burned up? What have you got?"

"What have I got?" repeated De Toy in mock reproof. "Why, I have here what appears to be an iron sling-shot frame. Found it tucked away under a hatful of ashes and—well," maintained De Toy as Mac snorted, "I insist that it was acting in a most suspicious manner, and since," he grinned, "it is the only blamed thing I did find, I've got to accuse it of being a clew to hold my job—eh, Mac?"

In spite of the fact that they were old friends, in spite of the fact that the clever brain of the newspaper man had more than once helped the Chief of Police out of a tight hole, I fear that Mac often found De Toy a bit trying, as did every one else who worked with him. He was so all-fired cock-sure, and one could never tell precisely whether he was jesting or in earnest.

"Well, you can wade through the ash heaps all you want to," declared the officer. "I'm going to round up every hobo in town, and if any of 'em's done it, I'll sweat it out."

The second place we visited was what had been the old mill, also disused since the new one had begun operation a year before. A careful search proved the premises to be as barren of clews as the warehouse had been.

"It's funny," I observed as we picked our way among the empty freight cars on our way to the third burned building, "that all these fires happened on the railroad. Do you suppose," I continued, cautiously voicing a great idea which had suddenly come into my head, "that those new-model oil burners the company is putting in could have anything to do with it? Ought to make a rather good story, too."

For just a moment De Toy eyed me speculatively. Then he demolished my theory. "No good, Cub. If that were true, they'd be afire all up and down the line. It's worth noting, however, that all the fires started practically at the same time, and that all the buildings are of no particular importance."

The facts were undeniable, and I was strongly inclined to accept Mac's belief as the right one. Two of the structures were abandoned, and all of them were known to be hobo hang-outs. One never knows just what means of showing their disapproval a band of hobos may select when the word has been passed out to "keep moving."

The place we were now going to examine had been a rather good building, the property of a fruit-packing concern; but it was tied up in litigation, and had been closed for several months.

The brick walls were still standing, but the roof had been burned and the interior gutted. I was getting tired. The novelty had worn off, and I was more than ever in accord with the chief's theory, that whatever evidence might originally have existed had been destroyed by the fire. I could not but marvel at De Toy, however. Ever since early morning he had been searching, and searching hard, too, and he had found nothing; yet his air of whimsical cock-sureness had never for a moment left him.

I was aimlessly walking some fifty feet from the building and reflecting that a front like De Toy's ought to take him unchallenged through St. Peter's gate, when my foot struck something in the damp weeds. In a moment I had missed three heartbeats. De Toy saw me coming and calmly waited, smiling his whimsical smile.

"Well, Cub?"

"I think"—my confounded teeth chattered I was so excited—"I think if you'll examine this bottle, you'll find that it has contained kerosene. There's still quite a little in the bottom."

The bottle, which De Toy proceeded to examine carefully, was brown in color, and about the size and shape of an ordinary vaseline bottle, only slightly longer.

"Yes," he said finally. "We must admit that it has contained coal oil, and that a thimbleful of that precious liquid still remains." I was angry at the lightness of De Toy's tone, and was about to blurt out something when he continued: "But when clews are as scarce as they are today, we must not overlook the fact that there is a small flake of some brown substance immersed in the liquid. Did it ever strike you that that might be a rather odd build of bottle for an incendiary to carry his coal oil in?"

"If he'd been a newspaper man," I retorted as pointedly as I dared, "he'd probably have carried his dope in a whisky flask."

"Excellent!" approved De Toy, shedding my insinuation as a roof sheds water, "that clears our skirts and sets us to wondering what kind of man might be associated with that particular kind of bottle."

De Toy sat down on a box and smoked a cigarette. Presently he rose. "That's all today, Cub," he announced abruptly. "You may go and play now. I'm going to the moving-picture show, and then I've a couple of other calls to make. Oh, we're in on this together," he added, amused at my sulky look; "if anything turns up, I'll tell you first, but just now you can't help me any."

Next morning De Toy touched me on the shoulder. "Put on your coat," he said, "we're going to visit the high school."

I found Mac waiting for us at the curb with his automobile, and as we dodged our way to the high-school building, I tried to figure out what would develop, but failed.

The principal was alone in his office, and was evidently expecting us. "Shall I bring them in one at a time," he asked, "or all together?"

"Oh, bring them all together," answered De Toy; "that will do quite as well."

"I'd always rather sweat a man alone," objected Mac when the principal had gone. "But play it as you like," he added rather sourly, "it's your game."

"It's everybody's game, Mac," soothed De Toy. "You get the credit, the Argus gets the news, I get your $10, and Billy, here, whom I suspect of writing fiction after hours—Billy gets valuable experience."

Mac's answer was interrupted by the entrance of the principal and three peg-topped youths whose neckwear and hosiery might have divided honors evenly in point of vividness. The tallest, a husky youngster with a handsome, insolent face was, as I afterward learned, the son of our esteemed Congressman, who was under indictment for bribery.

"Be seated," directed the principal, indicating chairs placed some little distance apart. "These gentlemen wish to ask you some questions."

De Toy looked at Mac, but the officer by a slight motion indicated that the case was in De Toy's hands.

The reporter then gave a swift glance over the group. "What is your name?" he asked the youth whose physiognomy gave the least indication of strength of characacter.

"Byron Blair," answered the student with a nervousness which, considering the stage setting, was pardonable.

"Do you ever go to the moving-picture show?"

"Why—why, yes, sir—once in a while."

"Were you there last week?"

"Yes, sir; one night."

"What were the pictures about?"

"Why—why—one was about a girl who stole back some jewels she had lost gambling, and——"

"What else?"

"There was one about a diver who was smothered in his diving suit by his wife's lover."

"What else?"

"There was a funny one about——"

"We'll omit the funny one. What else was there?"

"I—don't remember."

"You do remember! What was the next one about?"

The boy hung his head and perspiration began to bead his forehead.

"What was the other one about?"

"I think it was called 'The Firebug.' I don't remember much about it."

While De Toy with diabolical cleverness probed into Master Blair's memory for the details of the firebug picture, I glanced at the Congressman's son. If looks could have killed, that young man would have murdered on the spot—not De Toy, but the weak-chinned companion whom De Toy was so deliberately and yet so swiftly picking to pieces. I was beginning to see why it might sometimes be desirable to question a man in the presence of his companions.

"Very good," said De Toy at length, stifling a yawn and giving what I took for an intimation that the interview was over.

But barely had the look of intense relief settled over young Blair's weazened features when the tormentor added: "One thing more: do you study chemistry?"

"Yes, sir."

"What can you tell us about sodium?"

A positive look of terror came into the youth' "I can't—I don't know much—I——" he stamm

"Like a 'nigger chaser,' eh, or explodes lik pedo if you drop in a large piece?"

A THRILLING GHOST STORY OF THE PILCHUCK RIVER.

By a Special Correspondent.

IN one of the primeval sections of the Northwest the red waters of the Pilchuck River emerge with a series of spectacular somersaults from a narrow gorge of the mountains and abruptly roar out of sight in the dense forest below. There may be method in all this grand flourish, possibly akin to that of the blithely-whistling pedestrian passing a lonely grave at midnight, for here the waters drench the bleaching skulls of an ancient Indian burying ground. Who those long-departed people were, and what they wrought during their animate existence, there is no tongue left to tell. The forest trees have grown for a century and a half above their bones, and the place which they occupied in the great drama of the ages is now a forgotten story. The damp, moss-grown earth of their ancient habitation is today seldom pressed by the feet of men.

But there are some investigating noses which cannot rest until they have poked into every silent corner of the universe and sniffed at each footprint left upon the granite ribs of time; and one recent summer evening the prosaic gleam of a camp fire danced sacreligious fandangos with the woodland gnomes above the old Pilchuck sarcophagus.

Those who were responsible for the fire numbered five men. They had met at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, and had become circumstantially fused in one common purpose by the story of vast gold deposits along the deserted headwaters of the Pilchuck River. And while it subsequently developed that the nearest thing to the color of gold in the foundation of the story was the rich hue of the liquid refreshment previously imbibed by the narrator, the expedition was not without certain results.

The party consisted respectively of four white men and a well-qualified Japanese cook. They had arrived late that afternoon, and the remaining hours of daylight had largely been occupied with making camp. On the following day they intended to explore their surroundings a bit.

The night was clear, and a brilliant moon sent long spear shafts of ghostly light into the forest caverns. The river flung forth its ceaseless roar, and a rising wind was beginning to add a fitful moan to the voice of the wilderness.

And under these somewhat impressive conditions Baltimore, Jersey City, Louisville, and Orient, the cook, sat around the wavering camp fire and heard from the lips of the Native Son some thrilling ghost stories connected with the spot.

"It is sure a spooky old place," commented Louisville, thrusting a twig into the fire with which to freshen up his expiring pipe.

"I always did revel in just this kind of a spot," declared Baltimore. "Delicious creeps, and all that sort of thing, you know."

"Me, too," volunteered Jersey City.

The Native Son removed the pipe from his lips and regarded it with a half-sad, half-humorous smile.

"You'll get all the delicious creeps you care for before we get out of this ungodly country," he remarked. "Do you hear that wind roaring among the trees? It's a bad sign, a mighty bad sign."

Louisville laughed indulgently, and leaning back against a tree, smoked away at his pipe in solid contentment.

"I'll wager my first nugget against yours that you don't dare to take a walk straight away from this camp fire twenty rods all alone!" challenged the Native Son, with a resentful gleam in his eyes.

This proposition took the other somewhat by surprise, and for the moment he hesitated whether to accept it seriously, or as a passing joke. But when he saw his companions regarding him with quiet mirth, he promptly rose to his feet There would be no booby in camp by the name of Louisville

"I accept the wager," he responded coolly "An easy way to earn a good nugget of filthy yellow Adios, Senors, until we meet again at your hospitable fireside"

"He's game, all right," said Baltimore, with an admiring glance at the receding figure "I imagine it would take something more than a few shadows to frighten Louisville."

"Those grass-fed Kentuckians are pretty nervy, as a rule," remarked Jersey City.

The roar of the waterfall and the sullen voice of the wind hurling itself in a good half-gale through the tree-tops soon drowned the footsteps of their departing camp mate. The cavernous forest shut him from view, and with more interest than either would have cared to acknowledge in a matter so trivial Baltimore and Jersey City silently awaited the triumphant return of Louisville and the discomfiture of the Native Son.

The return feature of the programme was carried out faithfully enough, but any triumphant aspect incident thereto was temporarily lost sight of in Louisville's hair-raising shriek of alarm, and the spectacular tiger leaps with which he came sailing out of the darkness into the circle of firelight.

His face was ghastly pale, and beads of sweat stood upon his forehead!

"The devil, boys—the devil!" he gasped, half-crouching in the center of the camp circle. "I have seen the devil!"

Baltimore and Jersey City were for the moment speechless with surprise. The eyes of the Native Son gleamed with an expression of mingled awe and triumphant exultation. Orient, the cook, drew a little closer to the fire.

The party consisted respectively of four white men and a well-qualified Japanese cook. They had arrived late that afternoon, and the remaining hours of daylight had largely been occupied with making camp. On the following day they intended to explore their surroundings a bit.

The night was clear, and a brilliant moon sent long silver shafts of ghostly light into the forest caverns. The river flung forth its ceaseless roar, and a rising wind was beginning to add a fitful moan to the voice of the wilderness.

And under these somewhat impressive conditions Baltimore, Jersey City, Louisville, and Orient, the cook, sat around the wavering camp fire and heard from the lips of the Native Son some thrilling ghost stories connected with the spot.

Baltimore and Jersey City were for the moment speechless with surprise. The eyes of the Native Son gleamed with an expression of mingled awe and triumphant exultation. Orient, the cook, drew a little closer to the fire.

"What sort of theatrical joke are you trying to ring in on us?" sharply demanded Baltimore, as soon as he could find his voice. "Or have you really lost your nerve at sight of a moonlight shadow?"

"Not for a minute!" declared Louisville, still trembling from his recent fright. "I don't take a back seat for anything that belongs on the earth, but when I see the devil loom up fresh from the infernal regions, I've got sense enough to make tracks while my hide is on straight."

"Oh, we saw you making tracks, all right," responded Baltimore, with considerable sarcasm, "but His Satanic Majesty doesn't appear to be following you up very closely."

"All the same, I know what I am talking about," retorted Louisville, with asperity. "If you are so very brave, go out and take a look at him yourself!"

To prevent the altercation getting any warmer, Jersey City here interposed.

"What do you say to all of us making a little tour of investigation?" he asked. "In union there is strength, you know; and besides, the imperial gentleman from below may be pleased to meet a bunch of his old friends."

It was the only proposition which under the circumstances offered any solution of the riddle, and without needless delay the four investigators set out on their grewsome quest, leaving Orient feeding the fire very industriously with slabs of dry fir bark. As a precaution against unforeseen developments, the Native Son took along a few firearms, and a pocketful of ammunition.

Away from the camp fire the moon-pierced shadows of the forest were weirdly impressive, and by the time Louisville raised his hand in signal to halt, the others were about prepared to accept the sight of any sort of ghostly apparition as a fitting concomitant of the darkness and solitude.

"There," said Louisville, pointing an unsteady hand toward a screen of small-growth maple foliage, bathed in shimmering moonlight, a few rods distant. "He looked out at me from that sapling ticket!"

His companions halted and silently turned their gaze upon the innocent-looking veil of foliage, silver and black beneath the lunar rays and the sable shadows of night.

Then something happened.

A cold blast of wind, as from some grewsome dungeon, struck them sharply on the back of the neck; the curtain of interlaced branches parted like blades of grass, and the four men stood as though rooted to the earth, momentarily paralyzed.

Distinctly outlined in the moonlight a gigantic apparition of fearful, Satanic aspect glared straight at the intruders! And it was no figment of the imagination; it was real. Seemingly with overpowering rage its form quivered from head to foot; its huge eyes gleamed with a baleful fierceness, and its mouth was drawn into a most terrifying expression.

Surely this was no creature of mortal flesh and blood, although bearing the outward semblance of an Indian in full war paint. The features were infinitely more devilish than anything of earth, and the figure was at least twenty feet in height. The baleful eyes were larger than joy riders' goggles, the Satanic mouth fully a foot wide!

Perhaps for the space of ten seconds was the astounding spectacle revealed to the gaze of the intruders. Then the curtain of branches, as though released from the giant hand, whipped back into place, and the most infernal apparition ever presented to those particular eyes disappeared from view.

The intruders waited not for a second demonstration. Obeying a common impulse, they turned and fled toward the camp with inglorious haste.

Orient, the cook, was still crouched beside the fire. When he saw his companions come rushing out of the darkness in undeniable panic, his face turned pale and he made a dive for the tent. Sticking his head out of the flap entrance, he exclaimed shrilly:

"Too much hell. No good. Pris soon we all dead. Saionara!"

"Shut up!" cried Baltimore, grabbing up a tuft of heavy moss and firing it spitefully at the cook's fear-stricken face, hitting, however, four or five inches wide of the mark.

In somber silence the returned heroes seated themselves beside the camp fire. Louisville's eyes looked queer and glassy in the wavering light. The Native Son held his spine erect and his lips shut in a straight line. Baltimore took off his hat and wiped his perspiring forehead with his coat sleeve. Jersey City remained discreetly in the background.

And there they sat, like silent wardens of the night, until dawn. None of them had thought of sleep.

In the early twilight of morning a dull, sodden thud like the sound of some heavy body striking the ground was borne to their ears from the direction of the demon thicket. There was no crackling of branches, no sound of splintering wood, and they knew it was not a tree fallen before the wind. Decidedly uncanny it was.

But with the rising of the sun and the advent of a new day their courage and mental poise returned in full measure. After the morning ceremony of bacon and coffee, Baltimore looked sternly into the somewhat sheepish faces of his companions, and said:

"Boys, I'll not presume to judge how you feel in this matter, but for me I want to state that I am heartily ashamed of myself. We came, we saw, and, I blush to say, did not conquer I am not at all satisfied. I propose that we do a little investigating of that maple thicket by daylight. I have a curiosity to see what sort of tracks an Indian devil leaves in the ground."

The proposition met with unanimous approval, and a few minutes later they stood for the second time before the mysterious screen of foliage.

But now it shone green and golden in the morning sunlight, and all about them the great forest smiled like a fairy garden under the magic touch of day.

A broad smile slowly expanded each interested countenance, and the Native Son burst into a musical laugh.

"The cedar of the northern coast is a long-enduring wood," he said, "and the red men have always used it for carving their canoes and various other works of art. I have seen an old log, still sound enough to show the kind of wood, embedded squarely beneath the roots of another cedar tree whose annual rings proclaimed it to be over 300 years old. But everything has its limit of days, and our poor old ghost has had his. Peace to his ashes."

The strange sound heard in the early morning was explained. Beneath the leafy canopy, its grotesque visage staring up at the blue sky above the treetops, lay the old Indian totem pole which had furnished the spectacular material for the little drama of the previous evening. Its race was run. The wind had laid it prone, and the terrifying apparition would never again look forth from its leafy bower—as when the gale swept aside the screen of foliage, and the moonbeams flickered with lifelike effect upon the painted countenance of wood.

To some, who have seen only the composite totems of the Alaskan tribes, a word of explanation is due. In scattered sections of the Northwest are found a few such as here described, representing a single warrior figure. One of these peculiar totems stands in the Green River Valley, about thirty-five miles from Seattle, close to the main traveled road leading to the upper hop ranches. What they originally signified has been lost, probably forever, in the fogs of time.

CLYDE SCOTT CHASE.

MAHOGANY MILLS.

HOW THE TREES ARE CUT, SAWED AND PREPARED FOR MARKET.

[New Orleans Times-Democrat:] The busy saws in the mahogany mill are going day and night at this season of the year. There are seasons during which only day runs are made, but the strain is on just now, and the machinery never stops. During the twenty-four hours 60,000 feet of lumber are cut in the mill. Month after month the ships come over, at least twenty cargoes a year coming to anchor beside the gunwale. There is no such thing as bringing the logs in ballast. They compose the ship's entire cargo. A great many ships are devoted to this enterprihe, and to them there is no other object in life but to get the logs from the tropical ports and bring them to New Orleans and unload them here and go back for more. Ten million feet a year of mahogany comes into New Orleans, and is partly manufactured here.

In Mexico, Honduras and Central America the contractor gives $5 for a single tree. This is cheap enough. But it is the expense of getting it out that counts, and that makes mahogany an expensive lumber. It stands deep in the forest in the midst of an almost impenetrable jungle. There are no groves of them—the trees are scattered, perhaps not more than two to an acre. It may be that there is no water course at hand on which the logs can be floated to the port. The tree has to be located by the "hunter," whose business it is to roam through the forest in search of mahogany trees and to blaze a way to them, so that they may be found again. Then the workmen must cut their laborious way to the tree, using for the purpose the deadly machete, with which a number of men from this section made unpleasant avquaintance along in 1898. The machete turned into a pruning hook makes a very effective weapon, however, and in the course of time the men get to the tree.

It is a beautiful tree, tall and shapely, with the lowest branches at least sixty feet from the ground. At the bottom is a huge swelling, after the manner of the cypress, and the tree is to be cut above that, six or eight feet from the roots. The first work to be done is to build a platform around the trunk, so that the cutters can stand upon it and wield their axes. In the course of time down comes the great monarch of the tropical forest, crashing through the thick growth around it.

The workmen trim it up, cut it into lengths, and manage to get it hauled and rolled to the nearest creek. There it must lie to await the floods of the rainy season, which will lift it and carry it down stream and on to the ocean port. There the logs are piled on the beach to wait for a vessel, and when it comes are rolled back into the water and rafted and pulled out to the ship's side, always a dangerous undertaking, for the water is rough. Once beside the vessel the derricks are put to work and the logs are lifted over one by one, lowered with much difficulty into the hold, and when enough logs have come aboard the vessel is ready.

It may well be believed that mahogany does not claim the respect in its own land that it does in ours. There has been much comment on the fact that it is used for railroad ties in the lands across the Gulf, and this may well be. An immense amount of it is so far from the coast and from any present means of transportation that it practically is valueless to the owner of the land, so he views the waste of it with comparative indifference.

It is gratifying to know that there is no wholesale destruction of the mahogany forests. The young timber has to be preserved. At one time it was the law that no tree should be cut which squared less than eighteen inches—quite a large tree, as one will notice—but that has become rather a dead letter, and trees smaller than this are cut every day. Still there is some effort to preserve the timber and even to do an appreciable amount of reforestation. The trees are of very slow growth, many of the large trees, it is said, bearing evidence of being at least 1000 years old, and when there is carelessness or greed in cutting, it means much to the future of the mahogany business.

" 'Mr. Curtis,' said Mrs. Butler, 'what is the reason of this singular charge of $2.50 instead of the usual half-dollar on the 11th?'

" 'Half a dollar for the drive, and $2 for your sass,' old Curtis answered gruffly."

A Sample Quip.

"THOMAS W. LAWSON'S Thanksgiving proclamation last month was a very good piece of oratorical writing," said a Boston banker. "Lawson is always full of quips.

"Not long ago I attended the funeral of a millionaire financier—one of those real 'high financiers' whose low methods Lawson loves to turn the light on.

"I arrived at the funeral a little late. I took a seat beside Lawson and whispered:

" 'How far has the service gone?'

"Lawson, nodding toward the clergyman in the pulpit, whispered back:

" 'Just opened for the defense.' "

The School of Matrimony.

JUSTICE ASPINWALL of the Supreme Court of Brooklyn is a bachelor, and in a recent matrimonial case he uttered this bachelor-like epigram:

"If a bachelor contemplating marriage would sit here and listen to these cases, he would probably change his mind and go out and play football."

A married lawyer the other day took the bachelor justice to task.

"It is all right for you to talk about the dangers of matrimony," he said, "but marriage, let me tell you, is a liberal education. A man can learn a lot from his wife."

"Yes; no doubt of that," said Justice Aspinwall. "Many a man, after a year or so of marriage, can sew on buttons and darn socks like all creation."

A Naive Critic.

"THE preacher who complains of poor or inattentive congregations," said Dr. Charles F. Aked, in a recent address in New York, "would perhaps do better to devote to the improvement of his sermons the time spent on these complaints.

"This type of preacher generally belongs to the Cannes class which Mrs. Gladstone naively condemned.

"Mrs. Gladstone and her famous husband went to Cannes one January, and on Sunday morning, of course, they repaired to the English church.

"But when the sermon began, Mr. Gladstone frowned and squirmed, then whispered to Mrs. Gladstone fretfully:

" 'I can't hear him.'

"But Mrs. Gladstone, whose ears were better, said to her husband with a reassuring smile:

" 'Never mind, dear. Go to sleep. It will do you ever so much more good.' "

Back, Then, to the Farm.

RICHARD CROKER, during his visit to New York last month, discussed with a reporter the high cost of living.

"The farmers are all right," said Mr. Croker. "It is the people who insist on living in the towns who find everything too dear. In the towns, you see, the expenses are as bothersome as the children.

"A little boy in a tiny flat looked up from his drum one day and said:

" 'Mother, Adam and Eve lived in Paradise. What was it like there?'

" 'Like what it is here,' his mother answered, 'when you eight children are all at school.' "

A Little Flatterer.

MME. MELBA, in an interview in New York, replied to a reporter's compliments:

"I am afraid you are a natural flatterer—like the children, you know.

"A Sunday-school superintendent was once telling me about the beautiful, almost involuntary flattery of little children. He said he asked a class of little girls:

" 'Whom ought we to love best?'

"A little girl answered softly:

" 'Our superintendent, sir.' "

Crutches or Biers.

RICHARD CROKER, at a dinner in New York, expressed a distrust for aeroplanes.

"There's nothing underneath them," he said. "If the least thing goes wrong, down they drop.

"I said to a Londoner the other day:

" 'How is your son getting on since he bought a flying machine?'

" 'On crutches, like the rest of them,' the Londoner replied."

No Change.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN, at a dinner in New York, said of opera stars:

"They never change, the rank and file of them. Catalini was like any prima donna of today, and Brahm, who took her down, was like any twentieth-century tenor.

"Catalini, at a supper, boasted, in her usual way, about her jewels.

" 'These earrings,' she said, 'are a gift from the Grand Duke Paul. The King of Belgium gave me this ring. My bracelet was a present from the Emperor Nicholas. As for this tiara——'

"But Brahm, the famous tenor, winking at the company, interrupted in a loud voice.

" 'Ladies and gentlemen,' he said, 'you see these trousers? They were given me by the Emperor of China. You see this shirt? The King of Naples presented it to me.'

"Then Brahm took out his false teeth and held them aloft.

" 'Look!' he said. 'The gift of the Queen of England.' "

On Himself.

A MAGAZINE editor was praising the popular novelist, Mrs. Humphry Ward.

"She deserves her fame," said the editor warmly. "Nobody begrudges her her fame except possibly her husband.

"Mr. Humphry Ward, you know, was a well-known writer till his wife sprung up. She has put him in the shade completely. He sits in the shadow with good nature. He even jokes about it. Once, when I was visiting the pretty Old World mansion of the Wards to see about a new novel for my magazine, one of the children said to my host:

" 'Papa, what is a nonentity?'

"Mr. Humphry Ward winked at me and answered:

" 'A nonentity, my dear, is a prominent woman's husband.' "

He Reached a Conclusion.

TOM was the youngest of a large family and had to endure any amount of teasing. Every little while some one would say: "Tom, the bad man will get you!" At first it frightened him, but later he paid no attention to it. One day one of his sisters said: "Tom, what makes you so bad?" "I'm goin' to keep on bein' badder and badder, till the old bad man comes. I want to see what he looks like!" was Tom's reply.

Natural Conclusions.

THE following conversation was held by three little girls:

Nellie: I'm glad my father and mother are Christian Scientists. I never have to take any nasty medicine.

Dorothy: I'm glad my father and mother are not Christian Scientists. Every time I have to take nasty medicine, I get a box of candy.

Elizabeth: I wish my father and mother were Christian Scientists. Every time I have to take a dose of medicine, I get a good spanking. M.

It Looked Like It.

LITTLE ARTHUR saw his father talking to a man who held an ear trumpet to his ear. Arthur stared at the man in amazement. Finally, the man observing him, said: "My little man, you're wondering what this is. You see, I am very deaf. I am a fine swimmer, and being in the water so often, I got water in my ears, and I am obliged to use this." Arthur was deeply interested, and asked:

"Is that an ear pump to pump the water out?"

Certainly Not for Money.

WALTER WINANS, the noted horseman, lives in England, and on his recent American visit a reporter asked him at the Horse Show what he thought of international marriages.

"International marriages," said Mr. Winans, who belongs to the noted Baltimore family of that name, "are just as good as any other kind, provided the girl and the man are all right. The girl is, as a rule, all right, but the man is too often a fortune hunter who should never have been presented to the girl.

"A Chicago father," he continued, "said to his foreign son-in-law the other day:

" 'Count, I'm ruined! Every cent is lost!'

"The count whistled.

" 'Then, by Jove,' he said softly, 'I did marry for love, after all.' "

The Wicked Majority.

MISS LILLIAN TOD, the first woman to invent an aeroplane, was asked in an interview in New York to what she attribted her success.

"Success in aeronautics, as in most things," said Miss Tod, "is achieved by patience and faith in oneself. Now, had I been a pessimist——" Miss Tod smiled. "Pessimists like my friend's new gardener on Long Island," she continued, "would not accomplish much in work like mine. This man was raking leaves off the lawn one fall day, when a neighbor, passing by, inquired of him:

" 'Where's the gardener who used to work here?'

" 'Dead, sir,' was the reply.

" 'Dead!' said the astonished neighbor. Then, musing, he added: 'Joined the great majority, eh?'

" 'Oh, sir,' the gardener interrupted in a shocked voice. 'I wouldn't like to say that. He was a good enough man as far as I know.' "

To Get Off.

GEORGE C. BOLDT, the well-known hotel man of New York, praised, the other day, truffled turkey.

"Turkey is our national dish for Christmas and New Year's Day," he said, "and truffled turkey is the world's national dish. It is incomparable."

Mr. Boldt smiled.

"Rossini," he said, "was once promised by a friend a dinner of turkey and truffles. The friend, however, showed a disposition to postpone the feast and to make excuses. But Rossini, buttonholing him one day, said:

" 'Look here, how about that truffled turkey dinner?'

" 'Truffles are no good this season,' said his friend.

" 'Bah! Don't you believe it,' said Rossini. 'That report was started by the turkeys.' "

THE PALM FAMILY.

"KINGS AND PRINCES OF THE VEGETABLE KINGDOM."

By Ernest Braunton.

IN all the vegetable kingdom no other family of plants can compare with the palms in graceful beauty or majestic dignity. No other class of plants are so striking in appearance, for a single palm or group of them will arrest the attention more quickly than other plant life of the same dimensions. Their noble character, graceful mien, and dignified carriage, together with the majestic height of some species led one of our earlier botanists to speak of them as the kings and princes of the vegetable kingdom. So replete with feminine grace and beauty is Cocos plumosa, bearing herself with such becoming dignity as often to be dubbed the "Queen of Palms" by admiring plant fanciers.

But no matter how many or how strong the attractions of this great family, its members would concern us very little were they not suitable for general garden use in Southern California. As it is, they are one of the chief factors in the beautifying of our land. However much we may inveigh against the use of palms for street trees, an avenue of them is still the most welcome sight to the first-time visitor, and so soon as he purchases a home he at once plants out one or more if the least bit of unoccupied territory may be found. Even after visiting, or even living for a time in California or Florida, nothing so fascinates the visitor to the tropics as the unrivalled beauty and majesty of the giant palms. Certain it is, when we have summed up all experiences and impressions of plant life, that we will "award the palm" to the palm, as being the most loved of mankind. In this belief the Southern Pacific Company planted a giant Washingtonia at Arcade station so that it first meets the gaze of all cityward bound, and the Santa Fe Railroad has a still more striking display at La Grande station in the beautiful grove of Canary Island dates.

THE WILD CALIFORNIA PALM.

Our California Palm.

THOUGH the United States contains nine native species of palms, California can boast of but one. It is probably just as well that we do not excel in all things or our existence here would prove so attractive that even the best of us would prefer to remain permanently for fear heaven would fall short of the glory of California.

The botanical history of our fan palm is more or less shrouded in mystery, and though the atmosphere has been largely cleared of clouds by S. B. Parish, sufficient fog remains so that all botanical students heartily wish that the meddlesome German authorities had left the naming to some one who had at least a faint idea of what they were attempting to describe. Could the descriptions of the several species of Washingtonia have been written by scientists who had seen the palms or herbarium specimens from mature plants it may be they would really describe some existent plants. As it is, no one can form any reasonable opinion of them without Mr. Parish's monograph. Years ago the writer obtained a transcript of the original descriptions, of the two species named in Germany and had them translated by a German scholar in Los Angeles, but without avail. No one could make anything out of such faulty and insufficient descriptions.

Suffice it is to say that our lone species is technically Washingtonia filifera, variety robusta, though we are urged to call it W. filifera as we have been accustomed to do. It should, from its general robust appearance, have been named W. robusta in the first instance.

This palm grows out on that wing, branch, or tongue of the Colorado Desert which runs into California and through which the Southern Pacific Railroad passes between Los Angeles and Yuma. Great numbers of them, and those most accessible to the tourist, may be found in the canyons but a few miles from Palm Springs. Others, more remote, are found on the floor of the desert proper. In the more thickly-settled parts of Southern California it is fairly common, but in no other place may so many be found as in the city of Los Angeles. Mexico gives us at least two more species of Washingtonia which are also to be found in local gardens, and of these the writer will give our readers some interesting notes in the near future, as he is now gathering botanical specimens of all our garden palms for a far-distant institution of learning.

Palms Native to the United States.

ASIDE from one species in California (Washingtonia filifera,) there is but one other in the West; the Mexican Palmetto (Sabal Mexicana) extends quite a distance into southwestern Texas. On the southern Atlantic Coast there are seven other species which range from North Carolina down to the Florida Keys and one of these, the common Cabbage Palmetto of several of those States (Sabal Palmetto) grows on both the east and the west coast of Florida. A trunkless, very spiny species (Rhapidophyllum hystrix,) together with Sabals, grows in dense jungles in lower Louisiana and Florida. A rare palm of the Florida Keys is Pseudophoenix Sargentii and the Serenoa is equally rare in the same State. Two species of Thrinax are also found there and are known as Silk-top Palmetto and Silver-top Palmetto. But the horticultural glory of Florida, from the standpoint of ornamentals, lies in the Florida Royal Palm (Roystonea Floridana) a giant of remarkable beauty. This palm attains twice the height of its near relative, the Royal Palm of the West Indies (Oreodoxa regia,) and it is regretable that it grows onlywhere few ever see it, in the most inaccessible parts of the Florida Everglades. This completes the list of nine species indigenous to the United States.

The Date of Commerce.

THE edible date found in our fruit stalls is the fruit of Phoenix dactylifera, a tree quite common in Southern California, though the dates are usually imported from the Orient.

During the past summer the writer has been eating the very finest of fresh dates grown at the Arizona Agricultural Experiment Station. They were bought, in two varieties, from a local grocery. The golden yellow sort was extremely fine, but a few in each box of black dates were sour. The writer sent to Director Forbes for information regarding these, and found that neither variety was good for this section, but that seeds of a better sort, Deglet Noor, may be purchased from the station. The writer believes these dates sufficiently good for home use may be grown in many of our warmer parts, if removed from the ocean sufficiently to be free from coastal influences.

The Cocoanut Palm.

LIKE all the other Cocos, the Cocoanut (Cocos nucifera) is no doubt native only to the Americas, but as it is a beach palm it was fairly well distributed throughout the tropics before the botanists could satisfactorily determine its native habitat. This species has never been grown out of doors in Southern California, but the writer believes a few spots in saline coastal meadows might be found where it would at least make a sufficient growth to warrant its retention in garden collections of palms.

ARTISTIC LANDMARKS.

URGENT NEED OF ART COMMISSIONS IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

OVER all our fair Southland we have landmarks worthy of preservation, and while many may not be called artistic, they all are valuable, and become more so with each added year of age. But in the city we have a far more serious problem; not the preservation of our landmarks, but the preservation of ourselves and posterity from civic ugliness by reason of hideous landmarks erected by wealthy property owners, structures that will no doubt endure for centuries. In the rapid, present-day development of the city beautiful it is absolutely necessary to have an art commission with full powers to exercise control over structures, highways and their planting, park buildings, features and accessories, public fountains, statuary, bridges, etc., for all these are now insufficiently controlled in Los Angeles and the whole of our section of the State.

Not alone in our metropolis, but in every city, town, or community, we have urgent need of an art commission is not more necessary for the proper development and maintenance of our parks than is a well-qualified body to govern other departments of municipal art. We are in danger from new structures, not alone because of their ugliness, but also for sanitary reasons. When our thickly-ranked buildings become so tall that no sun or pure air ever reaches the streets, the city will be a good place from which to flee for all persons with a serious regard for their health. Would that our city had the same unchangeable restrictions of some notable foreign ones, where the buildings are limited to six stories and a specified total height. It would be far better for all concerned if the business center of Los Angeles were spread over four times the present territory, in buildings of reasonable height, to the end that the health and even the lives of our people might be the better conserved. The erection of modern skyscrapers in a land like ours is indefensible from any standpoint and the further welfare of our city depends, in a large measure, upon the appointment of a competent and permanent art commission with full power to protect us from ourselves until the average voter is educated to the point where he may be able to judge what constitutes the difference between a civic asset and a civic liability.

Tree Characters.

TREES are much like humans in that they vary in character. Some species must have a pure, dry, dustless atmosphere or they are rapidly consumed by a sort of vegetable tuberculosis. Others are seemingly of such strength and endurance that they bear up, with perfect health, under the stifling influences of dust, smoke, gases, mechanical injuries and an insufficiency of air, food, and water. From the latter class we must choose our street trees. And in the choosing we must consider their characters and habits. We want trees of handsome appearance, noble bearing, and above all, cleanly; trees which are dressed in their "Sunday best" throughout every day in the year. Some trees are naturally unkempt, ragged, crooked, slouchy, instead of a gracefully-drooping, dirty in the constant dropping of litter and wholly lacking in beauty—the hobo of the plant race. Avoid these for streets, where all may see them, as you would their human counterpart.

Value of Spreading Trees.

ASIDE from the added value in shade, umbrageous trees are much to be preferred to those of spire-like growth. In appearance they are much more handsome than the strict, formal living exclamation points often seen on the streets of cities and towns in the Middle West. Luckily, they are not much planted here, being totally out of harmony with the round-topped hills of Southern California.

A scientific investigator in the city of London, a member of the Royal Horticultural Society, undertook a number of experiments looking to the determination of the amount of labor performed by trees of various heights. It was shown that the ascent of water in trees is a vital problem depending upon conditions only present in living trees and impossible of duplication by any other method. So long as these conditions are present, a pumping action in a healthy tree is not set up until a height of seventy-five feet has been reached. In trees of lesser height a continuous water column is practically maintained under normal conditions. There is no doubt, however, but there comes a sluggishness of circulation in tall trees of all kinds, and this action is further impeded by the hard conditions under which street trees usually grow. It would appear, therefore, that low-growing, wide-spreading trees are better in all ways for street use.

Spreading the Gospel.

NO public movement looking to the improvement of the home grounds has been so unexpectedly productive of results as that of school gardening. In our own fair city an immediate improvement of the neighborhood has been noticed following the institution of school gardens. A few years ago prizes were offered for the best-kept yards and gardens in the Utah-street school district, Los Angeles. This section lies just to the east of the trickle which by courtesy we call a river and north of First street or under the hill from Boyle Heights, on the west. The prize for the best front yard actually was won by children living in a tent! And the best flower garden was found about one of the most primitive dwellings. Before the advent of the school garden no such ornamentation was known in the district, but in the years which have since passed a steady upbuilding of the home and home surroundings has been plainly manifest. When the school gardens work such wonders they certainly are worthy of the fullest support.

Value of Street Trees.

STREET trees exercise a beneficial effect upon the health and comfort of a city, quite independent of their ornamental value. The constant and considerable evaporation of moisture from their foliage during dry, sunny weather has a very decided cooling effect upon the surrounding atmosphere, counteracting the baneful effects of reflected heat from glaring pavements. This grateful modification of the atmosphere is quite noticeable on a hot day if one constantly changes from shaded to unshaded streets and back again.

Municipal Control of Trees.

SO many and varied are the advantages of municipal control of street trees over individual planting and care that a student of the subject marvels that all communities have not adopted the better plan. With municipal ownership comes those desirable points impossible without it—the systematic, uniform, practical and economic development and care—care at the proper time and in the proper manner, without favoritism, every tree receiving the same treatment. In no other way may the problem of well-planted streets be solved.

Little Things Count.

THERE are many communities which seem to believe in doing little things that add to the attractiveness of their section. "Many mickle makes a muckle" is their motto, and a committee or committees approach every one with some task which will add to the general result. If a store front is dingy, the owner must paint; if the awning be torn or dirty, get a new one. If your fence or gate is out of repair or both and the dwelling need paint the owner is asked to "come up." Even the milkmen, grocerymen, butchers, bakers, etc., are asked to paint their wagons. In the aggregate these little things count.

National Playground Association.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA is well represented at the official corps of the Playground Association of America. Among the honorary vice-presidents are: Dr. W. A. Lamb, Los Angeles; James Mills, Riverside; Charles E. Edwards, Santa Barbara; and Arthur B. Emmons, Pasadena. Of committee members we have: D. B. Gamble, Pasadena; C. B. Raitt, Dr. Lamb, Mrs. Willoughby Rodman and Miss Bessie D. Stoddard of Los Angeles. Northern California is nearly as well represented, and Washington has one officer.

CLOCKS THAT STRIKE THIRTEEN.

Among the most curious clocks in the world, says the current Harper's Weekly, are two in Worsley, Lancashire, Eng., that never strike one. Instead they strike thirteen at 1 a.m. and 1 p.m. One of them is over the Earl of Ellesmere's place called Worsley Hall, and is the original clock which the Duke of Bridgewater had placed in the tower. It is said that the Duke had the clock made to strike the "unlucky" number so as to warn his workmen that it was time to return after dinner, some of them having excused themselves for being late on the ground that they could not hear it strike one.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

DEBIT AND CREDIT.

ACCURATE ACCOUNTS SHOULD BE KEPT BY POULTRYMEN.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

IT goes without saying that but few poultry-keepers, even among those following poultry culture as a business, keep an accurate set of books detailing their operations. This is all wrong. Poultry culture along commercial lines is as much of a business as banking, manufacturing and merchandising, and it is only by keeping tab on receipts and expenditures that the breeder can arrive at definite results as regards its profitableness. In this connection we desire to call attention to the fact that there are a number of special forms of poultry account books which are to be had of the supply-houses. In individual cases these may require modification, but in the main they answer ordinary requirements very well. A poultryman's books at the beginning of his fiscal year should show an appraisal value of his stock and appliances. These being settled and properly entered, all items of receipts should be duly recorded, and likewise all expenditures; then the plant should be credited with the number of eggs produced, and how disposed of; whether used on the family table, sold for consumption or for hatching, or used for breeding purposes at home; and finally a hatching record should be kept showing number of eggs set, how many hatched, and how many were reared and disposed of. In other words, there should be a debit and a corresponding credit for every transaction entered into between the plant and the disposition of its product. At the end of the year there should be another valuation or inventory. When all is duly entered on the trial balance for the year's operations, the result between the debit and credit sides will represent either a loss or a profit. If carefully made out, the reasons for either the one or the other will be plainly shown. Such a record is worth money to any business.

AYLESBURY DRAKE, SEVEN MONTHS OLD.

The Aylesbury Duck.

In England this variety commands the same economic importance that the White Pekings do in America, having long been the most popular in the London markets. Broadly speaking the recognized commercial breeds of domesticated ducks stand about as follows: For early maturity, the Aylesbury; for size, the Rouen; for eggs, Peking and Indian Runner. The first mentioned is heavy in body, short in leg and of a boat-like shape, bill long and of a flesh color, legs deep orange; hardy; flesh abundant, rich, and of fine flavor; plumage white.

The illustration pictures one of Mrs. J. G. Flower's fine specimens, being that of a drake seven months of age. At ten weeks of age this fine bird tipped the scales at eight pounds. The original imported stock, of which it is the progeny, contained winners at the Crystal Palace and Dairy Show, London Water Fowl Club Show, etc. The advantages claimed for the Aylesbury are the ease with which it is acclimated, thriving under varying conditions of climate, its early maturity, its great hardiness, its large size, its prolificacy and the beauty which it possesses. Its champions claim that it is a light eater, and that it grows to maturity quite rapidly—specimens often commencing to lay when but five months of age.

A World Poultry Show in 1915.

Though the matter has not been "officially" settled, it is nevertheless quite certain that in 1915 San Francisco will be the scene of a world's fair which will not only exploit in tangible form the advances that have been made in science and art, but also prove an object lesson in the improvements that have been made in pomology, in garden and field crops, in live-stock breeding, and in poultry culture. California possessing the greatest poultry center in the world, it stands to reason that a world's-fair poultry show should be a pronounced feature of the Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915. Such an enterprise is not without elements of strength and greatness, provided the Pacific Coast poultry interests will foster and promote the undertaking. And it is none too soon to commence agitating for it, and get the clans into line. For instance, the American Poultry Association should hold its annual meeting in San Francisco for that year; likewise the big breed and specialty clubs should be urged to do likewise; the poultry clubs and societies of Australia, British Columbia and New Zealand should be placed in touch with the movement; some effort should be made to enlist the support of the poultry breeders of China and Japan, thus securing exhibits of breeds and varieties new or little known to the American fancy; and finally all the Coast associations and those east of the Rocky Mountains and the Atlantic seaboard, should be made to become boosters in the movement. As a preliminary, when once the exposition becomes a tangible fact by act of Congress (let us hope and pray) an organization should be perfected representing the Coast societies which would work directly with and under the direction of the management of the exposition. The scheme is feasible and worthy of serious consideration.

What Ails the California Hen?

At the present writing hen fruit is quoted at about 45 cents per dozen. This is above the winter price in Chicago, New York or Boston. But even at this figure, California does not produce eggs enough for her needs, nor poultry carcass in sufficient volume to meet the prevailing demand. Obviously the American business hen in California is not numerically strong enough to command all the business on her own ground, hence has to make requisitions on her sisters in Kansas and Nebraska to keep out. In other words, for some reason or other, our rural economy seems to overlook the hen as a money-making adjunct to the ranch.

In Missouri it is different; there people "are shown." The 114 counties of that State produced last year $45,902,655 worth of hen fruit, carcass and feathers, which is probably four times the volume produced in California. What is the matter? Will the man who failed in the chicken business, as well as the fellow who succeeded, kindly enlighten the writer, as well as his readers?

Biddy's Bathtub.

It is conceded by experienced breeders that a good dust bath not only has a cleansing effect upon birds, but it is also destructive of insect life of a parasitic nature on the bird. In the summer when the soil is dry, hens on free range will usually find a place by the roadside, hedge or orchard where they can disport themselves, but in the rainy season it is desirable to make provision for Biddy's bath. Not a few breeders provide a dust bath in a dry situation consisting of fine ashes, but fine dry earth will do equally well. Some add disinfecting powder or black sulphur mixed with the earth, which assists in destroying vermin. The deeper this dust bath is, the better the birds can use it. Twelve to eighteen inches is none too deep. Care in keeping houses, perches and yards clean when supplemented with a good dust bath, will pull a flock of confined birds through the winter months in fine shape.

A Reprehensible Practice.

With the recurring of the show season we invariably hear more or less bearing on the reprehensible practice of renting or loaning fine showroom specimens on the part of one exhibitor to another. Usually birds so handled are exhibited at the larger shows more for advertising purposes than for sportsmanship, the idea being to enhance the value of the exhibitor's breeding stock. Were it purely to win, no particular harm would follow, especially from a mercenary point of view. But when eggs for hatching as coming from these winning birds are advertised, the practice degenerates into a mere swindling device. The purchaser's money is secured under false pretenses. Usually the practice finds its greatest exploitation where shrewd breeders handle the same varieties at the larger fixtures. Thus we see that A wins at Boston in Barred Rocks, but B wins in New York—often the same birds turning the trick. Some of our own shows in the past have not been free from the practice.

ROOSEVELT MIGHT HAVE SPARED HIM.

A little girl who had heard of Roosevelt's invasion of Europe, said to her father: "It was too bad that the King of England died before Mr. Roosevelt got to England, wasn't it, Papa? But," she remarked, shaking her head with a mighty sigh, "maybe he would have shot him, anyhow."—[Success.

GERMOZONE
Is the Best Roup Cure I Have Ever Tried
Among the many who say that are a lot who never thought Germozone would do it. Geo. H. Lee knew what Germozone would do before he placed it on the market. It is so good that users are not tempted to accept a substitute. No one ever found anything so good. The reason is plain—Germozone has no equal.
500 HENS SAVED
A Missouri poultryman writes that 8 bottles of Germozone saved his entire flock of 500 hens from Roup. Less than one cent per hen. A Pennsylvanian writes that Germozone would be cheap at $5.00 a box—and it will do for you what it has done for others. This advertisement is addressed to you. We want your poultry to make more money for you. We want you to recognize the importance of healthy poultry. The health of the chick or the hen is as important to it as your own health is to you. Ever stop to think about it? Perfect health is necessary for positive profit. Try Germozone and test every statement made here. No need to buy a substitute. If your dealer cannot supply you we will mail it to you, postpaid, on receipt of price—50 cts.—and will include free a copy of "Chicken Talk," written by Mr. Lee himself.

The girl could see nothing of his expression, but his voice sounded gay.

"Can you shoot?" he asked. "Where are the guns?"

"I can shoot," she answered, "but they have taken every firearm to town."

There was blank silence. She came nearer. "Come," she breathed softly, "I will show you the only thing for us to do."

They took hands like children and she led up a steep flight of stairs into an attic. He struck a match, as they entered, and saw unmade tumbled beds in the corners; flour and sugar barrels; saddles and whips, and harness and steel traps scattered about. As they walked lightly over to the open window looking on the rear roof, she quickly explained her plan. "There are cleats nailed down this steep roof to the kitchen roof, which also has cleats. From that we can reach a lean-to at the back where it is easy to drop to the ground. Joe and Bob are grown men, but their father does not allow them to go to dances, so they devised this way to get out at night."

He was through the window and helping her, just as soon as he grasped her meaning. Haste was necessary, for the shouts and the blows on the doors had redoubled. An elder tree shaded the lean-to, and in its shade he dropped after a hasty scramble down the roof. Frances perched fearfully on the edge of the low roof, hardly daring to risk the jump in the dark. "Come," he said softly. "You've been dead game so far, don't pike now. I can just reach you with my fingers, but you have to drop." She shut her teeth hard and dropped. He caught her, and for a second held her close; he could not see her face, but bending his head, managed to brush her mouth with his lips. He promptly released her as he felt her indignantly stiffen. She said nothing; indeed, he would have welcomed an outburst, for all at once he was covered with shame. They were startled at that instant to distinguish from the tumult a crashing sound as the door was broken in.

"Listen!" said the girl coldly. "We must make a run for the stable and try to get our horses. If we can manage to get over the ridge, we shall be safe. I will go on to Vogel's, and you ride to town and send out the officers. We must hurry, for you heard them threaten to fire the house, and we should be over the ridge before the flames discover us to them."

They ran for the barn. Ronalds realized, as the girl did, that even if their lives were not forfeited, they would be terribly maltreated at the hands of the drunken gang. The "informer" from the Land Office and the boarder at the hated Mattocks could expect but small mercy from the Howlands.

Frances deftly bridled her little gray in the darkness of the stable; but Ronalds was not so skillful, and was obliged to strike a match or so before he could get his horse bridled and out. They did not wait for saddles. Frances arranged her dress something the way the Hawaiian women do, who ride bareback and astride. She was mounted before Ronalds, and rode ahead, cautiously skirting the house, he following the indistinct outline of the gray mare. He was furious at her cool ignoring of him; but she knew the way and he did not, therefore he had to submit; he had shown himself incapable of keeping faith with a woman, and so was forced to accept her scorn.

As they reached the hill, beyond the crest of which wound the country road, the fire sprang out. The horses were frightened and needed no urging. The roar of the flames surmounted the beat of the horses' hoofs, and they rode fearlessly up the hill and on—over the ridge.

. . . .

It was New Year's night in a crowded New York restaurant. Barry Ronalds was supping with a party of men. The orchestra stopped short without the usual warning chords, and an elderly bass at the next table boomed forth:

"Frances, you must tell your Aunt Kate of the poisoned biscuits you once made in Califor——" His voice dropped as he missed the orchestra's support.

Barry turned violently around, his blood racing. A prosperous-looking, gray-haired couple was all he could see without rudeness, but a girl was sitting with them, directly behind him.

"What does the girl behind me look like?" he asked Stewart, one of the men with him. "You are faced that way."

"Why, like any other well-gowned New York girl. Seems to be silk and furs and big plumed hat—one of those derned hats you can't see even a curl under."

"Have you a pencil and piece of paper, Stewart? I am going to risk sending her a note. I think it's my Lucretia Borgia."

"Get them from the waiter. You know, Barry, I never have anything but a latch key in my evening duds."

By the time the waiter had been dispatched for pen and paper, Stewart, who had kept a watchful eye on the next table, said in a low voice: "I think they are going." In a minute he muttered: "Going, going," and just as Barry grabbed the pen and paper from the astonished waiter, he said: "Gone!"

Barry jumped to his feet, but without making a scene he could not reach them before they had left the Forty-second-street entrance, where they were lost in the jam. That was during holiday times. He hunted the rest of the winter and the spring. He grew thin, and his fine face looked worn. When summer came, he took a little vacation to see his mother at Bar Harbor. But he could not stay long away from New York, for he felt sure it harbored the black-eyed girl of his dreams. He was returning by boat—it was warm and moonlit, and the boat was almost deserted, as the tide of travel was set the opposite direction. He hunted the rest of the winter and the spring. He grew thin, and his fine face looked worn. When summer came, he took a little vacation to see his mother at Bar Harbor. But he could not stay long away from New York, for he felt sure it harbored the black-eyed girl of his dreams. He was returning by boat—it was warm and moonlit, and the boat was almost deserted, as the tide of travel was set the opposite direction. He was a lonely figure as he sat in a deck chair on the lee side, and was languidly pleased to see Stewart board the boat at Narragansett Pier.

"Did you ever find Lucretia Borgia?" was Stewart's greeting, as he pulled up a chair. Mr. Ronalds was very gloomy and quite convinced that he never would see her again.

"Tell me about the girl," requested Stewart. "All I know is why you call her Lucretia Borgia—it had something to do with poisoned bread. Has the heir to all the Ronalds fallen in love with a humble cook? Oh, I beg pardon—I'd forgotten, for the minute, that vision in pearls and ermine we saw New Year's night. Well, old man, come up with the sad, sad story of your life."

Ronalds cautiously scanned the space behind them not yet flooded by the light of the moon. All he could see in the shadow was a huddled group of deck chairs. He had reached a place in his loneliness and despair where he felt he must confide in some one. He told Stewart the whole evening's adventure.

"I sent the constables up there that morning after I got to Santa Cruz. By the way, I met the Mattocks going out to the ranch with help, as Buddy had learned of the attack, and ridden in to warn them. They cleared up the mystery of the biscuits; one of them had put strychnine for squirrels in an empty baking-powder can, and Miss Terry got hold of it. Next day I felt I must see Miss Terry and apologize for my blackguardly behavior—kissing her when she helpless; but when I got there I found she had thrown up her school and left for San Francisco. I followed her and discovered after a long search that she had been sent to the Philippines as a teacher. By that time nothing in the world mattered—only to find her. She had left Manila a few days before we docked. When I reached San Francisco again the papers were full of her name; she had inherited her uncle's fortune. I have as much money as she, so I didn't let that bother me any. I chased her to Paris, and of course she returned to New York on the very boat from which I landed. And here I am! I feel like the Wandering Jew. I am a thousand years old tonight."

"Come now, old man, buck up! Go with me tomorrow and see the Giants licks the stuffin' out of the Cubs."

Mr. Stewart had detractors who said his vocabulary contained but a hundred and fifty words.

"I wouldn't go," responded Barry, "from here to that smokestack to see it!"

"Well," said Stewart sympathetically, "you ARE in a pretty bad case. But buck up, old man, it's always darkest before dawn! Here's an illustration: right back of you when you began to talk it was black as tar, now the moon has turned on and it's white as paper. Who knows maybe it'll be that way with you." And sapient Mr. Stewart walked away, after a brotherly blow on the shoulder blades.

Ronalds turned to look at this wise illustration—turned and looked into Frances Terry's face! She was leaning around a deck chair staring at him; her hat slipped from her hand; and the wide braids that banded her little head had dropped over her pink ears; her black eyes were luminous, but the mischief had gone; the traveling dress of shepherd's plaid appeared in the moonlight like Emma's black-and-white check apron. He thought it must be an illusion. He rose slowly, and went—still slowly—to her side; he stooped over her and took her hand.

"I this moment awakened," she stammered, "and thought I heard your voice."

"I have been looking for you for nearly two years—two lost, dreadful years," he said, "just to ask you to forgive me for—for that brutal kiss."

"Just for that!" and she threw her arm up over her eyes, so he should not see the hot tears welling in them, and turned her head against the chair back.

"Just for that," he cried, "and to offer you the worship of a man."

And the tears were on both young faces as they shamelessly embraced in the moon's white searchlight.

A NEW KIND OF EXPLOSIVE.

An interesting article in the current Harper's Weekly recounts the surprising fact that for many years it has been known that various forms of dust, when mingled with air in certain proportions, are capable of producing destructive explosions when brought into contact with flame. This danger sometimes exists in flour mills, an instance being the explosion of three flour mills in Minneapolis in 1878. It was then demonstrated, by experiment, that two ounces of flour in two cubic feet of confined air, when ignited, would cause a violent explosion, and it was calculated that the contents of a flour sack distributed through 4000 cubic feet of air would cause an explosion capable of throwing a weight of 2500 tons to a height of 100 feet. An instance is known where sugar dust in a confectionery factory caused an explosion, and in another case dry soap dust proved equally dangerous.

THE KAISER'S PALACES.

The number of the Kaiser's palaces is largely due to the fact that the Prussian monarchy has absorbed many minor German states, including the kingdom of Hanover, the Duchy of Nassau, and the Electorate of Hesse-Cassel. All the palaces and castles of the rulers of these states thus passed into the possession of the reigning house of Prussia, as it was considered injudicious either to destroy or to sell them, for fear of impairing the popularity of Hohenzollern rule. Thus it is that the Emperor is burdened with the possession of more than three-score residences, some of which he has never even seen, and many of which are totally unsuited for royal habitation. Although their maintenance entails a heavy drain upon his exchequer, they cannot, for political reasons, be either sold or leased.—[Munsey's Magazine.

PAPUANS MARRIAGE CUSTOMS.

THE HUSBAND KEEPS A SEPARATE CLUB FOR EACH WIFE.

[Wide World:] The marriage customs of the Papuans are somewhat similar to those of many other savage races. The ceremony is largely a matter of purchase. The men marry when they are about 18 years of age, and the girls at 14 or even earlier. One of the girls I met carrying a baby was, so far as I could find out, under 13 years of age; and, like other inhabitants of tropical countries, the Papuan females mature very early in life. When a young lake man desires to get married he visits the father of his prospective bride and puts forward his personal belongings as an inducement to the father to consent to the union. Wealth is reckoned by many curious things in this region, where, one might almost say, no one owns anything. Furniture, money, clothes—everything by which the civilized races of the earth count their possessions—are nonexistent. If a man has a gun he is a great personage and can demand anything, but, besides their bows and arrows and spears, most of the Papuans have very little. Even agricultural produce is scarce, the only cultivation undertaken being on a very primitive scale. A little clearing is made by both men and women, and the women then grow bananas and sweet potatoes. The men are always armed, and when the women go to the patch to attend to their crops or gather the produce, the men go with them as a protection. The women, however, do the work.

Many families have a bundle of ancient Portuguese cloth, centuries old, and when a young man is seeking a bride one of these heirlooms is generally part of the "deal." The youth and the girl's father haggle over the marriage until eventually they agree to terms, and then the thing is done. The men are not limited to one wife, and once a girl is married she is subject to her husband in everything, and is practically his slave. In another part of New Guinea I remember a distinctly strong confirmation of the custom which places a woman at the entire mercy of her husband. At one house I visited I saw standing outside the doorway three huge stone clubs, each large enough to fell a bullock. On making inquiries I found that they tallied with the number of wives owning allegiance to the householder; the clubs were used by the man to beat his wives with if they annoyed him. The quaint part of it was that, while the women seemed to raise no objection to being flogged unmercifully by their lord and master, they would not be beaten with the same weapon as that used on another woman; so the natives kept a separate club for each wife!

TIME FOR IMPROVEMENT.

It was on the day of Col. Roosevelt's arrival in New York, after his triumphant progress abroad. The enthusiasm for "the man of the hour" had been imparted even to the bootblacks, and two sons of Italy were excitedly vieing with each other in extolling the colonel while they polished shoes.

"Roosavelt he da greata da man in da world," declared one of the bootblacks, waving his shining cloth.

"You don't really mean that, do you?" asked the man who occupied his chair.

"Sure I do. 'Roosavelt he da greata da man in da world," the Italian answered with convitcion, and then he added: "He da greata da man ever lived."

"Come, come, you don't mean to say that Roosevelt is a greater man than Lincoln," his patron said.

"Yes, greata da man dan Linc. Roosavelt he da greata da man in da world."

"You wouldn't say that he is greater than George Washington, would you?" pursued the amused patron.

"Yes, greata da man dan George Wash."

"Well, would you say that he is greater than Garibaldi?"

The Italian hesitated and scratched his head. Then he answered: "Well, Roosavelt he da younga man yet."—[Success.

MINING FOR COFFIN PLANKS.

One of the most curious industries in the world is the business of mining for coffin planks, which is carried on in Upper Tonquin, a portion of the French possessions in southeastern Asia. In a certain district in this province there exists a great underground deposit of logs, which were probably the trunks of trees engulfed by an earthquake or some other convulsion of nature at a comparatively recent period.

The trees are a species of pine known to the natives, and also to some extent to European commerce, as "nam-hou." The wood is almost imperishable, and has the quality, either through its nature or as the result of its sojourn underground, of resisting decay from damp. This quality makes it particularly valuable for the manufacture of coffins, and for this purpose it is largely exported to Europe.

The trees are often a yard in diameter. They are buried in sandy earth, at a depth of from two to eight yards, and are dug up by native labor as demand is made for them.—[Harper's Weekly.

FIELD NOTES.

Boll-weevil Blessing.

ENCOURAGEMENT for a continuation of cotton growing in California is found in the prevalence of the boll weevil in the old cotton-growing States. Alabama, for example, is going largely to corn on account of the weevil's invasion, or the threat of it. In fact, one large section of that State has formally declared that the boll weevil is a blessing in disguise, its fear resulting in the cultivation of corn instead of cotton, to the great financial advantage of the farmers. But California must keep her lands free from this great pest.

If the future economics should develop the fact that food for human beings and domestic animals must be produced near to its points of consumption, Alabama will not be the only southern State to abandon cotton culture for that of corn. Textile fabrics, on the other hand, may be profitably produced far from their points of consumption. The former is not produced in excess of the demand, James J. Hill and many others contending that actual scarcity of food is approaching. These economical laws are inexorable, and seem to promise great changes in the geography of our agricultural and textile products. Imperial county will never be a great corn district unless a dry-air variety can be discovered. But the climate is good for the production of high-grade cottons as well as for a great many other special products. Of course much time will be necessity to discover just what varieties of cotton will succeed best, but a good beginning has been made in this respect even this early in the trials. With freedom from insect pests, especially from the boll weevil, the abandonment of cotton culture to some extent in the South on account of this pest and the greater demand for food California should fall heir to a profitable cotton trade in the near future, if the cultivation of this staple is promoted and established as it should be. But keep out the boll weevil.

County and District Fairs.

A MOVEMENT is now fairly under way to promote agricultural fairs in the counties and districts of the State. Los Angeles is interested in this movement, but not to the extent that the lesser centers of agriculture and horticulture are, for Los Angeles is able to command attention to any proposition her citizens may wish to forward. The proposition to establish again these local fairs is in the hands of an association lately organized for the purposes of securing funds therefor, organizing the shows and directing their policies. Through the failure of these local fairs in past years it is thought necessary to put forth a new propaganda, and it is largely through the recognition of horticulture that its promoters expect to succeed in again interesting the taxpayers of the State to the point of putting up the money in support of county and district fairs.

The argument in favor of another trial of local fairs is good. At the time these institutions were last in vogue the lands of the State were largely devoted to the production of cereal crops. In but few counties was intensified culture in practice. Fruit growing was in its formative period, and comparatively few people were interested in horticulture. How have the times changed! Now scores of great districts and hundreds of smaller sections are popriated to the extent of being able to support these fairs with fine exhibits and profitable gate receipts. The influence of horticulture is felt in almost every locality in California, and the rural peoples are asking for local fairs to encourage local progress and to feed the State Fair and on to the Panama Exposition with exhibits and enthusiasm that shall make these larger enterprises more popular and successful. So potent is the influence of fruit growing and an appeal through it so promising that the State Fair management has asked the growers to demand an appropriation of $15,000 to be applied to the premium list on fruits alone. Whether the Legislature will listen to this appeal by proxy remains to be seen, but it all points to the fact that the annual "hoss trot" and the vaudeville are no longer great influences in getting appropriations for either State or county fairs.

New Taxation Plan.

T. H. M. of Los Angeles asks if the adoption of Amendment No. 1 at the late election will in any way affect the rate of taxation upon his land which, he avers, is paying more than its share of taxes under the old plan. Another query in his letter is whether the new assessment of corporation receipts under the same amendment is in the nature of an income tax. I do not attempt to discuss matters of general economic nature in this department, and as no one can tell at this time just what will be the effect of the new assessment plan upon land taxation, there is little to be said in answer to the first question.

The amendment known as No. 1 was adopted March 19, 1909, and approved by the voters of the State last November as amended by a special session of the Legislature. Its purpose is to separate the sources of revenue for State purposes from the sources of revenue for county and municipal purposes. While we do not know what the effect will be upon the land tax compared with that of the discarded plan, we may be sure that it will bring the responsibilities of each county government closer home. In other words the Supervisors will have the last word as to the county budget and as to equalizing the assessments. Consequently the people of the county can have a high or a low valuation, or rate through their officials without interference from the State Board of Equalization. Whether the assessment of farm lands shall be relatively high or low as compared with other property in the county will now depend upon the county board of equalization. It is true, the State Board of Equalization still has constitutional jurisdiction over county assessments, but that body will have troubles of its own, and the land owners need not fear interference with county affairs from that source. It is a home-rule proposition.

The assessment of the gross receipts of corporations involves direct taxation, lying in principle between a property tax and an income tax. Sixteen years ago the Supreme Court at Washington divided equally upon the meaning of a "direct" tax, the constitution reading: "Congress shall lay no direct taxes except they be in proportion to population." One Supreme Judge did not commit himself till the last minute, but finally sided with Justice Field's opinion that an income tax is a direct tax, thus declaring five to four against its constitutionality. Whether the new plan of taxation will work good or evil to the land owner time alone can determine. But the counties which received a horizontal raise a year ago from the State Board of Equalization will have no fear of a similar occurrence under the new deal.

Drainage Results.

I DO not suppose any new principle is involved in the results of tile-draining the lands of abandoned New England farms to restore them to productiveness. But these results prove that tiling may be useful outside of swamp and other wet lands. Thousands of acres of land, wet only at planting time or plowing time, and dry the balance of the time, may be improved in this way. It is good in cold seasons, because it allows the water to leave and the sunshine to possess the top soils. In Southern California where much irrigation is supposed to be necessary artificial drainage may prove of value. At any rate, it should be made an object of deep research and extensive experimentation. Sour, inert soils are all too common in every agricultural district. Who can say that one cause may not be the irregularities to which they are exposed through irrigation? The idea that only swamp lands need tile drainage has not been borne out by the experiences of late in the New England States.

Dry Rot of Potatoes.

TWO types of dry rot of potato occur frequently the United States. Both are caused by fun which first attack the tops. It is not strang therefore, that the practical grower finds difficulty of the roots and base of the stem, in the latter part the summer, and so causes the tops to wilt, and su hills soon die. If tubers are already set the fungus i vades these from the stem end, following the vesse which soon blacken and die. In the early stage the may be no signs on the surface of the tuber, but if t stem end is cut across, the disease shows as a bla

If glass protectionn is not available, the stocks may be planted in pots, boxes or even in the garden, and the grafting deferred until growth begins in spring. The scions should be cut before hard freezing, in early winter, choosing firm, thick wood, preferably of two years' growth, not smaller than a lead pencil. Free it of the most obtrusive prickles by clipping the points, not by scaling them from the bark, which may cause serious injury; tie in bundles, bury in soil in a shaded, well-drained situation or keep in moist sand, sawdust or moss in the icehouse until needed.

When ready for grafting the stocks should be topped two or three inches above the collar, all suckers or "eyes" cut out of stem on main roots, and a slanting cut made with a thin, sharp knife, just above collar, removing the top with a single stroke if possible. A scion not over four inches long, bearing at least two good buds, is selected, of such diameter if procurable, as exactly to match the stock, and faced with a clean cut made at same angle as the prepared stock. Stock and scion are then matched together, having the cambium or inner bark exactly meeting on one side at least, and firmly wrapped with strips of waxed cloth, string or raffia. The latter ties should be covered with one of the waxes, formulas of which are given below, and the free end of the scion should also be waxed to lessen evaporation. If the work is skillfully done, best unions are secured with the plain, slanting cut, but if stocks are considerably larger than the scions, ordinary splice unions in which tongues are cut, both on scion and stock, or even the cleft and wedge methods generally used in orchard grafting, may be utilized. The main thing is to get as close a fit of cambium surfaces over as large an area as possible in every instance.

The waxed finished grafts should be handled as little as need be to avoid displacement and firmly planted at the proper time, placing the union somewhat below the soil surface. If the stocks are already established in pots or boxes better success should be expected. When growth has well started, the bands should be cut to avoid strangulation, but extreme care should be used in handling for many weeks afterwards, as the scions are easily broken away. All suckers or buds starting below the union must be destroyed at once, or the scion will make poor progress. Plants in the open may be moved the following autumn, or at any time after midsummer, if in pots or boxes.—[Rural New Yorker.

Storage of Hubbard Squash.

THE following directions for handling and storing squash are by Prof. W. Stuart of the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station.

The conditions tending to minimize losses in storage are stated to be:

1. The squash should be well matured before harvest.
2. They should be cut or carefully broken from the vine, leaving the stem attached to the squash.
3. If possible they should be placed in small piles to ripen and harden up for two or three days before hauling from the field.
4. They should be hauled in a spring wagon, the box of which is lined with burlap or other material, to prevent bruising.
5. The storage-room should be dry and moderately warm at least for the first two weeks, to harden up the shells, after which a lower temperature, provided the room is dry, may be maintained.
6. Finally, squash from harvest to sale should be handled as one would handle eggs. Broken stems and bruised skin are sure to cause decay.

In general, Prof. Stuart concludes that "squashes properly grown and handled may be held in storage till midwinter or later with a reasonable assurance that the moisture and decay loss will be amply covered by the increased price received."

There is an additional advantage to be considered, viz., that if the squashes are stored a saving of time may be effected and the hauling to market done at a time when farm work is less urgent.—[Horticulturist.

Aggressive Plants.

It seems to me that we too often err on the side of making phenomena more simple than they really are. Plants are vastly more complex organisms than our formulated ideas recognize. Many of their phenomena completely baffled us. For example, I might mention what has been called aggressiveness in a plant, namely, its ability not only to occupy and maintain the soil but to spread and crowd out other plants. This is particularly evident in plants introduced from one country into another. Thus nearly all our weeds are of old world origin. The same is true of our permanent meadow and pasture plants, where ability to occupy and hold the ground against weeds is essential. In this respect our American grasses and clovers utterly fail before the foreign immigrant. Some other striking instances of the great aggressiveness of an immigrant may be cited. The introduced English violet is said to be one of the worst weeds in Mauritius; American cacti are becoming a pest in South Africa; the marvelous vigor and spread of the American water weed (Elodea) under European conditions is well known.

Several explanations of these and other phenomena have been advanced. The commonest one is that the plant is introduced but its fungus and insect enemies are not. Therefore the plant is released from all handicaps as it were and can exercise to the utmost its inherent energy. A second and related explanation is that every plant becomes held within limits by the competition of other plants in its native land and very often in the new environment the native plants do not have an equal restraining influence—because they have had to contend with a different set of competitors. A third idea is that an organism with the ability to spread at all becomes more energetic through the constant mixing of blood of the advancing population. All these ideas are interesting, but difficult if not impossible of experimental proof. The last suggestion receives some support from the fact that many weeds and other organisms run out after they have ceased to spread. The recent examples of the Russian thistle and the prickly lettuce are familiar cases. Such phenomena may be due wholly or in part to increase in enemies, but in many cases like the two cited there is not one iota of positive evidence. I think we ought to give such phenomena more consideration as they reveal traits in plants that transcend all our stereotyped and inadequate theories. The old gardener often treats his plants as if he regarded them as sentient beings. Perhaps we err in considering them too much as machines.—[C. V. Piper in Science.

Care of the Body—Suggestions for Preserving Health.

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D., OF THE TIMES STAFF.

PRACTICAL HYGIENE.

[The Times does not undertake to answer inquiries on hygienic subjects that are merely of personal interest, or to give advice in individual cases. Those desiring personal advice should write to the editor of the department for particulars. General inquiries on hygienic subjects of public interest will receive attention in these columns. No inquiries are answered by mail. It should be remembered that matter for the Magazine Section of The Times is in the hands of the printer ten days before the day of publication. Correspondents should send their full names and addresses, which will not be published, or given to others, without the consent of the writers. Addresses of correspondents are not preserved, and consequently cannot be furnished to inquirers.]

Matrimony and Motherhood.

IN a remarkable interview with Mrs. John A. Logan, published recently in the Sunday Times, in which that noble woman said some eminently sound things in regard to the follies and vices of her sex, she was reported as saying:

"As children are brought up, so goes the nation. That is woman's work, and the women of today are shirking it."

This is true of the small number of American women who are able to give their children proper attention. It is unjust to a great majority of women in this country, who find themselves utterly unable to cope with the heavy duties of household work, combined with the raising of a family.

Ex-President Roosevelt has said many wise things. Among those wise things, in the opinion of the editor of the Care of the Body, is not to be included in his constant reiteration of the duty of all women to raise large families. When you see a poor woman—or a woman whose husband is not so very poor—sweating over a cook stove to prepare the family dinner, while three or four or more young children are struggling and screaming in an adjoining room, you must perforce ask yourself how it is that apparently intelligent people continue to prate about "race suicide" without making discrimination as to cases. To beget children without being able to give them proper physical, mental and moral attention is worse than a folly—it is a crime. Of a large proportion of children it might be said, in the words of the old frontiersman: "When I was a kid, children was brung up. Now they ain't brung up no more. They's just drug up."

So long as our reformatories are crowded to overflowing, so long as thousands of pallid children have to work in ill-ventilated factories to help support the family, it is absurd to talk about "race suicide." Napoleon, to whom our own Roosevelt has sometimes been compared, was also a great believer in large families. He had almost depopulated France, and wanted more food for powder.

What we should aim at is not more children, but better children.

Gordon Hart writes as follows in her book, "Woman and the Race:"

"When we see every day around us women bearing children who have been conceived in revolt, disgust, or, at best, in a despairing apathy; when we hear every day the stories of women who are living with men whom they despise or at best merely tolerate, yet to whom they annually bear a child; when we take in our arms infants who have been the result of rape practised by a half-intoxicated man upon the wife whom he has sworn to honor, we are not surprised at the facts given us by statistics, do not wonder at the army of defectives, insane and criminals that perpetually threaten our life and peace."

At the close of the forty-second Congress, one of the most disorderly sessions that has ever been witnessed on the floors of the Capitol, a bill was rushed through when the greatest confusion prevailed, and the hour of adjournment was close at hand. It was a postal bill forbidding the mailing of information in regard to the prevention of conception. This bill might better have been entitled "An Act to Encourage the Practice of Abortion." In this opinion the editor of the Care of the Body does not stand alone. The same view has been expressed by a number of eminent pastors and physicians.

Let us have an end to this foolish, indiscriminate talk about "race suicide." Apply the criticism where it belongs—to those who are able to raise families of children that will be a credit to society.

"A Woman's Answer to Roosevelt—A Story on Race Suicide," is the title of a little book by Alice Freeman Lusk. It appeared originally in the Sunday Times magazine, and is published by the Commercial Printing House, No. 388 South Los Angeles street, Los Angeles. In her preface the author says:

"The women of America glory in their nation's leader. President Roosevelt is not only the pride of American manhood, but of American womanhood as well. Yet a man, great and good though he may be, rarely understands a woman's life and heart."

The book deals with the story of three college girls. In the opening chapter they are having a final meeting in one of their rooms before going out into the world. One of them is to be married in a week. They give their several views on matrimony. One expresses the belief that she would be "too gloriously happy—that home should be a little piece of heaven." One year after she found her husband a "selfish, egotistical lump of mediocrity." Twenty years later she is quoted as speaking to her husband thus:

"You sent our picture to Washington?" The tired eyes snapped. "Have you any respect for me? Am I not human? What is my life? God knows I love my children, but neither they nor I have had a chance. You are the only one of importance in this household. I am a slave, a drudge. You are selfish to the core. If it were not for the children, how glad, oh, how glad I should be to rest, to leave it all. Do you ever see me with a book or paper? No! I am resting when I am mending. Washing, ironing, sweeping, cleaning, cooking, sewing, are my round of recreation. You try it for a while, for one day; try it, and see then if you will send the family group to Washington. You might mail with it my picture as I was when I married you. Let him compare the two. You love me! Do you think I believe it? I have not believed it for long years. If you do, I can't love you. I despise you."

The last chapter is devoted to the story of her death.

The husband of another of the girls found an "affinity" while his wife was pregnant. How that started she thus explains:

"We were looking forward to baby coming, and I could not go with him as before, and though I longed for him, yet I felt I could not ask him to stay at home with me, so I urged him to go. He demurred at first, but at last gave in. Not often, but soon more frequently he left me, and toward the last was gone every night."

The third heroine of this story is happy in finding an ideal husband, who loves and lives with his family.

Any one who has passed middle life, and has kept his eyes open, will be forced, however unwillingly, to the conclusion that one out of three is an exceedingly high percentage for the ideal husband.

This is, in some respects, the most important problem that confronts the human race. At the basis of a large proportion of marital infelicity is marital intemperance. There is a widespread movement nowadays among thinking people for the emancipation of the married woman from sexual slavery. It is a movement that should, and must spread. It is a movement not only for the good of the woman, but for the good of the human race—of generations yet unborn.

This article may properly be closed with the following extract from Gordon Hart's book, above quoted:

"There is great opportunity for selfishness in the marriage relation; an opportunity but too often taken advantage of under cover of a presumably holy institution. At the bottom of the egotistical disregard of a wife's wishes in intimate sexual matters lies the old, uncivilized idea of the serfdom of women. As has been wisely said: 'To man the freedom of sex is granted; on woman the burden of sex is laid.' The attitude is unfair and illogical; unfair, because she is the chief sufferer, especially if, instead of the eager response that should meet the mate's advances, there is but a passive tolerance or a coerced compliance; illogical, because if the chief end and aim of the woman be the bearing of healthy children, that end is jeopardized and rendered problematical by the desecration of her desires and the perversion of her emotions."

Temperance Versus Prohibition.

NEXT to the great increase in the Socialist vote, one of the most striking features of the recent State elections was the falling off in the Prohibition vote. All over the country sections that a few years ago voted "dry" went back to the "wet" column.

This is not at all surprising. It is quite natural. It is the inevitable revulsion that follows such movements as a great temperance wave, or a great religious wave, or a great wave of any other kind that is not based on sober, solid sense.

Meantime, the consumption of alcoholic liquor of all kinds continues to increase much more rapidly than the increase of the population. The New York Times is tempted to inquire "what effect, if any, the widespread prohibition movement of recent years has had upon the actual drinking habits of the people," and concludes editorially that an increased per-capita consumption from 16.50 gallons in 1897 to 21.85 gallons in 1909, with an apparently rising scale to date "holds forth slight hope that prohibition has accomplished more than to stimulate the thirst of the new Prohibition States."

Some time ago Dr. Lyman Abbott, in an address in Houston Hall, Philadelphia, to a large audience of ministers and of students from the University of Pennsylvania, created a small sensation by saying: "I do not think Jesus would be a total abstainer if He were in America." He added: "I am sure He would not confound temperance with total abstinence. A man gorges himself with pie and coffee until his body and face bulge, and because he doesn't drink beer calls himself a temperance man. That is not temperance. The minister asks where to draw the line. I believe that Christ would teach there is no line. He would not say that cards are right, if they have historical names, and wrong if they have clubs and spades; that knocking a ball on a green lawn is all right when it's croquet, but knocking a ball on a green table evil because it's billiards."

In a recent sermon Bishop Gore of Birmingham, Eng., spoke with admiration of the saloons as he had found them in Spain, and said that in his opinion England could do no better than introduce the same kind of public taverns. In Barcelona he found mechanics, together with their wives and families, drinking the country wine, and in an atmosphere of cheerful good order. He visited these places many times on Sundays and week days, and said he had not seen or heard or looked on anything that was not entirely desirable.

A New York paper has been printing a series of articles written by Rev. Roland D. Sawyer, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Ware, Mass., on the question, "What move shall we make in the interests of true temperance?" He puts forth a suggestion made sev-

OXYPATHY

Again Proves Victorious

OXYPATHY is the very latest development of all th Most Advanced Ideas of the twentieth century in relati to the restoration and maintenance of Health.

As a curative system, the efficacy of OXYPATHY demonstrated that it transcends all others. The OXYGEN-ATOR is the reliable, safe and sane means for the relief human misery and sickness and restoration of health.

Rheumatism, Kidney and Prostatic Trouble

Silverstreet, S. C., Nov. 1, 1910.

The Oxyge[illegible] Co.,
Gentlemen

I am a Civil War Veteran, 74 years of age, and for ma years have been afflicted with complications of Sciatica, Kidn and Prostatic troubles. Last March my physicians had al given me up, they had condemned me to surgical operations the hospital, but thanks to your wonderful OXYGENATOR I have been saved from all this torture.

When I commenced the Oxygenator treatment I could hardl walk, was extremely nervous, unable to sleep, and scarcely ab to eat. Within a few days my improvement was so great could not help but clap my hands for joy, my return to healt attracted attention for miles around, now after eig months I am more enthusiastic over the Oxygenator than was at first, for I must say it is a wonderful curative age

I have had an attack of MALARIAL Fever, since I have be come an OXYPATHIST, and not having my OXYGENATOR, relatives whom I was visiting, called in a doctor, who prescrib drugs, that corrected the fever, only to bring back my old tro bles. AND IT TOOK THE OXYGENATOR TO PUT ME RIGH AGAIN. I have the kindest feelings for the doctors personall who treated me, but professionally, their power for allevia suffering humanity is extremely limited.

I have given to each of my daughters an Oxygenator and believe if all sufferers would only investigate the merits of th Oxygenator it would finally become the doctor for every family the land.

Yours Truly,
G. W. COLEMAN.

The OXYGENATOR has won and is winning fame over the civilized world, because IT HAS MADE GOOD and for the simple reason that it has cured disease saved human life AFTER MEDICAL TREATMENT UTTERLY FAILED.

The OXYGENATOR has won the unstinted praise those who have used it and WHO KNOW WHEREO THEY SPEAK.

The OXYGENATOR cures the most fatal acute di eases. Its prompt mastery of these affections makes it th most valuable of all agents for the combating of epidemi disease.

It is their supreme master. By means of OXYPATHY, not only would thousands of lives be saved, but thousan of dollars of losses.

The OXYGENATOR cures chronic disease in all its vari forms. It is for self-treatment in the home and for th entire family. Anyone, even a child, may acquire the si ple knowledge of its application and proper use.

In the OXYGENATOR you get your money's worth. one can estimate the value of PERFECT HEALTH those who have lost, then recovered it. We have tes monials by the hundreds, saying: "I would not part wi my OXYGENATOR for ANY MONEY."

Call and let us show our local testimonials, or let us re fer you to those you can see and speak to who can co vince you that they have themselves proved the truth what we state in this column from week to week, and th what we claim for the OXYGENATOR is true.

WHY will you continue to suffer when the OXYGEN ATOR is sold upon such easy terms that no one need re main in ill health.

eral times in these columns, namely, that a separate license should be granted for the sale of light wine and pure beer. This, the clergyman declares, would be a "true temperance measure."

The following extract is from an editorial in the National Prohibitionist:

"We have had altogether too much talk about the wide extent of prohibition and about the millions of people who live under prohibition in the United States, and a good deal of the drivel that has been written upon that subject has appeared in the guise of Prohibition party literature. There is not a foot of real Prohibition territory in the United States. There is not a citizen of the United States who lives under real prohibition."

A writer in the Twentieth Century Magazine pertinently remarks:

"So with the so-called 'temperance' question. It is almost impossible to have any real discussion, any serious consideration of this matter. Its introduction is often made the occasion for an exhibition of the grossest intemperance and lawlessness of speech. 'He wants his beer,' 'He was probably drunk when he wrote the article,' are some of the expressions used.

"Few seem able to comprehend the distinction between license, prohibition, temperance and total abstinence. One minister calls liquor saloons lions' dens, and the barkeepers, lions; and another joins a barkeepers' union and becomes their trusted adviser in their moral problems. 'Temperance' people tempt others to sell liquor illegally and then arrest them for violating the law."

To this it may be added that prohibition (which does not prohibit) breeds hypocrisy, malice, contempt of the law, and encourages the consumption of fiery spirits, in place of less harmful beer and light wines.

What we should aim at is temperance, not only in drinking, but in eating. Prohibition is not temperance. It is the other extreme from intemperance.

Dry Weather.

DURING the closing month of the year the weather in Southern California was ideal. A steel blue sky, with bright sunshine, and crisp, electrical air, full of ozone, made life worth living. The "bird men" and tenderfeet have been "dee-lighted."

There has been only one cloud on the horizon—or rather a lack of clouds. One class of citizens has been looking frowningly at the cloudless sky. The ranchers of Southern California have not been in the condition of mind usually described by the country journalist as "jubilant." That is to say, those of the tillers of the soil in this section who are so foolish as to depend upon the uncertain rains from heaven, ignoring the fact that farming without irrigation in Southern California is a gamble. Perhaps, in time, the chances against such gambles may be lessened by the introduction of the new "dry-farming" methods.

So far this season the rainfall has been exceptionally light. These lines are written on Thursday, December 29. Up to this date the total rainfall for the season—that is, from July 1—has amounted only to a little over an inch—1.9 to be exact. As there is no indication of any more rain during the next forty-eight hours, this may be reckoned as the rainfall for the first half of the season. Only on two occasions during the past thirty-three years has the rainfall for the first six months of the season been as small or smaller than this year. These years were as follows:

1898-1899: Rainfall July to December, .30 inches. Total for season, 5.59.

1903-1904: Rainfall July to December, .43 inches. Total for season, 8.72.

It will be noted that in both of these seasons the total rainfall for the season was much below the average—from one-third to one-half of the average. The records of the local Weather Bureau extend over thirty-three years. The average rainfall for the season is now 15.67, having declined somewhat since twenty-five years ago, when it was about 17 inches.

The season of 1878-1879 was a remarkable one. Up to December 28 the total rainfall for the first half of the season had been only .54 of an inch. The rain that fell during the last three days of December brought the total up to 4.84 inches. The total rainfall for the season 1878-1879 amounted to 16.35 inches, or just about the average, so that we may still hope.

Thirty years ago, before irrigation had been generally introduced in Southern California, a dry season meant ruin to a majority of the ranchers and sheepmen, who depended on the natural rainfall. Today these interests represent but a small percentage of the industries of Southern California. Yet, by force of habit, the old settlers begin to shake their heads and talk ominously when the rainfall toward the middle of the season has been light. The effects of a dry season would scarcely be noted nowadays in Southern California, although, of course, several successive dry seasons would have the effect of lessening the underground supply, from which most of our irrigators draw their water.

Apart from the material point of view, a good drenching would be beneficial just now, in laying dust and cleansing the atmosphere, while it would also furnish much relief from the monotonous brown which now covers hills that by this time of year should, in the natural course of events, be tinted a brilliant green.

As copy for the Care of the Body goes to press ten days before the date of publication, it is quite possible that by the time these lines are read there may have been a great scramble for umbrellas hereabouts. Again quoting our friend the country journalist: "So mote it be."

Naturopathy in Southern California.

"NATUROPATHY," or the Nature Cure, is beginning to make progress in this section. In Germany it has been popular for over half a century. It is no new thing, for did not Hippocrates, the "Father of Medicine," whom the "regulars" revere, declare, over 2000 years ago: "Nature cures, not the physician," an important fact that few of his disciples have learned after the lapse of twenty centuries.

California has distinguished itself by being the first State in the Union to legalize the practice of naturopathy, which was done by the Legislature two years ago, after a campaign lasting several years, the main brunt of which was borne by Dr. Carl Schultz of Los Angeles, and his plucky wife. The editor of the Care of the Body holds a license and diploma under this law.

Naturopathy embraces all natural methods of aiding nature to eliminate poisonous matter from the system, which is what we call disease. It, therefore, includes among other things, diet, hydropathy, osteopathy, exercise, breathing, rest, and mental suggestion. No drugs whatever are used.

For the purpose of educating the public in regard to the natural method of healing, the Association of Naturopaths of California will give a series of free public lectures in Symphony Hall, No. 232 South Hill street, Los Angeles, beginning on January 11, and continuing every first and third Wednesday during February, March, April, and May, possibly continuing throughout the summer months. Dr. Carl Schultz, president of the association, will address the first meeting, giving an outline of the purposes of the lectures. Written questions placed in the box will be answered by members of the association. Lectures will begin at 8 o'clock sharp.

On the evening of Tuesday, December 27, Dr. Carl Schultz invited a few of his intimate friends to dinner at his residence, in honor of his sixtieth birthday. The evening was enlivened with songs of the Fatherland and of the Alps, rendered by a maennerchoir, also instrumental music. Dr. Schultz is one of those who

LITTLE SERMONS ON HEALTH.

Weekly Articles Containing Suggestions for Health Restoration.

By DR. L. L. DENNY.

The well must know how to keep well. The sick must know how to get well.

There is but one way to keep well—we must live right. To get well is another problem. Conformity with Nature's laws of health is at all times essential. However, in so many cases sickness and disease has progressed so far that the powers within cannot, even thru intelligent co-operation, rectify the abnormality. In such cases it is vitally necessary that Nature be assisted in rectifying the abnormal condition.

There are many ways of assisting nature. There is good in all of them—more in some than in others.

The object of this article is to tell you of the good in one particular method.

Tersely told, we believe nature, not man, does the curing. Therefore we lend rational assistance to nature.

This is done by carefully clearing the channels thru which the natural powers of the body operate.

The power of nature is the power within the nerves. It is this power which supplies life to the organs, and enables us to see, hear, taste, etc.

This power is called nerve impulse. It reaches all the tissues of the body thru a multitude of nerve channels.

There are millions of these nerves. Excepting the cranial, all of them center in the spine. At this point they join with and form the spinal cord, and then pass to the brain.

Emanating from the brain there is an inexhaustible supply nerve impulse always ready for use. If the nerve channels thru which it flows are free and unobstructed, this power will reach the organs, and the body will be in health.

On the other hand, when any organ or tissue of the body is diseased, the nerve impulse is not reaching it.

There is but one direct method of procedure in such cases. Free the obstructed nerve, and nature can then supply the organ with normal impulse, and health is the result.

Obstruction of the nerve impulse is the cause of disease. As proof of this, the condition of the nerves indicates the condition of the organs—so much so that in making an examination there is no necessity of asking questions or considering any phase of the body other than ascertaining the condition of the cerebro-spinal nerves.

For illustration, if there is pressure upon the sciatic nerve which supplies motion and sensation to the limbs, there is always some form of limb trouble present. If the pressure is light, it may only cause cold feet and limbs. When heavier, it interferes with the motion, or if the pressure is upon the sensory filaments, it will cause pain called sciatica.

If the nerves controlling the bladder are found to be irritated and impinged, it is a certainty that some form of disease is present. If the pressure is light, it may cause the patient the annoyance of frequent urination. When the pressure becomes heavier, it may cause inflammation, sediment or retention of the urine.

Bladder trouble responds quickly and surely to the scientific application of the principles above outlined.

All is Matter.

IN the article on "Immortality," published in the Care of the Body on Christmas Day, brief reference was made to a book by William Colby Cooper, M. D., of Cleves, O., an aged physician with original ideas. A book by Dr. Cooper on hygiene, entitled "Preventive Medicine," was reviewed here several years ago. He aims to give, in this later book, the principal psychological arguments for and against immortality. He says that although he does not know immortality to be a fact, he feels that he knows a great many nearly incontestable reasons why it should be a fact.

In direct opposition to those who declare that there is no such thing as matter, Dr. Cooper says:

"We would better realize, right in the start, that we cannot get without the domain of matter. So far as we can possibly know, there is nothing but matter. Not—matter, being unthinkable, is without the range of human thought and experience, and therefore—with reference to us—does not exist. There is only matter."

So here you have entirely contradictory views, by two writers on immortality. Even the mind, Dr. Cooper declares, is material. He says:

"The bugaboo aspect of materialism vanishes in the realization that mind itself is material. Otherwise, it would not be relatable to anything more gross than itself. That the mind is material, is susceptible of ready demonstration. Because it exists, it occupies space; it acts, and reacts; it varies in quantity and quality. All of these are physical properties. Mind does things; i. e., it acts. Emotion, or feeling—a mental phase—not only acts, but is susceptible of increase or diminution. You love Mary—that is action. You love Mary more than you love Ann; so then, love has mathematical relations. The terms 'more' or 'less' are not possibly applicable to abstraction. It follows that the very highest spiritual experience is material, for it is an expression of consciousness; e. e. mentality. The immaterial is such, not because it is absolutely intangible, but because its physical properties are not directly evident to our senses."

As Dr. Cooper says, we must consider that matter is as sacred, as mysterious and as much of God (there being a God) as mind is.

Here is a clever illustration of our inability to comprehend the great facts of the universe:

"Our relation to the ultra supra-physical may be likened to that of the water grub to the atmosphere. To him, the little pond he is in is the universe, and from all the material signs available to him it is unthinkable that he will emerge from his humble estate, and on glittering wings, skim the invisible ether of an upper world. No dragon fly ever returned to explain the matter to him. Hs has been standing upon a bare assertion—just what the above argument is. His mysterious disappearance from his nether world is darkly interpreted by the remaining grubs as his extinction, just as many of us construe a mergence into that master opprobrium (as the resenting soul would have it) death."

In the following sentences, Dr. Colby refers to an experience that has undoubtedly occurred to many. It certainly has occurred, more than once, to the editor of the Care of the Body:

"Perhaps there are few people who, at some period in their lives, have not had a vague and hazy feeling of having existed in some other world. This feeling, beyond doubt, I should think, has always resulted from re-experiencing a past dream experience. You have existed in another world—the dream world. The Theosophists have it that these misty semi-recollections depend upon the fact of an actual pre-existence. There is no proof of this—it is mere day dreamery."

It should be observed that Dr. Hudson and others would probably explain this curious experience on the ground that one of the two brains which we are supposed to possess acts a little in advance of the other. Certainly, in view of the remarkable experiences that one may undergo in a sleep of a few seconds, it would be rash to regard such experiences as this as a proof of a previous stage of existence. Here is another extract:

"Every individual is the product of a varied draft upon original resource. A time must come when the source (not being infinite) will be exhausted. What then? The boundless, eternal billow of potentiality goes on forever. It is everlastingly the same. Exactly what it has produced, it must produce again. You, dear reader, are an individual. You will be reproduced some time. What if you do not come into existence again for ten billions of years? That period will be no more to you than would be ten seconds. You go to sleep in death, and—so far as you are conscious—immediately awaken into new being."

In an addendum to the book, Dr. Cooper touches upon what he calls a seventh sense. The sixth sense he describes as that muscular quality through which we apprehend the fact of gravity. The seventh sense he describes as "that physico-spiritual endowment through which we feel the necessity and certainty of continued existence." This, the author declares, is the connecting link between temporal and eternal life.

There are other good and interesting things in this little book, which should be read by all who are interested in this subject—and what intelligent person is not interested in the subject? It is published by the author.

"Wild Oats."

IT is encouraging to note that an increasing amount of serious attention is being paid to the imparting of plain information regarding sexual matters, ignorance in regard to which is the cause of untold misery, a misery that the innocent must share with the guilty.

Hitherto it has been too much the custom to regard any reference to this topic—the most vital topic in connection with the Care of the Body—as being improper, outside of medical publications. On the contrary, it would be a boon to humanity—although it might decrease the business of some quack doctors—if information on this subject should be made compulsory in all our educational institutions.

"Wild Oats" is the title of a book of 260 pages by James Oppenheim. It contains the following foreword by Edward Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, a publication that has of late been doing excellent work along similar lines:

"This story by Mr. Oppenheim comes, perhaps, at the psychological moment to tell—let me hope to thousands—in the form of fiction what we must very soon face as an actual living question to be squarely met and dealt with. For the old saying that 'the truth is stranger than fiction' is peculiarly true of this story. The fearful truth that lies back of this narrative cannot much longer remain in the background of the public conscience. We are slowly but surely awakening, in part, to a realizing sense that somewhere in the social body there is a festering sore that needs the surgery and cleansing process of the light of public discussion and extermination at the hands of decent people. It is not meeting the question to contend that it is not a 'nice subject' or a 'polite topic.' Neither did the ravages of tuberculosis make pleasant reading. And the evil of 'The Great White Plague' is comparatively as naught with the greater and more insidious evil that is being wrought by 'The Great Black Plague,' with its fearful results on innocent children. Mr. Oppenheim, with due reserve, gives a glimpse, and it is but a glimpse, of the burden we are laying upon the next generation by blinding not alone our own eyes to the death-dealing evil that lies at our very door, but the actual and pitiable blinding of the unborn and the newly-born.

Care of the Body.

"It may be that the work of arousing the public conscience on the great evils that threaten the very foundations of our social structure, is in the hands of the fictionist. This has unquestionably been true in the past. If it be true of the present evil, may this story speak its great and vibrant message in clarion tones."

The story is a simple one of a young man who, after having as the saying is, "sowed his wild oats," becomes enamored of a beautiful, pure-minded girl, and is engaged to be married to her. At the last moment he calls upon his old family doctor, who knows them both, and asks for a physical examination. The doctor tells him that it would be criminal for him to marry for some months, or perhaps a year—that he has not been cured, as he supposed. The doctor implores him not to jeopardize the health of his future wife and possible children by marrying in his present condition. At first the young man is entirely unwilling to delay the wedding, preparations for which had already been made, but finally agrees to think it over. He meets his inamorata with the intention of telling her the truth, but cannot bring himself to do so. Then passion overcomes him and—they are married.

The result is a child, born blind, and an invalid wife. In the course of conversation with the doctor, the latter threatened to have his daughter speak to the young man's affianced, in case he persisted in his intention of marrying her. On that the young man said: "I am your patient—you are sworn as a doctor not to tell your patient's secret—you are sworn to it. I know what I know." To which the doctor replied: "There are times for breaking even oaths."

This brings up a subject to which reference has heretofore been made in these columns, namely, that altogether despicable and damnable feature of medical "ethics" which forbids a family physician to enlighten the parents of a girl who is about to be married to another of the physician's patients, whom he knows to be suffering from a communicable venereal disease. In one State at least there is at present movement to compel medical men to report all cases of venereal disease. This is crtainly of vastly more importance than the reporting of scarlet fever and diphtheria and smallpox, because venereal diseases are communicable by actual contact, while the others are not.

Doubtful Dates.

IN the article on immortality, published in the Care of the Body on Christmas Day, the editor said:

"It is fitting that on this Resurrection Day, when a third of the human race celebrate the ascension from the grave of the Founder of the Christian religion, we should for a moment turn aside from the consideration of the care of the body to glance at the probable fate of the soul or spirit which this body is supposed to clothe, after the change that we call death."

The intelligent reader of course perceived that this should have read "Natal Day" and "birth," instead of "Resurrection Day" and "ascension." The editor of the department is not going to lay this on the long-suffering printer. It was his own unfortunate slip. It is said that even the great Homer sometimes nodded, and the editor of the department does not regard himself as being in the same class with Homer.

There has been much confusion and difference of opinion among scholars in regard to the dates of events observed by the Christian churches. In the article on "Yuletide," published in the Care of the Body of December 18, the editor wrote:

"There is some doubt about the real date of the Nativity. Palestine has a climate like that of Southern California, and December is the height of the rainy season in Judea, so that neither flocks nor shepherds were likely to have been at night in the fields of Bethlehem."

For more than three centuries after the birth of Christ there was confusion in the day set aside for the celebration of the event. Some Christians observed January 1, others January 3, while a large percentage adopted March 29, the period of the Jewish passover. Still others elected to solemnize September 29, the date of the Feast of the Tabernacle. January 6 and December 25 were the two favorite dates, however, until the time of Pope Julius I, who, at the earnest request of St. Cyril of Jerusalem, had inquiries made throughout Palestine to determine the most authentic date. He decided in favor of December 25.

An Outgiving of Optimism.

HERE is a booklet by a Los Angeles writer—"Life's New Psalm," by Henry Christeen Warnack. (Roger Bros., publishers, New York.)

Mr. Warnack evidently belongs more or less to the grossly misnamed "New Thought" school. This booklet contains forty stanzas in blank verse, something after the Psalms of David, or perhaps more like the Song of Solomon.

The author has a command of chaste English. He is evidently a Thinker who loves his fellow-man and respects all things, animate and inanimate. Here are a couple of quotations:

"Once for all, I know that for every great question arising within me, I, myself, contain the great answer.

"I shall not find the last comforting assurance in any book, nor in the clouds above my head, nor in the grass beneath my feet; I shall find it only in the unfathomed depths of my own waiting heart." . . .

"With the wonder of Being vouchsafed me, I accept the Forever on trust.

"Now that I am, there is no wonder that I should continue to be; only the genesis of life is wonderful; continuity is as the return of the seasons." . . .

"I am not troubled about what none can answer me.

"He who has not made a grain of sand, nor a blade of grass, and who cannot tell from where "I came, shall not question whither I go, nor whence my abiding hope.

"He cannot deny that I am, and he shall not question that I will always be."

These optimistic affirmations of things that sometimes are and sometimes are not may be helpful in the case of those who are not afflicted with a keen sense of the ridiculous, but they and all others who wish to make the most of the only life of which we are sure will have to see that they live right—especially that they eat right—or they will surely fail. As a man eateth so is he.

Robert Ingersoll on the Hereafter.

W. F. MURRAY writes to say that the two poems published at the head of the article on immortality, in the Care of the Body of December 25, and credited as "Unidentified," are from a poem entitled "The Declaration of the Free," by Robert Ingersoll.

Kryptok Lenses

Many people object to the use of spectacles when they really need them because it makes them look old. How much more is this the case when one is compelled to use different glasses for distance and near vision or when using the cemented wafers on the distance glasses so unsightly. In a short time the cement becomes cloudy and often drops off. All these defects of construction have been swept away, by substituting a perfect, beautiful, Kryptok lense of artistic workmenship, youth-renewing qualities, allowing the eyes a great range of vision, far and near all in one solid lense, proving a constant delight.

To insure a perfect fit I give from 2 to 3 examinations by the best methods with 45 years of experience. Dr. A. Polasky, Oculist and Optician, 539½ S. Broadway. Phone Main 6011.

THE HOUSEHOLD—THE F

SUNDAY MORNING, JANUARY 8, 1911.

THE WIDOW WISE

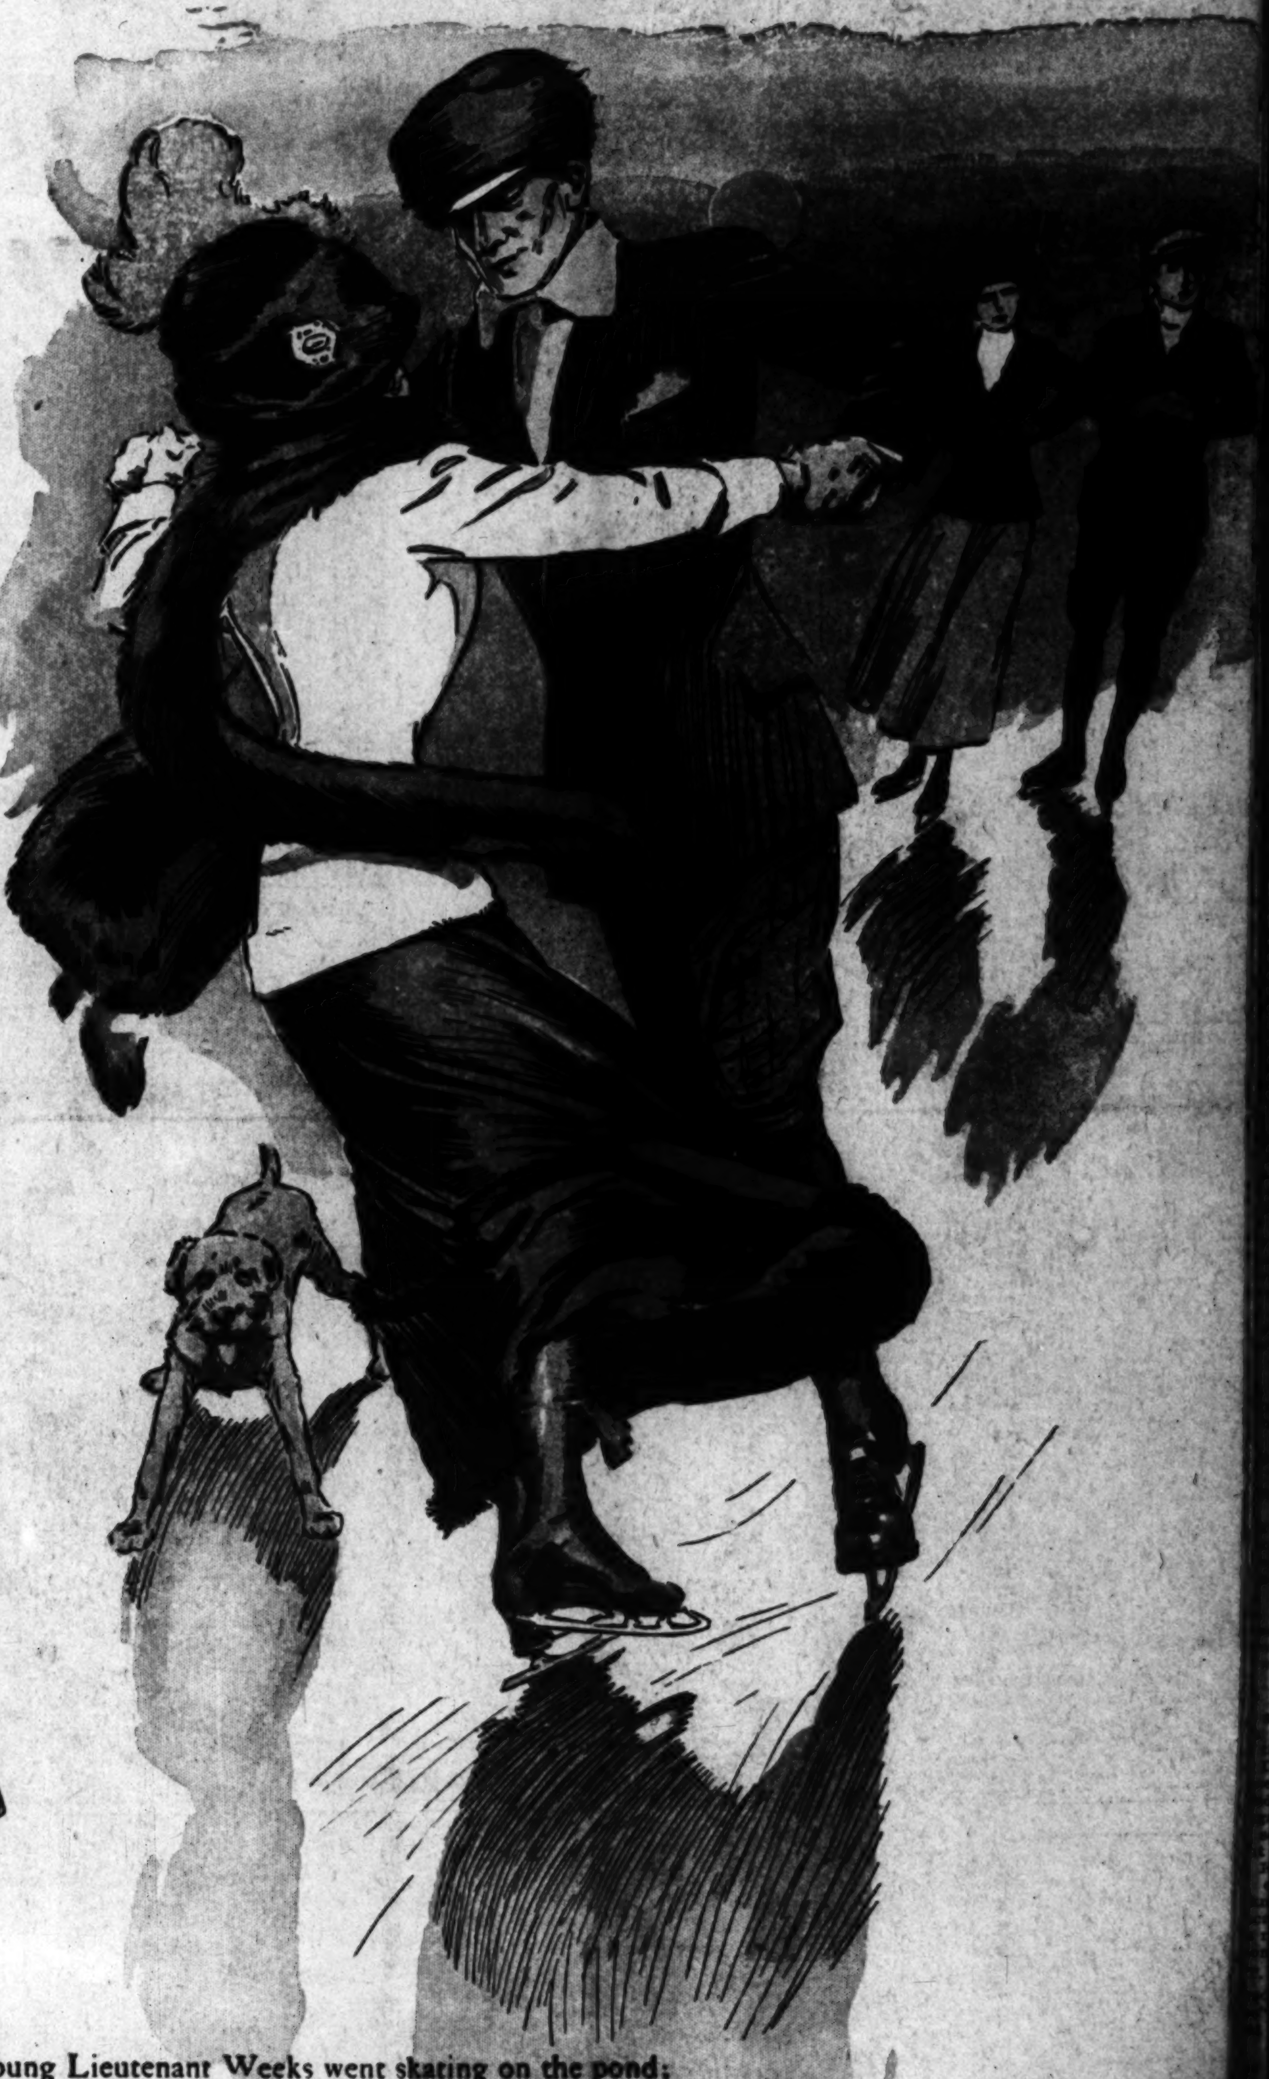
Verses by Paul West ▾ Drawings by W. H. Loomis

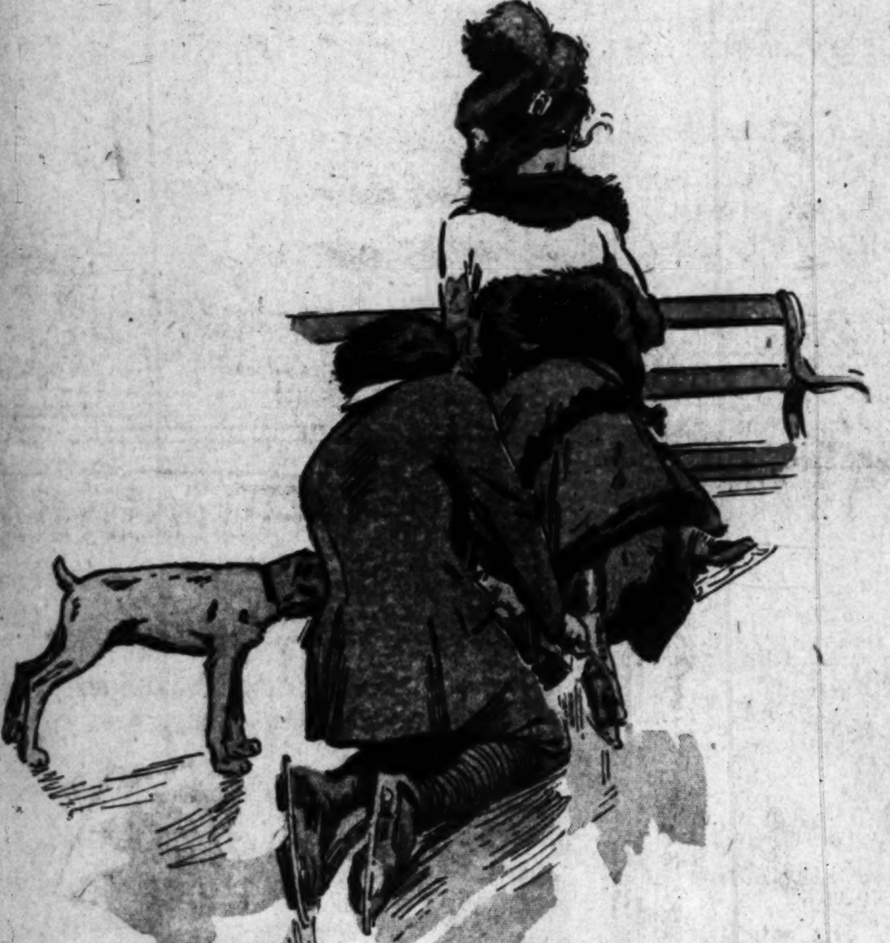
1.—The Skating Club turned out in force one January day
To hold a winter carnival. It made a picture gay—
A skimming, gliding, flitting throng, red cheeks and flashing eyes—
And fairest of the skaters was the radiant Widow Wise.

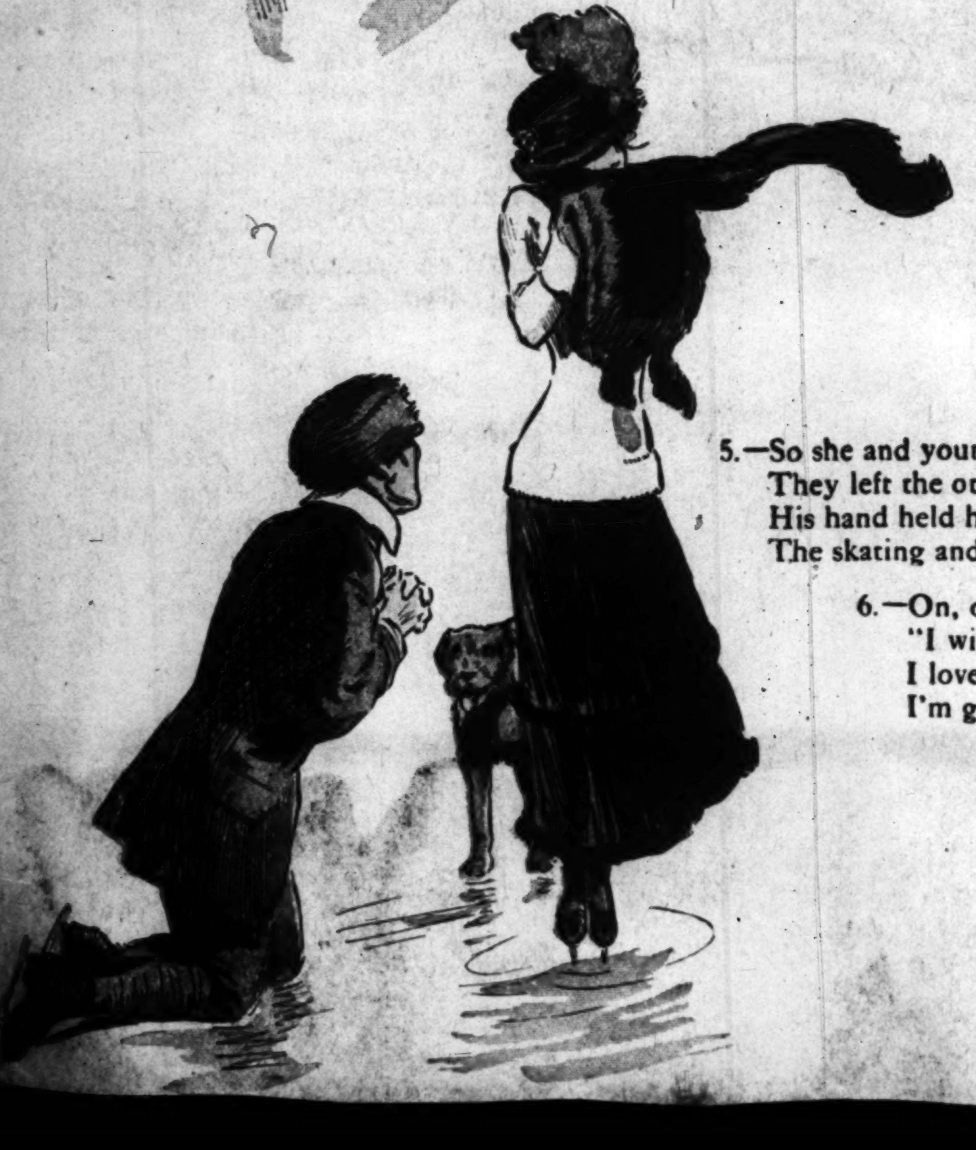
2.—More than the glow of exercise had tinged her crimson cheeks,
For at the Skating Club house she had met Lieutenant Weeks,
The famous Arctic trav'ler, whose adventures at the Pole
Would stir the dullest intellect and move the mildest soul

3.—Society had welcomed him, but from the moment when
He met the charming Widow he was like the rest of men.
Unversed in love and courtship, yet he felt his beating heart
Responding to the piercing of young Cupid's sharpened dart.

4.—He asked if he might skate with her, and she, her heart awhir,
Just handed him her little skates, which he put on for her.
His fingers trembled at the task; she caught his loving glance,
And thought, "Ah, he'll propose to me if he has half a chance!'







5.—So she and young Lieutenant Weeks went skating on the pond;
They left the other skaters and they skated far beyond.
His hand held hers in warming clasp, and, though the day was chill,
The skating and this love-clasp made her inmost being thrill.

6.—On, on they sped, and by and by her heart began to doubt
"I wish," thought she, "his song of love he'd hurry and pour out.
I love this skating rhapsody, but if the truth be told
I'm getting rather weary and my feet are growing cold."

7—And still her Arctic hero led her skimming o'er the pond,
And as the Widow grew more cold his ardor grew more fond,
Until, just as the twilight fell, upon the ice he knelt
And started in to tell his love, her little heart to melt.

8.—Too late! By now her heart was cold, as though on ice 'twere laid.
She shivered like a jelly mould. "I'm f-f-froze!" she said
"My love will not stand freezing; when it's chilled it fades and dies, YOU'D BETTER WED AN ESKIMO!" exclaimed the Widow W

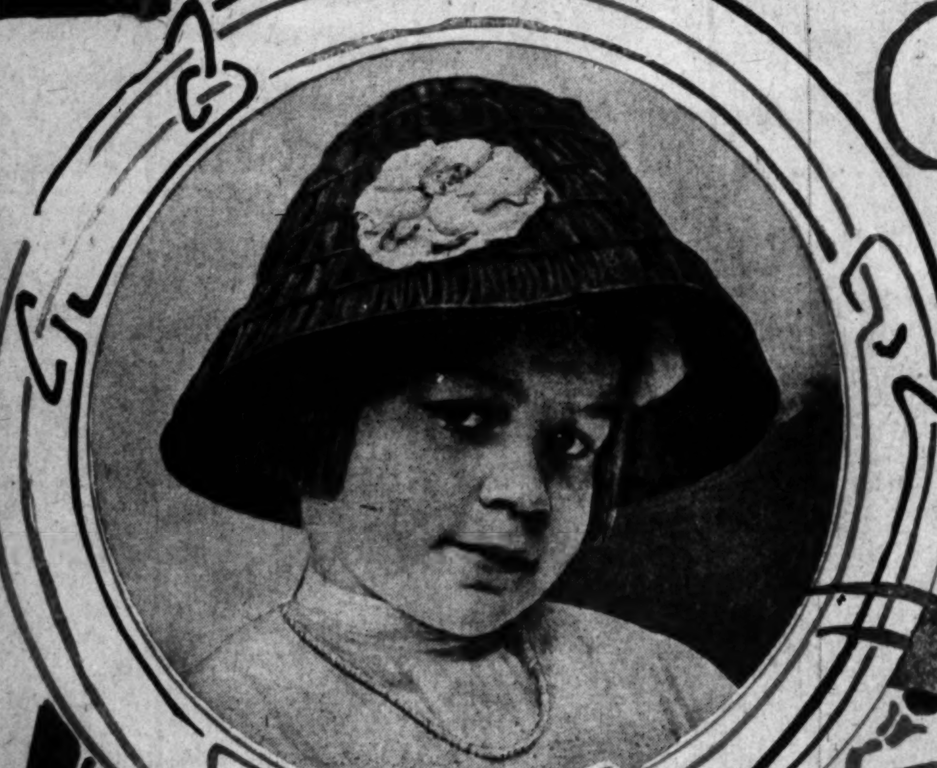
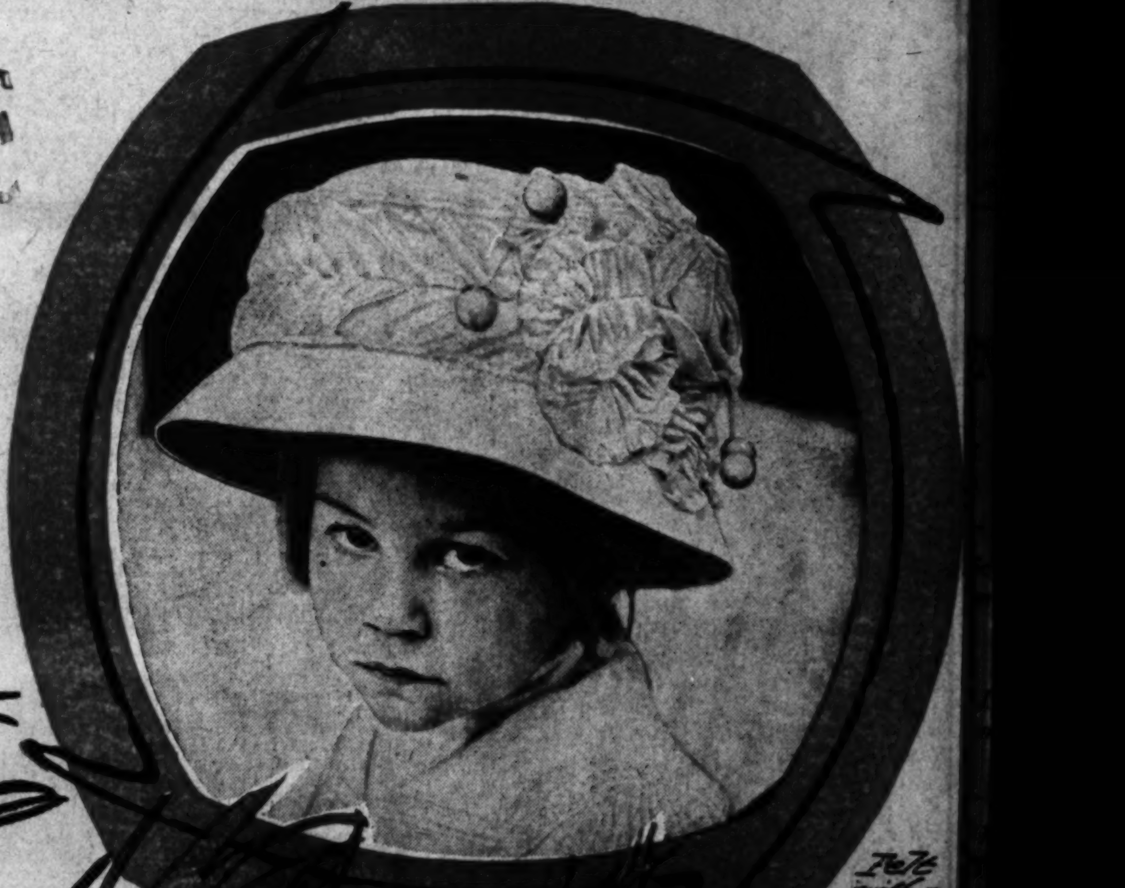
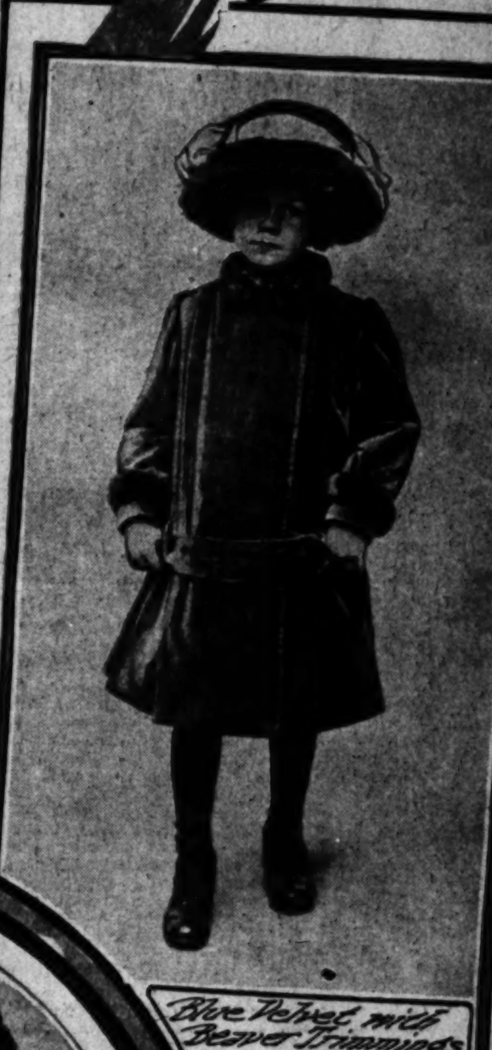
WHEN YOUR LITTLE GIRL GOES OUT



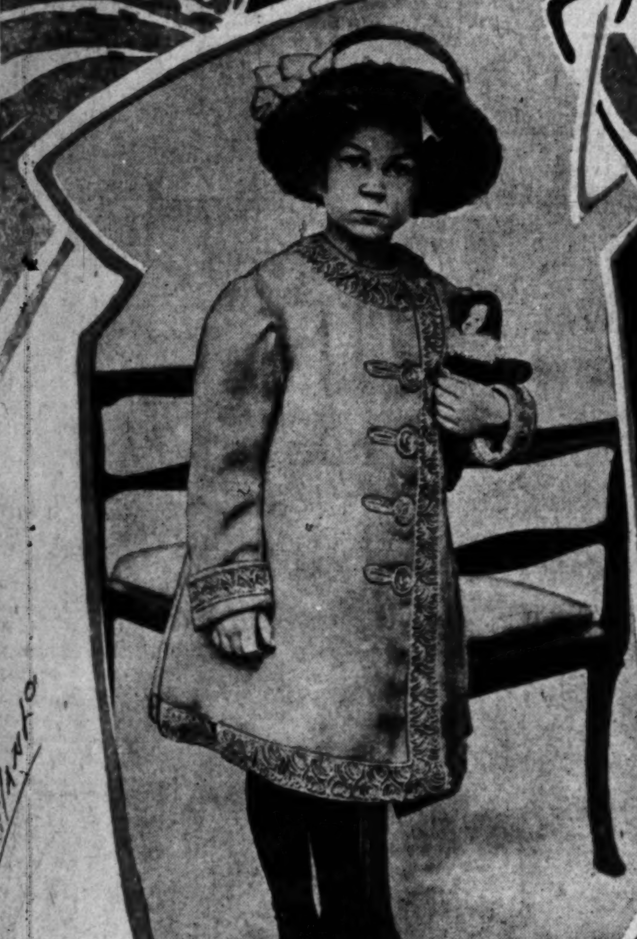
The Cloche Shape in Silk.



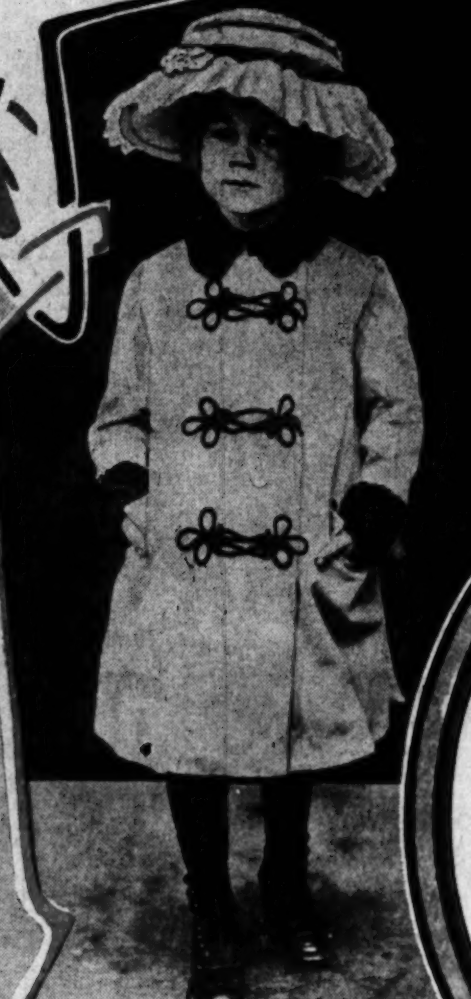
Felt with a Large Silk Flower



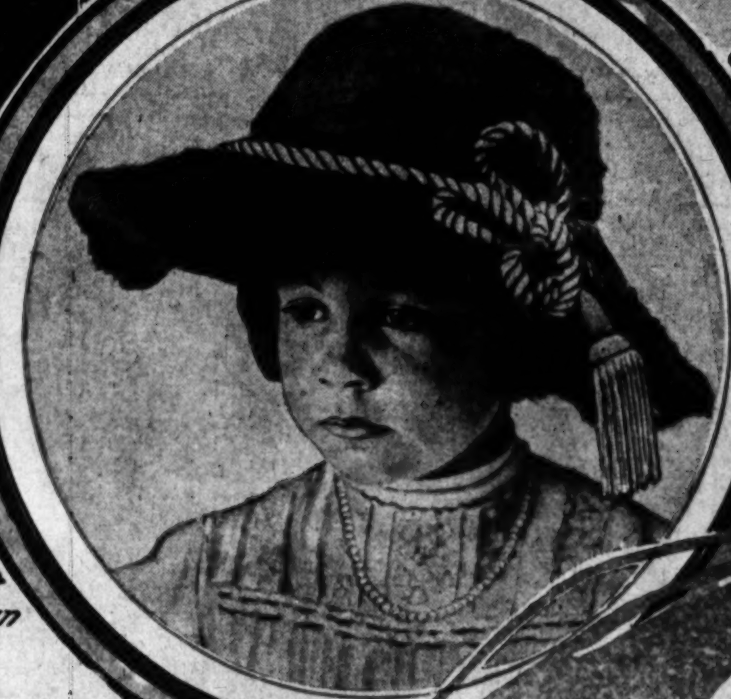
Blue Velvet with Beaver Trimmings.



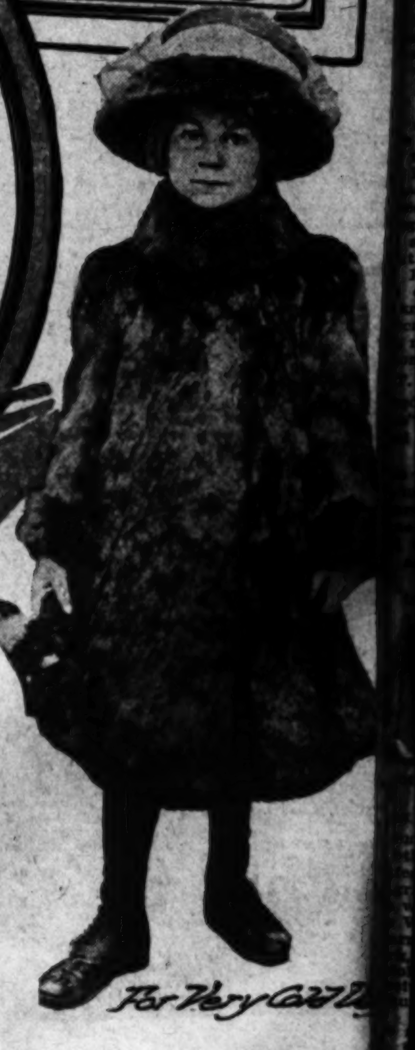
A Rough Serge, Braided.



Buff Cloth and Astrakhan



Beaver and a Silver Cord.



For Very Cold D

JUST which coat and hat are you going to place on your little girl this season when she goes out? Are you puzzled? Well, here are suggestions for street wear that will take her out to play, or to grandma's on very special days, or through the varying hours and temperatures of the coming season.

Do not ignore the fact that simplicity is the guiding star of the well-dressed child. Frills and furbelows that submerge the sweetness of a child beneath a foolish following of a fashion book for older ones should be eschewed. Let your little girl be a little girl pure and simple.

There's a blue velvet coat trimmed with beaver that any mother can make. The front and back have a panel effect, with side pleats. Sleeves are comfortably full, and the collar and cuff edgings of beaver hint of a use for mother's set of fur. A belt straps in the lower part.

A coarse diagonal serge of grayish blue is cut quite simply. The rounded, collarless top swings over to one side and the coat fastens under a straight edge. Soutache braid in self-tones is used to outline collar, front and bottom of the coat, and the plain sleeves have turned-back cuffs treated to the same ornamentation.

For high days and holidays there is shown a buff broadcloth trimmed with bands of astrakhan and black frogs. Notice the different type of hat worn with this expensive coat. It is the flat mushroom shape of felt, a crown of satin and fur and a full brim of white lace.

On very cold days let your little girl wear a fur coat. It can be squirrel, dyed brown or in a dark shade of the natural gray; it can be caracul or ponyskin; but it should be comfortably large and plain in line. Tortoise-shell buttons are used on most fur coats. A closely fitted beaver or fur hat is appropriate.

But how about the newest hats, you ask?

Here are three distinct types shown in felt, silk and beaver. Each is good style, easily copied and ready to meet the demands of different childish faces.

The blue felt is a medium-sized mushroom shape with a high crown. A band of blue taffeta is shirred over wires and outlines the crown. At one side a huge flower form of a central rose and shirred petals is placed. In the construction of the petals wire is bent in an elliptical line and the silk is shirred over it.

The cloche shape is here, straight from Paris. It is like a bell without a handle, and in the model shown is simplicity in a very attractive form. Over a wire frame black taffeta is shirred on wire at distances of two inches. At one side a cabochon of silver braid is placed. That is all. Easily copied, isn't it?

Beaver with a flexible, wide brim is trimmed simply with a silver cord. At one side four loops are made and a glistening tassel drops over the edge. The charm of this type is undeniable; it suits the curly head or the straight-bobbed hair and forms an inexpensive frame for a pretty little face.

Coats and hats are here for your favor. These models are the accepted fashions of the most successful makers of children's clothes. From this group you can surely fit your little daughter for out of doors.

In each kitchen the range or cookstove consisted of a construction more or less like a flat-topped tombstone of what some one has called "the picnic-table variety," with round holes in it for burning charcoal. In one we had an oven, and this was considered a great luxury. In the other apartments we either roasted in a pot set on top of the charcoal, or sent our roasts out to the nearest bakery, in the local fashion.

The fuel was invariably charcoal, kindled with great pains and vigorous use of a pasteboard or straw fan. Said fan is as much a part of the equipment of an Italian kitchen as a stovelifter is on an American range. Without constant fanning the charcoal would not ignite properly, and strenuous action is resorted to by Italian cooks when the queen of the American kitchen would pour on kerosene or cram in kindling to hurry the low fire to more force.

The ordinary cook to whom we housekeepers in this country are accustomed would take boundless credit to herself if she managed to boil a potato and cook a bit of bacon in these circumstances, but the chef of my Florentine culinary department produced delicious and savory dishes with the rude means at her command, and seemed to take for granted all the hindrances we would consider intolerable. To the latest day of my Italian domestic experience I never became entirely accustomed to the appetizing courses my cook served to me from such unpropitious surroundings.

There is a common impression that Italian cookery must all swim in oil and reek of garlic. Often I have wondered how that impression originated. Both oil and garlic were used in cooking, but the suspicion of the latter was never strong enough to be offensive, while oil was so used that it produced no more greasiness than butter would if employed in corresponding manner.

Certain dishes prepared for us by my various Italian cooks live gratefully in my memory. Never until I return to Italy shall I eat such lamb as was served to us there. The savoriness and flavor might have been partially accounted for by the fact that the meat was really a potroast, cooked in a covered saucepan over the fire, and with hot coals heaped on the metal top of the pot to brown the upper surface of the meat; but I am inclined to think there was more in it than that, and that part of the virtue resided in the beast itself—the way it was fed or killed, or something of the sort. Whatever the cause, roast lamb was the most satisfactory meat ever served to us in Italy, where all the meat was good.

Risotto was also a prime favorite with us. This was practically a daily dish, taking the place on our table held by potatoes in some form in the American household. The cookery of the dish was begun by frying a sliced onion brown in a tablespoonful of butter or of olive oil. The preference of the genuine Italian was, of course, for the oil, and we soon came to like the slight nutty flavor it gave to the dish better than that of the cooked butter. When the onion was soft and brown, a pint of hot water was added to it, and a cupful of rice, which had been washed and picked over. The dish was never made with rice which had been already cooked. The rice was boiled in the water until soft, more water being added if there was danger of the dish becoming too dry before the rice was done. While it cooked, a cupful of stewed tomatoes was made hot and freed from lumps. The tiny round red tomatoes are essential in all Italian cookery, and a handful of them is always included in the daily marketing. The pulp and the liquid of the tomatoes are both used, but the lumps were rubbed out and a teaspoonful of sugar was stirred into them. After the rice was soft it was salted to taste, the tomato was poured over it and well mixed, and then the contents of the saucepan were turned into a hot dish and sprinkled with a tablespoonful of grated parmesan cheese.

Of course, macaroni in one of its many forms was always served as one vegetable. Here we have little idea of how large a variety of macaroni may be found, although occasionally one gets a glimpse of it in a shop in an Italian quarter of the town. In Rome and Florence, however, we used to take an infantile joy in having a succession of different kinds. It might be purchased in the ordinary pipe macaroni, or as the smaller spaghetti, or as the still finer vermicelli. But it was also sold in flat ribbon-like form and in disks and squares and diamonds and rounds, and in a number of other shapes—all good.

I do not recollect ever eating macaroni cooked in Italy in the way it is most frequently seen on American tables—with cheese over it and baked. Our favorite fashion was simple, but extremely good. A half pound of it was cooked in boiling salted water until tender, then drained and turned into a dish, and over it was poured a cupful of tomato which had been cooked soft with a sliced lemon. This was put through a colander before mixing with the macaroni. Two tablespoonfuls of grated parmesan cheese were then strewed over the top of the macaroni and it was served piping hot.

Polenta, which is almost as much a national Italian dish as macaroni, was also often seen on our table. It might be bought ready prepared there; but in this country the housewife would hardly succeed in finding it, I am afraid. It would have to be made at home, and is really little more than mush of yellow cornmeal. When it has been cooked until thoroughly done, it is taken out by the spoonful and put into a dish and a highly seasoned tomato sauce poured over it—unless a good brown gravy is preferred. In either case grated cheese is sprinkled over the top of the polenta and the dish set in the oven for three minutes before sending to table.

I have given these dishes with so much detail because I believe they would be found no less pleasing to the home-staying families than they were to the household transplanted to Italy. The American cuisine takes pride in appropriating the best wherever it can be found; and when the housekeeper can make economy and appetizing qualities go hand in hand she is lucky. Italian cookery supplies her with such an opportunity, and I shall hope to hear that many of my constituency will try the dishes I have outlined and give a good report of them.

This season of the year, when celery is at its best, is an excellent time to try another of our favorite Italian vegetable dishes, known as "sedoni," which was nothing more nor less than fried celery with an Italian twist. The part of the celery used was the outer stalks, which were not so well blanched as the finer portions. These stalks were cut into 4 or 5 inch lengths, rolled first in an egg beaten up with a little water and then in fine crumbs, sprinkled with salt and pepper, dipped again into the egg and fried in olive oil. Grated cheese was strewed over the celery just before it went to table.

Thus far I have dealt with vegetable dishes, but we had variety in our meat dishes as well. It was not all roast lamb, much as we liked it!

Perhaps our preferred meat dish for lunch was fritelia, also known as fritto misto. For this we had the giblets, hearts, livers, gizzards and lights of a pair of chickens—these giblets could be bought without the chickens—parboiled and cut into pieces. Artichokes and peeled potatoes were also sliced, all were dipped in egg, rolled in flour or cornmeal and fried in boiling olive oil. Butter could be used instead of the oil. All of the pieces of food were drained well after frying, and were dry and hot when served. Sometimes we added to them a sweetbread or a pair of calves' brains, parboiled before frying. We never tired of this dish, and liked to have it at least once a week, if not oftener.

Another meat dish was beefsteak fried in batter. The Italian marketman does not seem to be able to grasp the English or American preference for a thick steak, and we were conforming to the custom of the country when we had our steak cut only a quarter of an inch thick. We chose the porterhouse, or else the short steak, when we felt we could not afford tenderloin; had our steak divided into pieces about three or four inches square; dipped these in batter made of an egg beaten up with a tablespoonful of cold water, a pinch of salt and a cupful of flour, and fried in deep boiling oil to a golden brown. These were very good!

For using up left-overs of meat—there were such occasionally, in spite of the Italian custom of buying only as much at a time as can be consumed at a meal—we cooked the chopped remnants in cabbage leaves. The meat was well seasoned after it was minced; small firm cabbage leaves were selected, dropped into boiling water for five minutes and then thrown into cold water to blanch them, taken out and dried, each folded about as much meat as it would hold and pinned tightly with a wooden toothpick. Shallow oil or butter was used for frying, but it was boiling hot, and the rolls with the meat in them were laid in and fried to a light brown.

The Italian cook makes savory dishes her strong point. We had a few home-made sweets, but fruit, cheese, with raisins, figs and the like rarely made a dessert, unless one of us descended upon the kitchen and strove with the poor means at our command to produce an American sweet. Usually we lived as the Italians did, and were well content.

ENGLISHWOMAN (Chicago).

Your directions as to the bag, and the omission of these in the former formula, remind us of the old story of the ship's cook who undertook to get up a Christmas dinner for some homeward-bound Anglo-Indians. The cook was a Hindu, but spoke and read English so well that the ladies of the party had no misgivings as to his ability to follow the recipe written down by one of them from memory of her own home fare. Like the compiler of the ancient cookbook from which we have had an extract, the Englishwoman took too much for granted in her pupil, and said never a word of the pudding-bag. The mammoth pudding was boiled in the ship's copper and served in an immense bowl; it was soup.

Moral: In preparing a recipe assume that you are instructing novices.

Corn Relish

Kindly let me have the recipe for corn relish or salad which appeared in the Exchange some months ago. If you have more than one recipe for it, let me have all.

Miss E. C. (Welland, Ont.).

You supposed that you were sending in the request in season to use green corn from your field or garden in making the "relish." We prefer that name. The preparation is more like a pickle than a salad. Instead of laying the application aside, as I am doing with inquiries for wild cherry phosphate, daisy and dandelion wine and mixed pickles, until next year, I take pleasure in informing you that canned corn may be substituted for the fresh in the following formula, and with satisfactory results:

A dozen ears of corn (or 4 cans), 8 medium-sized onions, 1 bunch of celery, 1 small head of cabbage, 3 green peppers (or 1 red), 3 tablespoonfuls of salt, 3 pints of cider vinegar, 1½ pounds of brown sugar, 2 heaping teaspoonfuls of English mustard. Chop the cabbage and onions; mince the celery with a sharp knife; cut the corn from the cob and mince fine. If you use the canned corn, drain dry before chopping. Put all the ingredients except the mustard into a porcelain-lined or a nickel-steel-plated kettle and boil steadily twenty minutes. Dissolve the mustard in a little vinegar and add it three minutes before taking the kettle from the fire.

Pour into glass jars and seal while hot. It will keep for months in a dark, cool place, and be better for the ripening.

I commend heartily and intelligently this delightful condiment to housekeepers who failed to put up a bountiful supply of pickles and relishes last summer and now regret the omission of them from the family bill of fare.

A Protest

May I say a word to the Harrisburg housemother who thinks that $100 per month is not too much to live on and to pay one's debts? What would she say if she were in my place and had but $50 a month on which to support a family of four and to pay our debts with? We have good, substantial food, too; lots of potatoes and boiled meat and dumplings and good, wholesome bread and butter—no oleomargarine, either! Such letters make me tired! Those who have plenty and to spare don't know what it is to do without some things they would like ever so much to have. I have a boy who has tuberculosis, to look after. And I don't ask for or receive charity!

I have said more than I meant to say.

A MOTHER (Monaca, Pa.).

This is Liberty Corner for housemothers of every creed and of every shade of opinion. Will you suffer me to remind you urgently that everything in the discussion of this vital subject depends upon the standpoint from which the writer views it? What would be poverty and privation to one family would be comfort to another. One man calls that wealth which is to his neighbor but a decent competence. And prices vary widely in different sections of this our common country. I could set a lavish table in Tennessee for what would just suffice to provide plain, wholesome food in New York city.

Candied Figs

The following is submitted to your California correspondent in answer to her inquiry as to candied figs:

How to Candy Figs

Carefully peel plump, unripe figs and drop them into strong limewater, to make them firm and to eliminate the acrid milkiness of semiripe figs.

Make a thin, clarified syrup of half a pint of sugar to a pint of water and with this cover the figs. Add any flavor you like—such as whole ginger root or sliced lemon or stick cinnamon. Boil slowly until the figs are clear. To each pint of the thin syrup add another half pint of sugar. Boil the figs in this until the syrup candies. Remove the figs with a skimmer and spread upon a dish in the oven or in the hot sun. Roll in granulated sugar and pack in candy boxes or tins, with oiled paper between the layers.

Almost any small fruit may be candied by this recipe. All will be delicious.

Dublin Stew

Disjoint a squirrel or rabbit; dip in flour and fry in hot lard in which you have fried an onion cut fine. Peel six large tomatoes (or use a quart of canned tomatoes); peel six Irish potatoes and break small half a pound of macaroni; have ready a few slices of cooked bacon or ham, some beef stock and two quarts of hot water, seasoning with salt and pepper. You may boil this while the squirrel is frying. Mix all together and stew until the ingredients are thoroughly done. Thicken the gravy with browned flour and season with tomato catsup.

This stew, eaten with bread or with hot biscuits, is a dinner in itself.

Mock Panfish

Prepare a dish of boiled grits or Indian meal mush, cook well and pour out upon a broad platter. When perfectly cold and stiff, slice into pieces the size and shape of small fish. Dip and roll each in salted and peppered cornmeal. Fry to a delicate brown in deep, hissing-hot fat. Drain and arrange upon a hot dish. Garnish with parsley and sliced lemon. Serve hot and eat with Worcestershire sauce or with tomato catsup.

A palatable, inexpensive "imitation" dish.

Cheese Fondu

One cup of grated dry old cheese; 1 cup of fine breadcrumbs; cayenne or black pepper to taste; 1 cup of milk; 2 eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately. Mix the ingredients, adding the beaten whites last. Bake in moderately slow oven and serve immediately, as it soon falls.

Corn Cakes

Scald a pint of cornmeal with half a pint of boiling water; add a teaspoonful of salt, a dessertspoonful of melted lard, 2 well-beaten eggs, a pint of sweet milk and a teaspoonful of baking powder, sifted in enough flour to make batter the consistency of flannel cakes.

Cook upon a soapstone griddle in small cakes.

Sugar Syrup

Mix a pint of light-brown sugar with a pint of boiling water and cook down to the desired thickness.

Mrs. J. P. B. (Staunton, Va.).

The esteemed correspondent to whom we owe the six admirable recipes just set down adds a menu for one day with which we shall begin our list of family meals this week.

Magazines for Shut-ins

Kindly send me name and address of shut-in who wishes magazines. I have a goodly number to dispose of.

Mrs. E. E. H. (Chicago).

As you do not give the signature of the shut-in and write upon a postcard, I cannot send the address. I shall hold your address, subject to the order of the shut-in, should she not be already supplied with reading matter. We thank you for the friendly thought of our needy ones.

Canned Meats at Home

Kindly instruct me how to put up meats in glass jars for winter use. I have applied to the government for the Farmers' Bulletin, but they were all out of the book. Let me know if there is a good book upon canning which one can get and learn from it how to put up fruits, vegetables and meats.

Please let us hear more of putting up uncooked fruits. It is wonderful!

R. C. M. (Pittsburg, Pa.).

Your requests are referred to those who have canned meats. I never have.

May I ask why you think of putting up your own canned fruits, etc., now that the pure-food law has obliged professional canners to use no preservative except heat in preserving provisions for winter use? You may buy canned foods very much more cheaply than you can put them up for yourself, if your time is worth anything.

Every good cookbook contains recipes for canning fruits and vegetables. As I said just now, there may be some clever housemother in our big family who puts up soups, stews and meats. If so, we shall hear from her.

System in Housekeeping

Would you object to letting me have the address of the person who wrote upon "System in Housekeeping"? The signature is "I. M. H. (Champaign, Ill.)." I should like to correspond with her, as I think her article excellent and useful for young married couples. I should like to hear more from her and to send her some of my own ideas.

Mrs. T. B. V. (Alameda, Cal.).

"I. M. H." will undoubtedly read your testimony to her helpful article and allow us to pass along her address to you. I have no right to do this without her permission. Correspondents who do not ask questions to be answered by other members, or in some way signify their desire to open communication with members in general, usually prefer to remain incognito. Addresses are considered confidential in all such cases. We hold yours, and it will be passed over to the author of "System in Housekeeping" should she signify her consent to the transfer.

A Helping Hand

If you will send me the address of the poor shut-in who would enjoy magazines and other reading matter, I will gladly send some to her, express prepaid.

I have all of last year's McClure's, American Magazine and the Ladies' World, besides odd numbers of different periodicals and many Saturday Evening Posts.

I am sending two recipes that may be appreciated by our readers. One is coffee cake, the other for oatmeal cookys.

G. B. (Nelson, Ga.).

As the applications from shut-ins for literature have been innumerable, I have no definite idea to which your generous offer refers. I cannot let it slip, however, and insert your letter in the hope that it will be read and laid hold of eagerly by those whom it most nearly concerns.

I cannot pass over in silence the part of your letter which is too flattering and too personal for the general eye. From my heart, I thank you for the words of appreciation and encouragement. They put new strength into spirit and into mental thew and nerves.

The admirable recipes will appear later in the Corner.

"Bull's Eyes"

Some time ago, while spending a summer upon a farm, I ate what were called "Bull's Eyes." They were small, round, solid fried cakes with a lump of jelly in the middle. I have tried to make them, but without success. Can you help me?

Then again, when in Chicago a few years ago, I purchased at a German bakeshop what they called "a Columbian" or "French fried cake." It was round with a hole in the center, like an ordinary doughnut, but it was fluted, very light brown or yellow in color, sprinkled with sugar, and so delicate and light that it almost melted in the mouth. The dough was not close and heavy like our doughnuts, but porous and yet crisp, and with some "body" to it.

Do you know what they are and how made? Mrs. E. G. S. (Preston, Cuba).

A new correspondent from a part of our territory which is, thus far, comparatively unworked by us.

While I cannot reply satisfactorily to her requests and queries, our members will be true to their traditions and hasten to prove how welcome she is by giving the information she desires. It will be a pleasure to me to publish the recipes for her edification and for the general good.

A Different Marshmallow Pudding

Many months ago, "S. J. W." (Middleburg, Va.) asked for a recipe for marshmallow pudding. You have published several, but I venture to offer mine, which is unlike those you give. It was sent to me from Texas. I have found it so fine that I have included it among favorite recipes in a little "Pudding Book" I have published.

Marshmallow Pudding

The whites of three eggs, beaten stiff; one cupful of sugar; two teaspoonfuls of gelatine dissolved in half a cupful of hot water.

When the gelatine is dissolved, beat sugar and eggs into it; flavor to taste; beat twenty minutes and set away in the ice.

For sauce beat the yolks of three eggs stiff; stir into a cupful of milk, with two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Cook to the consistency of cream.

You may color half of the pudding pink by using a little pink gelatine, and have pink and white layers.

E. J. H. (Elgin, Ill.).

Also a new recruit, and one who bids fair to do excellent service in our ranks. I regret that we could not make room for her until now. She must not be disheartened by the delay.

Quince Honey

Has any one told in the Exchange how to make quince honey? Quinces will be out of season before this can be published, but the recipe will keep over for another year. Here is my recipe:

Six large quinces; 4 pounds of sugar; about a quart of water. Pare and grate the quinces. Cook the skins and cores in part of the water and strain and press into the grated pulp. Put the pulp and all the liquid upon the stove and cook 5 minutes from the time it reaches the boil. Add the sugar and boil down to a jelly.

Pour into jelly glasses and, when cold, cover with paraffine. I keep mine upon the top shelf of the storeroom—as long as it lasts, which isn't as long as I should like.

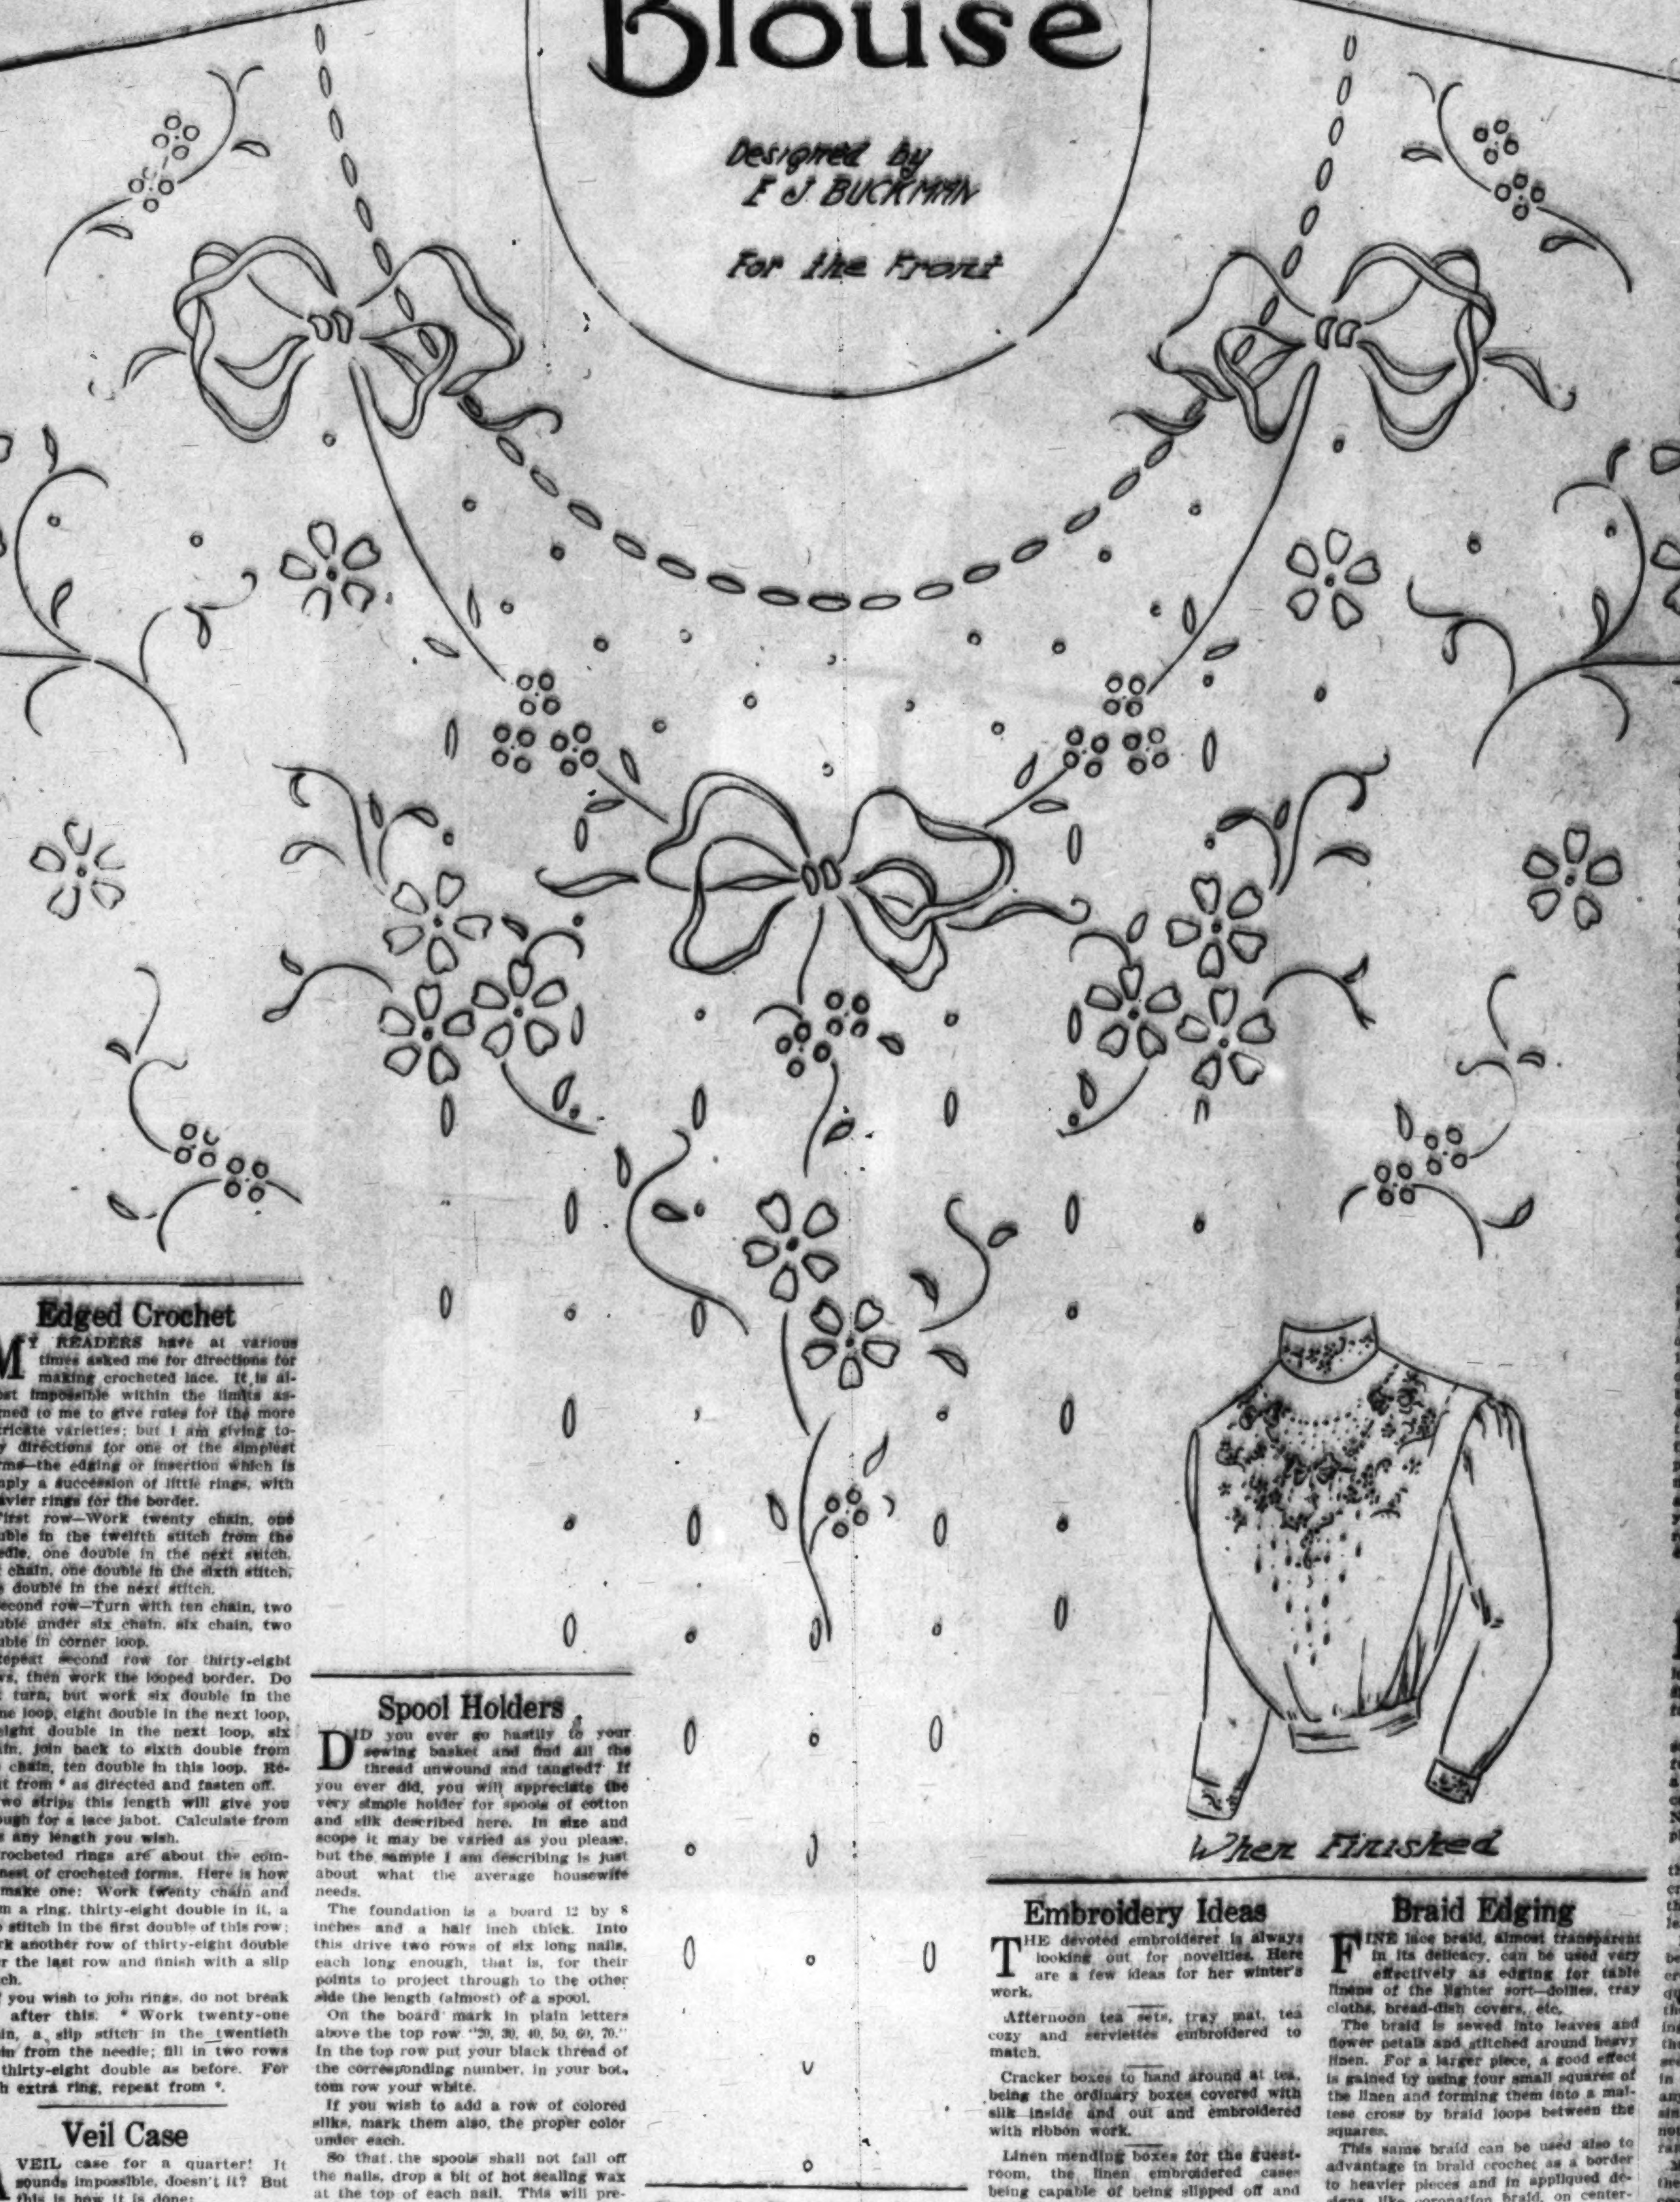
Bowknot Design for a Blouse



HERE is a design that I have had made especially for those readers who have clamored for bowknots. I have had the graceful ribbon effects placed into flowers, and in this way I think every one will be satisfied.

You will see that it is for the front of a blouse. Any fullness of the bodice must be attained by laying deep pleats at each side, or making a cluster of fine tucks from the shoulder line down for three or four inches. At any rate, the idea is beautiful—and the message to my fellow-embroiderers is hopeful: for, believe me, it works up very quickly and is much more effective in the embroidered article than on paper.

Let me suggest something for the back. Make the tucks or pleats run the entire length, and take but a part of the design for the front. Use a bowknot and a spray of flowers on each side of the middle line.

But let's start on the front! You will notice that there is a veritable necklace suggested below the collar line. These oval forms you will first pad with one or two lines of darning cotton, and then you will work over and over across the shortest way, filling in. The chain soon nears completion.

The bowknots you will pad on the wide parts, and work finely with over-and-over stitch, quite as the French do. The thin lines are merely outline stitch, whipped a second time to give a fine edge. Do the central spots in solid work.

Now for the flowers. Solid work, I think, is effective for the petals, and a tiny eyelet for the center of each blossom. The eyelet hint brings us to the rest of our story. You will notice that on the upper yoke are little round dots, and on the lower part of the design are round and oval forms. These are for eyelet work. It is one of the most effective combinations that I have seen this year. The openwork gives just the relief that you need from the solid work.

Of course, you will do the line work in regular outline stitch and the slender leaves in solid work. If you prefer, the little cluster of four dots can be made in eyelets, although I myself like it solid.

For your collar, if you are fond of linen collars, one of these sprays will do, placed irregularly across the front. A lace one, hand sewn, would make a pretty finish at the top. Cuffs may be similarly decorated.

But isn't the design attractive?

An Easy Bedquilt

COLD weather is here with a vengeance and some of us are wishing we had one of the heavy quilts grandmother handed down to us and we handed down—to the church fair. Well, here is the way to make one quickly and easily.

Get two pieces of sateen or of mercerized printed goods in contrasting yet harmonious colors, and of the proper size to fit your bed. Put the right sides together and machine stitch up two of the sides. Then turn the goods inside out and run it up in stripes six inches apart.

Next, get a soft calico, which tear up into strips, each six inches wide. Machine stitch these up the sides and fill them with cotton batting.

Draw the cotton-filled calico into the strips of your quilt, being sure to fit them evenly and neatly, and sew up the ends. Finish with a ribbon quill or edging and your quilt is done.

Broom Pincushion

A VERY dainty novelty is the broom pincushion. For this you will require a large flat cork, a meat skewer (a new one, of course) and a few yards of baby ribbon in some bright shade.

Cut a small hole in the cork and insert the skewer firmly through it. Now wind skewer and cork together with the ribbon until they are entirely covered. Two bows on the skewer will hold the ribbon tight so far.

The broom effect you will gain by the pins; they must be driven thickly into the under side of the cork, holding the ribbon at that point and at the same time giving a very good imitation of a tiny metal broom. These make very nice favors at in-

Edged Crochet

MY READERS have at various times asked me for directions for making crocheted lace. It is almost impossible within the limits assigned to me to give rules for the more intricate varieties; but I am giving today directions for one of the simplest forms—the edging or insertion which is simply a succession of little rings, with heavier rings for the border.

First row—Work twenty chain, one double in the twelfth stitch from the needle, one double in the next stitch, six chain, one double in the sixth stitch, one double in the next stitch.

Second row—Turn with ten chain, two double under six chain, six chain, two double in corner loop.

Repeat second row for thirty-eight rows, then work the looped border. Do not turn, but work six double in the same loop, eight double in the next loop, * eight double in the next loop, six chain, join back to sixth double from the chain, ten double in this loop. Repeat from * as directed and fasten off.

Two strips this length will give you enough for a lace jabot. Calculate from this any length you wish.

Crocheted rings are about the commonest of crocheted forms. Here is how to make one: Work twenty chain and form a ring, thirty-eight double in it, a slip stitch in the first double of this row; work another row of thirty-eight double over the last row and finish with a slip stitch.

If you wish to join rings, do not break off after this. * Work twenty-one chain, a slip stitch in the twentieth chain from the needle; fill in two rows of thirty-eight double as before. For each extra ring, repeat from *.

Veil Case

A VEIL case for a quarter! It sounds impossible, doesn't it? But this is how it is done:

Get half a yard of colored and half a yard of cream mercerized fabric of some sort, a spool of thread to match the colored material, a ball of cream-colored crochet yarn and a quarter of a yard of cotton wadding and half a dozen small buttons.

Cut two pieces of the colored goods, each 8x14 inches; on one piece embroider the word "Veils" with the crochet yarn. Around the other piece pleat a frill one inch wide, and join it down one long side to the embroidered part.

Now cut the cream-colored fabric 16x11 inches, lay the wadding on the wrong side and stitch in two directions, to give the effect of quilting, with the colored cotton. Hem this to the colored material all around and fold across the middle.

For the rollers take a piece of stiff paper or thin cardboard thirteen inches long by one wide, and cover it with stitched material. Work a loop at each end with yarn to button the case; cover the buttons with the colored goods and sew on three at each end two inches

Spool Holders

DID you ever go hastily to your sewing basket and find all the thread unwound and tangled? If you ever did, you will appreciate the very simple holder for spools of cotton and silk described here. In size and scope it may be varied as you please, but the sample I am describing is just about what the average housewife needs.

The foundation is a board 12 by 8 inches and a half inch thick. Into this drive two rows of six long nails, each long enough, that is, for their points to project through to the other side the length (almost) of a spool.

On the board mark in plain letters above the top row "20, 30, 40, 50, 60, 70." In the top row put your black thread of the corresponding number, in your bottom row your white.

If you wish to add a row of colored silks, mark them also, the proper color under each.

So that the spools shall not fall off the nails, drop a bit of hot sealing wax at the top of each nail. This will prevent hurting the hand on the sharp nails also. When the spool is exhausted it is easy enough to knock off the sealing wax and apply new.

Put screw eyes at the back of this board and hang it up by your work table or sewing machine. You will find it one of the most useful articles in the room.

Chamois Collar Case

STIFFEN two chamois disks with cardboard and lace them to a sidepiece two inches deep. Lace by punching both disks and sidepiece with round holes (use a paper punch, or a nutpick if you haven't the former useful article), and then threading with silk cord the color of the chamois.

Overcast lacing on the sidepiece along its top edge, and within this tack a chamois-color silk bag drawn up with ribbons.

Make this of a size to hold collars, and you have a little gift that bachelor maid and bachelor man will find equally useful and acceptable.

Bows in Evening Dress

EVERY evening dress one sees this year seems to be trimmed somewhere with a bow or two. These may be applied in various ways.

Big flat bows for the girdle.

Or to fasten off the edges of a draped tunic.

Or to fasten a bodice over one shoulder.

Tiny buckled bows around the top of the bodice.

Metal bows for the hair and on evening slippers.

Two or three bows to catch the streamers of a long girdle.

Even bows on the petticoat ruffle.

And bows on the chiffon scarf thrown over the shoulders.

So get to work and fashion for yourself bows in some color that will harmonize with that evening gown you are going to make; you will want to use them somewhere.

Embroidery Ideas

THE devoted embroiderer is always looking out for novelties. Here are a few ideas for her winter's work.

Afternoon tea sets, tray mat, tea cozy and serviettes embroidered to match.

Cracker boxes to hand around at tea, being the ordinary boxes covered with silk inside and out and embroidered with ribbon work.

Linen mending boxes for the guest-room, the linen embroidered cases being capable of being slipped off and washed.

Rolled cases with pockets for jewelry, pins, small toilet articles, etc.

Glass covers for hot milk or water tumblers for the invalid, with cambric doilies sewed over them, or crocheted over in heavy linen.

Embroidered book covers—not slip cases, but really permanent covers for fine books—in satin and velvet.

Sachet sets, in moire, trimmed with ribbon work and gold lace, and containing every sachet from the scented coat hanger to the glove pocket.

Satin Stitch

IN WORKING satin never use double silk or cotton. Doubling crosses the "lie" of the two threads, and therefore an even stitch cannot be secured and the work seems rough and coarse.

If the work al[illegible]ly requires a double thickness, dr[illegible] two threads together from the ske[illegible] thread them at the same time thr[illegible] the eye of the needle. This, however, is possible only in the finer numbers of cotton or silk.

Braid Edging

FINE lace braid, almost transparent in its delicacy, can be used very effectively as edging for table linens of the lighter sort—doilies, tray cloths, bread-dish covers, etc.

The braid is sewed into leaves and flower petals and stitched around heavy linen. For a larger piece, a good effect is gained by using four small squares of the linen and forming them into a maltese cross by braid loops between the squares.

This same braid can be used also to advantage in braid crochet as a border to heavier pieces and in appliqued designs, like coronation braid, on centerpieces.

Crocheted Purse

HERE are simple directions for crocheting a purse with wool or silk. Commence with thirty-seven chain, always taking three chain to turn. Turn and work one treble in each chain, turn and continue the same till you have the required length. Remember that the work has to be doubled from beginning to end to form two sides.

When you have the length desired, start decreasing one stitch at each end until all the stitches are done. This point forms the turn-over flap.

Double the work and sew neatly on the wrong side, turn back and sew a patent fastener to the under side of the flap, which fastens to the purse itself.

If you wish to fasten the purse around your neck, fasten your thread at one end of the purse and work eighty chain and attach the opposite side. Buy a brass ring and double crochet around it, catching it into the eighty chain in the center. Pass the cord to go around the neck through this ring and the purse is completed.

PREPARING FOR THE PACKAGE PARTY

DEAR ELEANOR:

Mrs. Clarke and I have been so busy getting ready for the package party—still for our poor, struggling little organ fund—that I have had not a minute to write to you. I am scribbling in a corner now, while Mrs. Clarke, bless her heart! gives last directions to the Sunday-school girls.

Mrs. Clarke is always so restful, don't you think? Today she is in soft gray: a silk-and-wool crepe, with a slashed tunic and a shaped bodice showing Japanese embroidery beneath. The yoke is tucked white net, and so are the undersleeves that show beneath the stylish kimono effect my dear lady can wear so well.

Margaret Hallowell is one of our aides—she ought to win all sorts of hearts and pocketbooks. She is in a bottle-green ratine suit, with buttoned flaps on skirt and coat and deep black velvet revers. Her hat is a green felt cockade shape, with two red quills caught by a velvet circlet.

Edith Murgatroyde, another of my girls, is doing all the wrapping, with little Anna Wells to help her. Edith is in old-blue broadcloth, with a deep hem of black satin on the skirt and a bolero effect in the blouse. This is fastened by a black bow, showing an ecru underblouse with a white yoke beneath it. On the side pleats of the blouse is a touch of bright-colored tapestry.

Anna feels herself very important, I'm sure—we always do when we're just 14 and are allowed to help the older girls. She has on a dress of corn-colored challis, with brown embroidery on the gathered skirt hem and the fichu-shaped blouse. Her tucked chemisette has lace cuffs and a round Dutch collar.

I hear Margaret saying that, in her opinion, most of the people have sent us the Christmas presents they didn't want, and I have to go and "sit" on that infant (Bob's expression).

Yours always,

MADGE.

Former Ohio Senator Helped Secretary Hay Draw Up Document.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—A contribution designed to clarify the confused situation that has arisen over the right of the United States to fortify the Panama Canal was submitted today by Former Senator Foraker of Ohio to President Taft who made it public.

Throughout the period the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was being negotiated and ratified, Senator Foraker advised with John Hay, then Secretary of State, and made many of the suggestions that were incorporated into the treaty preserving to this government the right to take such means as it deemed necessary to protect the canal and the shipping, without specifically authorizing fortifications.

Senator Foraker's letter to President Taft reviews the acts of the Senate in connection with the treaty-making with England and laws passed subsequently to the ratification of the existing Hay-Pauncefote treaty. The latter tells of the ratification of a treaty by the Senate December 20, 1900, which was rejected by the British government.
